Having taken antiterrorist measures through better organization and new measures, I add that since its foundation the republic has known how to defend itself and how to set penal arrangements into motion, and it is useless to add to this. An excess of repressive measures in a republic has historically ended up as its downfall. You see, what is important is the will to respect the law, to make it apply and be intransigent and implacable in its application. What counts is the will to force terrorism to retreat everywhere, to break it up completely -- at its very roots. The French people should know, as I said the other day outside the synagogue where we mourned the sad victims of the Rue des Rosiers outrage, that this sort of terrorism, like the others [words indistinct]. If it is a matter of exceeding the administrative measures that I have just spoken of, then the implications will be (?considerable). One should increase coordination and improve organization.

At the premier's proposal and at the request of and by the authority of the minister of state in charge of internal affairs, a secretary of state for public security will be appointed shortly. Also, together with the minister of state for internal affairs and the secretary of state for public security, a mission for coordination, information and action against terrorism will be entrusted to the head of the gendarmerie squadron [word indistinct], who is already working with me. These are the measures, at least those that are suitable to be revealed. I do not want to burden our conversation with a series of measures for the implementation of the important measures announced, which, though necessary, could look unimportant.

If you want we shall link the two themes of our conversation: first, the problems of French policy in the Middle East and then the struggle against terrorism in France. One should not forget that there are not only responses of police repression, difficult [words indistinct]. Professional terrorists, with papers apparently in order, cross a border, kill and leave. This has little in common with the very dramatic forms of Italian or German terrorism which aim at destabilizing the society of those two countries. Certainly, as you said in the beginning, people also want to destabilize France's policy with the aim of preventing it from playing the very great role it plays on the world's stage and perhaps to soil its deep unity -- certainly, that hypothesis should not be ruled out. That is why it is very important -- I would even say that it is a good thing -- for all French people, notwithstanding their political diversity, to understand that this is an enterprise of national salvation. I am responsible for watching over the security of the French people; I am responsible for ensuring the maintenance of the nation; I am responsible for watching over France's grandeur. You, French men and women listening to me, should know that I shall respect the mandate regarding your rights with which you have charged me, resolutely and determinedly -- the right to live, the right to security -- knowing that it is and will be difficult because the forces threatening us are so hard to catch hold of.

But, given will, resolution and continuity we shall win over. Anyway, I shall appear again during the forthcoming weeks or months before the French men and women listening to me today to explain to them how France is being led.

[Question] I also often have the feeling that terrorists go unpunished for too long: I am referring to an interview published this morning in LIBERATION on the Action Directe leader who confesses to having taken part -- or to his group's having taken part -- in three attacks; I am also thinking of international terrorists who remain untouchable once they have returned to their own countries. Do you think that one can to even further in order to obtain justice?

[Answer] [Words indistinct] these, how small I say, untouched points of support for international terrorism, we have already taken measures and I should say straight away that any organization propounding a political ideology which would employ systematic violence will be prosecuted and dissolved, banned, and its members will be pursued, arrested and sentenced. French justice will do its duty, above all from the moment when one publicly proclaims (?having recourse to violence). The confession has already been made. As far as international terrorism is concerned -- I said this earlier -- we shall track it down, we shall get to its roots. We know that it can still reach us; may the day come when it will succumb to our blows.

[Question] President of the Republic, after the Rue des Rosiers attack we heard Mr Begin speak, and I quote, of "an abject and degrading demonstration of anti-Semitism which is appearing more and more in France." Do you yourself believe in a renewal of anti-Semitism in France at the moment?

[Answer] I think that the head of the Israeli Government does not know the France of today very well and that he is misjudging its leaders. He is responsible for Israel; I am responsible for France -- we do not have the same duties. But I think it is a mistake to allege that the French people are anti-Semitic, on the point of giving in to the attraction of violence. No, it is easy to understand how one act of the war being waged by some country in the Middle East comes to be staged in Paris. Working for peace in the Middle East means working for an end to international terrorism. One shouldn't have too many illusions -- there will always be extremists who would like to punish France for its peaceful role. I think that it is not healthy, not just to accuse France of having practiced in this affair anti-Semitism, which disgusts me, which went as far as the stupid and cowardly crime in the Rue des Rosiers. We would do better to study jointly with Mr Begin and the others how to arrive at establishing peace there. And then? From then on you would see these forms of anti-Semitism -- if they exist -- become blurred and disappearing. As for me, I am sure of the French people; they will not obey racist hatreds. And I know that our brothers, the Jews of France -- French ones -- have confidence in the laws of their country, without needing any other protection. Finally, we all need to learn how to live together better. The French people may also count on me for that.

[Question] President, to close this conversation, we note that this is the first time that you have agreed to speak topically on an event. Is this a sign of a new attitude on your part, consisting of appearing on the frontline and, in particular, are you going to adopt it for the new political season which promises to be difficult?

[Answer] Oh, which promises to be difficult -- I do not want to go into domestic policy -- but there are also positive elements, you know, when in the same day one learns that the rate of employment has remained static, that perhaps for the first time in some seven or eight years there has been no worsening of the situation, and at the same time one learns that the price index is up 0.3 percent, which is the lowest figure, the same as a month in year 1977. (?This) leads one to think that the government's courage and lucidity are finally paying off. Good. But is is true that I myself, have to explain certain major aspects of French policy. Sometimes I do not (?give) many explanations but the duty of the head of state is to assume his responsibilities by such a direct conversation with the people of France. You say it is not my habit. How do you know my habits? Let us say that I have maintained my reserve.

I do not like breaking all the time. I do not think it is worthwhile abusing the prerogatives. In the end, that is not to my taste. Only there you have it, I am sensitive to the event and the event is the war over there, a war which is coming this far; it is French people who are being killed; it is others who are being threatened. Well, that event -- yes -- it makes me come out of my reserve and address the French people.

SHIMON PERES SEES MITTERRAND, MEETS PRESS

[Text] Shimon Peres, the leader of the Israeli opposition Labor Party, who in recent days has made many conciliatory statements concerning France, was received by Francois Mitterrand at the Elysee Palace this morning. Louis Gosset attended Peres' press conference at the Israeli Embassy.

[Begin Gosset recording] Yes, it was from an embassy protected like a fortress, from the small Bar-Simantov room, named after the Israeli diplomat who was killed last spring in Paris, that Shimon Peres once again reassured those who are worried about French-Israeli relations.

The meeting with Francois Mitterand, who has always been his friend, did take place, and Peres confirmed what everyone expected: There is a deep understanding between Paris and Jerusalem. The two countries agree that Lebanon should become a totally free and independent country; that all foreign troops should leave Beirut and Lebanon; and that Paris alone should ensure the security of all residents of France.

To the question of whether everything is well, the Labor Party leader admitted that there remains a serious disagreement concerning the role of the PLO. 'Arafat is not a legitimate negotiating party; there is no chance that he will recognize Israel; it is an illusion to believe otherwise, he concluded.

This is unfortunate since it is an illusion on which Paris bases a large part of its policy in the Middle East, and on this point Paris and Jerusalem are still far apart. [end recording]

BEGIN'S 'INTELLECTUAL TERRORISM' CRITICIZED

[Editorial: "Mr Begin's Strange Logic"]

[Text] In addition to the violent terrorism whose effects Paris has just suffered, there is another kind of terrorism which, although it does not kill, is nonetheless highly unpleasant: "intellectual" terrorism which, by using association, slogans and conditioned reflexes, aims to deprive its victim of his critical sense and his faculty of judgment.

Punishing the slightest venial sin with hell in order to prevent a more serious sin, and placing the friendly critic and deadly enemy in the same category are its most common procedures, and their effect can be daunting in politics.

The association now being practiced in connection with terrorism and current events in the Near East shows that the temptation is still very much alive. It must be admitted that Mr Begin did not start this verbal extremism and that the expressions "genocide" (in Lebanon) and "fascism" (in Israel) were first used by others. But the Israeli prime minister joined this infernal logic by comparing Beirut with Berlin and Mr 'Arafat with Hitler and then by establishing a comparison between the unfortunate word Oradour, used reluctantly by Mr Mitterand, and the Rue des Rosiers killings. And he was known to be ready to put forward the equation of a new intellectual terrorism: "Critic of the Israeli Government equals adversary of the state of Israel equals anti-Semite."

Nonetheless, either the Rue des Rosiers massacre was the work of "PLO terrorists," as the Israeli Embassy in Paris immediately stated, or it was, as Mr Begin says, "the result of an anti-Israeli attitude, which is also anti-Jewish, in the whole of the French media." In the first case the killers came from outside, in the second the affair must be attributed to French anti-Semites galvanized by French propaganda.

The fact is that the Jerusalem leaders are well aware that the Massacre, condemned by the PLO, was probably perpetrated by Palestinian dissidents. But this is too good an opportunity to blame the French population, as was done (quite wrongly) after the Rue Copernic outrage: on the one hand for anti-Semitism which, although it is latent and tenacious, is not on the point of taking such extreme forms, but also for their government's policy, which does not have the good fortune to please Mr Begin.

But the latter goes much further when he says he is prepared to call on "the youth of our people in France to defend the lives and dignity of Jews." Nobody knew that the Israeli prime minister considered himself to be responsible for police duties elsewhere than in his country... or in Lebanon, still less that the French Jews should not be regarded as part of the "people of France" but of another people. After the sad quarrels over dual allegiance, are we to talk of "single allegiance" to the Jewish state? This strange logic has been wisely set aside by the leaders of the Jewish community in France, who have decided to ignore Mr Begin's appeal.

The Israeli Government leader was probably traumatized by the holocaust in which virtually all of his family perished, by the anti-Semitism which he saw at work in Eastern Europe and finally by Palestinian terrorism. Nonetheless, the form of his reaction remains unacceptable and its content irresponsible.

LE MONDE DISCUSSED U.S. ATTITUDE TOWARD ISRAEL

[Editorial: "Mr Reagan's Anger"]

[Text] The Israeli cabinet's deicsion to stop the bombing of Beirut and to publicly place General Sharon in a minority on that occasion probably marks a turning-point in the long Lebanon war. Should it also be seen as a turning-point in Israeli-U.S. relations?

Indeed, an unprecedented situation requires unprecedented reactions. This is the first time in all the wars it has waged that the Israeli Army was laid siege to an Arab city and persisted in using against it the most violent military means for ends whose essentially political nature even General Sharon admits.

A precedent which springs to mind is that of the bombing raids unleashed on Hanoi by Mr Nixon in December 1972 with the aim of forcing the Vietnamese leaders to make the final concessions which enabled the Paris agreements to be signed a few week later. However, the former U.S. president took the risk of arousing world opinion's indignation and he was not seeking approval, which, moreover, he did not need, from his allies or Americans throughout the world.

Mr Begin, for his part, is not resorting to B-52 bombers, but the result is not very different for the victims of his bombing in Beirut. And obviously, in this enterprise he could not find among his friends the unconditional support which he has readily made the touchstone of "Zionist internationalism" or plain honesty.

Now the U.S. television networds (which, logically, should strike Mr Begin as even more "anti-Semitic" than the French media) have brought the horrors of Beirut into every home. According to an AP opinion poll, 51 percent of Americans disapprove of the Lebanon invasion and 54 percent think that Israel has gone "too far" in its attacks on the capital, compared with 24 percent and 18 percent respectively, who express the opposite view.

In any case, none of that would have been possible if the United States had not equipped, and even overequipped, the Israeli Army or if it had implemented the clauses of the agreements reached with Jerusalem ruling out the use of that equipment for offensive purposes.

Mr Reagan was therefore obliged to protest, and he had demonstrated that he was able to make his voice heard. The threat to suspend the Habib mission, which, in principle, is milder than a military sanction, proved effective since Israel was well aware that its main goal in the war in Lebanon — the Palestinian fighters' departure -- will not be attained without the U.S. mediator's services. Another Israeli objective -- the start of discussion in a different context on the fate of the West Bank Palestinians -- requires a new approach to the Camp David process. That is precisely what new Secretary of State Shultz was actively preparing to do, according to the New York TIMES.

Thus Mr Reagan's outburst probably does not mean the end of U.S. "understanding" for Israel. It is nonetheless a useful reminder to everybody of the limits beyond which any Israeli Government cannot go without danger to itself.

LATE REPORT: MEASURES BAN ACTION DIRECTE

[Text] Paris, Aug 18 (AFP) — France today banned the militant extreme-left "Action Directe" movement which has carried out 30 terrorist attacks in the past two years. It is the first step taken by President Francois Mitterrand following last night's nation-wide radio and television address announcing new anti-terrorist measures.

Special Presidential Adviser Jacques Attali said after the Cabinet meeting today when the decision was taken that: "this clandestine movement, composed of people who support violent [word indistinct], was in contact with foreign extremists and formed commandos to carry out an armed struggle by using terrorist methods."

The movement has claimed responsibility for 30 terrorist attacks in the past two years, mostly against Israeli and Jewish targets in Paris. The founder and leader Jean-Marc Rouillon, 30, said in an interview in the Paris daily newspaper LIBERATION yesterday that "Action Directe" had attacked 10 Israeli and Jewish targets in Paris this month.

He founded "Action Directe" in 1979 by recruiting pro-Maoist terrorists who had attacked several South American diplomats. Mr Rouillan issued a manifesto last March in which he defined his group as "an organisation which defends the principle of armed struggle".

He was arrested with his companion Nathalie Menigon in September, 1980 after a series of attacks against 15 public builders, including the Ministry of Labour and the Ministry of Cooperation.

Police considered that their arrests was the end of "Action Directe" and Mr Rouillon and other leaders were charged with terrorism and scheduled to be tried before the state security court. But this court, set up by De Gaulle, was dissolved by President Mitterrand on the grounds that it was an abuse of legal powers.

All the "Action Directe" members, except two, were released under a Mitterrand amnesty. These two -- Joelle Aubron and Mohamed Hamani -- had been arrested in April for possessing arms and explosives in a Paris cache.

Last month the government dissolved the extreme rightist "Service d'Action" (SAC) on the grounds that this one-time Gaullist militia had become a refuge for common criminals.

AMBASSADOR IN LEBANON ON ARRIVAL OF PEACE FORCE

[Text] (ANSA) Beirut, August 18 -- The Lebanese Government will be meeting here later today to confirm officially the invitation to Italy, France, and the United States to send a multinational peacekeeping force to west Beirut, according to the Italian ambassador here Franco Luli Ottieri.

After meeting with Lebanese Foreign Minister Fu'ad Butrus yesterday, the diplomat told ANSA that the contingent of French troops should arrive "with every probability" at the port of Beirut Saturday, thus marking the first stage of the Palestinian evacuation from the capital.

Q: "When will the Lebanese request for the dispatch of peace contingents be formalized with Italy, France, and the United States?"

A: "It's done, there's optimism everywhere.

"With Butrus, we tried to pare away the superfluities in the letters to be exchanged by the two governments.

"(Today), the Lebanese cabinet should make the official invitation to Italy, France, and the United States to take part in the multinational force".

Q: "Where and when will the Italian contingent arrive?".

A: "It is still too early to say the precise date, but the Habib plan lays down gradual interventions".

According to the diplomat, the Italian and American soldiers should arrive "four or five days" after the Palestinians start pulling out and could disembark at Junieh or at the port of Beirut "controlled by the French".

Q: "You are here in west Beirut today. Will you have contacts with the Palestinians leaders and the Lebanese leftwingers?".

A: "I have already spoken with the Communist leaders. I will also see the Palestinians.

"It is one of my tasks to make contact with the various political forces, which are also armed militias.

"I must see if there is something which might hinder or make the Italian intervention in Lebanon (?unacceptable).

"It is my impression that everyone wants the multinational force to arrive".

MALTA'S ARCHBISHOP REPORTS TROUBLE WITH MINTOFF

[Text] (ANSA) -- Vatican City, August 17 -- Archbishop Joseph Mercieca of Malta met here today with Vatican leaders to discuss the grave tensions between the Catholic Church and the Laborite government on the strategic Mediterranean island.

The archbishop's schedule includes talks with the Vatican diplomatic chief Achille Silvestrini and other high-ranking officials.

In recent weeks, Maltese Prime Minister Dom Mintoff has asked the prelate to leave the island because he gave "de facto" support to the nationalist opposition party.

The Archbishop called on the local Catholics to stay at home on June 29, St. Peter's feast-day, which the Maltese Government has now named as a work-day.

SPADOLINI EFFORTS TO FORM NEW GOVERNMENT NOTED

Press Optimistic

[Text] (ANSA) — Rome, Aug 17 -- The Italian press was generally unanimous today that current government crisis will soon come to an end and that Premier-designate Giovanni Spadolini is about to announce the line-up of Italy's forty-second postwar government.

Milan's "CORRIERE DELLA SERA" said that "the decisive week for the formation of the new government began with a meeting between Spadolini and head of state Sandro Pertini at the airport with Pertini saying he will return to Rome when it is time to swear in the cabinet -- a sign that Spadolini's efforts will be successful".

The Rome daily "LA REPUBBLICA" [said] there will be a few difficulties, with some of the parties balking at a few details, but this will be only to justify the usefulness and correctness of the crisis.

"Spadolini now has to appoint his cabinet. The Socialists wanted early elections but had to pull back and it is now almost impossible to counter Spadolini".

"Pertini was instrumental in this crisis. He convinced the Socialists that elections would be damaging to their image".

Turin's "LA STAMPA" said that "Spadolini is now waiting for the parties to have their say while he is working on an economic document -- with the goal of keeping inflation under thirteen percent next year — and is slated to meet with management and organized labor.

"On Thursday, barring any last-minute surprises, Spadolini will begin his last round of consultations".

Spadolini Meets With Unions

LD172112 Rome Domestic Service in Italian 1700 GMT 17 Aug 82

[Text] Premier-designate Spadolini held meetings with social groups. Here is a report by Michel Giammarioli:

As expected there were informal meetings during which an ample review was carried out of the main themes of economic policy without entering into the merits of any of them. For example, the problems related to index-linked wage increases and labor costs which are directly tied in with the question of the labor contract renewal have not been dealt with by the premier-designate. He outlined to employers and trade unions the characteristics of the executive's economic policy based, as stated in a communique issued by the Palazzo Chigi at the end of the talks, on the concept of struggle against inflation and recession within the framework of commitment to economic rigor and fiscal justice, which favors an end of confrontation between social groups over economic revival and development.

In practice, Spadolini confirmed his intention to resume the economic course which was interrupted at the time of the government crisis. Trade union criticism was therefore a foregone conclusion because it was already voiced last month after the approval of the economic decrees. Secretary of the CGIL [Italian General Confederation of Labor] Lama expressed his concern about the questions of employment and investment, while Secretary General of the GISL [Italian Conference of Free Trade Unions] Carniti confirmed that the problems of index-linked wages and labor cost were not discussed. Confederal Secretary of the UIL [Italian Union of Labor] Mattina expressed reservations about the distribution of sacrifices.

The fact that these were informal talks was also confirmed by president of the Confindustria [Employers' Federation] Merloni, who at the end of his talks with the premier-designate made a cautious statement: "Premier Spadolini got a lot of information from us and we hope that he will take it into account concerning the government program." As regards the most burning problem of confrontation between trade unions and employers over labor contracts, the premier-designate made no comment. However, this problem has only been postponed and the new executive will be compelled to deal with it at the very beginning of its existence.

Further Details

[Excerpts] (ANSA) -- Rome, August 17 -- Italian Premier-designate Giovanni Spadolini met here today with organized labor and the Industrialists' Association in what was seen by observers as an important step in setting up a new government.

Spadolini's talks today were designed to give the premier-designate "useful factors" for a draft document on economic policy which will be subsequently submitted to the future government parties, a communique said.

But the labor leaders said there was "nothing particularly new" in what Spadolini told them, and that they retained their "criticisms" and "reservations" voiced before the outgoing government fell.

A labor leader close to the Christian Democrats, Pierre Carniti, asked Spadolini to promote a resumption of contract negotiations, "especially within the context of his prerogatives, as in the public employment sector."

More seriously, Social Democrat leader Enzo Mattina told reporters that Spadolini confirmed his intention of pulling out just the same economic proposals that were blocked by the crisis.

Spadolini's discussion with the industrialists covered what was later described as a "generic" discussion of relaunching the economy, labor costs and investments.

In other developments, there was a meeting of the Socialist Party's leadership at which Party Secretary Bettino Craxi "encouraged" Spadolini to seek "clear agreements" in order to agree to accept the premiership.

The final vote at the meeting, which included just three abstentions, gave the Socialist leaders a mandate to evaluate and decide as regards negotiations on solving the government crisis.

To Form 5-Party Government

[By (Angelo Haver)]

[Excerpt] This evening Spadolini distributed a political-economic document among the five parties that would reconstitute the dissolved majority. Together with the preliminary 10 points on institutional reform, this document will represent the basis for negotiations on the new government that is expected to be formed by the end of the month, provided there are no complications, of course. The premier-designate's second round of talks with the five party delegations, will begin tomorrow afternoon. At 1700, Spadolini will receive the Socialists and at 2100 hours the Republicans. At 0930 on Thursday he will receive the Republicans, at 1130 the Liberals and, finally, at 1700 the Christian Democrats.

Spadolini Presents Plan

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, August 18 -- Optimism was running high as Premier-designate Giovanni Spadolini today continued consultations to form a new government, Italy's 42nd since the end of the Second World War.

Today he meets with Confcommercio and various farm organizations in the morning. This afternoon and tomorrow he meets with delegations from the Socialist (PSI), Republican (PRI), Social Democratic (PSDI), Liberal (PLI), and Christian Democrat (DC) parties. These five parties made up the previous Spadolini administration which fell August 7 when turncoat parliamentarians voted down key fiscal legislation.

On Tuesday, the premier designate met with business and labor leaders and then presented the parties with a ten-point economic policy document. The document contained the following:

1. The centrality of financial legislation for 1983.
2. Completion of the fiscal maneuver already launched by the previous government.
3. Credit available for the economy and the cost of money.
4. Investment and employment policies (energy, research, state run agencies).
5. Southern development.
6. The bolstering of agriculture structures.
7. Labor costs and contracts.
8. The labor market.
9. Public administration and civil servants' wages and work contracts.
10. A review of bills calling for expenditures. This "decalogue" encompasses the economic maneuver already agreed upon by the previous government alliance. The chief aim remains that of guaranteeing the nation economic stability by containing the inflation rate (and the cost of labor) under a ceiling of 16 percent this year, of 13 percent in 1983, and of 10 percent in 1984.

The only innovation is the available credit for the economy which would seem to involve a drop in the cost of money.

As Spadolini continues his government-formation talks, even the Socialists (who opened the crisis to begin with) declared themselves satisfied with the progress being made.

PCI ADOPTS RESOLUTION ON 'NEW POLITICAL PROCESS'

[Text] The following is the text of the resolution which the PCI Directorate adopted yesterday and which Comrade Enrico Berlinguer explained to the president of the republic in talks at the Quirinale.

The fall of the Spadolini government is conclusive proof of the failure of the political operation tried in the past 3 years. Absolutely vital reforms in the economic and social spheres and in the sphere of public mortality were set aside on the grounds that the crisis was being overcome. Petty power-motivated calculations were put before the nation's needs: The DC intended to use the alliance with the PSI to involve it in a policy stamped by conservatism and anticommunism; the PSI planned to use discrimination against the PCI to increase its bargaining power in the framework of an alliance with the DC. Thus the country's real problems were in fact avoided. It was no accident that government's were formed not on clear programmatic agreements but essentially on the basis of a distribution of positions of power. The damage was great. Thus political dialectics became increasingly obscure, frequently degenerating into quarrels among ministers and people in authority, and the very conflicting lines which arose within the majority were unable to find a clear outlet in Parliament.

Thus Parliament and the institutions saw their powers of control and leadership further reduced, while a growing area was occupied by secret powers, mafias and the P2 lodge. This is the situation. Therefore, it is not only wrong but paradoxical to blame Parliament for this situation and to point to a limitation of its powers as a way out.

All that has not only led to the deterioration everybody can now see and which led to this state of uncertainty and distrust among the citizens but has caused a serious division among the leftwing and reforming forces and has paved the way for a counteroffensive by the right at the economic and social levels too. It can be seen in the recent provisions contained in the outgoing government's economic, financial and fiscal operations. They are misguided and unacceptable. Above all they are unjust in that they mainly affect the working classes and lower middle classes, sparing the great inheritances and high incomes of the privileged classes and speculators. At the same time they are inadequate and contrast with the vital need to reduce inflation and current public spending while at the same time ensuring increased production and increased employment. A radical revision of the decisions taken is therefore necessary.

The PCI is resolutely opposed to an early dissolution of the houses. The resulting prolonged paralysis of government and Parliament would do further serious damage to the living conditions of the people's masses, to the economy and to the democratic institutions. Deprived of a responsible leader capable of expressing new lines, Italy risks much more than a temporary aggravation of the crisis. With growing unemployment, a new surge in the existing inflation, an increasingly uncontrollable state deficit and the shelving of the parliamentary inquiry into the P2 lodge, into the dealings behind the Moro crime and into the Banco Ambrosiano scandal, the risk of a social and moral crisis in which factors of tension and disintegration prevail would become acute -- with incalculable consequences for the maintenance of democracy and for Italy's autonomy and influence on the international stage.

Moreover, early elections have been opposed by the CGIL, the Italian Confederation of Workers' Unions, the Italian Union of Labor and various political forces, even in the government majority itself, like the DC, the Italian Social Democratic Party and the Italian Liberal Party; thus, the vast majority of Parliament and the country.

The five-party government, its policy and government method cannot be proposed again. Any attempt to revive them will encounter the PCI's very determined opposition. It is clearer than ever that the Communists' proposal of a democratic alternative to the present political power base and to the policies and government methods hitherto widespread is a national necessity.

The PCI -- in confirming this objective, which involves the PCI's participation in government with a role corresponding to its influence in Italian life -- maintains that in the existing Parliament it is possible to initiate a new political process which will lead to solutions, even though gradually -- through the establishment of more correct and broader political and parliamentary relations -- to the country's serious and pressing problems.

To that end, it is necessary to form a government different from previous ones.

That difference must lie both in the way it is formed and in the quality of its composition, in substantial changes of policy and program, the abandonment of methods of government and administration based on social and political discrimination, on patronage and on the distribution of positions of power.

The new government must be formed, as the Constitution specifies, by the independent, responsible choice of the prime minister without abuse or pressure from party secretaries and without the dealings and distribution of representation among party currents which have often bestowed ministerial posts on people who do not have the necessary ability and authority.

Competent, authoritative and suitable people can be chosen by the prime minister without prejudice in the parties and outside them, in Parliament and outside it. If we abide rigorously by such criteria, the government parties themselves will be asked to fully play their democratic and constitutional role, regaining a prestige among the citizens which has today been eroded by degenerate practices in their relations with the state and the authorities. It is absolutely vital to end such methods, starting precisely with the method of forming the new government.

The PCI is convinced that with a government produced by these new criteria it will be possible to avoid early elections and to promote free discussion and constructive debate in Parliament, establishing a new relationship with the PCI. On that basis it will be possible to implement a policy of economic development and financial recovery based on the principle of social justice; it will be possible to develop a more coherent and decisive Italian initiative in favor of detente, disarmament, a peaceful solution to conflicts; it will be possible to firmly and efficiently wage the struggle against terrorism, organized crime, the Mafia and the Camorra, and secret power like the P2 lodge.

On those bases and with the PCI's vital contribution, it will be possible to constructively tackle problems of administration and institutional reform in such a way as to increase the power of the constitutional bodies, especially Parliament, against the intrusion of centers of pressure and intrigue.

BANK HEAD QUESTIONED ON BANCO AMBROSIANO

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, August 14 -- Governor of the Bank of Italy Carlo Azeglio Ciampi and Director General Lamberto Dini were questioned by a Rome magistrate handling a complaint filed Thursday by the outgoing president of the Italian Securities and Exchange Commission (Consob) Guido Rossi.

At about the same time, Rossi was questioned in Milan in connection with the investigation into the operations of Banco Ambrosiano, Italy's largest private sector bank. Rossi stepped down from his post as Consob president Wednesday and then filed a complaint charging Ciampi with alleged "procedural irregularities" in forcing the liquidation of Banco Ambrosiano last week.

Banco Ambrosiano, whose President Roberto Calvi was found hanging from London's Blackfriars' Bridge June 18 a week after he escaped Italy with a false passport, was liquidated last week, after a series of scandals broke out about the bank's foreign operations and a 1.4 billion dollar shortfall.

According to Rossi's complaint, the Bank of Italy should have provided his commission with more information before ordering liquidation of the large bank.

In Rome Ciampi was questioned for three quarters of an hour. He and Dini are believed to have upheld the regularity and transparency of the Central Bank when Banco Ambrosiano was quoted on the Milan stock market. The Bank of Italy officials said that at that time Calvi's bank appeared to be very solid and that Central Bank officials had not uncovered any irregularities in its operations.

In Milan, Rossi was questioned for five hours by the judge investigating Calvi's management of Banco Ambrosiano and was asked to clarify the steps taken to quote the bank in the stock market. Rossi told newsmen afterwards that [he] has great respect for the governor of the Bank of Italy and that he thought the meaning of his complaint has been blown out of proportion.

"I think someone has a vested interest in creating conflicts between the institutions involved in this affair", Rossi said. He added that he filed the complaint on a lawyer's advice "mainly to avoid possible future charges of irregularities".

Italian judicial sources in Rome said Friday that they believe that Rossi filed the complaint to protect himself from future developments in the Ambrosiano case.

PAPER VIEWS PROBLEMS OF GOVERNMENT 'IN DISARRAY'

PM171229 Copenhagen BERLINGSKE TIDENDE in Danish 14 Aug 82 p 6

[Editorial: "The Consequences"]

[Text] Are the Social Democrats disappointed that the Radical Liberals said 'no' to joining the government? As could be expected of a government and a party in disarray there are some who are disappointed, some who are pleased and some who are obviously indifferent.

One who is disappointed by the Radical Liberals' refusal is Ritt Bjerregaard, who has voiced her regrets with all the weight that comes from her position as leader of the Social Democratic Folketing Group. Bjerregaard told AKTUELT that the Radical Liberals' refusal is annoying because their participation in the government would have led to greater stability and would have given a firmer guarantee that the government would be able to press through some reforms. Here she is thinking, first and foremost, of the tax reform.

AKTUELT is one of those who are happy that the Social Democratic Party's invitation has been turned down and it has even gone so far as to say that it could almost be described as a relief. The paper pointed out that the trade union movement would not have been enthusiastic and it also said that a debate had started among the Social Democrats about the Radical Liberals' participation in government.

One of those who are indifferent is Anker Jorgensen himself. The prime minister was informed of the Radical Liberals' refusal and refrained from expressing an opinion on the matter. Now the government must find its Folketing majority wherever it can, he said, and in doing so he merely repeated a fact that is not new but a permanent feature of the present Folketing's relative party strengths.

What is interesting in the present episode between the Social Democrats and what has, up to now, been their support party is that the Radical Liberals want to steer clear of cabinet involvement. What is interesting is that the Radical Liberals, through this latest decision, have indicated their strong opposition to the government's present program. The Radical Liberals have no faith in the plan for a tax on interest, the plan for further taxation of pension funds to take effect from the new year or the sort of incomes policy which consists of summoning the two sides involved in negotiations to talks. It is this unambiguous position adopted by the Radical Liberals which led to Bjerregaard's bad mood. It is this position which has had such a rejuvenating effect on AKTUELT, which is already hinting at a fall election on the strength of it. And it is probably this same position which leaves the prime minister indifferent. For what is characteristic of Jorgensen's style of government is that he always clings to government power, even if along the way he is forced to abandon important areas of policy and even if he has to face the fact that Denmark's crisis is growing ever worse.

But how long can Jorgensen persist in this? His decision yesterday to bring forward negotiations with the other political parties is perhaps a first indication that he cannot hold out much longer.

NORWAY

GOVERNMENT WILL CONTINUE TO SUPPORT UNIFIL FORCES

[Text] Oslo, Aug 17 (AFP) -- Norway will continue to contribute with soldiers and equipment for United Nations' peacekeeping forces in southern Lebanon (UNIFIL) for an additional two months if the Norwegian parliament approves of such an arrangement.

Foreign Minister Svenn Stray said this after a government meeting Tuesday and added that he would privately inform United Nations' Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar of Norway's position.

The mandate for the UN peacekeeping operations in Lebanon expires on Thursday, but the UN Security Council will meet on Wednesday to have the mandate extended for two months.

After debating a prolongation of the mandate in the parliament's Foreign Relations Committee, the Norwegian Government will give its formal answer to Mr Perez de Cuellar, Mr Stray said.

The last prolongation of the UNIFIL mandate took place in the UN Security Council a few days after the Israeli invasion of Lebanon last June.

INTERCOMMUNAL TALKS MEETING HELD 17 AUG

[Text] Another meeting within the framework of intercommunal talks was held at the Ledra Palace Hotel this afternoon. In a statement prior to the meeting, Mr Mavrommatis, the Greek Cypriot side's representative at the talks, stated that some points -- including that of the public service commission -- still remain in order to complete discussion on the question of executive authority. Mr Mavrommatis expressed the hope that as of the next meeting discussion can begin on the question of legislative authority. He also said that there were several issues to be taken up, such as justice, among others, before the territorial aspect could be discussed.

Mr Mavrommatis said it was difficult to estimate the time required to complete discussion of the document of evaluation of the talks but he said that, according to his estimate, discussions must be completed within 2 months.

Mr Onan, the Turkish Cypriot side's representative, stated that satisfactory work was being carried out at the intercommunal talks. We are proceeding slowly but cautiously, he said. Answering a question on the time required to complete discussion of the document of evaluation, Mr Onan said that the purpose of the talks was to find a settlement of the problem satisfactory to both sides. He added: Therefore, time should not be the sole criterion. However, this does not mean that any one side is trying to draw out the talks. Mr Onan said that not much time would be needed to complete the first round of discussions but, he added, it would be difficult to make a precise estimate.

COMMISSION CONDEMNS ISRAELI 'CRIMES' IN LEBANON

[Text] The session of the international commission of inquiry into Israeli crimes against the Lebanese and Palestinian peoples, which was held in Nicosia, has demanded the immediate end of the Israeli invasion in Lebanon, the end of the siege of west Beirut, immediate and unconditional withdrawal of the invasion troops, an end to the genocide of the Lebanese and Palestinian peoples and the release of prisoners of war.

Announcing the session's conclusions at a press conference in Nicosia this morning, Chairman Platts-Mill has said the international commission of inquiry also demands that Israel pay compensation for the damage it has caused to persons, property and Lebanese public utilities. Mr Platts-Mill added that the commission appeals to all governments, parliaments and international organizations to express their solidarity with and render every material, diplomatic, political and moral support to the Palestinian and Lebanese peoples.

The international commission has declared that no just and lasting peace can be attained in the Middle East without the complete and unconditional withdrawal of Israel from all the Arab lands it has occupied since 1967, and unless the Palestinians are granted the right of independence and establishment of their own independent state, as well as the recognition of the PLO as the only legitimate representative of the Palestinian people.

The international commission has also appealed to the Israeli officers and soldiers to contribute to ending the war in Lebanon and appealed for a ban on the use of phosphorous and fragmentation bombs.

CYPRUS TO BE TRANSIT POINT FOR PLO WITHDRAWAL

[Text] Answering a question in Nicosia today, the government spokesman stated that Cyprus will be used as a transit point for the removal of Palestinians and injured persons from west Beirut. The spokesman also stated that the Cyprus Government has given its consent for Cyprus to be used for the purpose of transferring the multinational peace force to Lebanon.

DENKTAS COMMENTS ON COMPENSATION FOR FOREIGNERS

TA181225 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1030 GMT 18 Aug 82

[Text] President Denktas has said that millions of lira have already been paid to foreigners to compensate them for their properties in northern Cyprus. Denktas added that other complaints were still being dealt with. Yesterday Denktas received David (Beck), the representative of the United Kingdom citizens living in Cyprus. A statement by the presidential information office says that Denktas promised his visitor that the chief judge at the compensation court would soon be appointed and that the 400 pending files on this subject would soon be referred to the pertinent committee. President Denktas recalled that the compensations were not unilateral and that there was property belonging to Turkish Cypriots in the south as well which was destroyed, or was seized illegally by Greek Cypriots. Denktas added that discussions on this subject were continuing with the interested parties and governments.

DJIBOUTI FOREIGN MINISTER ARRIVES IN ANKARA

[Text] Djibouti Foreign Affairs and Cooperation Minister Bahdon Farah Moumin arrived in Turkey today for an official visit. The minister was met at Ankara's Esenboga Airport by Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen and other officials. In a statement on the minister's arrival, Turkmen said:

[Begin Turkmen recording] We are greatly pleased to receive in our country the foreign affairs and cooperation minister of the Republic of Djibouti. This is the first visit to Turkey by an official from that country, which makes this visit more significant. Close historic and cultural links bind our two countries, which are both members of the Islamic Conference. It is within this framework that Turkey aspires to develop its relations with that country in all fields. I am convinced that this wish is mutual and that the minister's talks in Ankara will contribute to this goal. Significant developments are presently taking place in the Middle East and Africa. I hope that during our talks we will be able to discuss these developments and carry out a beneficial exchange of ideas. [end recording]

In reply to Ilter's welcoming statement, the visiting minister said:

[Begin Moumin recording in French fading into Turkish translation] I am happy to be in your country. Turkey and Djibouti are linked by historic and religious ties. My country is located in a very strategic point of the African continent. I am convinced that cooperation between Turkey and my country will contribute to the solution of regional as well as international problems. Our goal is to promote relations between the two countries in all fields and to strengthen the links of brotherhood. This is the main reason for my visit to Turkey. [end recording]

Begins Contacts

[Text] Djibouti Foreign Affairs and Cooperation Minister Bahdon Farah Moumin, who is in Ankara, has started his contacts. Turkish-Djibouti official talks were held this morning.

The visiting minister called on Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen this morning. After the two ministers conferred for a while, the delegations of the two countries began official talks. Development of economic and commercial relations between Turkey and Djibouti was discussed and an exchange of views was held on international and regional problems.

Bahdon Farah Moumin was then received by Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu. Foreign Minister Turkmen was also present at the meeting.

Moumin will be received by Head of State Gen Kenan Evren this afternoon. He will go to Istanbul this evening and he will leave Turkey on 20 August.

GOVERNMENT ASKS IRAN FOR SECURITY ON HIGHWAY

[Text] Following an incident on the Gurbulak-Tabriz highway in which a Turkish driver was attacked, Turkey has requested that Iran take the necessary security measures on these roads. A statement by the foreign minister on this subject says that Mehmet Ekinci, a Turkish driver, was attacked and wounded on that highway.

The statement adds that the necessary representations have been made with the Iranian Foreign Ministry, and that Turkey has requested an early conclusion of the investigation of the incident and the apprehension of the culpits. It was also requested that Iran take all the necessary security measures on that highway. The statement concludes that the driver's condition is satisfactory, and that highway traffic between Turkey and Iran is continuing normally.

PRESS REPORTS COMMENT ON DRAFT CONSTITUTION

NC131553 [Editorial Report] The Istanbul Turkish language newspapers on 6, 7 and 8 August carry comments and criticism by members of the Consultative Assembly on the new draft constitution.

MILLIYET on 6 August, on page 9, carries comments made by some of the members of the defunct political parties. MILLIYET quotes Kemal Guven, former RPP deputy for Kars and former president of the National Assembly as saying: "It is impossible to approve this draft constitution in its present form. As a system, it is not clear what it gives and what it takes away. If this system is put into operation, it may lead to unrest and friction. The prepared draft constitution purports to usher in peace and tranquillity but in fact it foments trouble. It is impossible to approve of the new provisions concerning the judiciary and the press. It goes backward, not forward. The provisions, introduced in this draft constitution on fundamental rights, freedoms and trade unionism, do not deserve approval. They are provisions that usurp earned rights."

MILLIYET, on page 9, also carries comments made by Ali Topuz, former member of the defunct RPP and a former cabinet minister. Topuz says: "At this stage I wish to make this general criticism: First; the draft constitution is based on prejudice and bias, without analyzing objectively and realistically the reasons that brought Turkey to the 1980 crisis. Second; instead of ensuring a solution to problems and crises within a democratic period and through the will of the people, it aims at resolving these issues by increasing the powers of high-level institutions. Such a situation may damage the present parliamentary democratic system and eventually destroy it."

HURRIYET of 7 Aug, on page 9, reports that yesterday's debate on the draft constitution was watched by Head of State Kenan Evren and the other members of the National Security Council. The debate concentrated on presidential powers, freedom of the press and restrictions on workers' rights. According to HURRIYET, Aydin Tug, presidentially appointed member of the Consultative Assembly, made these comments on the presidential question: "It is my contention that for the settlement of crises, the president of the republic should be powerful and effective. But, unfortunately, the new constitution seeks to create a presidency which would have no responsibilities except to sign documents put before him. We observe that we are heading for a semi-presidential system. Under such circumstances, the president is elected by the people. So we have no choice but to have the president elected by the people."

According to HURRIYET, on page 9, Enis Muradoglu, Consultative Assembly member for Istanbul, was the next to address the Assembly. Saying that he could not but refer to the events that necessitated the preparation of this new constitution, Muradoglu added: "In any case, to enable us to make reasonable and realistic analyses and criticism, we need to know why we had to come to 12 September. In giving final shape to this constitution, our Assembly should not forget to what point anarchy and terrorism had come prior to 12 September, resulting in the deaths of a daily average of 20 of our fellow countrymen. Referring to freedom of press, Muradoglu said: "It is my conviction that no mention of a democratic parliamentary regime can be made in a country without press freedom."

On the same page, HURRIYET quoted the speech by Suleyman Sirri Kircali, Consultative Assembly member for Manisa. On the presidency: "Our 1961 Constitution was prepared in such a manner as to deprive our country of a powerful president. The president must be given vast powers. Under such conditions there would be no need for a prime minister." Kircali then contended that there was no need for a state consultative council either. Kircali also suggested that the term in office of a president be reduced from 7 to 4 years.

The next speaker was Ismail Arar, presidentially appointed member of the Consultative Assembly. Arar argued that the draft constitution was not convincing, satisfying or unifying and that it could not establish a delicate balance between the state and the people. He added: "It is very disappointing that despite having been drafted toward the end of the 20th century, the draft constitution does not tally with the realities of Turkey, nor does it respond to the needs of the citizens of Turkey."

Referring to the powers given to the president by the new constitution, Arar contended that the president's powers were too broad. The constitutional committee actually gave the president 37 different powers. Arar continued: "The number of powers is not important. It is the system that is important." In this part of his speech, Arar suggested the restoration of the senate and the bicameral system.

In its 7 August issue, on pages 1 and 4, GUNAYDIN reports that Assistant Professor Besir Hamitogullari, Consultative Assembly member for Mardin, referred to the high cost of living and the difficulties encountered by the citizens in making both ends meet, and added: "The draft constitution contains no provisions for eliminating unemployment, combatting poverty and providing some relief for the meagerly paid citizens." He also said that the constitution did not possess a national character and that "the draft constitution is not a national constitution because it deprives Turkey's three million youths between the ages of 18 to 20 of the right to choose one of the political parties nor does it give the workers and trade unions a chance to participate in positive and useful politics in an Ataturkist direction. This constitution is not a national one because it has also forgotten millions of artisans and peasants."

GUNAYDIN continues to quote Hamitogullari, who said the following while Head of State Kenan Evren was listening: "We have to prepare a consistent and contemporary constitution.... The balance in relations between the party in power and the opposition party must be maintained constitutionally. The president should not hold one political view only, nor must he be part of a political group. He must enjoy the faith and confidence of the entire nation. Today, Turkey has a candidate who possesses these characteristics. This candidate is Honorable Evren." CUMHURIYET of 7 August, on page 7, refers to the short speech made by Osman Yavuz, member for Konya, who maintained that the new constitution is capable of securing social justice, of respecting human rights, and of providing a democratic, secular state of law. On the presidential system, Yavuz said: "The draft constitution gives the president of the republic various powers but no responsibility. If a blunder is made through these powers, the office of the president of the republic could be dragged into political polemics. If we want a strong president, the president should be elected by the people."

MILLIYET of 8 August, on page 9, carries the views expressed by former politicians on the draft constitution. The paper quotes Celal Yardimci, minister of national education during the Democratic Party period. Yardimci said: "I shall have lots of things to say later, but one or two points have attracted my attention: These are the provisions concerning the election of the president and the prime minister. There are views that both the president of the republic and the prime minister could be appointed from outside as well as from within the National Assembly. I wish to criticize this stand vigorously." Yardimci is then quoted as stating categorically that the appointment of either the president or the prime minister from outside the National Assembly runs counter to the principle of national will.

MILLIYET DESCRIBES ASALA ORGANIZATION AIMS

NO180745 Istanbul MILLIYET in Turkish 13 Aug 82 pp 1, 8

[Nilufer Yalcin report]

[Excerpt] MILLIYET has learned certain facts which have emerged from investigations being carried out both at home and abroad in connection with the Armenian terrorist organizations.

According to information we have managed to obtain, the Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA) is using a newspaper building in Beirut as an administrative center and is carrying out armed training exercises at various bases. The "Liberation Armenienne" which organizes the organization's activities in Paris and which is considered "legal" by the French authorities, is carrying out propaganda activities from a known adress. Ara Toranyan, leader of this organization, which a short time ago changed its name and formally announced its support for ASALA and which now signs communiques as the "Mouvement National Armenienne pour ASALA," is the person who appears on French television every time Armenians carry out militant action against Turks and who argues that the Armenians are justifited in killing Turks.

In April 1965 the Armenians staged their first demonstrations in various countries, using the "50th anniversary of the 1915 massacre" as a pretext. Attempts were made under the leadership of Tashnaks to place the issue on the agenda of certain international organizations. The appearance of the Armenians as "an organized terrorist movement" became a reality in 1975 after the 1974 Turkish peace operation in Cyprus. ASALA made its voice heard by carrying out a bomb attack on the office of the World Council of Churches in Beirut on 20 January 1975 and by issuing a communique in which it explained its structure, goals and activities.

According to ASALA, the policy pursued by the Armenian political parties and militants during the past 70 years went bankrupt, because they obtained no positive results for their efforts either from Turkey or from the governments of the countries they happened to be in. The Armenians' cause was coming to a fruitless end, and the massacre was being forgotten. Therefore, a new method needed to be worked out, based on Marxism-Leninism. Soviet Armenia was defined as a "liberated region," and cooperation was established with the organizations which support the liberation movement of the oppressed peoples so that the Armenian lands which remain in Turkey could be liberated.

According to ASALA, the Tashnaks and the Hinchaks harmed the cause by cooperating with certain opportunist politicians and circles in imperialist countries.

This was not the way out. The only way out was to work with international "liberation" organizations and to launch a worldwide movement from bases where these organizations were strong. The ASALA communique also stated that it was determined to work with the Greek, Iranian and Arab peoples, that is with the "peoples" of the countries neighboring Turkey, as their allies. In fact, ASALA based itself in Beirut and embarked on constant cooperation with the Hawatimah and Habash groups, which are the most radical Marxist wings of tha Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) in Lebanon. It then opened various special camps for training terrorists. ASALA itself has admitted that three of these camps have been destroyed during the Israeli occupation of Lebanon.

As in the first days, ASALA is now in a state of friction with the Tashnak militants and with the terrorist organizations of this party. It is known that it has certain organizations in the Greek Cypriot sector of Cyprus with which it collaborates very closely, and also in France, Canada and the United States, where it tries to put up a front of legality.

The known leaders are Agop Agopyan (who is reported to have died in the recent Israeli raids on Beirut) and Mihran Mihranyan and Murad Muradyan, all probably pseudonyms. The ASALA spokesman is Ara Alex Yenikomsuyan, who became known after a bomb explosion in a Geneva hotel room on 3 October 1980.

The surface extension of ASALA is the organization known as "Liberation Armenienne" in Paris. The address of this organization, directed by Ara Toanyan, a Frenchman by origin, is 50 rue Chateau Landon, Paris, 75010. This organization recently adopted the name "Mouvement National Armenien pour L'Asala." It publishes a magazine called HAY BAYKAR.

ASALA's extension in North America is known as "the People's Movement of the Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (PM-ASALA). This organization made its name known at a press conference held at the Ramada Hotel in Toronto on 11 April 1982.

So far, ASALA has accepted responsibility for 33 attacks on Turkish targets and for 10 against targets in other countries.

The Armenian terrorists who, since 1980, have carried out attacks on Turkish and foreign establishments in foreign countries and who have tried to use various aliases, are in fact associated with ASALA, a fact which has emerged from the investigations being carried out.

"The 3 October" organization: This is an organization set up to pressure the Swiss Government to release Ara Alex Yenikomsuyan in whose hand a bomb exploded and others who were engaged in making bombs in a Geneva hotel on 3 October 1980. As will be remembered, Yenikomsuyan lost a hand and his eyesight. When these terrorists were arrested, the "3 October" organization, which is affiliated with ASALA, carried out 18 bomb attacks in order to bring pressure to bear on the Swiss authorities. All these attacks were directed at Swiss establishments and the Swiss people.

"The 9 June organization: This orgnization was set up to secure through pressure the release from prison of Jankochyan, who on 9 June 1981 killed Mehmet Savas Yerguz, contract secretary of the Turkish consulate general in Geneva. Like other organizations affiliated with ASALA, the "9 June" organization, too, receives its instructions from the center, and it has a leader of its own.

The "Orly" Group: This is an organization which was set up when an ASALA terrorist carrying a false passport in the name of Dimitriou Yorgiou was caught entering France. Inquiries revealed that the terrrorist was a high-ranking ASALA leader known as Monte Malkonyan. The Orly group has carried out 10 attacks since then, and it is still active. It is based in France.

The "Switzerland 15" organization: This organization derives its name from the 15-year prison sentence passed on Jankochyan. It is understood that so far three armed attacks have been carried out by this orgnaization.

"Justice Commandos of the Armenian Massacre": This is a terrorist organization set up by the Tashnak Party under the name Armenian Revolutionary Federation as a rival to ASALA. The Tashnaks first rejected the idea that the Justice Commandos was a terrorist organization attacked to them, but recently they have been showing signs of admitting it.

There are irreconcilable differences between ASALA and the Tashnaks. However, there are indications that these two terrorist organizations have recelty been cooperating, particularly in the United States. One of themain points which separates ASALA is that ASALA considers other countries, too, as targets, whereas the Justice Commandos wish to harm only Turkish interests.

"The New Armenian Resistance": This organization, which first made its name known through a bomb attack on the Turkish tourism bureau in Paris on 14 May 1977, has not since been known to have been involved in an armed attack. This organization carries out bomb attacks on targets not only in Turkey but also in other countries. Its most important characteristic is that it is the only organization that attempts to attack Soviet interests, but ASALA rejects this.

VOTCP CALLS FOR UNITY AGAINST CONSTITUTION

TA131225 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 13 Aug 82

[Text] The junta is continuing to attack the democratic forces on the eve of the constitutional referendum. Ecevit's conviction has become certain. Professor Sadun Aren has been arrested.

The prison term of 2 months and 27 days given to former Republican People's Party [RPP] leader Bulent Ecevit for statements he made to the foreign press has become certain. The military court has decided that the sentence should be carried out on the grounds that junta Edict No 70 further extended the parameters of the prohibitions of Edict No 52.

As you know, Ecevit lawyer Sahin Mengu had applied to the prosecutor to reverse the sentence because of the new elements in Edict No 70 recently announced.

Meanwhile, Professor Sadun Aren, a former official of the now defunct Turkish Labor Party, has been imprisoned under the pretext that he made communist propaganda in his lecture notes on macroeconomics.

The attack launched against communists, socialists and even officials of the RPP, which has been the ruling party in Turkey for years -- what does it show? What is the reactionary and military junta running after? What does it want to do? These questions are increasingly bugging the workers, peasants, the pro-labor people and the wide masses supporting the RPP. What does the junta want to do?

The Turkish Communist Part's [TCP] answer to that question is clear: The junta wants to institutionalize the reactionary and military police state. This regime is being imposed on the people in the form of a junta today and it will be imposed in the form of a reactionary parliament in the future. The junta's draft constitution is nothing but the legal shell of a militarist police state. Yet, how will this constitutional shell -- which is triggering great reaction from very wide circles -- be put into force? That is the question.

The junta is trying to impose the constitution on the people by means of eliminating the communists and revolutionary forces who are struggling for a national democratic constitution, as well as the RPP forces, the democrats and the patriotic forces who are defending the 1961 Constitution.

On the eve of the constitutional referendum, the junta is trying to terrorize and threaten the forces which will reject its constitution. Junta Edict No 70 eliminates the legal possibility of saying no to the constitution. Even the bourgeois press admitted that the edict was aimed against the communists, the progressive forces, the RPP officials and parliamentarians, and not the Justice Party administration. This shows who the junta is afraid of.

The junta is afraid of the forces that can say no to its constitution. It is afraid of the communists, of the progressive and patriotic forces and of the RPP members who defend the 1961 constitution. Under these conditions, what should the forces which are opposed to the junta's constitution do? They should do what the junta is afraid they will do. Establish unity of force and action against the junta's black constitution and in favor of freedom, democracy, peace and national independence.

BRIEFS

PAKISTAN-TURKEY TOURISM COMMITTEE -- Pakistani Minister of Culture, Sports and Tourism Arbab Niaz Mohammad, who is currently on an official visit in Turkey, has said that his country plans to further develop its cultural, tourism and sports relations with Turkey. The visiting minister, who is touring Konya, said that it was decided at the end of the Turkish-Pakistani talks held in Ankara to establish a joint tourism committee. Announcing that the committee will hold its first meeting in Pakistan during October, Mohammad said that there are several areas in the field of tourism where his country could benefit from Turkey. EXPORT FIGURES SHOW INCREASE -- Turkish exports during the first 6 months of 1982 have grown by almost 30 percent in comparison to the same period last year. A statement by the state Institute of Statistics says that exports reached $2.54 billion during the first half of this year. Exports in June were $420 million, of which 67.7 percent were industrial products -- also an increase in comparison to exports last June. BONN NOT OFFICIALLY INFORMED OF U.S. STUDY

[Text] Bonn, 18 Aug (DPA) -- The Federal Government has so far received no official information about the U.S. Defense Department study on the possibility of winning a protracted nuclear war. This was stated by Government Spokesman Lothar Ruehl in Bonn today with regard to reports in the Los Angeles TIMES about such plans. He left it open whether such a study paper existed. If it were made the basis of a new U.S. nuclear strategy, he said, then the relevant NATO bodies would have to be informed. This has not happened.

He doubted whether Ronald Reagan's administration will adopt the findings of such a study as its policy. The NATO summit meeting in Bonn last June made it clear that the Western alliance will use arms only for its defense. The U.S. President spoke in a similar vein in his recent address. The prevention of war was paramount for NATO. But this did not preclude studies on a nuclear war and its consequences by the general staffs of the nuclear powers.

AGREEMENT TO BAN CHEMICAL WEAPONS FAVORED

[Text] Bonn/Pirmasens, 18 Aug (DPA) -- In connection with reports on the storage of chemical weapons in the Federal Republic, the Federal Government has come out in favor of an international agreement on banning the use of chemical weapons. Speaking today to the press in Bonn, Government Spokesman Lothar Ruehl also pointed out, however, that chemical weapons are stored on GDR territory "in very considerable quantities." The aim of every agreement, therefore, has to be to eliminate weapons systems of this kind in both parts of Central Europe, namely in West and East.

According to the television magazine program "Monitor," the six U.S. poisons depots in the Federal Republic are to be expanded and the weapons stored there replaced by "a new generation of chemical weapons." Neither Ruehl nor a representative of the Federal Ministry of Defense gave any further details. Government Spokesman Ruehl did, however, make express reference to the connection between the storing of chemical weapons in both parts of Germany. He said that Minister of State Hans-Juergen Wischnewski from the federal chancellor's office had told Rhineland Palatinate DGB Chairman Julius Lehlbach in June that the Federal Government is still making active efforts to have chemical weapons banned.

Apart from the DGB, the Palatinate SPD also made a strong appeal today to both the Bonn government and the Rhineland-Palatinate Land Government in Mainz for action. The storage of chemical weapons in U.S. depots must not be played down, Willi Rothley, Palatinate SPD area chairman, told DPA. The Federal Republic cannot support internationally the abolition of chemical weapons and at the same time allow the United States to store chemical weapons on German territory. Lehlback has filed a suit with the Federal Constitutional Court in Karlsruhe on the grounds that chemical weapons restrict the "basic right to life."

"Monitor" reported on Tuesday that in the Fischbach U.S. depot alone -- which is in the Palatinate close to the French border -- probably up to 10,000 tons of poison gas are stored. Shown as evidence were photos taken by an amateur. The Fischbach depot is to be expanded this year at a cost of $18 million (over DM45 million).

DPA NOTES EXPANSION OF GDR SHORTWAVE BROADCASTS

[Text] Bonn, 17 Aug (DPA) -- According to CDU/CSU development policy spokesman, Volkmar Koehler, GDR radio has considerably extended the external short-wave service of "Radio Berlin International," mainly for the countries of the Third World.

Koehler stated in the Union's press service today (Tuesday), that "Radio Berlin International" is currently broadcasting about 435 hours a week in 13 languages. This was 115 hours more than seven years ago. The main areas for broadcasts were Africa, Asia, overseas as a whole, Latin America, Portugal and Brazil.

There is a notable extension of Portuguese, Spanish and English programs for Third World countries. With regard to the content of GDR external broadcasts, he stated that the translated German-language manuscripts were not conceived in the spirit and language of the receiver country so, despite the "ether bombardment" from the GDR, there was still the hope that the Federal Republic's radio programs would be listened to more readily because they were more in tune with the listeners.

SUSPECTED GDR AGENT ARRESTED IN HAMBURG

[Text] Hamburg, 18 Aug (DPA) -- A suspected GDR agent was arrested in Hamburg on suspicion of espionage just before his planned return flight for Berlin. The head of Hamburg's Office for Protection of the Constitution, (Christian Lochte), stated today that the man came from Berlin to Hamburg by train on Tuesday using forged identity papers. After his arrest at the airport, a coded number, known to the Constitution Protection Service, was found, under which he was known at the East Berlin Ministry for State Security. The suspect was moved to the Federal Prosecutor's Office in Karlsruhe for further investigations.

The alleged spy, who claims to be 38-year-old East Berlin engineering graduate (Eberhard Drescher), would make no statement, according to (Lochte). The tasks of travelling agents include making contact with Eastern agents working in the West, supplying "dead letter boxes" and recruiting new agents. The forged identity document was a "real duplicate"; it had been made out in the name of a person who really existed -- a 35-year-old man from West Berlin.

GOVERNMENT CALLS ON DENMARK TO YIELD IN 'COD WAR'

LD181702 Hamburg DPA in German 1423 GMT 18 Aug 82

[Excerpt] Bonn, 18 Aug (DPA) -- The Federal Government has called on Denmark in sharp terms, almost in the form of an ultimatum, to yield in the 'cod war.' This concerns the quota of catches for German fishermen off western Greenland which Denmark has rejected although it has been sanctioned by the European Community. Government Spokesman Lothar Ruehl told a Bonn news conference today that the cabinet expects the conflict with Denmark to be solved by next Wednesday. Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher has been asked to negotiate with his Danish colleague.

PAPER VIEWS PENTAGON'S NUCLEAR STRATEGY PLANNING

[Editorial signed Ein: "Thinking Everything Over"]

[Text] Every U.S. Government is committed to continuing the discussion on the so-called nuclear strategy. The Reagan administration, too, is dealing with the questions about how and if the atom can be utilized militarily. It is rather doubtful, however, that the inquiries ordered to the Pentagon by the White House have reached a stage already, in which it can be said that, proceeding from the latest knowledge, the United States was in a position to win a nuclear war. The Los Angeles TIMES allegedly has learned -- and international observers agree with the interpretations of this respected paper of the West Coast -- that military experts had mapped out a new nuclear plan. The concept provided for a prolonged atomic war which could last for half a year at least.

Such formulations can only be confusing, for nobody can win an atomic war. This is known by U.S. Secretary of Defense Weinberger as well as by his military advisers. It is known now that there exist several schools of thinking in the Department of Defense. Pentagon analysts were and are of different views. But this is only natural. Only careful consideration of even the most extreme views can yield results. Besides, decision-making on such issues is not up to the military but to the politicians. This is why rash critics ought to read what Caspar Weinberger has said about nuclear strategy. He admitted that nobody knew what would happen if mankind were stricken by the atomic apocalypse. He, however, stressed that the inability of predicting an atomic future does not dispense the responsible people from the duty of pondering all possible situations. Therefore the toying with ideas about the unthinkable forms part of the strategy for the prevention of war. This also seems to be the core of the Los Angeles TIMES' information.

The Soviets, by the way, are dealing in a similar manner with the atomic problem. They, too, have not tamed the atomic tiger yet. They, too, must occupy with ideas about what could happen if one were to saddle and even ride it. Seen from this angle the revival of the atomic discussion in Washington is useful. What matters, however, is to defend the analysts against the suspicion that they want to achieve in practice what they are dissecting theoretically.

FRENCH CONTINGENT DEPARTS FOR LEBANON

[Text] The first French contingent of the multinational interposition force departed on its journey to Lebanon three quarters of an hour ago. It will make a stopover in Cyprus first. Our correspondent, (Maurice Fusier), has just communicated this information to me. One hundred and forty men belonging to the 2nd Foreign Paratroop Regiment took their place onboard a DC-8.

Before their departure from Bastia, Minister of Defense Charles Hernu reminded the paratroopers of the importance of this mission. You are going to be the first to land, he said. Everything must be done so that there are no hitches. I am counting on you to demonstrate the expertise of French troops. A second group of 160 men and a large amount of equipment are also due to depart during the day on board three Transalls and a cargo jumbo jet of Air France.

He described it as positive, adding that Mr Mitterrand has the same vision of peace as the PLO. Mr as-Sus congratulates France for having helped -- I quote -- the Palestinian and Lebanese peoples find a way out of the Beirut conflict with honor and dignity.

ACTION DIRECTE BOMBS PARIS NEWSPAPER OFFICE

Action Directe is believed to have carried out 30 terrorist attacks in France in the last [word indictinct] years.

In a long communique following this morning's explosion, it accused the right-wing newspaper of being a "fascist and racist rag." The paper, it added, had been the only one in France to have unconditionally supported Israel's act of "healthiness" in Lebanon.

Recent bomb attacks here have been directed at a number of Jewish targets, including a restaurant where gunmen sprayed diners with bullets, killing six and wounding 22.

Yesterday's government ban on Action Directe was the first after President Francois Mitterrand's announcement the previous night of major new anti-terrorist measures.

MINUTE publisher Jean-Claude Godot said in a radio interview he was "not especially surprised to have gotten a bomb. "In our latest edition we took an extremely clear position in favor of what the Israeli Army is doing in Beirut, that is, trying to destroy that nest of terrorism, the PLO (Palestine Liberation Organization) which is to some degree nourishing terrorism throughout Europe."

The Action Directe statement was left in a brown envelope on the windshield of a car parked near AFP headquarters. It said: "We demand withdrawal of Israeli troops and the appearance of the terrorists (Israeli Prime Minister Menahem) Begin and (Defense Minister Ari'el) Sharon before an international court for crimes against peace and humanity."

The group has claimed three attacks in Paris in recent weeks, against an Israeli diplomat's car, a branch office of a Jewish-owned bank and a Jewish-owned shop.

ARMENIAN TERRORIST NOT TO BE EXTRADITED TO U.S.

NC182252 Paris AFP in English 2242 GMT 18 Aug 82

[Text] Paris, Aug 18 (AFP) -- The Appeals Court recommended here tonight against extraditing suspected Armenian terrorist Vicken Tcharkhutian to the United States. The prisoner was expected to be released immediately. His lawyer said Tcharkhutian would then leave France by plane.

He was accused of complicity in attempted bombings in Los Angeles last May of Air Canada's installations and the Swissbank Corporation.

The Appeals Court's accusation chamber stated that the extradition convention between the United States and France provided for handing over arsonists, but that the allegations against the prisoner were not covered by the convention.

Mr. Tcharkhutian admitted being a militant of the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA), but denied involvement in the Los Angeles bomb attempts. In both incidents, the bombs were defused before they exploded.

After 11 people were killed in an attack by ASALA gunmen at Ankara Airport on August 7, an ASALA communique threatened further attacks in the United States, France, Canada, Britain, Sweden and Switzerland unless those countries released 85 Armenian prisoners, including Tcharkhutian, in one week.

Los Angeles police said they had established his guilt through fingerprints found on the Swissbank bomb and by taping telephone conversation before the Air Canada attempt.

Mr. Tcharkhutian, 29, an Iraqi citizen, was arrested June 6 at Orly Airport outside Paris. In July, ASALA claimed responsibility for a bomb explosion at the Place Saint Michel in Paris's busy Latin Quarter, and threatened more attacks if he were not released.

The advocate-general of the Appeals Court told the judges the 1909 extradition convention covers only arson, "and in French law the construction of a bomb cannot be likened to a fire." Although "regretting the convention's [words indistinct] he therefore recommended against extradition, the attorney general said.

French President Francois Mitterrand yesterday ordered a major police reinforcement and reorganization to fight terrorism. But Advocate-General Robert said: "The current circumstances should not put pressure on the court's decision. We must struggle against terrorism, but above all we must respect legal regulations." The French Government lacks authority to overrule the court.

SPADOLINI EXPECTS NEW GOVERNMENT BY WEEKEND

[Excerpts] (ANSA) -- Rome, August 19 -- Italian Premier-designate Giovanni Spadolini expects to wind up his government-formation consultations here later today and should be able to form a new government by the weekend, Spadolini told reporters after yesterday's round of talks. He told the journalists that he could assure the country that the "tempo will be rapid as required by the urgency and gravity of the problems".

A two-and-a-half hour "meeting for deeper study" between Spadolini and the Socialists Wednesday ended with "notable convergence", an official source said, and Socialist Party Secretary Bettino Craxi said he was "satisfied".

The Republicans also met with the premier-designate, later voicing their "full and affectionate support" as he seems to be "arriving at the final finishing-line of his toil".

Both party delegations said there had been no discussion of the makeup of the new cabinet, apparently indicating that there will be no obstacles for the premier's prerogative to choose his ministers as he sees fit, without pressures from the party secretariats.

BERLINGUER COMMENTS ON MEETING WITH SPADOLINI

PM181029 Rome L'UNITA in Italian 12 Aug 82 pp 1, 12

[Excerpt] The acting prime minister began consultations at the Chigi Palace yesterday, receiving at 1830 the DC delegation headed by Secretary Ciriaco de Mita. An hour later, the PCI delegation, headed by Secretary General Comrade Enrico Berlinguer and comprising Comrades Giorgio Napolitano, chairman of the Communist group in the chamber, and Napoleone Colajani, deputy chairman of the PCI senators, entered Giovanni Spadolini's study on the second floor.

At the conclusion of the conversation with Spadolini, which lasted about 1 and 1/2 hous, Enrico Berlinguer released the following statement: "We have explained and spelled out to Senator Spadolini the significance of our proposal, aimed at averting an early election, ensuring the continuation of the legislative term until its normal expiration and initiating a new political process which will have its starting point in the formation of a government free from pressure by the party secretaries and from being divided up among the internal factions of the various parties, having recourse to honest and competent personalities inside and outside the parties. Although not deeming ourselves involved in negotiations on a program, we have also explained our viewpoint on the country's principal problems, beginning with the acute problems of boosting output, increasing employment and providing tax equality."

Next Berlinguer answered a number of questions put by journalists.

[Answer] Your question is relevant but premature. It is premature because we have demanded a government whose characteristics we have -- I believe -- spelled out quite clearly. We will see whether this government is formed. We will assess it when it has been formed and has presented itself in Parliament. We certainly believe that there is leeway and that every effort should be made. Our party has made a very serious effort to avert the prospect of an early election which we regard as harmful to the country's overall iterests, and especially to the state of the economy and of public finances.

[Question] Following the president of the republic's choice and the meeting which you have just had, it would appear that there is a degree of improvement in the situation, as it appeared until 2 days ago.

[Answer] I believe that our proposal has brought a new element into the situation and that at this moment it is for the other political forces to shoulder their responsibilities, as we have shouldered ours.

[Question] What is your opinion of the attitude which the Socialists have adopted over the last few days and also today? They appear to judge harshly the president's choice of Spadolini.

[Answer] It seems a rather nervous attitude, which I hope can be the object of rather more careful reflection on the novelty of our proposal and the effort to offer a possibile solution which it represents. I believe that it should be considered carefully even by a leftwing party like the Socialist Party.

[Question] In your opinion, has the acting prime minister taken your proposal into account?

[Answer] The acting prime minister -- I would like to recall -- even when he formed the previous government, acted with the intention of forming a government not rigidly subject to shareouts among the parties and their internal factions. However, he did not succeed in this attempt. But today we hope that he will be able to do so. This is largely dependent on his will and determination, and it depends also in particular, on the leeway allowed him by the various parties. We hope that he will be able to succeed in an attempt of this kind, which, we believe, corresponds to an objective requirement, particularly concerning the reorganization of the institutions and the functioning of the state.

MARQUES ON MISSION TO ANGOLA, RELATIONS

LD182110 Lisbon in Portuguese to Europe 1230 GMT 18 Aug 82

[Text] The secretary of state for foreign affairs, Dr Paulo Marques, returned from Angola in the early hours of this morning and said that the main purpose of his trip to Luanda was to apprise the Angolan Government of the recent (?rumor of a plot) against the Luanda Government being hatched in Lisbon.

This is how he responded to inquisitive reporters on his arrival at Lisbon airport.

[Begin recording] [Question] Mr Secretary of State, has this trip to Luanda, in your view, helped to further strengthen relations between the two states?

[Answer] No doubt. This trip to Luanda, carrying with me a message from my prime minister which I personally handed over to President Eduardo dos Santos of Angola with whom I had a lengthy talk -- has gone a long way once again to demonstrate the good relations existing between our two countries and the expansion which those relations have been undergoing in recent months.

[Question] Sir, can you disclose the contents of the message delivered to the Angolan president?

[Answer] I am sorry, I cannot.

[Question] Would you please confirm that during your talk with the president of the People's Republic of Angola you broached the so-called Cubango operation?

[Answer] Not directly. However, apart from the contents of the message delivered by me, we exchanged viewpoints on other aspects and within these other aspects we did exchange views on such incursions. When these incursions were referred to I had the opportunity to reaffirm the Portuguese Government's position -- which has, as a matter of fact, already been outlined in a statement made last week -- that we repudiate such incursions outright, pointing out how they are hindering the active search for a solution leading to peace in the area. STENBACK COMMENTS ON UN'S INDISPENSABILITY

Stenback said that recent experience gives cause for major concern since in several different cases it has been possible to note indifference toward the world organization. The most serious of the regional conflicts at the present time is the crisis in the Middle East, where there are doubts about the credibility of the whole of the UN ability to function.

The UN Charter is still a perfectly usable foundation for the organization's activities, Minister Stenback said. It is in the interests of all nations that they note and recognize this, and for small states this is of vital importance, he said.

The parties involved in the bilateral and regional crisis frustrate and destroy the UN's ability to take action through their own short-sighted calculations. This has happened despite the fact that everyone should be aware that in the long run durable solutions cannot be reached without the world organization and its help. This is especially true of the Middle East, Foreign Minister Stenback said.

ARMENIAN MOVEMENT HAILS ASALA STRUGGLE

NC190645 Nicosia TA NEA in Greek 19 Aug 82 p 8

[Text] Yesterday the Armenian People's Revolutionary Movement made the following declaration:

For the last 7 years the Armenian people have been waging an armed struggle against Turkish fascism which, from 1915 to 1922, with the approval and complicity of the imperialists, planned and carried out against our people the first genocide of the 20th century. The result of this genocide was the extermination of 1.5 million Armenians and the uprooting of the rest from historically Armenian territories, which are today illegally held by Turkey.

The impunity of 1915 has encouraged Turkish fascism to proceed with the implementation of the same policy, that is, genocide and the uprooting of the Greek people in Asia Minor, the Arab and Kurdish peoples and the people of Cyprus.

In 1975 the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA) was established. Its main goal is the waging of armed struggle for the liberation of the territories occupied by Turkey.

The military Operation Erzurum (the seizure of the Ankara international airport) that was carried out by the Harmiyan Hayrik Commando suicide squad of the Armenian Secret Army has proved to Turkish fascism and its collaborators that their plots against the Armenian people and the other oppressed people of the world are doomed to failure. The heroic Operation Erzurum has also proved that the "ASALA backbone is made of steel" and that it will not be bent by the blows of fascism and its Zionist allies. The heroic fighters, who have proved that they are able to strike, will continue to strike at Turkish fascism inside its den.

The Armenian People's Revolutionary Movement hails the ASALA revolutionary struggle, because it believes that only the armed people's struggle will crown with success the efforts of our people and of all the struggling people.

As Armenians we hail with particular satisfaction the Erzurum operation, which expresses the Armenian people's wishes, and we piously bow to the memory of our martyred fighters. Along with this, we condemn the anti-Armenian stance of some governments in Europe and America and call on them to revise their reactionary attitude and to set free all the Armenian fighters who are held in their prisons.

The Armenian People's Revolutionary Movement calls upon all the Armenians of Cyprus to rally around the Armenian liberation struggle, which becomes broader every day, and to give it fresh impetus through their support.

On this occasion, the movement calls upon the Greek Cypriot people to assist the ASALA struggle in every way since this struggle is aimed at the common enemy: the Turkish conqueror.

Honor to the memory of the heroes of the Erzurum operation! Long live the Armenian national liberation struggle! Long live the revolutionary alignment of the struggling people!

TURKEY-DJIBOUTI TALKS END, ACCORD TO BE SIGNED

[Text] Turkey and Djibouti have agreed to sign an economic and technical cooperation agreement and a cultural exchange program with a view to developing relations between the two countries.

The official Turkey-Djibouti talks were held in Ankara today. According to the information received by a Turkish Radio and Television correspondent, at the end of the talks the two sides decided to develop bilateral relations in every field. Accordingly, an economic and technical cooperation agreement and a cultural exchange program will be drawn up as soon as possible. A beneficial exchange of views was also conducted during the talks concerning problems of the two countries' regions and international terrorism.

Meanwhile, Head of State Gen Kenan Evren received the Djibouti foreign affairs and cooperation minister, Bahdon Farah Moumin, at the Cankaya presidential mansion today. The visiting minister conveyed to Evren a message from the Djibouti president conveying good wishes and commenting on the relations between the two countries. Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen also attended the meeting.

Moumin later visited the Machine and Chemical Industry Directorate General, where he was briefed on the work of the establishment and given a tour of the exhibition of its products. This evening, the visiting minister will leave for Istanbul. In Istanbul, he will tour historical and tourist sites and tourist sites and will depart Turkey on 20 August.

OUR RADIO RAISES QUESTIONS ON BORDER SHOOTINGS

TA190929 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0700 GMT 19 Aug 82

[Station Commentary: "Who Incited the Two Soldiers?"]

[Text] Dear listeners, an armed clash occurred on 10 August at the Cildir district on the Turkish-Soviet border. The government informed the public of the incident after a delay of 2 days. However, the government distorted the incident in a bid to deceive the public, to fan chauvinism and to instill hostility against our neighbor the Soviet Union. The information on the incident was wrong and incomplete since all the details of the incident could not be made public. Why is the military junta concealing the details of the incident when a protocol signed by Turkey and the Soviet Union on this border incident states that the two sides reached an agreement on how the incident occurred?

The reactionary newspapers, happy to find a subject they could exploit, initiated an anti-Soviet campaign. In brief, those who are guilty began posing as innocent. Though the military junta knows that the Soviet side is not guilty, it closes an eye to this campaign being undertaken by the reactionary press organs.

Dear listeners, in the protocol signed by the Turkish and Soviet authorities in connection with the border incident of 10 August it is said that two Turkish soliders violated the Soviet border and opened fire, causing the armed clash. Though this fact has been accepted by the Turkish authorities who signed the protocol, why is this truth being concealed from the public? Is the military junta trying to cover up for those who incited the two soldiers to violate the Soviet border and cause an incident by firing at random? If these soldiers were not sent on the orders of someone in the army, why did these soldiers enter Soviet territory and why did they then fire upon the soldiers of a country which for 10 years has not missed an occasion to express its friendship? In the event the military junta's government refuses to reveal all the details of the border incident at Cildir as well as the content of the protocol signed in this connection, then it will have to bear the responsibility for similar incidents that might occur in the future. Then, our people will hold the junta generals and their government responsible for what happens.

This border incident has assumed a special significance since it coincided with innumerable plots being hatched by U.S. imperialism in order to poison the international atmosphere and to further strain world relations. The history of mankind is full of such small border incidents that have caused big wars that have cost the lives of so many people. The fact is that neither the Soviet administration and people nor our working people favor war. On the contrary, they want the elimination of the threat of war between two friendly nations. More than that, the Soviet administration is making every effort to silence all arms and to establish peaceful coexistence not only with our country but with the world at large.

In light of this fact, efforts by the military junta to conceal from the people some details of the 10 August border incident are a sign of a stand hostile to peace and detente.

Our people are aware of plots by U.S. imperialists and their collaborators to involve our country in adventures. These include the stationing of the Rapid Deployment Force in our country, the establishing of bases for the AWACS spy planes, the stationing of warplanes capable of carrying nuclear warheads and more. It is also a known fact that the U.S. imperialists have not given up even for a moment their aggressive intentions against the Soviet Union. The latest U.S. plans for a nuclear war against the Soviet Union which is expected to last 6 months are another sign of the existing dangers.

The junta generals must now disclose who incited the two soldiers. Who sent these two soldiers into Soviet territory? Who ordered these two soldiers to open fire on Soviet soldiers after violating the border? And finally, why is the junta administration hiding from the people the true details of the incident?

POLICE RAPID DEPLOYMENT UNITS -- A law was published in the official gazette under which police rapid deployment units will be set up within the framework of the security organization. Under the law, which goes into effect on 1 January 1983, police rapid deployment units will be set up in cities and districts where the Interior Ministry deems necessary. The existing riot police will be turned into rapid deployment units. Personnel who will serve in these units will not be transferred to other security organization units unless they complete 3 years of service in the rapid deployment units. The period of 3 years can be extended by another 3 years. The units will be sent to other provinces for temporary duty whenever security and public order call for it. NEW AMBASSADORS -- This morning Head of State Gen Kenan Evren received Turkey's ambassador to Tirana, Selcuk Toker; ambassador to Chile, Ekrem Goksin; ambaddador to Adu Dhabi, Taner Baytok; and ambassador to Helsinki, Metin Karaca. The new ambassadors, who were recently appointed to these posts, bade the president farewell. [Text] [Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 13 Aug 82 TA]

WHOLESALE PRICE INDEX -- The wholesale price index rose by 1.2 percent in July. The index had risen by 0.2 percent in Just last year. The Trade Ministry announced that the wholesale price index rose by 14.2 percent during the first 7 months of this year. The corresponding figure for last year was 14.5 percent. The retail price index rose by 1.4 percent in Ankara in July and by 1 percent in Istanbul. The rise in the retail price index in Ankara during the first 7 months of the year was 15.8 percent and in Istanbul 19.9 percent. [Text] [Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 14 Aug 82 TA]

MINISTRY COMMUNIQUE VIEWS F-18 'COMMISSIONS'

LD182042 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1800 GMT 18 Aug 82

[Text] The Ministry of Defense has issued a communique in reaction to a report in a Madrid daily which speaks of alleged commissions paid to intermediaries in Spain's purchase from the United States of F-18 planes in the framework of the Future Attack and Combat Aircraft [FACA] program. The ministry says that negotiations took place without intermediaries and the dealings were directly with the U.S. Defense Department and the McDonnell Douglas Company. The note from the ministry also says that it will ask the Americans for detailed information on these possible commissions, information concerning recipients of commissions and the amounts involved. Finally, the ministry says that all detailed information on the FACA program is available to the media as it has been to the members of the Congress and Senate defense committees and that it wants to see the utmost clarity in everything affecting this important purchase contract for national defense.

UNITED KINGDOM

DAILY: REAGAN DOES 'RIGHT THING' ON TAIWAN

PM181335 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 18 Aug 82 p 12

[Editorial: "Reagan Bends on Taiwan"]

[Text] Both sides have made comparatively minor concessions in the joint communique published in Washington and Peking yesterday on the thorny question of American arms sales to Taiwan. Of the two, the United States seems to have moved rather further than China. America, the communique says, "intends gradually to reduce its sales of arms to Taiwan, leading, over a period of time, to a final resolution." However, the communique does not announce any cut-off date by which arms sales will be ended, something which Peking had been pressing hard for. Nor does it say that arms sales will cease. In fact the administration is now expected shortly to submit to Congress a package for renewal of an agreement with Taiwan for co-production of the F-5E jet fighter aircraft.

China, for its part, has pledged to seek reunification with the mainland by peaceful means, and in a separate statement specifically dropped its demand for an immediate, complete cutoff of arms supplies. Peking had earlier been threatening to downgrade relations with Washington if this was not done. In effect, the joint communique is a typical fudge-up which both sides will feel able to defend. The reason why President Reagan can fairly easily be made to appear to have moved the farthest is that, the United States being a democratic country, there is a highly vociferous Taiwan lobby there which can claim that anything short of swamping Taiwan with a vast mountain of ultra-sophisticated weaponry for all time amounts to a sell-out. China does not allow lobbies.

The hook from which Mr Reagan would now seem to have removed himself, or at least must hope he has removed himself, was mainly of his own making. In his pre-election campaigning he fiercely attacked the Carter and Nixon administrations' downgrading of American relations with Taiwan and promised to do all kinds of things to reverse it. As so often happens, experience of office has prompted caution. Faced with the possibility that China would break off diplomatic relations and withdraw its ambassador from Washington, he has bent a little. He will be roundly assailed for it, but on the whole seems to have done the right thing.

ON-SITE INSPECTION DEMAND OF SS-20'S REPEATED

[Excerpts] Bonn, 20 Aug (DPA) -- The Federal Government has underlined its demand that Moscow allow on-the-spot inspections to determine whether the Soviet Union has really stopped stationing any further SS-20 missiles, in accord with the moratorium announced by head of state and party Leonid Brezhnev. Government Spokesman Lothar Ruehl was referring to statements by SPD Deputy Parliamentary Group Chairman Horst Ehmke in Moscow, who has described differing statements by the American and Soviet sides as insoluble in the short term.

On this subject Ruehl said the American reconnaissance results have always proved "very reliable and coherent." The Soviet Union has a good chance to set aside all doubts by allowing inspections on the spot.

RUEHL: GOVERNMENT WELCOMES PLO EVACUATION PLAN

[Text] Bonn, 20 Aug (DPA) -- The Federal Government has welcomed the plan worked out by U.S. negotiator Philip Habib for the evacuation of the PLO from west Beirut. Government Spokesman Lothar Ruehl told the press today that this is a step leading to an end to the suffering of the population of Beirut, and creates for the first time in a long while the possibility that the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Lebanon will be reestablished.

The Federal Government appealed to all those involved to contribute to the success of this plan and not to do anything that would endanger it. The government spokesman also welcomed the fact that France, Italy and the United States are willing to send an international peacekeeping force at the request of the Lebanese Government to guarantee the fulfillment of the evacuation plan. However, Ruehl stressed, the evacuation of the PLO does not yet mean the end of the Middle East problem. This continues to depend on the realization of the rights of the Palestinian people.

FDP OFFICIAL VIEWS SPD AS COALITION PARTNER

[Interview with FDP Bundestag Group Deputy Chairman Julius Cronenberg in Bonn; date not given]

[Text] WELT: Mr Cronenberg, leading trade union officials object to the government's budget compromise. The discussion is increasing.

Cronenberg: I am certain that the trade unions will try to exert pressure on the government, because they are subjectively convinced to live up to their duty. Priority cannot be given, however, to "union interests" rather than to the interests of society. We do not need more debts and subsidies, what we need are productive jobs. The trade unions must ask themselves whether they have not bled the plants white in the past with their policy.

WELT: Karl Liedtke, your SPD group colleague, responded to the sharp budget draft criticism of metal workers executive board member Janzen with the reproach that the trade unions want to risk the fall of the social-liberal coalition.

Cronenberg: I can only say that this is more than surprising. We agreed with the Social Democrats on the budget draft in late June. A partner who no longer has the support of the trade unions loses quite some value for us.

WELT: The growth and unemployment data assumed in June are obviously no longer correct. The budget must be discussed once more. What position will be taken by the FDP in this respect?

Cronenberg: In the long run, nobody can spend more than he makes. Every kind of overly increased demand endangers the finance system. The FDP will uncompromisingly defend positions in line with market economy. In the past we could convince the Social Democrats that cuts must also be made in the consumptive field. The insight shown yesterday must also be the insight of tomorrow.

WELT: The play is also being rehearsed at the 1982 summer theater stage to replace Mr Genscher as party chairman.

Cronenberg: The party chairman is on firm ground. Nobody should foster any illusions in this respect. I do not believe that there are any serious FDP politicians who could act as a competitor.

WELT: Will the FDP withstand the fall or will it split?

Cronenberg: Splitting? The party will certainly not split. It is quite possible, though, that some people will run away. It is not defamatory if somebody realizes that a policy is no longer in line with his ideas. I do not rule out today that this or that person will leave the FDP.

WISCHNEWSKI FAVORS 'INTENSIVE DIALOGUE' WITH GDR

[Excerpt] Berlin, 20 Aug (DPA) -- Minister of State Hans-Juergen Wischnewski, government representative in Berlin, has spoken in support of an intensive dialogue with the GDR. The GDR is also interested in this, he told the Berlin press on Friday. Both sides are trying to avoid any worsening of political relations.

The minister of state announced that he will continue his talk with GDR Permanent Representative in Bonn Ewald Moldt "in a few days." He expects progress in several negotiations, Wischnewski said, citing water protection as an example. Both sides are trying to find agreement wherever possible. A visit by GDR State Council Chairman Erich Honecker to the FRG will be discussed at a suitable time, Wischnewski said.

GLEMP TO TAKE PART IN FRG CATHOLICS CONGRESS

[Excerpt] Dusseldorf, 19 Aug (DPA) -- Primate of Poland, Archbishop Jozef Glemp, will participate in the 87th German Catholics Congress from 1-5 September in Dusseldorf, and will address the participants on the opening evening. Although it was initially uncertain whether the visit would take place, it has now been confirmed, the organizers said on Thursday.

FRENCH ORGANIZATIONS SUPPORT PALESTINIAN RIGHTS

NC200923 (Clandestine) Voice of Palestine in Arabic 0645 GMT 20 Aug 82

[Text] The campaign of support for the Palestine Liberation Organization continues in West European states, this is paralleled by denunciation of the Israeli policy and its barbarous (?manifestions) in the Lebanese arena. This is being expressed amidst calls for achieving the nationalist rights of the Palestinian people to set up their independent state.

Representatives of 12 French organizations in Paris have expressed their anxiety regarding the dimishing of the possibility of securing a peaceful and lasting settlement to the Israeli-Palestinian conflcit. A delegation representing the 12 organizations has left for Geneva to present ideas on setting up a Palestinian state that is sovereign and enjoys all rights, and to demand that Israel abide by the resolutions of the international organization [the United Nations]. This is to be carried out before the international labor bureau, the headquarters of the human rights [as heard], the World Health Organization, the Ecumenical Council and the Red Cross International Committee.

SOUTH AFRICAN STRIKE AGAINST ANGOLA CONDEMNED

PM181249 Paris LE MONDE in French 18 Aug 82 p 4

[Text] The latest South African military attacks in Angola were "strongly condemned' by Paris on Monday, 16 August. Questioned on those operations in which, according to Pretoria, more than 300 SWAPO guerrillas were killed, the External Relations Ministry spokesman added that "that aggression is particularly shocking since the last meeting on Namibia in New York on 12 August between the 'group of five' (the United States, Canada, France, Britain, and FRG), the African frontline countries and SWAPO had made it possible to achieve major progress, particularly on the question of UN impartiality."

PRESIDENT OF NEW CORSICAN ASSEMBLY ELECTED

[Text] Ajaccio, Corsica, Aug 20 (AFP) -- Radical leftist Prosper Alfonsi was today elected president of this French Mediterranean island's new regional assembly, in a vote taken after a night of separatist bomb attacks.

He received 23 votes to obtain a simple majority in the third and final round of voting, after two inconclusive round in which none of the eight candidates obtained an absolute majority of 31 votes.

Mr. Alfonsi was tailed by Conservative candidate Jean-Paul de Rocca-Serra, with 20 votes, and Autonomist Edmond Simeoni with 9.

The Corsican National Liberation Movement had earlier claimed some 70 bomb attacks across the island early today, effectively ending a recent truce with French authorities in Paris.

POLICE ARREST 12 OF 'ACTION DIRECTE' GROUP

[Text] Paris, Aug 20 (AFP) -- French police here today launched a dawn operation against militants of the newly banned radical "Direct Action" movement, arresting a dozen people, authoritative sources said.

The group, banned on Wednesday by government decree, claimed responsibility yesterday for a bomb attack against the offices of the ultra-conservative French magazine MINUTE.

The 12 people detained today were being questioned in connection with a number of other recent bomb attacks in Paris, the sources said.

Group leader Jean-Marc Rouillan was still being sought, they added.

Two militants of the group had been detained recently and questioned about a machine gun and grenade attack which left 6 dead and 22 wounded in a Jewish restaurant in central Paris on August 9.

The Direct Action group did not claim the restaurant attack.

BOMB EXPLODES AT TOULOUSE NUCLEAR PLANT SITE

The main building caught fire, and a temporary prefabricated office unit nearby was totally destroyed.

It was the second bomb attack [word indistinct] last night, within 24 hours of President Francois Mitterrand announcing new anti-terrorist measures.

POLICE DISMANTLE ASIAN DRUG RING, SEIZE HEROIN

[Text] Paris, Aug 19 (AFP) -- French police today announced the dismantling of a major "Asian connection" drug ring, with the seizure of 22.5 kilos (about 50 pounds) of pure heroin, and the arrest of 20 Asians, mainly Chinese and Cambodian.

The heroin had a world market value of an estimated $30 million, and was one of the biggest drug hauls ever made in France, police said.

BEIRUT PEACEKEEPING FORCE FORMALLY AUTHORIZED

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, August 19 -- The Italian Government formally authorized today Italian participation in the multinational peace force to be stationed in Beirut with the aim of "contributing to the consolidation of peace prospects ... for Lebanon and the Middle East."

Responding to a request from the Lebanese Government and other parties involved in the evacuation of the Palestinians from the Lebanese capital, Italy is sending just over five hundred men from the "governolo" Battalion of Bersaglieri infantry to join French and United States troops on the international force.

In a message sent to Lebanese diplomatic chief Fu'ad Butrus today, Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo announced authorization for the Italian ambassador in Beirut to sign the letter formalizing the agreement on Italian participation.

According to the message, the understanding must lead to a "stable truce" laying down the "premises for the concrete start to negotiations to solve a peaceful future for all the peoples in the Middle East in line with the aims of the United Nations".

Confirming Italian determination to see "violence and war" replaced by "the instruments of dialogue and negotiations", the foreign minister also announced that Rome is ready to make a contribution to the second phase of the emergency program for Lebanon being put into effect by UNICEF, the UN children's fund.

COLOMBO ON MIDDLE EAST, RELATIONS WITH USSR

[Text] (ANSA) Milan, August 19 -- "I am convinced, as are other European ministers (and as the United States is a little more convinced now), that there cannot be peace in the Middle East without a solution to not only the Palestinian-Israeli conflict but also to the Arab-Israeli conflict", Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo told the daily "IL GIORNALE".

In an interview appearing in today's edition of the paper, Colombo emphasized the role of Western Europe as a bearer of peace between Israel and the Arab world and as a mediator in U.S.-Soviet relations.

With regards to the Arab-Isaeli conflict, Colombo said that recognition of the Palestine Liberation Organization is an "essential step to resolve the crisis".

In reply to a question on Western Europe's "understanding" towards Palestinian guerrilla activity, Colombo said "I certainly do not legitimize terrorist actions to solve a problem. The path to follow is always negotiation. As long as Israel continues to consider Palestinian issues refugee problems and the international community does not deal globally with the issue, there will always be fear of violence."

With respect to East-West relations, Colombo assured his interviewer that Europe's condemnation of Soviet policy in Poland and Afghanistan has in no way diminished.

Asked whether it is in Europe's interest to help the Soviet Union in its current economic crisis, Colombo replied: "In preparation for the Helsinki conference (in 1975) through to (the invasion of) Afghanistan and (the military crackdown) in Poland, the prevailing doctrine in Europe was a certain respect for zones of influence and a reciprocal code of behavior.

"Trade could have not only contributed to peace, but also thaw the granite Eastern Bloc".

In Colombo's opinion the issue is different and perhaps more dramatic today and he said that there are still conflicting views on the advisability of waging a trade and economic war against the Soviet Union.

SPADOLINI TO MEET PARTY SECRETARIES 20 AUG

[Excerpts] (ANSA) Rome, August 20 -- Premier-designate Giovanni Spadolini is slated to meet today with the secretaries of the five parties in his coalition which collapsed on August 7 to wrap up agreement on the formation of his second cabinet with the same government partners.

The round of statements released by party leaders in the evening contained no surprises and did not undercut the optimism generated for Spadolini's bid to form his second cabinet and Italy's 42nd postwar government.

Widespread fears that the government crisis would give way to the dissolution of Parliament and early general elections have virtually vanished since the Socialists, the nation's third largest party, declared their willingness to reenter the five-way coalition on condition that their demands for institutional reform be met.

The single hurdle to clear after today's consultations with the five party secretaries will be the naming of cabinet ministers in accordance with the premier-designate's intentions to strictly adhere to Article 92 of the Constitution, which empowers him to pick his cabinet free from party demands and the dicates of the delicate balances of power within the government parties.

PRESS COMMENTS ON EFFORTS TO FORM GOVERNMENT

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, August 19 -- The Italian press speculated today on the makeup of the nation's forty-second postwar government now being put together by Premier-designate Giovanni Spadolini.

Spadolini, a Republican, led the outgoing government of Christian Democrats, Socialists, Social Democrats and right-of-center Liberals and his own party which fell on August 7 when Parliament voted down a measure reducing the tax privileges of oil companies.

He is negotiating for a new government with the same partners on the basis of two platforms, one on economic policy and the other on institutional reformm

The first covers a series of "mini-reforms", above all as regards parliamentary procedure, and the second a strategy for global struggle against inflation and recession with the aim of giving Italy back its economic stability.

Milan's "CORRIERE DELLA SERA" said that "the two platforms seem to have passed the test, and with pretty good grades" but their "practical application" remains to be seen.

Rome's "LA REPUBBLICA" said that Spadolini's economic platform is "honest" and he has chosen a "classic" strategy.

However, the paper added, his chances for success are limited, particularly due to the world economic crisis which has hit the United States and even solid Germany.

The paper called this panorama "anything but reassuring": "With the dollar dropping and the mark vacillating, what else can Spadolini do but steer intelligently and modestly through so many hurdles and uncertainties, nearly all out of his and our control?"

On the other platform, particularly on the premier's prerogative to choose his ministers as he sees fit, without pressures from the party secretariats, press comment was more skeptical.

The Communist Party daily "L'UNITA" queried whether there really will be a "prime minister's party", or whether, once again, the parties will prevail in "cutting up the pie".

"Perhaps we are wrong, but we believe that big, albeit indirect manoeuvering has [been] under way to convince Spadolini not to take himself too seriously as regards his prerogatives".

"IL MANIFESTO", which stands to the left of the Communist Party on the Italian political spectrum was also skeptical.

"Should Spadolini present us not only the same party lineup and the same economic platform but also the same cast of ministers, frankly we would be watching not a remake, but the old move itself".

Turin's "LA STAMPA" was more optimistic and said that there is an authoritative guarantor -- Head of State Sandro Pertini -- for this new government and that it is thanks to Pertini that, "at least until spring, we need not fear any more surprises".

RED BRIGADES STEAL ARMS FROM MILITARY BARRACKS

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, August 19 -- A commando of the Red Brigades attacked an airforce barracks in Rome early this morning and stole a large quantity of weapons.

The Red Brigades claimed responsibility for the attack in an anonymous tip to a Rome daily saying the weapons will serve "metropolitan guerrillas and the international revolutionary movement".

Six of seven members of the commando broke into the barracks, tied up guards and fled with the weapons.

BALSEMAO DISCUSSES PORTUGUESE POLITICAL SCENE

PM191501 Lisbon DIARIO DE NOTICIAS in Portuguese 13 Aug 82 p 3

[Text] "Now that the Constitution has been reviewed, all the conditions exist for a period of institutional peace," Francisco Pinto Balsemao stated yesterday evening on Portuguese television's Channel 1, where he was interviewed in his capacity as Social Democratic Party [PSD] chairman on the "Front Page" program.

Making the keynote of his statement the need for the regular functioning of institutions and political stability (to prevent a permanently "precarious situation") and the importance of broadening "the bases of a consensus in terms of democracy," Pinto Balsemao stressed that the conditions have now been created for approval of the law delimiting the sectors [of the economy], whichmeans, he said, access by private enterprises to fields which have been barred to it, such as banking and insurance.

Praising the revision of the Constitution, which he once more described as possible but not desirable, the Social Democratic leader maintained that the commitments undertaken by the Democratic Alliance should be fulfilled until the end of the current legislative term. However, he added that in 1983 (since, according to him, "the local elections are not a national political test but a test of the parties' strength"), the parties of the parliamentary majority should "discuss calmly and serenely together the future of the Democratic Alliance."

However, the PSD chairman saw no alternative to the governing of the country by forces outside the ruling coalition, since, as he emphasized, the PCP sustained major political losses in the campaign it conducted this year, the Socialist Party [PSP] is experiencing an identity crisis and a potential presidential or Eanist party does not even exist.

As regards the PSP, Balsemao said that "it would not be possible, even theoretically, to contemplate any preferential rapprochement (by the PSD) with the PSP, when we do not know where it stands or where it is heading."

However, the PSD leader disclosed that, in his opinion, the Democratic Alliance parties should run with separate lists in the 1984 legislative elections.

With respect to the so-called presidential party, Pinto Balsemao (who described General Eanes as "a proven democrat") emphasized that he does not know whether there is an Eanist blueprint, adding: "if there is, it should be brought forth."

FRENCH PARATROOPERS ARRIVE EN ROUTE TO LEBANON

[Excerpts] The first units of the French contingent in the multinational peace force arrived in Cyprus this afternoon en route to Lebanon. The peace force will supervise the withdrawal of Palestinian fighters from west Beirut. A total of 146 French paratroopers arrived at Larnaca Airport around 1500 today with about 200 more expected tonight. Military vehicles and other equipment have also been transported.

The French paratroopers have arrived in Cyprus from their bases in Corsica. Accompanying them is a French general who will head the French contingent of the multinational peace force. The French contingent's total will consist of 800 troops. The peace force will also be joined by 800 American and 530 Italian troops.

Further Report

[Text] Aircraft carrying units of the French military contingent in the multinational peace force for Lebanon continue arriving at Larnaca Airport. These units, with their equipment, are embarking on two French Navy ships which had earlier arrived at Larnaca Port and are expected to sail off for Beirut this afternoon.

The French military contingent, which will consist of 800 officers and men, will place under its control the Beirut harbor from whence the first Palestinian fighters will depart.

The Italian contingent, which will be deployed at the Beirut Airport area, is expected to go directly to Beirut from Italy. The U.S. contingent, which is aboard warships of the 6th Fleet, will disembark at Beirut next week and be deployed between the Christian and Muslim sectors of the city.

Larnaca as Transit Point

NC191219 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1030 GMT 19 Aug 82

[Text] Today, Foreign Minister Rolandhis met with U.S. Ambassador Ewing and discussed with him the likely use of Larnaca Port and Airport as a transit point for Palestinian combatants on the way to their various destinations within the framework of the arrangements for their withdrawal from Beirut. In connection with the same question, Mr Rolandhis also had a contact with PLO representative Bitar in Nicosia. The foreign minister expressed the Cyprus Government's readiness to provide the necessary facilities so that Palestinian combatants may pass through Larnaca Port or Airport as soon as implementation of the agreement among the interested parties begins.

KIPRIANOU APPLAUDS STAMBOLIC VISIT TO CYPRUS

[Text] President of the Republic Kiprianou stated today that the upcoming visit to Cyprus of President of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia Stambolic acquires special significance because it is being made during a period of significant developments in the area of the eastern Mediterranean.

After referring to Yugoslavia's international role and especially to its leading position in the Nonaligned Movement, President Kiprianou stressed that we are linked to Yugoslavia by very friendly bonds which were consolidated by the two great leaders Tito and Makarios. He also stressed Yugoslavia's valuable support of Cyprus' struggle for the regaining of the Cypriot people's freedom and rights that have been trampled upon.

Concluding, the president of the republic stated that he looks forward with special joy to the possibility of repaying the warm hospitality shown to him during his visit to Yugoslavia and to the opportunity to have with President Stambolic an exchange of views on the international situation and developments in our national issue.

INTERLOCUTORS HOLD SCHEDULED MEETING 19 AUG

[Text] Another meeting within the framework of the intercommunal talks was held this afternoon at the Ledra Palace Hotel.

In their statements prior to the meeting, both the UN secretary general's special representative in Cyprus, Mr Gobbi, as well as the representatives of the two communities at the talks said that the discussion of the executive authority question has been completed and that discussion will begin on the question of the federal legislative authority. Nevertheless, Mr Gobbi made it clear that at the present stage the discussion of certain subjects has not been exhausted and that they will return to them later.

At the same time, asked whether progress has been made on the issue of the executive authority, Mavrommatis, the Greek Cypriot representative, said: It depends on what one means by progress. As far as I am concerned, progress is made only when there is a coincidence of views on significant matters. We have not yet reached this stage, he noted. Mr Mavrommatis added that there are a number of differences of views concerning the executive authority question. Asked whether there would be one parliament, Mr Mavrommatis said that this was not necessary and that the Greek Cypriot side does not oppose the system of having two houses.

In his statement, Turkish Cypriot spokesman Onan said the Turkish Cypriot proposals provide for the existence of two houses. On the question of the executive authority, Mr Onan said that some progress has been made in the direction of understanding the views of the two sides. Concerning the composition of the central government, Mr Onan said they have made sufficient progress. In conclusion, the Turkish Cypriot interlocutor said: When the discussion of the evaluation document is completed, it will become possible, at a second round of talks, to better understand every matter we have dealt with.

TFSC'S CAGATAY DENIES RUMORS ON RESIGNATION

TA191530 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1520 GMT 19 Aug 82

[Text] Lefkose, 19 Aug (AA) -- Prime Minister Mustafa Cagatay of the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus who is also the president of the ruling National Unity Party denied that he would resign. The annual convention of his party will take place in October with a faction of the party headed by Dr Dervis Eroglu reportedly prepared to contest Cagatay for party president. According to press reports, five National Unity Party deputies including Eroglu presented to Cagatay a memorandum last week in which they complained about lack of contacts between the government and the Assembly.

Meanwhile, press sources said a new political party will be formed in northern Cyprus with the participation of some of the deputies which allegedly will resign from the main opposition Communal Liberation Party in an attempt to replace the current coalition government with a new coalition.

GREEK SHIP TO ASSIST BEIRUT EVACUATION

[Text] Athens, Aug 19 (AFP) -- A Greek ship, the Alkyon, will be ready to leave tomorrow to help in the evacuation of Palestinian fighters from Lebanon, a Greek Shipping Ministry communique announced.

The loan of the ship, which normally plies between the Cyclades Islands, is "just one of the government's measures" to facilitate the departure of Palestinians from Beirut, the statement added. No mention was made of the ship's possible route or eventual destination.

Last month, the Greek Government said it would transport Palestinian fighters from the Lebanese capital if so asked by their leader Yasir 'Arafat.

Greece has already said that it will accept 200-300 wounded Palestinians into Greek hospitals.

SPOKESMAN DISCUSSES COMING U.S. BASE TALKS

NC191547 Athens ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 19 Aug 82 p 14

[Text] During the negotiations that will start next month on the U.S. bases, Greece intends, among other things, to ask for its choice of weapons systems and for facilities for the supply of spare parts.

According to the government's viewpoint, this constitutes the most effective "guarantee" of the security of our borders because, as the government spokesman stated yesterday, "in the final analysis, a country's territorial integrity depends on its own ability to defend itself."

The government spokesman clarified that the prime minister has never asked for written guarantees from the United States, because something like that could possibly lead to undesirable situations, that is, to U.S. arbitration in the Aegean.

On the contrary, the government is continuing to steadfastly seek an agreement within the NATO framework, "through which the borders of every NATO country will be covered by the alliance against any attacks from whatever source."

The government spokesman's statement in connection with yesterday's press reports on the "guarantees" reads as follows:

"The prime minister has never referred to guarantees from the United States. Written guarantees of the Kissinger type are not an appropriate method, because very clearly they create dependence on a power center without precluding the fact that this dependence may turn into arbitration, something we would have no reason to accept.

"In December, during the NATO national defense ministers meeting in Brussels, the prime minister raised the issue of Greece's security within the alliance's framework. However, he did not ask that special preference be given to Greece. He asked for the general interpretation of a decision, an agreement, through which every NATO country's borders will be covered by the alliance against attack.

"In the final analysis, in the case of a local war a country's territorial integrity depends on its own ability to defend itself, and our government's course is precisely the strengthening of this possibility, that is, the country's self-centered defense shield. The government believes that this goal guarantees both the country's integrity and independence."

ASSEMBLY APPROVES DRAFT CONSTITUTION ARTICLES

Goals and Duties of State

[Text] The Consultative Assembly has adopted three more articles of the draft constitution on the basic goals and duties of the state, legislative authority and sovereignty. The articles adopted were returned to the Constitution Committee to be amended in line with the motions submitted at yesterday's session of the Assembly.

Article four, which defines the basic goals and duties of the state, is as follows: The basic aims and duties of the state are to defend the independence and unity of the Turkish nation, the indivisibility of the country, the republic and democracy; to secure the prosperity, tranquillity and happiness of the individuals and the community; to try to abolish the political, economic and social obstacles which limit the individual's basic rights and liberties in a manner inconsistent with the principles of social justice and of justice and to try to prepare the conditions necessary for a person's material and spiritual development.

The fifth article on sovereignty is as follows: Sovereignty belongs unconditionally to the nation. The Turkish nation exercises its sovereignty in conformity with the principles set forth by the Constitution through the means of the authorized organs [of government]. The exercise of sovereignty may in no way be left to any individual, group or social class. No person or organ may use a state power which does not have its source in the constitution. The last paragraph of this article stating "obligations arising from agreements envisaging membership in organizations having international authority are valid" was removed from the text by an Assembly decision.

The seventh article which was amended by the committee and adopted at the Consultative Assembly session today says that legislative authority belongs to the Turkish Grand National Assembly on behalf of the Turkish nation. According to the article, this power can not be delegated. However, the authority granted by the constitution to the president and the Council of Ministers to issue law-decrees is valid.

Suspension of Rights

[Text] The Consultative Assembly approved three more articles of the draft constitution. Articles 13, 14 and 15 are on the misuse and suspension of basic rights and freedoms, and on the basic rights and freedoms of foreigners.

Article 13 says: None of the rights and duties specified in this constitution can be used to damage the state's indivisible unity with the country and nation, to endanger the Turkish state's or the republic's existence, to abolish the basic rights and freedoms, to cause the state to be ruled by a single person or class, to bring about the sovereignty of one social class over the other social classes, to create language, racist, religious or sectarian discrimination or to establish a state order, through any other means, based on those concepts or views. Those who misuse their rights or freedoms for these ends lose them. The courts are to decide on the loss of rights.

The law regulates the punishment to be given to those persons or organizations who disobey these prohibitions or who encourage or provoke others into disobeying them. None of the constitution's stipulations can be interpreted in a way to mean that they grant the right to engage in activities aimed at abolishing the rights and freedoms specified in this constitution.

Article 14 specifies the situations where the basic rights and freedoms can be suspended: Basic rights and freedom can be suspended partially or entirely in wars, martial law or states of emergency to the extent the situation calls for. Measures running counter to the guarantees envisaged by the Constitution can be taken at such times, but the following rules and freedoms cannot be violated: A person cannot be forced to disclose [words indistinct] opinions and beliefs [words indistinct] for survival and moral and material being, a person cannot be condemned or accused of these opinions or beliefs, crimes and punishments cannot be implemented retroactively, and a person is innocent until proven guilty.

Under Article 15, foreigners' basic rights and freedoms can be limited by law in accordance with international law.

Today, the Consultative Assembly returned Article 12 on the limitations on basic rights and freedoms to the Constitutional Committee together with amendment proposals.

The Assembly will convene at 1000 tomorrow to continue the debate on the draft constitution.

EEC TO LIFT DUTY ON COTTON THREAD EXPORTS

[Text] An agreement has been reached whereby the EEC will lift the 12 percent customs tax it levies on Turkish cotton thread exports to the Community. The agreement was signed by Turkish and EEC officials in Brussels today. Under the agreement, which goes into effect on 21 August, the price of the cotton thread exported to the EEC by Turkey has been raised by about 8 percent. It was pointed out that the price of cotton thread might change in line with the fluctuations in the price of raw cotton.

An announcement made by the EEC in Brussels says that the amount of Turkish cotton thread to be exported by Turkey to the Community has been limited to 25,500 tons for 1982, following an agreement with Turkish officials. It is noted that Turkey's exports of cotton thread to the Community are actually around that amount.

Last December, the EEC had imposed a customs tax of 16 percent on Turkish cotton thread exports to the Community on the grounds that the price was too low. The EEC lowered the tax to 12 percent in April.

DEBTS RESCHEDULED -- Ankara, Aug 19 (AA) -- A part of Turkey's state debts to Holland were re-scheduled under an accord ratified Wednesday (Aug 18) by the Council of Ministers. The accord also enables Turkey to receive a supplementary credit of 5784 [as received] florins from the Dutch Development Bank. This credit will be used to repay debts due from July first 1982 to June 30, 1983. It will carry 2.3 percent interest and will be repaid as of June 30, 1991. [APA report: "The Tenant of the 'Storage' Apartment Departed: Search for Vienna Neo-Nazi Abroad"]

[Text] Vienna (APA) -- Police are now searching with an international warrant for the well-known 32-year-old National Democratic Party activist Dr Hermann Plessl, in whose apartment the welding gear which Ekkehard Weil had used in stealing 300 kilograms of explosives in Salzburg was found on Tuesday. Plessl allegedly has gone abroad. It is presumed that four men participated in the theft of the explosives.

NETHERLANDS

NETHERLANDS TO BACK ANY OIL BOYCOTT OF S. AFRICA

NC192027 Paris AFP in English 2013 GMT 19 Aug 82

[Text] The Hague, Aug 19 (AFP) -- The Netherlands will support any international oil boycott of South Africa, Foreign Minister Andreas van Agt said in a letter to the Dutch Parliament's foreign affairs committee that was released here today. He told the committee president, Jan Nico Scholten, that the Netherlands had agreed to join in preliminary consultations with the oil-exporting countries and transporters who would implement such a ban.

The Netherlands was invited to participate in such a conference by the United Nations committee against apartheid.

Mr van Agt stressed in his letter that an effective oil embargo against South Africa would only be effective if it was backed by a mandatory resolution of the Security Council that was observed by all UN members. Failing such a decision, Mr van Agt proposed joint action by oil-exporting and transporting countries.

DEFENSE MINISTRY SUSPENDS F-18 PURCHASES

LD191740 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 0900 GMT 19 Aug 82

[Excerpt] The Ministry of Defense has decided to suspend the purchase of F-18 planes until the report published yesterday by a Madrid newspaper on the payment of commissions to the tune of 500 million pesetas is clarified. The report published yesterday by the daily EL PAIS, which cited another report in the NEW YORK TIMES, says that the U.S. McDonnell Douglas Company, the plane's makers, will pay $4 million -- some 465 million pesetas -- in commissions to Spanish intermediaries and that the principal beneficiary will be the Spanish aeronautical company CAESA. In the same report, the Madrid daily pointed out the possible illegality of the commissions under U.S. law.

KREISKY REFUTES SALE OF TANKS TO ARGENTINA

[Text] Mallorca, Vienna (AZ) -- In an interview with ARBEITER-ZEITUNG on Friday Chancellor Kreisky denied a report that he had announced to British Prime Minister Thatcher that Austria intends to promote the tank deal with Argentina blocked by the Falklands conflict. There was no conversation with Thatcher, he said. It had been pointed out in reply to a pertinent question from the Steyr Works, however, that peace has not yet been achieved between Great Britain and Argentina and that relations between Vienna and London would be excessively taxed by a tank deal with the Argentines.

As a result of the Falklands War, the delivery of 27 Curassier tanks to Argentina was subject to the Austrian arms embargo.

ARMY COMMANDER STRESSES NEED FOR MISSILES

AU201359 Vienna Domestic Service in German 1000 GMT 20 Aug 82

[Leopold Esterle interview with Army Commander General Bernardiner; date and place not given -- recorded]

[Summary] [Question] In mid-October the second biggest maneuvers of the Austrian Federal Army will begin in the Kufstein area in Tirol. Some 14,000 soldiers will practice the principle of area defense, in this case fighting in an area protection zone. As is well known, the biggest maneuvers thus far were held in Lower Austria in 1979. Subsequent evaluation reports stressed that the principle of national defense is basically correct but that the idea of a militia system following the Swiss pattern is not yet generally well understood. General, it was noted after the exercise that the area defense concept is correct but that its past implementation has ranged from faulty to bad. Have there been any changes since your assumption of the post of army commander?

[Answer] "I regard the verdict that implementation has been bad as somewhat unjustified. Naturally, the area defense still has shortcomings and naturally the entire concept still has material gaps. I believe that these gaps are generally known to the public. We have weaknesses in our antiaircraft and antitank defense."

[Question] What do you have to say about equipping the army with missiles?

[Answer] "From the military-technical aspect we must request the best material and the best weapons systems available in order to expect the best possible results. These now are guided weapons in the antitank defense field; if possible, target-seeking guided weapons or also target-seeking guided weapons which can be fired from a helicopter. The fact that these guided weapons are self-propelled and hence termed 'rockets,' now causes us difficulty in obtaining them due to a provision in the State Treaty. I imagine there are developments which justify our obtaining appropriate weapons and which will make it easier for the federal government to absolve us of this State Treaty provision. But this does not prevent us from continuously striving or keeping in sight the fact that this State Treaty provision simply cannot be accepted by us in the long run.

[Question] Are you leveling demands, for example, against the foreign minister to intervene with the signatories of the treaty in this respect?

[Answer] "Properly speaking, this is a matter of concern for the chief of the department, that is the national defense minister, but these things are being expressed quite clearly in talks between the military leadership and the leadership of the department."

[Question] Area defense is a three-dimension affair. What is your personal opinion concerning air defense?

[Answer] So that there be no mistake: Airspace defense and interceptors are two things that are not exactly on the same level. The same thing applies to airspace defense as to antitank defense. There, too, a weapons system which is not now available or accessible for us is doubtlessly the optimal means, even more so than in antitank defense. In antitank defense there are ways out by means of types of ammunition and certain gun calibers, but this is not so in antiaircraft defense. The impact of conventional antiaircraft defense is, in my opinion, very, very limited. It involves weapons which hardly qualify as replacements for the self-propelled, target-seeking antiaircraft projectiles which we are forbidden to possess."

[Question] Ground-to-air missiles?

[Answer] "Yes, ground-to-air missiles, as they are called in common usage. There exist quite excellent products in this field, primarily in our neighboring country, in Switzerland."

[Question] General, what do you as an army commander have to say about the problem of an air police for the Austrian Federal Army from a position of a neutrality policy, in particular in connection with the "Golden Bonnet" (Goldhaube) project which is now nearing completion?

[Answer] "Yes, the last word was the catchword. I have, with the airspace observation system, the opportunity of establishing through a dot on a radar screen that airspace is being violated." "To put things brutally, I could say that so long as I cannot identify an object and so long as I cannot undertake anything, cannot issue a warning or deter the intruder -- I can, after all, also do without that dot on the radar screen. Hence to the government -- and I think the chancellor has also expressed this at the recent National Defense Council session -- the problem is only that at the moment such a expenditure cannot be politically justified."

[Question] Is it possible to say in conclusion that Army Commander Bernardiner would like to have the tools, and urgently at that, for the mere reason that otherwise the -- I believe 4 1/5 billion schillings which have been spent on the "Golden Bonnet" project so far -- would have been wasted?

[Answer] "That is too weak a formulation for me. I do not wish these things; I request them. We do need the interceptors."

DIE WELT SAYS U.S. TIPPED DUBCEK TO INVASION

[Text] Hamburg, 20 Aug (DPA) -- According to DIE WELT, in early August 1968 U.S. intelligence, in a move approved by Washington, informed the Czechoslovak party chief, Alexander Dubcek, about preparations to invade Czechoslovakia. According to the report, Dubcek received through a Swiss contact in Prague copies of the invasion plans of the armed forces of the five Warsaw Pact states involved in the operation.

The person who procured the plans was held as a Western spy in Bautzen and exchanged last year for GDR agent Guenter Guillaume. He is quoted as saying that Washington had hoped at the time that Dubcek would be able to avert the invasion. But Dubcek regarded the plans only as "a superb plant" [hervorragend gemachtes spielmaterial].

According to DIE WELT, the former spy is a 48-year-old FRG citizen who got the plans from the female head of the cipher department of the Soviet Armed Forces in the GDR. He was later arrested in Hungary. The woman, who had worked with U.S. intelligence, and her husband, a Soviet staff officer, were smuggled out to the West, and she is now living in the United States.

USE OF FORCED LABOR ON PIPELINE DOCUMENTED

[Excerpts] Frankfurt, 21 Aug (DPA) -- The International Society for Human Rights has substantiated its claim, rejected by the Soviet Union, that approximately 100,000 prisoners were involved in the construction of natural gas pipelines in Siberia, with documentation on the use of forced labor. The documentation, released on Saturday in Frankfurt, contains statements by witnesses from the Soviet Union and those who have emigrated to the West.

The documentation quotes, among others, a Soviet prisoner who was involved. He had reported by telephone this summer that many prisoners in Soviet camps were willing to exchange the hard living and working conditions in the camps with the relative freedom of the forced laborer.

LAHNSTEIN DEPARTS FOR TALKS IN SAUDI ARABIA

LD201602 Riyadh SPA in English 1222 GMT 20 Aug 82

During his stay in the kingdom, the minister will hold talks with Saudi leaders on consolidating relations between the two countries. Agency reports quoted Finance Ministry sources as saying the talks would focus on the (?aspects) of world economic growth and increased cooperation among nations in economic, monetary, credit and trade policy.

In a press statement before departure, the minister noted Saudi Arabia's status as West Germany's most important Arab trade partner and largest source of oil. Saudi Arabia has since 1980 been West Germany's largest source of foreign capital.

Comments on Talks

[Text] Bonn/Riyadh, 22 Aug (DPA) -- In his talks with Saudi Government representatives, Federal Finance Minister Manfred Lahnstein did not negotiate on more credit to fill gaps in the federal budget. In an interview with DPA, Lahnstein said on Sunday, at the end of his 3-day visit to Riyadh, that there had not been any discussion on a Saudi injection of credit for the afflicted AEG company.

Lahnstein described economic relations between the Federal Republic and Saudi Arabia as excellent. Deliveries of crude oil from Riyadh to the Federal Republic appear to be secure for a long time. Lahnstein made it clear that Saudi Arabia could also contribute to a stronger growth in the world economy. His trip primarily served the purpose of discussing with the Saudis the conferences of the IMF and the World Bank scheduled to be held in the beginning of September in Canada. The matter of German weapon deliveries to Saudi Arabia was not on the agenda in his discussions in Riyadh.

The minister pointed out that the Saudis are prudent in their investment of capital abroad. Greater Saudi involvement in West German enterprises is not to be expected in the foreseeable future. On the other hand, the country's economic development favors more possibilities for German investment in Saudi Arabia and for improved cooperation with Saudi enterprises. Tax obstacles in this connection are to be reduced in negotiations which should take place this autumn.

BANKS 'OPTIMISTIC' ON POLISH DEBT RESCHEDULING

[Text] Frankfurt, 20 Aug (DPA) -- German banks expressed optimism on Friday that the negotiations with Poland on the rescheduling of debts for 1982, which have long been in progress, might now be successfully concluded. It is reported that the following agreement is in the pipeline between the Polish authorities and the more than 500 Western creditor banks for the rescheduling of credits for $2.5 billion altogether which are due in 1982.

Ninety-five percent of the sums to be repaid will be rescheduled. The remaining 5 percent have to be paid in cash by Warsaw. As the Poles have been unable to repay "a dime" -- to quote one banker -- the 5 percent can be paid in installments up to 1983.

In return the Poles must repay the interest due of $1.1 billion in full. Half, that is $550 million, will be paid into a special fund by the creditor banks, which will then be made available again to the Poles as credit to pay for important imports. Poland's foreign debts total $27 billion.

DPA NOTES FORMATION OF NEW POLITICAL PARTY

[Text] Duesseldorf, 21 Aug (DPA) -- An organization of the Maoist left has founded a new communist party, the Marxist-Leninist Party of Germany. Some 2,000 people from all parts of the Federal Republic attended the founding meeting in Duesseldorf's Philipshalle on 21 August.

The new party, which has its origins in the Communist Workers' League of Germany, founded in 1972, describes itself as a "workers' party." Its national paper is called ROTE FAHNE (RED FLAG). The party has declared the two superpowers, the United States and Soviet Union, its chief enemies. It regards the socialism practiced in Eastern Europe to be "degenerate." Party Chairman Stefan Engel said that the "peace movement" is a "positive force" but that it underrates "FRG imperialism" against which the "main thrust" should be directed.

SPD GROUP PLANS TO REEXAMINE NATO DOCTRINE

DW231041 Hamburg DER SPIEGEL in German 23 Aug 82 p 14

[Text] Shocked by the recent nuclear war sandbox games of the U.S. Government, the Social Democrats plan at their next party congress, in the fall of 1983, to discuss not only the deployment of Pershing II and cruise missiles, but also the so-far still valid flexible response doctrine of NATO and the role of the Bundeswehr in the Western alliance. The "new strategies" working group set up by the party Executive Board will take up its work on the SPD's new security concept on 8 September, right after the end of parliament's recess. The general aim: exploitation of new defense weapon technologies against tanks, ships and planes supposed to free NATO from the need to use nuclear warheads at an early stage. The Bundeswehr is supposed to be equipped in a visibly defensive way.

The new SPD working group is composed of, in addition to Chairman Egon Bahr, Oskar Lafontaine, the nuclear armament critic, Deputies Erwin Horn and Herman Scheer, Defense Ministry planning chief Walther Stuetzle and retired Gen Wolf Graf Baudissin. Defense Minister Hans Apel, who demonstrated hardly any will to reform in the Bundeswehr's long-term commission report, will be welcome at the Executive Board only as a guest.

REAGAN'S ECONOMIC POLICY, TAX INCREASES VIEWED

DW230945 Munich SUEDDEUTSCHE ZEITUNG in German 21-22 Aug 82 p 4

[Commentary signed A]

[Text] The Congressional vote in favor of a tax increase amounting to $98.3 billion is, first of all, a great political success for President Reagan. The President has demonstrated again that he is in a positinon to bridle the stubborn Congress in decisive moments. You cannot maintain that Ronald Reagan does not know how to rule.

But despite his Capitol victory, this President is not very convincing in substantiating his arguments. Could you not hear him for 2 years mocking delightedly the opinion that budget gaps could be narrowed or even closed with the help of tax increases? Was it not exactly this President who told Americans over and over that increasing taxes meant nothing but animating the insatiable spending desire of the state bureaucracy?

Naturally he can point out that the tax increases amounting to almost $100 billion will be more than offset in the course of the 3 years by the planned state expenditure cuts of $280 billion. Granted, U.S. inflation was cut by 50 percent and interest rates really began to drop -- however, who knows for how long? Many Wall Street experts agree that the apparently good signals are actually bad signals: America's economy is so badly off at present that hardly anybody has great investments in mind.

Now the cheerful man in the White House has changed course: He announces the opposite of what he was preaching thus far, and tells the Americans he is persistently continuing what he has been doing all the time. Reagan's new policy will have consequences -- but it is not consistent.

SECOND FRENCH CONTINGENT LEAVES FOR LEBANON

EGYPT'S BUTRUS GHALI ARRIVES FOR TALKS 22 AUG

Mr Ghali will meet tomorrow with French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson.

With the Beirut siege ostensibly at an end, sources in diplomatic circles here said France and Egypt plan to launch a new joint Middle East peace initiative, possibly in the next few weeks.

French official circles believe that the new situation offered by the departure of the Palestinians from Beirut offers a golden opportunity for an overall settlement. Any Franco-Egyptian initiative would be based on the principles of Palestinian self-determination, the mutual recognition by all parties in the conflict of each others' right to exist and the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Lebanon.

Last month, at the height of the siege of the Lebanese capital, the two countries submitted to the United Nations a peace plan along these lines but at the time it met with objections from the United States.

Sources here said that the major problem for France and Egypt was to convince the U.S. Government that there can be no peace in the Middle East without the participation of the Palestinians.

The regular contacts that have taken place between Washington and Cairo should allow Mr Ghali and Mr Cheysson to gauge possible U.S. reaction to any new peace plan.

In Paris, it is believed that at present the U.S. Government is seriously reappraising its Middle East policy.

BOMB EXPLODES IN PARIS' SEVENTH DISTRICT 21 AUG

[Summary] We have just heard a few minutes ago that a bomb exploded just now in Avenue de la Bourdonnais in the Seventh District of Paris. The bomb had been placed in front of a building inhabited by the Spanish delegate to UNESCO. The bomb exploded while two members of the bomb squad were trying to defuse it. One of the men was killed and the other seriously injured.

Correspondent Dominique Souchier says the explosion took place just before 1030. The bomb squad had been sent there following a bomb alert. In fact, the bomb exploded the moment the two men were approaching the place, parcel or boobytrapped car -- it is not quite clear yet which. Material damage is considerable.

Contradictory Claims

[Summary] Following the telephone call to AFP by someone claiming to be Jean-Marc Rouillan claiming responsibility for the bomb explosion in Avenue de la Bourdonnais today in the name of Action Directe, another caller, claiming to speak on behalf of Rouillan, leader of Action Directe, has denied all responsibility for the explosion.

Possible U.S. Target

[Text] On the explosion on the Avenue de la Bourdonnais, the police do not exclude the possibility that the explosive device was fixed under the car of the American diplomat, Mr (Roderick Grant), who was the target. Mr Grant left his home 1/2 hour before the device exploded, exactly at the spot where his car had been parked all night. The bomb is thought to have been fixed under the floor of the vehicle and to have been dislodged without exploding when the car was started.

Lebanese Group Claims Attack

LD220721 Paris Domestic Service in English 0700 GMT 22 Aug 82

[Text] In a telephone call to the French press agency AFP, the terrorist group calling itself the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Force claimed responsibility for the bomb explosion in Paris yesterday that killed one police bomb-expert and seriously wounded another. The same group said it was behind last January's killing of an American military attache in Paris and an attempted assassination of another U.S. Embassy official last November.

INVESTIGATION OF 'ACTION DIRECTE' GROUP REPORTED

[Text] Regarding the conditions of the Rue des Rosiers victims, doctors have noticed an improvement in the condition of the woman most seriously injured in the attack last week. Eight people are still in the hospital; two others were discharged this week.

In the investigation into other attacks claimed by Action Directe, the police drew a blank today; this morning they questioned 12 suspected militants of the clandestine organiztion, but this evening, after searches of their homes, these 12 people were released.

It is a ping-pong game between Action Directe and investigators. Each explosion claimed by this movement has regularly been followed by a round of questioning. The scenario is always the same; an investigating committee asks questions, they take statements, pass them on to [name indistinct] and then let them go. Sometimes they lock someone up, as was the case with [name indistinct], but for offenses other than taking part in a bomb attack. You could almost say it has become a routine, but of course, the investigators cannot leave any stone unturned.

Action Directe is in the dock, and with good reason. Action Directe strikes, the police retaliate, that's the way it goes. That is why, after official responsibility was claimed for the attack on Rue [name indistinct], 12 young people known to be suspected militants of the movement were questioned and put under police surveillance.

The searches carried out at their homes produced nothing -- no weapons, no incriminating documents, no inkling of any new bomb attacks; in short, no charges against them. Thus they were set free and the hunt continues. The police are doing their job, but without any great conviction. It is quite clear that the members of Action Directe now know that they are under surveillance, and if they had anything to hide, they got rid of it a long time ago.

INVESTIGATIONS INTO 'CHINESE CONNECTION' BEGIN

[Text] Paris, Aug 20 (AFP) -- Parallel police operations were under way here and in Bangkok today to dismantle the so-called "Chinese connection" drug trafficking network between Asia and Europe. In the French capital, 21 suspected members of the ring arrested here on August 15 were formally charged today with illegal trading in drugs and with defrauding customs.

According to the French narcotics squad, those arrested were mostly ethnic Chinese but bearers of 10 different passports, including six British subjects from Hong Kong and four Cambodians, among them the alleged network's boss this side of the Indian Ocean.

He was identified as Wong Thai Minh, or perhaps Kao Wong, a wiry 28-year-old trained cook residing in the Paris suburb of Meaux. His alleged lieutenant and chauffeur, according to the police, was a 25-year-old Laotian waiter, Bounta Thau.

Another key member of the network was identified as 30-year-old Portuguese national I Kiung Lim, who allegedly convoyed 14 kg (30 pounds) of heroin from Asia to Paris in the false bottom of a suitcase. Travelling with him, said the police, was a 46-year-old Thai, Bangkok businessman, Aponpong Petcharabul, bearing a similar piece of luggage.

Lam Kam Dy, a 25-year-old naturalized Frenchman from Cambodia, was alleged to be the man who furnished the ring with caffein, used for mixing with the heroin, and which was reportedly stocked at the home of an unemployed Vietnamese cook, Vuong Quc Tu, 29.

The heroin was reportedly hoarded with another Vietnamese cook, 36-year-old Tiet Cam Quyen, where 23 kg (50 pounds) of the drug, worth about 30 million dollars on the street markets, was seized by narcotics agents. Also arrested were a Malaysian, a man from Singapore and a Chinese national, with professions ranging from unskilled automobile worker to merchant in dolls clothing, police said.

The investigating magistrate here, meanwhile, was trying to learn how the ring operated and how [words indistinct] were distributed within the network. Word was that the arrested were not talking. Fifteen more people were arrested on August 15, whose cases remain under review.

The heroin reportedly originated from the "golden triangle" astride Thailand, Burma and Laos, and was smuggled to Europe in the shape of 1-kg (2.2 pound) "loaves" or capsules dissimulated in body cavities.

Paris narcotics agents said they received vital help in the operation from Thai colleagues. The Thai tip-offs were relayed here by two French narcotics officials now permanently stationed in Bangkok.

Sources in Bangkok said today that the Thai narcotics brigade was on the point of making a number of arrests as a result of the successful Paris haul. Thai policemen, it was said here, already had under close surveillance a network of Thai and Chinese operators exporting heroin to Australia and North America as well as Europe via Hong Kong.

The problem in tipping off the French, according to information from Bangkok, was to time it in such a way that it would not jeopardize parralel investigations by Thai police.

The precautions taken must have been sufficient, it was thought here -- Thai police yesterday seized 18 kg (39 pounds) of pure heroin which was about to be shipped abroad.

BUFFER FORCE CONTINGENT DEPARTS FOR LEBANON

Advance Party Departs

[Text] Taranto, southern Italy, Aug (AFP) -- An Italian guided missile destroyer carrying an advance party from the Italian contingent to the multi-national force in Lebanon set sail from here today, an informed source said.

The advance party, which comprises some 20 officers and NCO's, is to make contact with commanders of the French and U.S. contingents to the force to coordinate their supervision of the withdrawal of Palestinian forces from west Beirut, the source said.

The full Italian contingent of 531 men and 29 military police, meanwhile, embarked today aboard three ships which are to set sail from Brindisi.

The convoy is expected to set sail tomorrow at noon and will take some 72 hours to reach the Lebanese coast.

Main Contingent Departs

[Text] Brindisi, Italy, Aug. 21 (AFP) -- The Italian contingent to the multinational buffer force in Beirut left this east Italian port early today aboard two landing vessels and a requisitioned car ferry, informed sources said.

The unit, expected to reach the Lebanese capital in 72 hours, is made up of 531 artillery troops and a squad of gendarmes to act as military police, the sources said.

The men were on the troop carriers Grado and Caorle, and the ferry Buona Speranza, escorted by the frigate Sagittario.

An advance group of 20 officers had already left for Beirut yesterday afternoon aboard the missile-launcher Perseo.

Spadolini Comments

LD202000 Rome Domestic Service in Italian 1700 GMT 20 Aug 82

[Text] The Italian Government is pleased with the positive conclusion of the negotiations for the evacuation of the Palestinians from Lebanon. A statement issued by Prime Minister Spadolini stated that the Italian Government has now renewed its own firm pledge to contribute to the reestablishment of conditions of peace in Beirut. For much too long, the note states, Beirut was unjustly subjected to inhuman suffering. In this context, the dispatch -- within the framework of the international peace force -- of Italian soldiers to Beirut is nothing other than a practical and concrete implementation of peace measures in a region deeply assailed by the horrors of war.

[Text] (ANSA) -- Tel Aviv, August 21 -- Italian participation in the trilateral peacekeeping force in Lebanon to be deployed at the weekend in Beirut during the evacuation of Palestinian forces from the capital will be conducted "on the same basis which caused Italy to join the multilateral force in the Sinai for the purpose of aiding the peace process in the Middle East along with the nation's partners in the European Economic Community" the Italian ambassador to Israel, Gerolamo Nisio, said here Friday.

In an interview given to the Israeli military network the ambassador recalled the EEC Venice declaration of 1979 and referred to the "objective of strengthening and facilitating the peace process in Lebanon in the interest of all the countries of the region.

"Mediation has a precise meaning in international law", the diplomat said in connection with Italian diplomatic activities. "We do not undertake mediation in a technical sense, but we add our efforts and commitment to international activities aimed at facilitating the natural aspirations of the Palestinians, guaranteeing security to Israel at the same time".

Nisio said that the decision to send an Italian contingent to Lebanon was "made by the government after discussion by the cabinet in which each party representative voiced his opinion. The Italian Government decision is unequivocal. It can certainly be said that the people of Italy are in favor of acts for the achievement of peace in the Middle East", the ambassador added.

In response to a question on the future of the Palestinian problem after the war in Lebanon, Nisio said: "Speaking on the strictly personal level, I would believe that after the war the Palestine Liberation Organization would conduct primarily political activities. This could be useful for bringing the problem to a head, for pushing on with initiatives and useful decisions for creating openings and a rethinking of the issues which might open the way towards a solution to the Palestinian problem with Israel and the other sides involved".

Spadolini Message to Troops

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, August 21 -- The Italian premier-designate, Giovanni Spadolini, has sent a message to the 532 volunteers of the Bersaglieri Battalion Governolo preparing to depart for Lebanon for peacekeeping duties, in which he described the Franco-Italo-American force as "an effective instrument finally placed in the service of a high ideal, that of an international community which can curb local conflicts.

"The sincere and generous mobilization" of the enlisted men who agreed to take part in the Italian contingent, Spadolini continued, "is indicative of the adherence of the people, beyond social and political divisions and distinctions, to the ideals of peace, liberty and justice which distinguish the Italian democracy and republic".

In a statement released earlier Friday, the Rome government voiced "great satisfaction" for the successful conclusion of negotiations for ending hostilities in Lebanon and referred to the departure in the afternoon of an advance group of line officers and troops from the Taranto Naval Base for handling the technical and logistical preparations for the landing of the Bersaglieri battalion.

The premier-designate said that the Italian contingent represents the Rome government's "firm commitment" to the "reestablishment of conditions of peace in the city of Beirut, too long and unjustly subjected to inhuman suffering".

He said that the pullout of the Palestinian forces from the Lebanese capital can be expected to lead to "the total withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon" pursuant to the decisions of the United Nations.

SPADOLINI REPLIES TO REAGAN MESSAGE ON LEBANON

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, August 21 -- Premier Giovanni Spadolini today replied to a message sent him yesterday from U.S. President Ronald Reagan after the positive conclusion of negotiations on Beirut which include the intervention of an international peacekeeping force made up U.S., French and Italian troops.

Spadolini confirmed the Italian Government's determination to cooperate closely with the United States in moving from a stage of pacification in Lebanon to the forging of an overall and lasting peace in the Middle East.

The premier reiterated Italy's commitment to promoting and strengthening an atmosphere of greater understanding and confidence between Arabs and Israelis.

Italy encourages the path of dialogue and negotiations, and the evolution of a political role for the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) which would lead to mutual recognition between Israel and the Palestinians, he said.

He also stressed the need for a solution that sanctioned the right of Israel to exist within secure borders.

SPADOLINI MEETS WITH COALITION LEADERS

LD202232 Rome Domestic Service in Italian 2030 GMT 20 Aug 82

[Text] Prime Minister-designate Spadolini met this evening with the secretaries of the five parties of the future majority in order to define the program of his second government. Leaving the meeting for a few minutes, Spadolini read a statement on the government's aims. Among other things, he announced that a dual-chamber commission will be set up to study the question of institutional reforms. A 20-point agreement has been initialled -- 10 of an institutional nature and 10 of an economic character -- which will be embodied in a motion for a vote of confidence and thus be submitted to Parliament.

Spadolini stressed the commitment of the new government to improve the economic situation and to attain the three objectives of the fight against inflation. The rate of inflation will have to be reduced to 16 percent in 1982, to 13 percent in 1983 and to 10 percent in 1984. Spadolini should go the Quirinale next Monday or Tuesday to see the head of state, withdraw his reservations and submit a list of new ministers.

To Present Cabinet List

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, August 21 -- Premier-designate Giovanni Spadolini will report to head of state Sandro Pertini on Monday to present his list of cabinet members to head of state Sandro Pertini Monday morning at 1100 (9 GMT), thus ending Italy's latest government crisis. [sentence as received]

The crisis began on August 7 when Spadolini and the five-way coalition he headed stepped down over a rift which developed over financial legislation.

The new government is made up of the same five partners: the Christian Democrats, the Socialist, the Social Democrats, Republicans, and Liberals.

CDS' SUAREZ INTERVIEWED ON RETURN TO POLITICS

PM201341 Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 8 Aug 82 pp 14-15

[Interview with Democratic and Social Center (CDS) leader Adolfo Suarez by Miguel Angel Aguilar in Madrid -- date not given]

[Excerpts] Question: What was the ultimate reason for your return to the political scene where you start out almost from ground zero, when so many people with such weighty arguments -- both professional and personal -- advised you to postpone your withdrawal [from the Union of the Democratic Center] while awaiting more favorable developments and circumstances? Were the vetoes mentioned by the CDS' founding manifesto decisive in prompting your return? Did you calculate the reaction which could also result in the personal sphere?

Answer: The vetoes are only symptoms of the underlying problems. In my opinion, there are two fundamental problems: in the first place, the increasing impression that real attempts are being made to limit the supremacy of civil power and therefore, ultimately, to put an end to the fundamental principle that national sovereignty resides in the Spanish people. It is obvious that there are people who wish to deprive us of the status of free citizens -- a status won with so much effort -- and return us to the position of subjects.

Second, there are clear attempts to radicalize the country and set the Spanish people against each other in two opposing sides. These attempts are being encouraged from the most conservative positions as a means of averting the feared Socialist triumph. Some people are also issuing veiled threats of regression to prevent that option. This stance seems to me, as regards electoral strategy, dangerous and harmful to Spanish coexistence, and as regards the blackmail which people are seeking to practice concerning voting freedom, clearly intolerable.

With respect to personal danger, it is sad to acknowledge it, but I accept that it exists. One of the reasons prompting me to return to active politics is that I might ensure that in the shortest time possible it will be meaningless to ask such a question in Spain.

Question: What feeling do you experience in setting out in the new CDS, for which you are seeking to win a place in the center, knowing that you will have to do so in an immediate electoral -- and therefore tense -- struggle against many of your own people, whom you launched into political life and who were close colleagues of yours, and also against your own past in the Union of the Democratic Center [UCD]?

Answer: That influenced my decision considerably. On 14 December last, when my son was being operated on following the motorcycle accident which he suffered, I made a brief statement in which, as a result of Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo's decision to take over the UCD party chairmanship, I resigned as an Executive Committee member and as a Political Council member, and I also added: "I am considering very seriously my resignation as a party member and will decide on this over the next few days." Since then I felt the need to resign from the UCD because I believed, perhaps mistakenly, and still believe, that the center's political blueprint would not be realized in all its intensity in a UCD in which so many personal political blueprints were still present. The presence of comrades very dear to me within the UCD caused me to postpone my decision, to attempt to reconcile the center's political blueprint which I wish to uphold with the UCD's name. I attempted to do so until the end, and when I realized that that was not possible, I opted to leave. Leaving poses many problems for me, not only the natural problems entailed by setting up a political party, but also the human problems of being in a political party different from the one in which there are still people with whom I worked a great deal over the last few years. It is true that it is so. I intend to tackle that reality through an attempt to avoid personal abuse. I have done so with all political forces; I am not going to fail to do so with the UCD. But it is also true that if a campaign to discredit me spreads from the UCD, I will respond appropriately.

Question: UCD and government personalities have explained, calculator in hand, that the current numerical allocation of seats to the 50 election constituencies -- 29 of which have under 6 -- and the D'Hont rule, according to which the results of the polls are applied, rule out the possibility of securing deputies' certificates with under 15 percent of the votes. Thus many ineffective votes in each of the provinces would be added up without any return being achieved at the national level. In short, their analysis concludes that an option such as that of the CDS could contribute in practice fewer deputies to a "progressive majority" than it will probably take away from it. What is your opinion on this point?

Answer: Your question seems to take for granted paltry results for the CDS and a decision already made on the use of those results. We set out with a will to secure a majority. We intend to put forward lists under the CDS' name in all constituencies. I view the possibility of preelection coalitions as very difficult, but, in short, it is the Constituent Congress which will make a decision. What I do consider necessary is that, after the election, a government supported by a broad parliamentary majority be formed. If we are successful in the polls we will invite other forces to join in our blueprint. If we are unsuccessful, we will be prepared to cooperate loyally with the victor, both from the opposition and through a legislative term pact, and even in a coalition government. Of course, this cooperation will always be given on the basis of respect for our program and ideological priorities.

Question: The most frequent criticisms of the CDS in the press over the last few days and statements by the UCD Secretariat reiterate the absence of important doctrinal differences from the party which you are leaving, and therefore reduce the reasons for the new foundation to an unimportant conflict of egos, tiresome for the electorate, which is increasingly perplexed by these moves. What do you have to say on the matter?

Answer: I have grave doubts that the UCD, with so many personal blueprints within it, is capable of a centrist political blueprint. Among us, a political will of that kind does exist. Homogenity and the desire that the party become consolidated do exist. In my opinion, that is a very important objective reason. My experience of many years demonstrates to me that on very many occasions the UCD has ended up with a declaration of good intentions, a pure agreement or a certain ideological document. Then, afterward, in reality, very strong tensions arise, because there are personal political blueprints.

It would have been far more self-serving on my part to have stayed in the UCD in a position of some prominence. It would have been more convenient for me, and I believe that I would have had a greater public presence by staying within the UCD. I believe that to do so ran counter to my deepest convictions that there really is a centrist political blueprint which is absolutely essential in Spanish political life. I could not make this happen from within the UCD. I wish that I could have done so under Landelino Lavilla's chairmanship, but I still believe that it is impossible.

Question: There has been speculation about a rebuilding of the center by means of an alliance in which the new CDS and Fernandez Ordonez' Democratic Action Party [PAD] could take part, together with the UCD...

Answer: With respect to the PAD, I held talks with Luis Gonzalez Seara. Subsequently, Javier Moscoso stated that they want no contacts with the CDS, and I am abiding by that for the present. As regards the UCD, in principle I do not deem an agreement possible. It has been hinted that we could run together in some constituencies. Nothing of the sort has been proposed. It is not even on the horizon of our intentions. We wish to uphold our own political blueprint. We, the sponsors of the party, are in favor of running in the election under our own name. We believe that the center must be more clearly defined over the next few years. We have also said that we will not determine what the possible policies of alliances are until the congress: first, because we need a period of reflection; and, second, because we wish to know what the people joining the party believe. We will not define our stance until September. We wish to run alone, but we are open to the debate which will occur at the congress.

SKP MINORITY RETURNS TO PARTY LEADERSHIP WORK

LD221444 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1300 GMT 22 Aug 82

[Text] The return of the Communist Party [SKP] minority to the work of the party leadership is now certain. The SKP Central Committee approved unanimously this afternoon the reunification proposal made by the Political Bureau yesterday. According to the Political Bureau's recommendation, Veikko Alho is to assume the duties of deputy chairman of the party and thus replace Seppo Taivianen who earlier refused to accept this post. Alho is also to become a member of the Political Bureau. The leader of the minority wing, Taisto Sinisalo, is to assume the duties of the chairman of the SKP international department.

The SKP minority wing withdrew from the activities of the leading party bodies last spring as a protest against the decisions taken by the extraordinary party congress.

FIRST GROUP OF PALESTINIANS ARRIVES AT LARNACA

[Text] About 400 Palestinian fighters, the first to leave Beirut in accordance with the agreement for their withdrawal, have arrived at Larnaca Port. The Cypriot ship that brought the Palestinians sailed into the port at 0600 [0300 GMT] today.

The Palestinian fighters will stay in Cyprus only for 2 hours. Immediately after their disembarkation, they will be taken to Larnaca Airport from where about 200 will leave for a military base in Amman, Jordan, and the others will leave for Baghdad.

Another 1,000 Palestinian fighters will leave Beirut today for Larnaca. Their departure is under the supervision of Lebanese forces and men of the French contingent of the multinational peace force in Lebanon.

Qaddumi Arrives

[Text] The first group of approximately 400 Palestinian fighters, who arrived at Larnaca Port this morning aboard a Cypriot ship from Beirut, was taken to the airport and, after embarking on airplanes, about half of the fighters left for Jordan, and the other half for Iraq.

Mr Qaddumi, head of the PLO Political Department, had arrived earlier at Larnaca Airport. He was welcomed by Foreign Minister Rolandhis, and they had a cordial discussion. Mr Rolandhis and Mr Qaddumi then went to the place where the Palestinian fighters were gathered and greeted them.

In an exclusive statement to our radio, Mr Qaddumi expressed his thanks to the Cyprus Government for its hospitality to the Palestinian fighters. Mr Qaddumi stressed that the Palestinians' struggle will continue, adding that this struggle will be both a political and armed one until the Palestinians return to their homeland and establish their own state.

At the same time, Mr Rolandhis stated that Cyprus, like the rest of the world, has admired the struggle and heroism of the Palestinians. Mr Rolandhis also reiterated Cyprus' full support for and solidarity with the Palestinians.

Qaddumi Press Conference

JN220925 Monte Carlo Radio Monte Carlo in Arabic 0900 GMT 22 Aug 82

[Text] Faruq Qaddumi, head of the PLO Political Department, held a press conference at Larnaca Airport this morning after meeting with the first group of Palestinian fighters who left Beirut yesterday.

At this press conference, Qaddumi said: We shall work on all levels, particularly the political level until the world at large recognizes the PLO. However, we shall never resort to the weapon of terrorism which the PLO condemned many times.

In reply to a question on whether the PLO will pursue the fighting against the Israelis alongside the Syrians in al-Biqa' Qaddumi said that the PLO will pursue the battle against the invaders wherever they are. He explained that the PLO will continue the struggle until the Palestinian people's rights are regained and an independent Palestinian state established.

After praising the Palestinian fighters, he stated that the PLO had agreed to leave Beirut to avert the destruction of the city and the Palestinian refugee camps and not because it was defeated.

Wounded To Be Treated

[Text] Following instructions from the Ministry of Health, appropriate arrangements have been made in the local hospital so that it may accept for treatment the wounded Palestinians who will be arriving in Cyprus in the next few days.

From an initial assessment of the hospital's facilities, it has been established that the hospital can treat 60 wounded Palestinians.

According to other information, there is also the possibility of the hospital being used as a transit point for the 150 wounded who, as has been announced, will be taken for medical treatment to Greece via Larnaca Airport.

TANJUG INTERVIEWS KIPRIANOU ON NONALIGNED MOVEMENT

LD222002 Belgrade TANJUG in English 1800 GMT 22 Aug 82

[Text] Nicosia, Aug 22 (TANJUG) -- The Non-Aligned Movement has always been very instrumental towards the relaxation of tensions, and its constructive role not only will not diminish, but, on the contrary, will strengthen still more in the future.

This was stated in an interview to TANJUG by Cypriot President Spiros Kiprianou.

According to his assessment, further influence of the Non-Aligned on international events will depend on the further consolidation of solidarity and relations among the member-states of the movement, as well as on the intensification of efforts of the Non-Aligned for the solution of differences between them.

The Non-Aligned Movement has led the way on several occasions in defusing crises and suggesting practical ways of overcoming them, President Kiprianou said.

The Government of Cyprus, President Kiprianou said, attaches great importance to the maintenance of the spirit of cooperation which should be promoted, particularly by launching of global negotiations, in the framework of the United Nations (?for) the search of suitable solutions to major problems such as food, trade, energy and finance.

To this end, he [word indistinct] Cyprus will support any action that would be undertaken in international (?forums) such as the North-South dialogue and the South-South dialogue and other actions undertaken for the benefit of all the Non-Aligned.

President Kiprianou stated "deep concern" about the existing tension and all armed conflicts, especially those in Africa and in the Middle East.

The roots of conflicts between some Non-Aligned countries, President Kiprianou assessed, lie in the worsening of relations in the world in recent years and in occasional disregard of the principles of non-alignment by certain member countries.

(?Differences) between non-aligned countries emanate also from the influence of [word indistinct] policies, problems created by borders drawn by the colonialists and efforts to impose foreign models of government.

President Kiprianou said the relations between Yugoslavia and (?Cyprus) are at their zenith, but there is more room for their strengthening. The two countries have similar views on most important [word indistinct] they were founders of the Non-Aligned Movement.

At 0130 the Famagusta by-elections registrar, Mr Markou, according to law, declared Mr Toulouras the elected member of the House of Representatives.

OFFICERS REQUESTED TO ACCOMPANY PLO EVACUEES

NC211603 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1500 GMT 21 Aug 82

[Text] As the Lebanese radio station reported, the first Palestinian wounded will depart from Beirut today, or tomorrow morning at the latest, and about 200 will go to Greece by ship under the supervision of the International Red Cross. Greek officers, acting as observers and as a guarantee that the Habib agreement will be adhered to, will accompany the ships which will carry the Palestinians from Beirut to the countries where they will settle. This constitutes part of the Habib agreement, and the participation of Greek officers was requested officially from the Greek Government late last night.

Already, in the morning at 0545 [0245 GMT], five Greek officers from the Greek forces in Cyprus departed for Beirut from Nicosia by helicopter. In all, the Greek Government was asked to send five teams, and the departure of the first and the composition of the rest were ordered by Deputy National Defense Minister Andonis Dhrosoyiannis.

Meanwhile, as the government spokesman has stated, Palestinian leader Yasir 'Arafat sent a telegram to the Greek Government thanking it warmly for the offer of the Greek officers and stressing that he accepts with joy and honor their presence on the ships that carry the Palestinians. Also in his telegram Yasir 'Arafat mentions that it will not be necessary for Greece to treat 300 Palestinian wounded as had been originally demanded but only 100 to 120. Furthermore, the Greek Government has been asked to accept, in some cases, the passage of Palestinians headed for other countries.

In addition, Minister for Health and Welfare Paraskevas Avyerinos has already prepared teams composed of Greek and Palestinian graduates from medical schools in Greece who, should the need arise, will accompany the ships which will transport the Palestinian wounded to our country.

GOVERNMENT NOT TO ACCEPT HELLENIZATION OF BASES

NC201457 Athens ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 20 Aug 82 p 14

[Text] The Greek proposals for the [U.S.] bases, which will be submitted to the U.S. side in September, will be drawn up having as sole criterion to serve national interests. The proposals will be completed at new meetings to be held by the Government Council of Foreign Affairs and Defense [KISEA].

The government considers to be a fiasco what was called until now the "Hellenization of the bases" and it would not accept it at the forthcoming negotiations.

This subject in particular will preoccupy the government at the second meeting of KISEA at which Greece will make the final formulation of its position.

The present status of the U.S. bases in Greece is described as a jumble of agreements that no Greek agency knows about. For this reason, the negotiations will aim at abolishing this status and establishing another one based on equality.

At the same time, Greece's aim at the negotiations will be to preserve the 7:10 balance -- a given fact now that aid to Greece and Turkey has been allotted by the U.S. Congress within this framework -- as well as to secure a "qualitative balance" leading to the modernization of the Greek Armed Forces.

RIZOSPASTIS OPPOSES U.S. BASES NEGOTIATIONS

[From the "Radical" column: "Bases and 'Exchanges'"]

[Text] A few days ago, both the prime minister and the government spokesman categorically stated that the famous and much-touted U.S. "guarantees" of our borders are not only useless but also detrimental because they create "relations of dependence" and end in "arbitration." However, it is obvious that if this is valid for the U.S. "guarantees", it is equally valid for the NATO "guarantees". It is also obvious that if the acceptance of guarantees creates dangerous dependencies, even greater dependencies are created by the operation of sovereign and (inevitably) uncontrolled bases on Greek soil and by the one-sided dependence on the West for the provision of arms and spare parts. Consequently it would be contradictory and unacceptable if, on the one hand, the government rejected the guarantees and, on the other, accepted a renewal of the status of the bases in exchange for the guarantee of a quantity of more sophisticated arms. It would be even more contradictory and more unacceptable if the government really aimed -- as the entire press yesterday reported, attributing it to authoritative sources -- at putting in order the previous status of the bases and giving them such a status as "befits independent and sovereign countries," because the country's "self-centered defense shield" cannot possibly be guaranteed, regardless of how many and which arms systems are given in exchange, if the status of the bases is retained.

The experience of 1974 has proven that the bases can foil any Greek defense plan. Therefore, neither the ratio of 7:10 nor the selection of arms should be the object of the next Greek-U.S. negotiations. The object should be the beginning of a process that -- slowly but steadily -- will lead to ridding the country of this death threat.

KKE AFFIRMS SOLIDARITY WITH IRAQ PATRIOTIC FRONT

[Text] Iraqi Patriotic Front [IPF] representative (Nazihah ad-Dulami), who is visiting our country at the invitation of the Committee of International Democratic Solidarity, had a meeting yesterday with Comrade Andonis Ambatielos, member of the Political Bureau of the KKE Central Committee, at the offices of the party's Central Committee. At the meeting, they exchanged views on the Middle East situation and the Iran-Iraq war.

The IPF representative gave a briefing on the severe consequences of the war in Iraq, the intensifying mobilization of the Iraqi people against the war and stressed that the only solution is the formation of a national democratic government of unity in Iraq which would proceed toward a peace agreement with Iran and hold free elections.

Comrade A. Ambatielos expressed the concern of the Greek Communists over the continuing Iran-Iraq war, which only serves U.S. strategy in the area, and gave the assurance that the KKE will continue its solidarity with, and support for, the just struggle of the Iraqi patriotic forces.

PASOK SCORED FOR OPENING PATH TO COMMUNISM

[From the "Laconic" column: "Communism in Schools"]

[Text] If the Greek people wanted communism, they would have voted for the KKE and not for PASOK. However, as in all previous elections, the Greek people set the KKE aside and brought PASOK to power, because they truly believed that it was better than the KKE, that it had no totalitarian inclinations and that it would not endanger their democratic freedoms.

Indeed, many maintained that PASOK was a barrier against communism. Many had also hinted that Andreas...was a man of the Americans and that he came here to implement a satanic plan to restrain the communist influence. Today, all these people affirm that they were deceived. PASOK is laying the path of communism in Greece in a thousand ways. As if it were not enough that it handed the state's mass media to the KKE, opened to it the gates of the administration of the security forces and the armed forces, left it completely free at all levels of education, recognizing and honored its antinational action during the occupation as a national action.... Now it is also letting KKE propaganda infiltrate school books so that it can be taught to children. PASOK will be destroyed and will fall a day sooner than expected. What will it then leave behind? It will leave a youth full of KKE propaganda. Is this the reason the Greek people cast their votes for it, in order to turn their children over to communism before it abandons rule? The great services rendered to the communist movement by PASOK deeply concern us. And if there is no immediate and effective reaction from those who know what an increase in communist influence on youth means, the country's political future is outlined as dark and uncertain.

TO VIMA SUSPENDS PUBLICATION -- With its edition today TO VIMA suspends its daily publication. This suspension is inevitable as a consequence of a gradual change in the conditions which directly influence the publication and circulation of newspapers in Greece, especially the morning ones. The recent announcement by the Greek post office that it has decided to suspend the distribution of morning newspapers to their subscribers is only one indication of the increasing difficulties. TO VIMA will keep alive its presence in the life of the press through its Sunday edition, which will continue regularly. [Text] [Athens TO VIMA in Greek 21 Aug 82 p 1 NC]

EXPLOITATION OF HYDROCARBONS -- A new institutional framework will be established for hydrocarbons research and exploitation which will be within the government's more general energy program. This was stated by Evangelos Kouloumbis, minister of energy and natural resources, who also referred to the public oil corporation's specific program for extensive research in 1982. Mr Kouloumbis described the finding of oil and natural gas in Katakolon as an event of historical importance because, as he said, it is the first important discovery by Greek hands. He also said that investments of $300 million will be made to extend and modernize the Aspropirgos state refinery, and declared that there is no thought whatsoever of increasing the price of fuel. TURKMEN LEAVES FOR ISLAMIC CONFERENCE IN NIGER

[Text] Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen left Ankara today for Niamey, the capital of Niger, to attend the meeting of the Islamic Conference foreign ministers. The Palestinian question, Israel's aggressive policy in the Middle East, the Iran-Iraq war and other problems concerning the Islamic world will be discussed at the meeting. The 13th Islamic Conference foreign ministers' meeting will end on 27 August.

DJIBOUTI MINISTER ENDS VISIT; COMMUNIQUE ISSUED

[Text] Djibouti Foreign Affairs and Cooperation Minister Bahdon Farah Moumin has ended his official visit and left Turkey. The Turkish-Djibouti joint communique has been issued.

The communique says that the foreign ministers of the two countries have reached a unity of view on strengthening and developing cooperation in the economic, technical, scientific and cultural fields. According to the communique, a decision has been made to sign an economic and technical cooperation agreement between the two countries as soon as possible. An agreement has also been reached on the guidelines of a cultural exchange program.

The communique also states that the two foreign ministers have the same approach to international and regional problems.

FORMER PREMIER ECEVIT STARTS JAIL SENTENCE

[Text] Ankara, Aug 20 (AFP) -- Former social democrat Premier Bulent Ecevit went to jail here this afternoon to serve a prison term of two months and 27 days passed on him by a military court last month. The martial law court found him guilty of violating a ban imposed by Turkey's military rulers on statements by former politicians.

Mr Ecevit, who had already completed a two-month jail term last February for criticising the military regime to the foreign press, was sentenced this time for an interview with the West German weekly DER SPIEGEL.

He had spent 54 days in detention during the course of his trial before being eventually released.

Still another case is in progress against the defiant social democratic leader, for an alleged interview given to the Norwegian daily ARBEIDERBLADET, for which the prosecutor had asked a jail term of at least five years. Mr Ecevit had denied having given such an interview to the Norwegian paper, and the Danish journalist who had "interviewed" him had sent a message to the court, admitting that it was a fabrication, leading his lawyers to expect that he would be acquitted.

PROSECUTION DEMANDS PRISON TERM FOR ERBAKAN

[Text] Ankara, 20 Aug (AA) -- The military prosecutor demanded prison terms ranging between 2 and 7 years for Chairman of the banned National Salvation Party Necmettin Erbakan and 21 other NSP officials at Friday's hearing before an Ankara martial law court. The NSP officers were charged with violating the principle of secularism.

MINISTRY COMMENTS ON LIFTING OF EEC COTTON DUTY

[Text] Ankara, 20 Aug (AA) -- The Foreign Ministry in Ankara confirmed the Turkish Government had agreed to raise the "minimum export price" for Turkish cotton yarn exports to the European Community parallel to price increases on the Liverpool Cotton Exchange.

In an announcement on the agreement reached between Turkey and EEC whereby EEC will lift the 12 percent customs duty it had imposed on Turkish cotton yarn while Turkey informed the EEC it is lifting the 15 percent duty it had imposed on iron and steel imports from the Community, the Foreign Ministry said both practices would go into effect starting Saturday, 21 August.

Turkey had also agreed to limiting cotton yarn exports to the Community to 75,500 tons in 1982, with the expectation that fresh negotiations would take place in September to decide on a quota increase for 1983.

The Turkish Government reserves the right to reverse its decision on imports from EEC "if speedy solutions are not found to restrictions on Turkish exports" which present "difficulties for the domestic ready-wear industry."

COMMERCE MINISTER VIEWS ECONOMIC SITUATION

[Text] Commerce Minister Kemal Canturk has said that the current economic stability policy has begun to yield fruit. Canturk held a news conference in Izmir today on the opening of the 51st International Izmir Fair and commented on the general economic situation and foreign trade.

Recalling that as a result of intensive efforts exerted within the framework of the economic stability program, the wholesale price index increased by 36 percent during last year. Canturk said that work is underway to further reduce this rate. He noted that during last year exports increased, foreign currency revenues went up and, as a result, the deadlock in imports was resolved and economic activities were normalized. Pointing out that the GNP, which decreased in past years, grew by 4.4 percent during last year, the commerce minister noted that this is a significant development at a time when numerous other countries were stagnating or even regressing.

Referring to price behavior during the first 6 months of this year, Canturk said that the wholesale price index went up by 14.2 percent compared to the same period last year and that this is lower than the rate last year.

The commerce minister recalled that the share of industrial products in total exports as well as total exports increased during the past 2 years, noting that this increase continued throughout the first 6 months of this year as well. Canturk said that as of last June, exports increased by some 30 percent compared to last year and reached a total of $2.54 billion.

Canturk explained that during the first 5 months of this year Turkish workers' remittances totalled $740 million and that it is now possible to meet import demands following the increasing foreign currency revenues. He added that the slowing down in the rate of increase of imports, which began last year, will continue this year as well.

Commenting on government support purchases of agricultural products, Canturk said that the support prices are determined so as not to disrupt the general price balance and in a way to fully appreciate the labor of the farmers. He also noted the support prices and the mode of payment may be changed, if necessary; in favor of the farmers. Canturk added that the Izmir International Fair plays an important role in promoting Turkey's economic potential and other values.

VOTCP REVIEWS ARTICLES OF NEW CONSTITUTION

[Station Commentary: "No to Every Line of the Junta Constitution"]

[Text] As you know, dear listeners, since 17 August the junta's Consultative Assembly has been discussing the articles of the reactionary draft constitution. During sessions in which the National Security Council members were all present for a show of force, the first articles of the draft constitution were passed without any significant changes to their reactionary nature. On the contrary, a concession was made to the most reactionary and pro-American circles -- namely, even the Turkish words in the 1961 Constitution were changed and new Turkish words were replaced by the old Ottoman expressions.

The Consultative Assembly will soon begin discussing the most important articles. These are Articles 12, 13 and 14 of the draft constitution, which deal with the basic rights and liberties. These articles have been redrafted in a way that destroys the democratic essence of the former Constitution and which allows the continuation of the atmosphere which reigned during the 2 years of junta domination. These articles aim at laying the grounds for a militarist and police state in which, with a stand against the democratic system and the people, all kinds of progressive ideals and activities are banned with threats of prosecution. In its new form, Article 12 limits all basic rights and liberties with insignificant excuses.

The reactionary changes affected on the 1961 Constitution during the 12 March 1971 period are being preserved in the new draft. Moreover, the concept of limiting one's basic rights and liberties with the preservation of the rights and liberties of others is being installed. Who are these "others," dear listeners? The rights of the workers and toilers have been limited in the relevant articles of the draft constitution while the liberties of bosses and the land owners are being supported. These are the "others."

As if the exploitation of the people by those who own the factories, the banks and the large pieces of land were not enough, the rights and liberties of the people are being further undermined in the constitution. Article 13, moreover, stipulates that certain citizens will not be allowed to use their rights, which were curtailed anyway. Democratic rights and liberties, which have been limited under the excuse of preventing the misuse of rights, are being threatened with bans and restriction of rights.

The same article also bans propaganda that favors communism. The Turkish Communist Party [TCP] has been banned in our country for the last 61 years. However, they already know that the TCP cannot be destroyed by bans and oppression and that there is no way to prevent the spreading of communist ideals among the masses. What has pushed them to include the ban on communism is the concern felt in face of the TCP policies and the inspiring ideals of socialism, as well as the defense put up by the large democratic forces -- including RPP and Peace Committee members and liberal writers like Mumtaz Soysal -- in the face of indictments in the military courts, which tried to involve them with communism.

The aim behind the ban on communism is, in fact, to hinder the propagation of all progressive ideals as well as the establishment of progressive organizations. All this was not considered enough, and Article 14 of the draft stipulates that even these democratic rights can be suspended partially -- in fact totally -- given certain conditions under a martial law in an emergency situation. The article adds that measures can be taken despite articles contrary to them in the constitution. In brief, a so-called economic crisis or any other false excuse will be considered a reason to declare an emergency situation in which the constitution -- which the junta itself prepared -- will be shelved and an overt dictatorship will be reinstated.

As you have seen, dear listeners, these three articles of the constitution lay the grounds for the elimination of the democracy. In a bid to appease the people, the junta may agree to some amendments in the draft. However, it is clear that it will not allow any changes in these three articles. A constitution which allows under certain conditions the restriction of all democratic rights and liberties cannot be considered a democratic legislation and cannot claim to reflect the genuine interests and aspirations of the people. This is the reason why our people should say no to this constitution and will say so.

PAPER NOTES ARMENIAN GROUP'S APPEAL IN GREECE

[Ozgen Acar report from Athens]

[Excerpts] An organization in Athens that calls itself the "Armenian People's Fighters' Movement" (AKEL) has urged all Armenians living in Greece to rally round it.

According to the Greek newspaper MESIMVRINI, this movement issued a statement in which it "views with regard" the latest militant action in Ankara by the Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia [ASALA] and strongly condemns the arrest of Armenians in the United States and in some European countries.

It is stated that there are about 10,000 Armenians in Greece, most of them living in Athens.

In an article which appeared in the pro-government newspaper ELEVTHEROTIPIA, writer B. Yeoryios Mavros attempted an assessment of the militant actions undertaken by ASALA, and he contended that "the Ankara incident was not a surprise. It was expected." Mavros said: "The only thing that ASALA asks is the liberation of Turkish Armenia so that a democratic and socialist Armenian state can be established." Mavros further contended that the second phase of the Armenian struggle is "to unite liberated Turkish Armenia with Soviet Armenia."

MILLIYET ALLEGES GREEK CYPRIOT-ARMENIAN TIES

[Nilufer Yalcin report]

[Excerpts] In France, which is one of the countries where Armenian terrorist organizations have built their nests, the Greek Cypriots have begun to collaborate with the Armenians in their anti-Turkey campaign. Most of the administrators of a French-Cypriot association set up in 1977 have proved to be of Armenian origin, and the same Armenians are also running the "National Bureau of Armenian Culture and Traditions."

The Greek Cypriot lobby has intensified its activities, and, in collaboration with the French, it has set up a French-Greek Cypriot Friendship Association whose chairman is French Senate President Alain Poher.

The identities and addresses of the administrators of the "French-Cypriot Association" provide adequate proof of Armenian-Greek Cypriot cooperation. The chairman of this association, which formally started operating on 3 September 1977, is a so-called journalist named Gerard Stephanesco. The address of the association is 16 Rue de Jose Maria de Heredia, Paris 7. This is what the foundation permit says, but it has been established that this address is Stephanesco's residence.

Now let us look at the vice chairmen of the association:

1. Clergyman Pierre i'Hullier, leader of the Russian Orthodox Church in France;

2. Jean-Marie Daillet, member of the French parliament;

3. Paul Pin, lecturer at the medical department of Paris University, and also a leader in the Haute Seine region;

4. Emile Aslanyan, Armenian solicitor born in Tblisi [Soviet Union];

5. Dr Spiro Mazarakis, doctor of medicine, the only Greek Cypriot administrator; and

6. Alfredo Castler, member of the French Academy of Sciences.

In addition to these 6 vice chairmen, the secretary general of the French-Greek Cypriot Friendship Association is an Armenian named Jean Mardikyan. Greguar Atamyan is an accountant-member.

It is reported that former French Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann, who is currently a member of the French Academy of Sciences, has registered as a member of the French-Greek Cypriot Friendship Association. We have also learned that Mrs Helena Arhveiller, notorious for staging anti-Turkey street demonstrations and for chanting slogans outside the Turkish Embassy, will undertake the secretarial duties of this new society. She is a lecturer on Byzantine history at Sorbonne University.

EEC CHAIRMAN OLESEN CITED ON WASHINGTON TALKS

[Bent Albrechtsen dispatch]

[Text] Washington -- Danish Foreign Minister Kjeld Olesen, who on Tuesday and Wednesday [17, 18 August] held talks with the U.S. administration in Washington in his capacity of chairman of the EEC, said after his talks at the State Department that he has found what was for him a surprisingly positive attitude and a clear desire for the solution to the problems between the Americans and Europeans.

He put two concrete proposals to Secretary of State George P. Shultz -- the first that Shultz should travel to Brussels as soon as possible for an informal meeting with the EEC's foreign ministers to improve the negotiating climate, and the second that the next CSCE followup meeting in Madrid should lead to the European disarmament conference proposed by France.

Olesen said that he did not expect, nor did he receive any response to these proposals and that his overall aim -- also in respect to the U.S. sanctions against the Siberian-European natural gas pipeline and European steel exports -- had simply been to put forward the EEC views and give the Americans time to consider them.

A constant theme in Olesen's comments on his talks was that the problems between the United States and the West Europeans -- both political and economic -- have reached such dimensions and are being discussed in such a tense climate that they cannot avoid having an effect on security policy, and an intensification of consultations, including advance warning by the United States of new decisions, is necessary.

He was asked several times what the outcome would be if, now that European deliveries to the natural gas project are about to begin, the Americans act to prosecute European manufacturers.

He said that this would obviously worsen the situation and that this, alongside any continuation of protectionism, could finally weaken, if not lead directly to a catastrophe for, security policy.

The Danish foreign minister said that he had found George Shultz to be "the type of politician with whom it is possible to communicate." And he possesses the quality, which Olesen as a Dane values, of being able to speak frankly.

However, it was clear from Danish and U.S. sources that the talks did not produce any decisive new U.S. approaches to the continuing transatlantic problems.

Meeting With Regan Described

[Thorkild Dahl RITZAUS BUREAU dispatch]

[Text] Washington -- Danish Foreign Minister Kjeld Olesen voiced his regrets at what he described as U.S. protectionist tendencies in his talks Wednesday [18 August] with U.S. Treasury Secretary Donald Regan.

The EEC nations take the view that U.S. economic policy has a direct effect on the European economies and is partly to blame for the high level of unemployment in the EEC countries.

However, Foreign Minister Olesen and Treasury Secretary Regan were able to take pleasure in a major fall in U.S. interest rates in the last 24 hours and it is expected that the fall will continue and find its way to Europe. The EEC nations have voiced regret at the high U.S. interest rates, because they attract capital which could otherwise be invested in the EEC.

Olesen said that the United States is showing clear signs of a tendency toward protectionism in such matters as the natural gas pipeline, steel, agriculture and shipping.

The U.S. Treasury secretary said that Europe must understand that there are more than 10 million unemployed in the United States, to which Olesen was able to respond that unemployment in the EEC is even higher.

Olesen said that he could not stress enough that in history protectionism has always led to even greater crises.

Regan said that the United States is satisfied with the support given to European agricultural products. During the talks Olesen said that the United States must remember that it exports five times as much agricultural produce to the EEC nations as they do to it.

TWO BOMBS FAIL TO EXPLODE IN VIENNA OVER WEEKEND

AU240804 Vienna KURIER in German 24 Aug 82 p 18

[Text] Two bomb attempts failed over the weekend in Vienna. On Friday one attack was aimed against the former premises of the banned rightist radical association "Babenberg" in Vienna's Neubau Ward on 38 Siebensterngasse. The second attack was planned against the building of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce in Vienna-Alsergrund, 9 Tuerkenstrasse. Both attacks failed because of defective fuses.

Several men present in the former premises of the association detected in the hall an iron pipe filled with a mixture of chlorate of potash and sugar, ready to explode. The fuse, a blade of straw prepared with black powder, had failed to detonate, however.

At about six o'clock in the morning on Sunday an alert policeman on the way to his post found another bomb parcel on a windowsill on the first floor of house No 9 on Tuerkenstrasse. It was held together with suction glue (saugkleber) and contained an aluminum lunchbox, also stuffed with chlorate of potash and sugar. The fuse consisted of some sort of match which had been tucked into a garden hose but only half of which had burned down.

The perpetrators, who are still unknown, had sprayed on the building the words "U.S. imperialism -- no good. Bang (bumsti)."

It is still uncertain whether there is any connection between the two bomb attacks. State police, who are still searching for the men behind an earlier string of bomb attacks prompted by anti-Semitic motives, are working at top speed.

Police are not at all underrating the significance of the cases, even though the construction of the explosives of last weekend looks rather amateurish.

A few days ago state police received through international channels confidential information about plans being made to attack certain embassies. Security authorities subsequently abruptly intensified protective measures. At that time, however, U.S. missions were not considered to be in danger.

Police are only slowly advancing in their investigations of the suspects in the black-powder attacks in Vienna and Salzburg. Ekkehard Weil, 33 years of age, is still doggedly keeping silent and his Salzburg companion, 23-year-old Attila Bajtsy is evidently taking pleasure in playing the role of terrorist: He had received his training in a PLO camp, he told companions shortly before his arrest...

TRADE DEFICITS WITH CEMA COUNTRIES INCREASING

[Excerpts] Bonn, 23 Aug (DPA) -- The CEMA countries are apparently intensifying their efforts to reduce their balance of trade deficit with the West. This emerges from a survey compiled by the Federation of German Wholesale and Foreign Trade Businesses in Bonn on trade with the East in the first 6 months of 1982. A growing credit balance could only be detected between the Federal Republic and Hungary. The federation says that in general the trade balance with the European bloc economies was reversed from a credit of DM991 million to a deficit of DM960 million.

This trend is most evident in trade with the Soviet Union. The federation commented that the trade deficit with the USSR is primarily due to increased energy deliveries in the first quarter of the year. With regard to Hungary, on the other hand, the credit balance rose from DM385 million to DM499 million in the period under review.

USSR Trade Detailed

DW231145 Hamburg DER SPIEGEL in German 23 Aug 82 p 87

[Text] The Soviets are trying hard to decrease their debts in the West by fanning an export boom to the Federal Republic. In the first half of 1982, the USSR supplied goods with a total value of almost DM6 billion, which is 59 percent more than the year before. This was achieved with only three products: oil, gas and gold. The export of oil and oil products almost doubled, to a value of more than DM2.7 billion. The supplied gas volume decreased, but since prices increased simultaneously, the gas bill increased by DM250 million to a total of DM1.6 billion. The Soviets' gold deal with the Germans increased tenfold to a total of DM14.2 tons; the yellow metal costs amounted to DM392 million. If the export boom continues in the second half of the year, supplies from the Soviet Union will amount to almost DM15 billion in 1982. The Germans will then have to cope with an unusually great deficit in their trade with the Russians, roughly DM6 billion.

BONN PLO SPOKESMAN WELCOMES U.S. STATEMENT

[Text] Bonn, 23 Aug (DPA) -- The PLO welcomes the statement made by U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz over the weekend that Washington regards the settlement of the Palestinian question as being just as urgent as the formation of a strong Lebanese Government. This was stated by PLO representative in Bonn 'Abdallah al-Franji on Monday in an interview with DPA. It prompted him to draw the conclusion that it is a sign that "the United States is trying to correct its policy on the subject of Palestinian self-determination." Al-Franji added: "The idea of establishing a Palestinian state has therefore also triumphed in the West."

According to Al-Franji, following the PLO's evacuation from Beirut their main centers will be Damascus and Tunis. Tunis has been chosen because the Arab League and its important apparatus reside there. It is also near the West: "Using Tunis as a base, we will work intensively for further support and recognition for our demands in West European capitals." It is not yet certain whether PLO Chairman Yasir 'Arafat will stay in Tunis.

At the same time, the PLO spokesman stressed that of all the Arab countries, Tunisia has always treated the Palestinians "the most decently." Unlike other Arab states, Tunis has not attempted to exploit the Palestinians for their own internal policies.

GOVERNMENT UNAWARE OF HOW WEAPONS REACHED PLO

[Text] Bonn, 23 Aug (DPA) -- The G-3 rifles made by the German company Heckler and Koch found among the PLO in Beirut by Israeli troops could have originated from arms of this type made under license abroad, the government said. It stated in response to questioning by CDU Deputy Hans Stercken on Monday that it does not know how the weapons reached the PLO.

The Federal Government pointed out that direct export of military weapons, for example the G-3 rifles, to Middle East countries involved in the Arab-Israeli conflict "has never been authorized in the past." In cases where G-3 rifles were exported to other countries, the receiver countries had to sign corresponding statements guaranteeing that they would remain there.

Stercken said in this connection that the Federal Government was insinuating that German weapons could "apparently fall into areas of tension and undesirable hands, since licenses for the manufacture of arms abroad are granted, and the production of these weapons is then no longer subject to German laws on arms exports." Stercken regarded this practice as a serious violation of the substance of the arms export law.

GENSCHER ON STATE OF COALITION, HESSE ELECTIONS

DW231245 Bonn ARD Television Network in German 2030 GMT 20 Aug 82

[Interview with Foreign Minister and FDP Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher by reporter Friedrich Nowottny on "Report From Bonn"; date not given -- recorded]

[Excerpt] [Question] You have mentioned several times that you have made a decision in Hesse. You have decided in favor of the CDU, in favor of the new majority, as you call it. Will your alliance with the SPD hold in Bonn under such circumstances?

[Answer] The Hesse SPD opposes the decisions of the Federal Government, the federal-level SPD supports them.

[Question] In the preelection campaign you have fought hard against Holger Boerner, the SPD minister-president. You have sharply criticized the fact that SPD Federal Manager Glotz wanted to use dirty language in describing opposition leader Kohl's relations with the Americans. Is the chancellor not the next to be attacked sharply by you?

[Answer] As regards Mr Boerner, I was disappointed that he had personally attacked my colleagues Graf Lambsdorff, Hoffie and Gries in an incomprehensible way. I have rejected this. As regards Mr Glotz, it was a matter of assuring that the Hesse election campaign not be directed against our allies in the United States. We, the FRG, are allies of the Americans, satisfied allies, allies with equal rights. We must, therefore, look after our interests -- the Federal Government does so -- but we must still differentiate between those who are our allies and those who are not. I am against any campaign which could make the impression that we are equally remote from the United States as from the Soviet Union.

I want to recall that American troops are stationed in Germany also to permit the work of free trade unions. Soviet troops are stationed in Poland to prevent the existence there of free trade unions.

[Question] And the chancellor? Will he be the next to be attacked by you?

[Answer] If you know the chancellor's approach to the alliance and the United States, it is obvious that agreement exists between us and not contrast or a reason for contradiction.

[Question] Your party has jumped toward the CDU in Hesse. We will know on 26 September whether it has jumped too far. The question is being asked everywhere in the country whether Genscher will also jump in Bonn.

[Answer] Coalition problems are not a matter of jumping, and pertinent problems should not be overruled by tactical considerations. Wherever new majorities are necessary to implement the right policy -- the policy of change -- such as in Hesse, they must be formed. Wherever that is not necessary, work can be continued in a businesslike way.

CDU'S KOHL REJECTS SCHMIDT'S GRAND COALITION

DW240855 Hamburg BILD in German 24 Aug 82 pp 1, 2

[Interview with CDU Chairman Helmut Kohl; name of interviewer, place and date not given]

[Text] BILD: Chancellor Schmidt considers a grand coalition as basically possible -- do you?

Kohl: Basically all democratic parties are able to form a coalition. I see no sense at all, however, in talking about a grand coalition now because we do not have a state crisis, but a government crisis. It would be the most natural thing in the world if the worn-out government resigned. There will be no grand coalition.

BILD: Also if we had 4 million unemployed?

Kohl: In case of a national emergency, a temporary all-party coalition would be better than a grand coalition. But, fortunately, we are not in such a position.

BILD: Did anybody from the SPD ask you about a grand coalition?

Kohl: Yes. Naturally there are envoys. They always come when the Schmidt government is in great difficulties.

BILD: Schmidt says that the chances of his coalition are not very great any more...

Kohl: It is quite understandable that Schmidt feels resigned. An SPD majority does not believe in the success of the coalition any more and wants to become the opposition. In the forthcoming landtag elections the SPD will experience grave new defeats. And there is also the budget quarrel. If the government fails, we are prepared to take over with skilled personnel.

BILD: Do you believe that Genscher really wants a change?

Kohl: I don't know what Genscher wants. He knows that time is working against the FDP. The hour has come for the FDP to make a decision. It must decide what it wants by 6 November when it holds its party congress.

BILD: The government wants to submit the unchanged 1983 budget to the Bundestag. Will you discuss it at all?

Kohl: We do not pursue a boycott policy. Should the government reject our demand to submit a budget with realistic economic figures, we will try to change the budget in the commission debates. We would invite experts to join the commission.

SUBSIDIARY ORDERED TO SUPPLY PIPELINE EQUIPMENT

[Text] There are indications of a coming test of wills between Washington and Paris. The minister of industry has confirmed that the Dressler-France Co., a subsidiary of a U.S. corporation, has been issued requisition orders to supply compressors to be used in the construction of the Siberia-Europe gas pipeline. Until now, Dressler-France had been observing the embargo imposed by U.S. President Reagan.

The position taken by France will no doubt be discussed today at the White House. So far, Washington has made no comment on France's decision, but this morning's PRAVDA has congratulated Paris for the firmness it is showing.

MITTERRAND MESSAGE TO NEW LEBANESE PRESIDENT

[Text] Francois Mitterrand has sent a message to the new Lebanese head of state, assuring him of France's attachment to the cause of Lebanese sovereignty, territorial integrity and national independence. The French president expresses his hope that all Lebanese people be united to reconstruct a democratic, free and prosperous state, living in harmony with all its neighbours.

GHALI MEETS CHEYSSON, COMMENTS ON MIDEAST ISSUE

JN231612 Cairo MENA in Arabic 1500 GMT 23 Aug 82

Following this meeting, which lasted about 1 hour, Dr Ghali said that Paris and Cairo both agreed on the importance of finding a comprehensive solution to the Palestinian problem and the fact that the withdrawal of the Palestinian fighters from Beirut cannot possibly represent a solution to this problem. The solution, he said, must take into consideration the Palestinian people's right to self-determination. Dr Ghali said that Paris and Cairo also agreed to generate world public concern for Palestinian rights.

Dr Ghali said: We want to directly help the Palestinians through the UN Security Council debates and bilateral contacts. The important thing is to be able to help them, because by helping them solve their problem we are solving the problem of peace, which is the sublime aim of our diplomatic activity.

Dr Ghali added that Egypt has always given its full support to the PLO and the Palestinian people. Concerning U.S. support for the French-Egyptian plan, Dr Ghali said: We are in contact with the United States. We are full partners with it. It is very important that we maintain the coordination between European and U.S. efforts in the interest of peace in the Middle East. The important thing is to find a peaceful solution to this problem.

Concerning the U.S. position in the region, Dr Ghali said that U.S. Middle East policy is being reassessed. Egypt's role, he added, is to explain to the Americans certain important aspects of the Middle East crisis.

Asked if the peace process with Israel has stopped, Dr Ghali said: We are for maintaining peace in the Middle East.

Dr Ghali reiterated the Egyptian position of not receiving Palestinian fighters, saying: We do not want to receive Palestinian fighters without first reaching a political solution to their problem.

Dr Ghali added: We have thousands of Palestinian students in Egypt. Furthermore, tens of thousands of Palestinians live in Egypt. We are prepared to receive the wounded, but not the fighters. This is to show that we are against this temporary measure which does not solve the Palestinian problem. We will not go back on this decision.

Regarding the resubmission of the French-Egyptian draft resolution to the UN Security Council in a more specific manner, Dr Ghali said this draft resolution is being discussed with UN Security Council member states, including the United States, to gain their support when the draft resolution is presented to the council.

Asked if the draft resolution was presented directly to the Americans, Dr Ghali said: The draft resolution was, in fact, presented to the UN Security Council on 2 July. Therefore, the Americans and everyone else are aware of it. The recent political developments will require that we introduce several amendments to the draft resolution. The important thing is to obtain general consensus in the Security Council.

Asked if the Security Council will be called to convene soon, Dr Ghali said: No, not yet. Asked if Israel was consulted on the draft resolution, Dr Ghali answered in the negative.

CORSICAN SEPARATIST GROUP ENDS 1-YEAR TRUCE

[Text] Ajaccio, Corsica, Aug 20 (AFP) -- The separatist Corsican National Liberation Front (FLNC), which claimed responsibility for 81 overnight explosions throughout the island, today announced that it was ending a one-year-old truce.

In a message issued here today, the FLNC said it had decided to end the truce concluded April 3 last year because the government "has refused to broach the issue of the Corsican nation and colonialism is continuing."

The 81 overnight blasts, set to coincide with today's election of Corsica's first president of its new Regional Assembly, were the most numerous ever set off in a single night in the island's history.

Last year's truce lasted until February 11, when a total of 26 blasts went off in one night and a French soldier was killed.

The FLNC called for a boycott of the elections for Corsica's Regional Assembly earlier this month. The Corsicans were the first in France to elect a regional assembly as part of the Socialist government's vast decentralization program.

NEW ENVOYS TO POLAND, UGANDA, DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

FM231449 Paris LE MONDE in French 22-23 Aug 82 p 4

[Text] The JOURNAL OFFICIEL for this Saturday, 21 August, announces the appointment of three ambassadors:

Mr Jacques Butin becomes ambassador to Uganda, replacing Mr Jean Clement. Mr Jacques Fasquet has been appointed ambassador to the Dominican Republic, replacing Mr Patrice le Caruyer de Beauvais. Mr Jean-Bernard Raimond has been appointed ambassador to Poland, replacing Mr Jacques Dupuy.

CRISIS ENDS AS PREVIOUS CABINET RENOMINATED

[Text] [ANSA) -- Rome, August 23 -- The Italian Government crisis [that] opened August 7 came to an end today in record time when Premier-designate Giovanni Spadolini presented head of state Sandro Pertini with the names of his twenty-seven [as received] ministers drawn from the five coalition partners, the Christian Democrats, Spadolini's Republican Party.

The list the past and future head of government handed over to the president, who flew down for the occasion from his Alpine retreat in Val Gardena where he has been vacationing, is an exact copy of Spadolini's first cabinet, sworn in June 28 last year, down to the last minister without portfolio.

The ministers in the nation's 42nd postwar government are as follows:

Premier	Giovanni Spadolini, Republican Party (PRI)
Foreign Affairs	Emilio Colombo, Christian Democrat Party (DC)
Justice	Clelio Darida (DC)
Treasury	Beniamino Andreatta (DC)
Budget	Giorgio la Malfa (PRI)
Finance	Rino Formica, Socialist Party (PSI)
Defense	Lelio Lagorio (PSI)
Education	Guido Bodrato (DC)
Public Works	Franco Nicolazzi, Social Democrat Party (PSDI)
Agriculture	Giuseppe Bartolomei (DC)
Transport	Vincenzo Balzamo (PSI)
Post and Telecommunications	Remo Gaspari (DC)
Industry	Giovanni Marcora (DC)
Labor	Michele di Giesi (PSDI)
Foreign Trade	Nicola Capria (PSI)
State Industry	Gianni de Michelis (PSI)
Merchant Marine	Calogero [illegible]no (DC)
Health	Renato Al[illegible]mo, Liberal Party (PLI)
Cultural Heritage	Vincenzo Scotti (DC)
Tourism and Entertainment	Nicola Signorello (DC)

The seven [as received] ministers without portfolios are:

Mezzogiorno	Claudio Signorile (PSI)
Relations with parliament	Luciano Radi (DC)
Scientific Research	Giancarlo Tesini (DC)
European Community Affairs	Gustavo Abis (DC)
Public Affairs	Dante Schietroma (PSDI)
Civil Protection	Giuseppe Zamberletti (DC)

After receiving the list of names, Pertini signed the decree of nomination. The reedition of Spadolini's cabinet is scheduled to be sworn in later this afternoon and the first meeting of the cabinet has been announced for this evening.

The premier is expected to present his cabinet and government platform to Parliament next Monday to begin confidence debate.

Under Secretaries Confirmed

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, August 23 -- Italy's new cabinet met today to name the undersecretaries. All of the undersecretaries in the previous government were reconfirmed.

The former undersecretary at the premier's office, Francesco Compagna, died recently however, and so was replaced by fellow Republican, Vittorio Olcese.

The deputy ministers total 57 divided among the five coalition parties as follows: Christian Democrats 31, Socialists 15, Social Democrats 5, Republicans 3 and Liberals 3. It was also confirmed that the government will go before the Parliament August 30 and that the confidence vote is expected to take place in the house on Thursday, September 2, and in the Senate, on Saturday September 4.

The cabinet today also approved the bill ratifying the agreement to send troops to the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon.

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, August 23 -- Italy's 42nd postwar government was sworn in today by head-of-state Sandro Pertini.

Premier Giovanni Spadolini was sworn in in the president's private study while the new ministers waited in the Quirinale Palace's ballroom. One by one they too were called in to swear allegiance to the republic and the constitution. After the ceremony the ministers posed for pictures.

Head-of-state Pertini hurriedly left the palace to return to his Alpine retreat in Val Gardena where he has been vacationing.

Party Organs, Leaders Comment

AU240859 Rome ANSA in English 0845 GMT 24 Aug 82

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, August 24 -- For the first time in the history of Italy's myriad government crises, a new government has been formed (the 42nd since World War Two) identical to the one it replaces.

Giovanni Spadolini once again heads a five-way coalition of Christian Democrats (DC), Socialists (PSI), Social Democrats (PSDI), Republicans (PRI) and Liberals (PLI). The cabinet was sworn in yesterday and is identical to the previous to a man. All of the former undersecretaries were also reinstated in their posts. The only change between the first Spadolini government and the second is that one undersecretary has died and therefore a new face was brought in to take his place. The goals of the two Spadolini-led governments are also the same: the fight against inflation, terrorism and organized crime.

The premier has brought in one change this time around however. Spadolini has launched a series of institutional reforms that should streamline government and parliamentary functioning.

The government crisis opened on August 7 when Spadolini, the first non-Christian Democrat premier since 1946, had to throw in the towel when key legislation was defeated by turncoats within the majority ranks and the Socialists said they were pulling out of the coalition.

Now that Spadolini, a Republican, is back at the helm of a photostatic copy of the previous government, many will be asking the Socialists just what they were up to when they repudiated the earlier administration.

It was especially recalled that finance minister, Rino Formica, whose law decree was shot down by the defectors, said that the Socialists would never accept reheated soup as a solution for the government crisis. This gastro-political warning was interpreted by most commentators as sounding the death knell for the five-way ruling alignment and signalling the start of a campaign for early elections (the present legislature is to expire only in spring of 1984).

PSI Secretary Bettino Craxi, in a first encounter with Spadolini after the latter received a mandate to try to form a new government, was said to have firmly rejected the idea of another five-party coalition.

At that point early elections seemed inevitable. However, within a week the situation was completely turned around.

Head of state Sandro Pertini gave Spadolini his unconditional, full support and came out firmly against early elections.

The premier-designate worked out a decalogue of moderate institutional reforms and got the green light from the Socialists to go ahead with a reissuance of the old five-party formula.

The new government sworn in yesterday was welcomed by the five ruling partners and received negatively by the opposition forces.

The DC daily "POPOLO" said it did not share the criticisms and thinly-veiled irony of those who claimed to be disappointed that there was no novelty in the new government. The paper said it respected the way Spadolini had handled his government-formation task.

The PSI daily "AVANTI" chose to highlight the institutional reforms saying that this was not a victory for the Socialists alone but for Italian democracy.

The PSDI daily "L'UMANITA" took issue with the Socialists who had complained that the Social Democrats and the Christian Democrats were trying to forge a government having the outside support of the Communists (PCI) and leaving the PSI out of the picture. "L'UMANITA" said the PSDI was firmly against any choice that could lead to hegemony by either the DC or the PCI but that it also opposed any new hegemony by the PSI as recently theorized by Socialist Finance Minister Rino Formica.

The PRI daily "VOCE REPUBBLICANA" commenting on the fact that the new cabinet mirrored the previous one said that this was a novelty in the constitutional history of Italy. "A novelty of continuity", the paper added.

PLI Deputy-Secretary Alfredo Bioni said that since there was no change in the cabinet list it was to be hoped that there was a change in the attitude of the ministers towards each other in terms of working together responsibly and honestly.

Alessandro Natta, member of the PCI leadership said that in his party's view, the new government must be sharply criticized. Reproposing the same, identical cabinet which had already failed, in his view meant failing to resolve the crisis and failing to offer any guarantees that the country's most urgent and serious problems will be dealt with. Natta said it was disconcerting and worrying that the new government was an exact replica of the previous one.

Radical Party Secretary Marco Pannella said that the entire affair ended as squalidly as it began. Now even the Socialists' bluff had been called, he said. In the meantime the Radicals would continue to push for the holding of early elections.

Democratic Proletarian Secretary Lucio Magri said that more than ever before Spadolini had played the part of a passive notary public instead of a head of government picking his team of ministers free of outside pressures. It was the parties that confirmed the same men as before so as not to upset internal equilibriums, Magri said. This is not warmed over soup, he went on, it's "cold and rancid".

The president of the Confagricoltura (the agricultural association), Giandomenico Serra said it was wise of Spadolini to pick the same men as the country's economic and financial ills cannot wait.

Spadolini himself said that his administration had an important economic and social program to carry out and had to launch institutional reform. Keeping the same government structure facilitated these tasks, he claimed.

In reference to Formica's culinary metaphor, Spadolini said "cold minestrone is a good dish".

KIPRIANOU, QADDUMI DISCUSS AID TO PALESTINIANS

[Text] President Kiprianou today received Mr Qaddumi, head of the PLO Political Department, who is currently in Cyprus. After the meeting, which was also attended by Foreign Minister Rolandhis, President Kiprianou said, in response to questions, that a very friendly discussion was held with Mr Qaddumi on the latest developments and that views were exchanged on the way in which Cyprus can give further aid to the Palestinian cause.

Mr Qaddumi stated that he conveyed to President Kiprianou an oral message from PLO leader 'Arafat and from various PLO members. He added: The message expresses gratitude for the facilities and the welcome accorded to the Palestinian fighters in Cyprus. In answer to another question, Mr Qaddumi said he is pleased with the implementation thus far of the procedure for the transfer of the Palestinians from Beirut.

PLO Jeeps Unloaded at Limassol

[Text] The Cypriot vessel Sol Phrygin, which took on board 1,300 Palestinians from Beirut to take them to Tunisia, arrived today at Limassol Port and 21 jeeps were unloaded. The loading of the jeeps on the vessel led to a 6-hour delay in Sol Phrygin's departure from Beirut. Finally the ship sailed off when the Israelis were assured that the jeeps were to be unloaded before the Palestinians' arrival in Tunisia. The jeeps were unloaded at Limassol Port under the supervision of the National Guard and are now in strict custody until their final destination is decided. After refuelling and getting water and other supplies Sol Phrygin left Limassol Port for Tunisia.

ATAKOL MEETS ISLAMIC FOREIGN MINISTERS

[Text] Minister of Foreign Affairs and Defense Kenan Atakol, who is in Niamey, Niger, to attend the Islamic Conference foreign ministers meeting, is continuing to hold contacts there. He held separate meetings with the foreign ministers of Pakistan, Bangladesh, Indonesia, Malaysia and Jordan. Last night, Atakol attended a dinner given by Niger's president in honor of the foreign ministers and delegation chiefs attending the conference.

Various political, economic, financial and cultural issues, including the Cyprus question, are on the agenda of the Islamic Conference foreign ministers meeting.

DENKTAS COMMENTS ON VENIAMIN STATEMENT

TA231345 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in English to Cyprus 1115 GMT 23 Aug 82

[Text] President Denktas has said that the Turkish Cypriot community was continuing the Cyprus intercommunal talks with sincerity and within the framework of the principles agreed upon with Archbishop Makarios on the founding of a bicommunal, bizonal, federal republic based on the equality of the two communities.

The president was answering questions this morning on a statement by the interior minister of the Greek Cypriot administration, Mr Veniamin. He said that the Turkish Cypriot community [word indistinct] that the Greek Cypriots were not at the negotiating table with the same aim as the Turkish Cypriots and that the latest statement by Mr Veniamin had confirmed this information. He stressed that the Turkish Cypriot side was not at the negotiating table with the purpose of facilitating for the Greek Cypriots to make plans for a solution of the Cyprus problem in accordance with their own wishes. He added that as soon as the Turkish Cypriots were convinced of this Greek Cypriot attitude, they would also adopt a definite attitude.

President Denktas said that the latest statement by Mr Veniamin was beneficial in informing the world of the true intent of the Greek Cypriots and would especially enlighten the members of the United Nations when the Greek Cypriots made their recourse in the world body.

DENKTAS CRITICIZES KIPRIANOU STATEMENT

[Text] President Denktas has reiterated that the parallel drawn by the Greek Cypriot leader, Mr Kiprianou, between the Cyprus problem and the Palestinian issue was an example that the Greek Cypriot leadership was determined not to see the realities in Cyprus.

The president was answering a question on Mr Kiprianou's statement on the visit to Cyprus by the chairman of the Yugoslav Presidential Council, Mr Stambolic, when Mr Kiprianou had claimed that if the United Nations resolutions on Cyprus were implemented, the Cyprus problem could be easily solved. President Denktas said that for United Nations resolutions to be valid there should be a contribution to them by the Turkish Cypriot community, who were the [word indistinct] partners of the Republic of Cyprus. But, he stated, since 1963 the Greek Cypriots were making efforts to prevent the Turkish Cypriot community from (?attending) international conferences on Cyprus. He stressed that for this reason any resolution adopted without the contribution of the Turkish Cypriot community was not valid.

President Denktas reiterated that the Cyprus problem could only be solved through intercommunal talks within the framework of the summit agreements with the establishment of a bicommunal, bizonal, federal republic and those who were searching for a formula for a solution outside this framework were deceiving themselves and the world.

SFRY'S STAMBOLIC HIT FOR DISREGARDING TFSC

TA231339 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in English to Cyprus 1115 GMT 23 Aug 82

[Text] The spokesman for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs has described as pitiable for Yugoslavia to [word indistinct] complete disregard of the existence of the Turkish Cypriot community by the chairman of the Yugoslav Presidential Council, Mr Stambolic, during his recent visit to Cyprus. The spokesman said that Yugoslavia was considered the leader of the Nonaligned Movement and had made initiatives on the Cyprus problem and that the Turkish Cypriot community did not think that Mr Stambolic would not want to see the Turkish Cypriot community, which was one of the two communities living in Cyprus. But, he added, such an action had taken place and this action has [word indistinct] considerably the neutrality of Yugoslavia on the Cyprus problem. He stressed that Yugoslavia itself was a federation of autonomous and free people where equality was the basic principle and any [word indistinct] chairman from that country should not have disregarded the Turkish Cypriot community during his visit to Cyprus.

SAUDI DEVELOPMENT FUND PRESIDENT ARRIVES

LIBYAN TRADE MISSION HOLDS CONTACTS IN TURKEY

[Text] Istanbul, 23 Aug (AA) -- A Libyan trade mission, led by the chief of imports from Libya's Ministry of Economy, (Shur 'Abbas), conferred with officers of the Istanbul Chamber of Trade "ITO" Monday.

Vice Chairman of ITO Dundar Ucar explained recent difficulties in trade between the two countries caused concern since they affected smaller firms in particular.

Member of the eight-man Libyan team (Mustafa Zighali) admitted there were some mostly minor problems because bilateral trade had grown so rapidly, and deplored the way the press had magnified or distorted some of the problems.

('Abbas) announced Libya intended to import a total of $5 billion worth of commodities in 1983, and they were investigating what part of this total could be imported from Turkey.

General manager of the Libyan construction firm "Ahlika" (A. Momen) was given a gold medal for heading the list of importers from Turkey.

SUPREME MILITARY COUNCIL HOLDS SPECIAL SESSION

[Text] Ankara, 23 Aug (AA) — The Supreme Military Council convened in a special session Monday, General Staff headquarters announced.

The special session of the council, which had met for its ordinary session early in August, "will designate the very limited number of successful and specialized armed forces staff with highly specialized training for which there is need," who will be re-recruited into active service although they have been retired due to the shortage of positions to which they could be promoted.

An amendment to Law No 1,076 on reserve officers, promulgated on 19 August 1982 allows such recall to active service for retired officers and NCO's who have not yet reached compulsory retirement age. They will receive full pay, but will not be considered for further promotion.

AIR FORCE GENERAL ASSUMES 'ATAF' COMMAND

[Text] Izmir, 23 Aug (AA) — Chief of Staff for NATO Forces in Southern Europe Lt Gen James M. Thompson said the 6th Tactical Air Force "ATAF" continued to be an element of security and support in NATO's southeastern flank.

General Thompson was speaking in Izmir for the ceremony in which Lt Gen Nedet Hizel of Turkey took over as the 6th ATAF's new commander from outgoing commander Lt Gen Serafettin Ugur.

General Thompson noted that the critical importance of the southeastern flank increased day by day as it stood between Warsaw Pact countries and the countries of the Middle East, Africa and the Mediterranean.

KREISKY DENOUNCES ISRAEL, SUPPORTS PALESTINIANS

LD241048 Hamburg DPA in German 0950 GMT 24 Aug 82

[Text] Hamburg, 24 Aug (DPA) -- In an article for STERN magazine, to be published in its next edition and prereleased to DPA, Austrian Federal Chancellor Bruno Kreisky sharply denounced Israel's action in Lebanon. He said that he is no longer available to mediate between Israelis and Palestinians. "For I no longer stand somewhere in the middle. I have taken sides, the side of the persecuted and oppressed."

Kreisky says: "Israel has been stripped morally.... Its rulers have shown their true face. The war in Lebanon has cost Israel the sympathies and support it won in recent decades. The world fears the madness of its leaders who rely only on the force of arms. I no longer want to have anything to do with this Israel, never again."

He perceived years ago that the Middle East problem could be solved only by recognizing the PLO and by the creation of a Palestinian state living in close cooperation with its neighbors, including Israel. When the Israelis realized that the U.S. might one day share this view, "they attacked me fiercely. For them I was enemy number two, after Hitler." But nobody could accuse him of being anti-Semitic, for he comes from a Jewish family and lost his dearest relatives under the Nazis. "At most, I can be accused of not being a Zionist."

The exodus of the PLO guerrillas, "which the Israelis have enforced with tremendous casualties," will not solve the Middle East problem, Kreisky predicted. New resistance fighters will spring from the civilians who remain behind. The guerrillas now being dispersed to other Arab countries will surely not retire into private life. So Israel will wage war again, against other Arab states. "There is little hope that Israel will change and be ready to compromise."

Kreisky criticized the Socialist International, which until a few years ago concentrated exclusively on Israel and largely ignored the Arab world. He will henceforth uphold his view "everywhere.... even in the Socialist International, which has never shown its true colors. Immense crimes have been committed. To remain silent is to become an accomplice."

SOVIET DELEGATION VISITS VOEST HEADQUARTERS

[Summary] "Linz -- Last weekend a 10-member delegation of Soviet engineers, technicians, steelworkers, trade unionists and shop stewards visited Upper Austria at the invitation of the central shop council of the Voest-Alpine Corporation.

"The guests from the USSR came from that steel combine in Lipetsk which was built by the Voest Works south of Moscow in 1966. The Soviet delegation visited the Linz works of the Voest-Alpine Corporation in Upper Austria and several other enterprises and was also a guest last Friday of the provincial leadership of the Upper Austrian Communist Party and of the trade union left bloc at the Austrian Communist Party house on Melichar Street."

Provincial party chairman and City Councillor Otto Treml welcomed the Soviet delegation and stressed the significance of trade relations between the Voest-Alpine Corporation and the Soviet Union and the GDR. The head of the Soviet delegation pointed out that "people throughout the world should cooperate for soical development and constant social improvement in a peaceful world."

SPD'S BAHR SAYS U.S. ACTING IN OWN INTERESTS

[Text] Bonn, 24 Aug (DPA) -- In the view of SPD disarmament expert Egon Bahr, U.S.-European relations require that both sides of the Atlantic recognize the presence of both common and different interests. This applies all the more if America is heading for a confrontation with the Soviet Union, he says in an article for the SPD weekly 'VORWAERTS,' which was released in advance today. "America cannot impose such a policy on Europe. That would no longer be partnership." Only a challenge from the East could force such a policy upon Europe, "for we are not neutral."

Bahr quotes a recent remark by Dean Rusk, the former U.S. secretary of state, that America's friends in Europe "are allies, not satellites." Bahr accuses America of formulating and acting on its interests with the self-assurance of a superpower while being outraged, aggrieved, brutally or hesitantly indignant if other, weaker countries do the same thing. "America is applying a double standard." Political coordination within the Western alliance cannot work if it is intended only as a nice way of saying that Europe must do or not do what America thinks is right or wrong.

FDP LEADER WANTS SPECIAL CONGRESS ON MISSILES

[Text] Bonn, 24 Aug -- Berlin FDP politician William Borm suggests that the Free Democrats hold a special congress in early 1984 to decide whether they want new nuclear missiles to be deployed in the Federal Republic. Borm's suggestion is contained in a foreign and security policy motion of the federal FDP congress, whose text was made available to the press in Bonn on Tuesday. According to Borm, the FDP should support NATO's dual decision and demand the inclusion of all land and sea-based as well as airborne systems into the Geneva negotiations. In the light of the negotiation results, a special party congress should then decide on the actual deployment problem. Borm is heading the FDP federal committee for foreign, German and European policies.

LAHNSTEIN INTERVIEWED ON VISIT TO SAUDI ARABIA

DW241021 Cologne Deutschlandfunk Network in German to East and West Germany 0449 GMT 23 Aug 82

[Interview with Finance Minister Manfred Lahnstein by reporter Proempers; date and place not given -- recorded]

[Excerpt] [Question] The Federal Republic and its economy depend particularly on exports. Saudi Arabia's oil exports have been intentionally curtailed in order to stabilize prices. Does this pose future problems for German-Saudi Arabian economic cooperation?

[Answer] We have a positive result in this respect. In the first half of this year the FRG has achieved a trade balance surplus with the OPEC group, which was deemed impossible 2 years ago. On the other hand, with regard to Saudi Arabia, our most important partner in this area, it means that the economic planning of this country will continue on the principles laid down 1 year ago, but that Saudi Arabia will also have to act and calculate more carefully in the years to come. That will not necessarily curtail our economic relations, but most careful calculations with every pfennig will have to take place in the coming years.

[Question] It means that the current oil market situation is also backfiring at the revenues of Saudi Arabia. The Federal Republic depends very much on exports to the Arab area. Does this mean that export possibilities will decrease?

[Answer] I do not think that we must fear a decrease of such possibilities as a whole. The Arab market -- and particularly the Saudi market -- will remain an extremely interesting one, but developments do not come to a stop here, either. The first infrastructural phase has been mainly concluded, for example. More attention is now being given to private investments.

It was particularly interesting to me that the Saudis pointed out repeatedly the opportunities which small- and medium-size firms have in connection with Saudi partners. I hope that I will be able, together with my colleague the minister of economics and with the German economy, to implement these opportunities and the Saudi proposals at home.

[Question] Can you specify these proposals?

[Answer] It can be summarized by saying that the next phase of Saudi Arabian economic development, aside from some big-size projects on the Gulf coast, will be very much concentrated on medium-size and small firms. This will be a completely different form of cooperation than between big firms, in part also with government support. Our special German asset will be of advantage here; we are particularly strong in export matters if flexibility is needed. The result of smaller and medium-size firms is particularly good in this respect. Here we have chances, but contact lines must be established in the coming years. The government can and will help do that.

[Question] So far the government has taken over guarantees up to about DM21 billion for business with the Saudis. If I understand you correctly, the framework of guarantees will be extended.

[Answer] Saudi Arabia is in the best position in the FRG's economic balance. Saudi Arabia is the safest risk, if I may say so. We believe this will continue in the coming years. You are right, the consequence will be that the framework of guarantees will be extended according to our export chances.

[Question] Saudi Arabia is not only a debtor, but also a creditor of the Federal Republic. This spring a new credit agreement was concluded. Were new credits for the deficient federal budget mentioned in the talks you had?

[Answer] No. First, this was not necessary. You have pointed out already that my state secretary negotiated in February on the 1982 annual rate, so to speak. There was nothing additional to negotiate. Second, bilateral credit problems between Saudi Arabia and the FRG are much less important at present than problems we both have with third parties. You can imagine that such a case as Mexico has been discussed here very, very thoroughly as well as other problems in Latin America and elsewhere in the world. This has taken place just before the annual IMF and World Bank meetings in early September in Toronto.

MINIMUM AGE FOR SOLDIERS TO BE REDUCED TO 17

[Alfons Pieper article]

[Text] Bonn -- Young men will be allowed to join the Bundeswehr at 17, according to a bill of the Federal Defense Ministry. With the planned change Defense Minister Apel wants to give young men without a job or apprenticeship and high-school graduates without a possibility to enroll in universities, an opportunity to advance their basic military service by voluntary application, so as to sensibly bridge the time to the beginning of their university studies or their entry into professional life.

Another point of the bill is that career soldiers and temporary soldiers will be obligated in the future to reimburse the training costs accrued if they leave the Bundeswehr prematurely. Until now this applied only to medical officer candidates.

This provision will in the future also affect those persons who, following successful studies at the expense of the "state," are recognized as conscientious objectors and therefore are not available to the Bundeswehr.

The amount to be repaid will be figured out according to the length of studies and whether the "service commitment" has really been fulfilled after the studies. Amounts between DM40,000 for graduated engineers or DM100,000 for pilots or physicians are feasible. According to statistics, some 115 officers requested early dismissal between 1974 and 1980. The losses thus suffered by the Bundeswehr run into millions.

The Bundeswehr Association welcomed Apel's motion to permit 17-year olds to join the Bundeswehr voluntarily. Chairman of the Association Volland demanded at the same time improvement of the attractiveness of the armed forces. At present the Bundeswehr is lacking 25,000 temporary soldiers. Many soldiers work far more than 56 hours a month without drawing adequate pay.

BRANDT ON TENSION BETWEEN SPD, TRADE UNIONS

DW251025 Hamburg ARD Television Network in German 1900 GMT 24 Aug 82

[Interview with SPD Chairman Willy Brandt by reporter Ernst-Dieter Lueg on "Report"; place and date not given -- recorded]

[Excerpt] [Question] Can a breach between the SPD and the trade unions be avoided now that you have both criticized each other in an unusually rough way, and now that the trade unions have even announced that they want to demonstrate against the SPD-led government?

[Answer] Well, I see this quite differently. This is not the first time the SPD as a party and the trade unions as representatives of workers have not come to exactly the same conclusions in certain critical situations.

[Question] Earlier, however, it was different?

[Answer] You see, in postwar times, at the time of Adenauer and later when the Social Democrats formed the government and I was chancellor, we were quarreling over whether the fundamental enterprise law was the right thing. The DGB said we should have taken a definitely greater step. I can remember the sometimes rather lively discussions with Otto Brenner which were friendly, but very hard because we sometimes had different opinions, such as on the emergency law.

[Question] But now it involves the core, the economy.

[Answer] It involves the core. It must not be forgotten, however -- I understand it -- that the trade unions are right in two fields, even if the SPD cannot always agree with the way in which they express themselves. They are right to demand in the interest of their members that the state not withdraw from its responsibility to preserve jobs but maintain a more active employment policy. Those who voice this criticism sometimes underrate what is really going on, but they are right in pressing those who bear government responsibility. Second, they are right in demanding better-balanced social justice. It is a fact that many people make quite a lot of money in the FRG at present without paying any taxes. The people know it.

[Question] The SPD-led government did not prevent it?

[Answer] Finance Minister Posser of North Rhine-Westphalia, the biggest federal land -- the government and the laender are mainly involved -- has drawn our attention to his collection of cases and to the fact that depreciation must come to an end somewhere. But that is just a part of it. My issue was social balance in more difficult times.

[Question] The trade unions are fighting now against the social imbalance of the last budget decisions; new cuts in the next round between the SPD and the FDP seem to be inevitable. How should an agreement be found between the trade unions and the SPD? How can the pact hold if new burdens are added to the existing ones?

[Answer] First, it is not said anywhere that such burdens should exist only in the social political fields. It cannot be said, despite all the excitement which has been created, what the new estimates will show.

[Question] But naturally there will be conflict material for the SPD and the FDP?

[Answer] There will be conflict material as long as we are in such a tense economic and thus financial-political situation. That is correct.

COMMENTATOR WELCOMES U.S. ARMY UNITS' RESHUFFLE

[Commentary signed Ein]

[Text] The U.S. 7th Army plans to move parts of its divisions closer to their envisaged operation areas. This decision is not very much appreciated in the Federal Republic. Just by taking the example of an American tank unit you can demonstrate how important this planning can be for the so-called forward defense. The 3rd Battalion of the 63rd U.S. Tank Regiment is garrisoned in Augsburg. This unit, however, belongs to the 3rd Infantry Division stationed near Kitzingen. The distance to the units with which it must cooperate in an emergency is more than 200 kilometers. The tank battalion thus has no contact with the other troops. It does not have proper training grounds in Augsburg either. Repairs must be made in faraway repair shops. "Maintenance costs" are thus very high. But most of all, incorporation in the division's units in case of strategic concentration would lead to traffic chaos. Relocation is supposed to take place in the summer of 1983. Should we not energetically support the American initiative?

CHEYSSON ON BEIRUT, PIPELINE, U.S. RELATIONS

AB241412 Paris Diplomatic Information Service in French 1020 GMT 24 Aug 82

[Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson interview with SUD-OUEST on 23 August -- place not given]

[Excerpts] [Question] All the problems of Lebanon will not be solved by the departure of the Palestinians. After the departure of the combatants from Beirut, what could France do to help reestablish peace, independence and territorial integrity in that country?

[Answer] If one does not respond to the fundamental problems facing the Middle East, no particular aspect can be dealt with. If one does not tackle the Palestinian problem, one cannot answer the questions concerning the Lebanese or Israel. One would compel Israel to continue to live in permanent tension with its neighbors. Our intervention in Beirut was very limited. It made it possible to evacuate the foreign forces from Beirut, to restore the city to the sole framework of Lebanese sovereignty, to protect the population and to neutralize the capital. But nothing has been settled for all that.

In fact, we, the French, regret that this operation was not carried out in a wider political framework as we proposed from the beginning. We would have preferred that the decisions just made to liberate Beirut be simultaneously implemented in a political process of negotiations between the Palestinians and the countries of the region. As you know, we were defeated on the second point. Nobody wants to listen to it at the moment.

[Answer] The United States has made important progress. This was demonstrated by the declarations made by the new secretary of state, George Shultz, on his appointment. He clearly stressed on this occasion that there is a political dimension to all these problems. That was a point of disagreement between us and the Americans which has now vanished. We are not yet in complete agreement with the Americans, since we believe that it is now necessary to enter into a negotiation in which the Palestinians should be the only partners. As you know, the Americans are not saying that and are not in a position to because of their commitment toward Israel.

[Question] What about the French-Egyptian draft resolution calling for the mutual recognition of the PLO and Israel? Are the Americans still opposed to it? Do you hope that the PLO will one day finally recognize Israel?

[Answer] A discussion on this resolution had begun at the Security Council but was later interrupted in order to give priority to the evacuation of Beirut. But it is still under consideration. My Egyptian colleague, Butrus Ghali, is now in Paris and we will hold a long working session on this theme.

[Question] Has the change which has occurred at the State Department contributed to bring the positions closer?

[Answer] I have just told you that a point of disagreement has disappeared. But apart from that a lot of time will still be needed to reach a solution.

[Question] Unfortunately, the hard line has never been as popular in Israel as it is at the moment.

[Answer] I will not allow a comment on the internal situation in Israel or on the support being given or denied its leaders. The great role of France and of the friends of Lebanon and Israel, as well as of all peoples who are interested in a stable peace in that region, must be put in contrast with the other possible development. This other development could take place in the form of partitions and with an ax: Lebanon would be divided and part of it entrusted to one power while the other is given to another power. There would be two competing vassal kingdoms facing the Russians and the Americans, holding a big pencil in their hands to draw a line dividing the proteges of each power. The pencil would be big so that the line would not be too clear or too distinct.

[Answer] We have some fundamental subjects of agreement with the United States. We will be in the American camp in the event of a catastrophe. There is no doubt about that. But this should not hinder us from recalling the fundamental points on which we disagree. Quite to the contrary: We also criticize them when we see them make decisions which do not take the problems of their allies into account.

[Answer] I am referring to the interest rate. I am also referring to some of our contracts with the Soviet Union which they want us to cancel while they themselves repeatedly conclude profitable contracts for the supply of grains. Our points of disagreement also include the Third World. We believe that each Third World country has the right to express its identity and control its own destiny. Politically this is true as far as the choice of a political regime or of an alliance is concerned. This is also true as far as the economic and cultural fields are concerned.

[Question] A country like Mexico is on the verge of stopping payments. The World Bank forsees a gloomy future for the poorest nations. Do you not have the impression that some bad luck is threatening the Third World?

[Answer] I believe that there is remarkable blindness, intellectual laziness and stupidity on the part of the great economic leaders who do not want to understand that the best chance to free the world from the present crisis lies in development and therefore in the possibility of growth; that is in the Third World.

We failed in our desire to alert public opinion and I am obliged to note another very serious point of disagreement with the Americans. It is not that we are not understood when we raise the problems which I have just mentioned. The thing is that these problems are of absolutely no interest to some people. The best proof is that when we had a long discussion with the U.S. President on this matter he quickly agreed with us. But as his administration is not interested, there is no clear agreement.

FURTHER PRESS REACTION TO NEW GOVERNMENT

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, August 24 -- The Italian press today was full of comment on the formation of a new Spadolini government identical to the one that collapsed on August 7.

The evaluation of this rather unique situation was divided between the expressions of satisfaction voiced by Premier Giovanni Spadolini and the leaders of the five parties making up his coalition government, and those who could only ask, with varying degrees of puzzlement, anger or scorn, to what purpose the government crisis was brought on, if two weeks later everything was back to what it was.

All of the men in the outgoing cabinet were reconfirmed in the exact same positions, and all of the former undersecretaries were given back their posts. The only new face was that of Vittorio Olcese who was tabbed as an undersecretary at the premier's office to replace a fellow Republican who had died.

None of the papers really came up with an answer as to what the crisis was all about when the parties only ended up stitching the coalition back again just as it was before.

Rome's LA REPUBBLICA said that the outcome proved that the Socialists, after triggering the crisis, were not strong enough to benefit from it, creating a grotesque situation in which after having insisted that the former Spadolini team was incapable of governing the country, finished by endorsing that same team.

IL MANIFESTO, the mouthpiece for forces to the left of the Communist Party, said that the crisis had pointed up just how weak the Socialists are and how easily they can find themselves isolated. The Socialist Party (PSI) has had to learn the following lesson, although it is a bitter pill to swallow: "Either it must adjust itself to the Christian Democratic Party, or see itself weaken" or it must offer a serious opposition which means rupture, the paper claimed.

Rome's PAESE SERA said that the real crisis was still here and that it would not be long before the country was fully aware of it. It is the crisis of an impotent democracy and a ruling majority lacking all cohesiveness so that it has no strength to deal with the economic crisis, scandals, unemployment and urgent reforms, the paper said.

Milan's IL GIORNALE NUOVO said that it was not only the Socialists who had lost credibility with the man on the street as a result of the crisis, but all of the nation's political forces.

It seems that those within the "Palazzo" (that is, in the area of power) are unaware of the discredit being heaped on Italy's parliamentary system, which is not even truly parliamentary, but a system ruled by the party bosses -- a system more akin to the underworld techniques of the Mafia, the paper said.

Rome's MESSAGGERO said that Spadolini had explained to the head of state at the Quirinale Palace that in order to carry out his difficult economic policy he needed the same men at his side. The premier had emphasized the need to streamline government functioning and improve relations between the government and the Parliament, and picked a bi-cameral panel to draft the necessary institutional reforms, the paper said.

CORRIERE DELLA SERA said that for the first time the government placed men at the head of their ministries on condition that they complete the tasks they had begun.

In response to accusations of immobility, the new government might be able to boast continuity and efficiency, the paper said.

For the Communist daily L'UNITA, the government was put together once again by parties divvying up the power spots.

The disconcerting way in which the crisis was settled merely reflected the strange way it had begun, the paper added.

WARRANTS ISSUED FOR GUARDS OF RAIDED BARRACKS

AU221916 Rome ANSA in English 1852 GMT 22 Aug 82

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, August 22 -- Arrest warrants have been issued against the five airforce men who were supposed to be guarding a Rome barracks when Red Brigade commandos raided the radio building on the premises and made off with a score of automatic weapons and guns.

The Defense Ministry announced that the warrants were slapped against the airmen on Sunday.

In the meantime, anti-terrorism agents were continuing their investigation of the assault on the Castel di Decima Barracks, in Rome's outskirts, on August 19 and believed they had identified five of the six members of the commando group as Natalia Ligas, 24, Marina Petrella, Barbara Balzarni, Vittorio Bolognesi and Luigi Novelli.

L'UNITA REPORTS CEAUSESCU-PAJETTA COMMUNIQUE

[Text] Bucharest -- AGERPRES, Romania television and the Communist Party daily SCINTEIA have given great prominence to the communique on yesterday's meeting at the Snagov residence between President Nicolae Ceausescu and PCI Directorate member Comrade Gian Carlo Pajetta. The meeting was attended by RCP Central Committee Executive Committee candidate member Comrade Miu Dobrescu and PCI Central Committee member Comrade Gianni Giadresco.

Having expressed his thanks for and reciprocated the greetings and good wishes conveyed on behalf of [PCI Secretary General] Comrade Berlinguer and the PCI Directorate, Comrade Ceausescu had a broad exchange of viewpoints with Comrade Gian Carlo Pajetta on relations between the parties and on the principal international issues of the moment.

In this connection emphasis was placed on the complexity of the present world situation following the intensification of the policy of force and the acceleration of the arms race, the source of serious dangers and threats to peace and to the peoples' independence and sovereignty.

In this situation, the communique states, it is necessary for all states -- irrespective of their social and political systems -- and for the peoples and democratic political forces throughout the world to act steadfastly to halt international tension, to bring about the resumption of negotiation and detente, to promote a new policy of respect for the peoples' independence and for peaceful cooperation, to find a political solution for the current conflicts in the various parts of the world, and to eliminate the threat of force in interstate relations.

In the examination of the European situation emphasis was placed on the importance of the unity of all peace-loving forces in building a lasting system of security and cooperation on the continent, and the hope was expressed that, when it resumes, the Madrid conference can conclude with positive results so as to impart a new thrust to the implementation of the provisions of the Helsinki final act to achieve the convening of a conference on trust and disarmament and that the continuity of the CSCE conference be guaranteed.

It was agreed that the efforts of all the world's peoples must be directed at halting the arms race, disarmament -- primarily nuclear disarmament -- an end to the deployment of new medium-range missiles in Europe and the removal of those already deployed, which would help to reduce international tension by eliminating the threat looming over the people's lives and tranquillity.

With regard to the Middle East situation, emphasis was placed on the need to find a political solution to the Beirut conflict, for a military disengagement, to guarantee Lebanon's integrity and independence and for a solution to the Palestinian problem based on the right to self-determination -- including the creation of an independent Palestinian state -- for the recognition of the PLO and the establishment of relations of cooperation among all the states that will guarantee the integrity and independence of all the countries in thr region.

Emphasis was also placed on the need to end the Iran-Iraq war by means of the withdrawal of both sides' troops behind the borders that existed before the war and the starting of negotiations to resolve the existing controversies between the countries.

During the conversation, emphasis was also placed on the importance of continually strengthening cooperation and solidarity among communist, workers, socialist and social democratic parties in the spirit of mutual esteem and respect. Emphasis was also placed on every individual party's right to formulate its own policy line in accordance with each country's specific national and historical condition.

The meeting took place in the cordial and friendly atmosphere characteristic of relations between the RCP and PCI, and the desire was stated that such relations between the parties and between the Italian and Romanian peoples be extended and strengthened in the future in the interest of both peoples and the cause of peace, security and independence.

PCI OFFICIAL ON PRAGUE INVASION, SOCIALIST IDEAL

[Article by PCI Directorate member Aldo Tortorella: "Our Commitment To Uphold the Socialist Ideal and Keep It Alive"]

[Text] It was not a consoling statement with which Comrade Luigi Longo concluded the Central Committee's report on Czechoslovak events 14 years ago. "We know," Longo said, "that we have contributed and are now contributing, by our positions, our initiatives and our struggle, to upholding the socialist ideal and keeping it alive." Czechoslovakia was invaded the night of 20-21 August 1968 by troops from five Warsaw Pact countries a few days after a solemn meeting in which agreement between the Soviets and Czechoslovaks seemed to have been sealed. The Politburo immediately adopted a stance, followed 2 days later by the Directorate and 1 week later by the Central Committee: a stance -- as is known -- of dissent and condemnation. The debate in the party was fairly broad. It was the first time that such a clear and firm decision was taken: but it was possible to assert it -- and it was fully confirmed by the subsequent congress -- because it was the result of a long historical process and a lenghty development.

Despite everything, it was an extremely severe blow, even for comrades who had become more experienced through a longer and tougher period of militancy. But it immediately became clear that if the intention really was to "uphold the socialist ideal and keep it alive," not only was it impossible to accept the fait accompli and the accompanying explanations in any way but it was necessary to move on courageously and propose a different picture of internationalism and another meaning for the word socialism.

The very way in which the Italian Communists had felt it right to take sides during the Hungarian events did not mean passive acceptance. They had rejected the idea that the revolt could in a way be regarded as merely the effect of provocative machinations since no provocations could have met with that mass consensus unless there had been basic mistakes.

Nonetheless, on the one hand the war over the Suez Canal which was going on at the time aroused fears that imbalance was the main danger, hence fears of a general explosion. On the other hand, it seemed possible at that time to register that [Hungarian] tragedy as the conclusion of the historical chapter which the 20th CPSU congress had said it wished to close. Even though Togliatti -- alone among the major leaders of the communist movement -- had pointed out that the "personality cult" explanation was certainly not enough to account for the terrible events exposed by Khrushchev, there was still the very important self-critical courage and hope, therefore, of a new course, however tortuous, laborious and long it might be.

But when the military intervention in Prague unexpectedly took place, 12 years had already passed since the 20th Congress and the events in Hungary. Khrushchev had been replaced 4 years previously and many new hypotheses had come to an end. Certainly this did not only happen on one side. Kennedy had been assassinated and the war in Vietnam had flared up. The conciliatory pope had been succeeded by a more cautious one. However, the need for change could not be negated by the disappearance of those protagonists who had pointed to the urgent need for it and heralded it, albeit in different and conflicting ways. It was a year of great agitation, as people then said. It cannot honestly be said that the Italian Communists were inclined to support many of the ideas which were later to prove fragile and old fashioned. At most, some people criticized them for allowing themselves to be taken by surprise and for failing to guess what was developing over the course of time and generations. However, it is certain that they saw the need for positive responses to the demand and the need for change.

It was Longo, to be precise, who went to Prague that spring to show solidarity with an effort which was known to be difficult and opposed (as Longo too was opposed for first attempting dialogue with the young people in the student movements). The innovation lay in the fact that a communist party was leading its own people in the attempt to give a different face to a socialist-type society and state by making fundamental innovations.

That was why it was so important to oppose the stifling of that attempt. The first question of principle which the Italian Communists posed was that of the absolute defense of the autonomy and sovereignty of each state and each party. The idea of the leading state and leading party, which had already been rejected in solemn resolutions, was returning in practice. That position had to be reckoned with, by asserting and upholding the reasons for and legitimacy of the different lives and different conceptions of a possible socialism. Internationalism could not be restricted to solidarity -- which, however, had been comprehensible -- with a "socialist camp" identified with a military bloc and no longer with the parties of the third international matrix. A new internationalism called for much wider confines: In order to assert the cause of peace and detente, to demand less injustice in relations among men, it was necessary to have agreement among all the forces of peace and all the liberation forces.

At the same time, however, the problem of the unviability of a model conflicting with the actual situation which had been created was already emerging. That was the subject discussed by Togliatti in the Yalta memorandum and, before that, by the collective document on the 22d CPSU congress: the subject of socialist democracy. It was a question, Longo stressed, which the socialist-type societies ought to have faced and solved as "the condition, through the continued development of popular consensus and participation," of their very consolidation. But, at the same time, it was a decisive theme for the West's workers movement: to build "a socialist democratic society...which is pluralistic and rich in democratic ramifications which are neither centralizing nor dominated by bureaucracy...."

The facts themselves were to prove that the demand which the Italian Communists were then making corresponded to urgent needs. Of course, every country has its own history. Poland's history (and that of the Polish Workers Party) is quite different from that of Czechoslovakia. Therefore, although in the Polish events of 1956 hope had a communist name and was demonstrated with a sea of red flags, although in 1970 it still seemed -- although more tenuously -- as if the renewal could come from the ruling party, in 1980 the working class raised other symbols and followed other banners, and the signs which are again coming from Poland leave no doubt: The existence of mass opposition is very clear even though it contains different positions, but it is equally clear that it is not opposed by any visible ideological and moral force. It may be that in a given situation the army symbolizes a kind of national guarantee. But is it quite obvious that it is impossible to substitute force for politics and more especially for ideas. What might the outcome be in Poland? And what prospects are there in Czechoslovakia itself?

Certainly nothing could be more dangerous than new crusades, a new Manichaean spirit and portraying the countries which follow the Soviet model as the incarnation of evil. Detente is the main duty because peace is the supreme asset and because there cannot be development without security. At the same time, unless the very meaning of the word socialism is renewed or rediscovered there is no possible future for us. The identification of the state with the party has not only established traumatic conflict as the only possible way of renewal but has swept away the meaning of the party to the point (a point which can already be seen to have been reached in practice) of its disappearance. Leaving aside the leadership role and hegemony, the party becomes a public administration if the latter decays or crumbles. And if the very image of socialism is identified with a single model, that of the state-party which becomes the sole source of political, economic and social command, it is the very idea of socialism which is weakened with the decline of the single model. And the decline is inevitable as soon as the conditions of backwardness or extreme emergency which gave rise to and nurtured it are overcome.

Our concern for the fate of the European countries in which the first socialist-state experiments were carried out does not reflect a new form of Burocentrism. When having discussions with some comrades and some friends from other continents at a recent meeting, amid sincere respect for the Italian Communists, I heard this objection expressed by many: But are you not showing excessive emphasis? You should instead make a comparison with the massacre of the Palestinians, the thousands of people killed in El Salvador, the constant aggression against Nicaragua, fascism in Chile, the millions of human beings who starve to death, the endemic unemployment in the very metropolises -- the heart of developed capitalism....

But the answer is obvious: The man who precisely does not forget those infamies and wants to combat them feels an even stronger need to "uphold and keep alive" the socialist ideal. It would be a black day on which the Italian Communists too accepted the idea that, since all that it has been possible to achieve so far is socialism, it is better to give up. That would certainly not lead, as people on various sides think, to some kind of resounding support for the virtues of practicality but would merely lead to opportunist alignment with the status quo in our country. In that case we could certainly show cynical disinterest in the whole tragedy of the world, perhaps shedding a few appropriate tears.

Being realistic also means intending that socialism (the socialist idea, the first socialist revolutions, the socialist-type movement) is not the invention of thinkers or politicians, however great, but is seen as the sign of the exhaustion of other forms of organizing human relations. You just have to look at the most ordinary everyday problems (pensions, employment, wages...) to see that there are fundamental contradictions throughout the capitalist world. The question -- and it is practical -- is how to change, in what way and for what objectives. Anybody who says that the situation can be tackled without the idea of change has his head in the clouds (or, rather, is thinking only of his own interests).

Posing the question: "What kind of socialism?" does not mean paying tribute to other people's positions, ignoring the crises of the age in the name of your own independence or begging some kind of legitimacy from somebody. No. We know very well that other people, not we, must provide proof of real autonomy and real national capability. Raising the subject of a new socialism and a new internationalism is the duty of a force which does not wish to abandon the ground of the struggle for emancipation and human liberation, and it is a duty primarily to yourself.

Of course it is necessary to avoid what in our jargon is called "model building" and it is necessary to be able to live within a specific historical process, but since the events in Czechoslovakia, we have warned that there are "unrenounceable conditions" for that development (and the first is extending democracy), and that means that the elements of a different picture have already begun to be assembled. It should be noted that the mistake does not lie in building hypotheses (or theoretical models) but in denying the possibility of checking them and setting them up as dogmas: For instance, if the workers reject them then the workers, not the hypotheses, are set aside.

If anything, the criticism which might be leveled against us is not that we aimed too high but that we did not work fast enough on the task of the theoretical and practical rebuilding of the picture, not of a perfect society, but of the necessary changes (starting with those which are immediately possible). After the proclamation of martial law in Poland we completed another stretch of the path. Drawing conclusions from the fact and remembering what we had already said at the congress about the examination of individual mistakes and their repetition, we drew the general conclusions, making innovations in the analysis and view of the countries following the Soviet model and the socialist path which is now necessary. The facts show us that that step was right and that we must not stop, precisely because we cannot do without socialist ideals.

UCD'S LAVILLA INTERVIEWED ON PARTY'S PROBLEMS

[Interview with Union of Democratic Center (UCD) Chairman Landelino Lavilla by Miguel Angel Aguilar in Madrid -- date not given]

[Excerpt] Question: As UCD chairman since Tuesday 13 July, how do you interpret the course followed by your party since the 1979 election victory and, more recently, since the "critical" sector's operation prior to the February 1981 Palma de Mallorca congress?

Answer: To me, the political course followed by the UCD since 1979, as regards political and government activity, seems positive overall, since it has involved the launching and development of the democratic institutions envisaged in the Constitution. However, I must acknowledge that there have been faults and shortcomings which we are seeking to surmount in the new stage which has begun.

As regards the UCD's internal problems, it is clear that they could not be resolved, unfortunately, at the time by means of internal debate and agreement and with the necessary discipline. The Palma congress spuriously ended the conflicts existing in the party. The approach I adopted at that congress was aimed at beginning a process of regeneration and clarification of the party as a centrist option.

Subsequent events have demonstrated that party members, including some who supported my viewpoints at Palma, ignored their centrist commitment and went over to other political options. In any event, I intend to regard the splits as surmounted and work with all those who still believe, as I do, in a centrist political blueprint.

Question: The time which has elapsed makes it possible to consider in perspective the political evolution undergone by some of the principal champions of internal democracy in the UCD, who at that time were so close to you. What objective role do you now attribute to them in the process of demolishing the center which has become evident over the last few months?

Answer: There is no real correlation between championing internal democracy in the party and some people's political evolution toward the right. Internal democracy, proceeding from a clarified membership base and identified with the centrist blueprint, still seems to me an inescapable need. By internal democracy I mean effectiveness of political debate within the party, observance of majority decisions and respect for minorities, with external discipline at all events.

The political evolution of those people to whom you refer has no connection with their defense of internal democracy. I simply believe that they have changed their minds, since they have joined another party or set up a new party.

Of course, I can find no objective reasons for that change of mind. It is impossible to explain somebody's departure from the party by the UCD's simultaneous rightward and leftward shift. The contradiction inherent in calling for unity among like-minded elements in order to break with those with whom they had hitherto shared a joint blueprint is obvious. There must be another explanation, in connection with the proximity of the election and the expectations which it arouses.

Question: Adolfo Suarez and Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo's accounts of what happened at the trilateral meetings are contradictory. As the third participant, could you explain to us what were, in your opinion, the reasons, convictions or pressures expressed which brought about Calvo-Sotelo's known refusal to propose and support Adolfo Suarez' candidacy as his own. What were the real demands made by the former prime minister?

Answer: I already explained at the political council meeting that the three of us agreed that the situation required exceptional powers. There was no agreement that Adolfo Suarez should take over the chairmanship -- a takeover which he himself made dependent on its being proposed, supported and upheld by Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo.

Question: At your first press conference as UCD chairman, on the evening of your election, you asserted that you would like to enjoy Adolfo Suarez' support. At the launching of his Democratic and Social Center, Suarez was generous with praise of you and reiterated his best wishes for the task with which you have been entrusted in the UCD. Can some agreement, as was indicated in Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo's statements during an air journey and as the Toledo provincial committee has already requested, be considered? On what foundations could it be effected? Would it take effect before or after the election?

Answer: I expressed my desire to enjoy Adolfo Suarez' support, and I did so both out of political esteem and out of the personal esteem and affection which I feel for him. Adlofo Suarez' decision to undertake a political blueprint parallel to the UCD but outside the UCD seems to me a mistake. I can see no objective reasons for a separate blueprint.

In addition, and as you know, the UCD's line, approved by the political council, is to make no coalitions prior to the election.

Question: Do the unmistakable characteristics of religious confessionalism and the far from negligible relations with the power centers of the big banks attributed to you foreshadow any specific attitude on your part toward the de facto powers, which are perceptibly intent on wresting the primacy laid down in the 1978 Constitution from the political power?

Answer: What you term de facto powers, referring apparently to the church and the banks, are not seeking, in my opinion, to wrest from the political power its constitutional authority. My religious convictions confirm my commitment to democracy, as the system which best guarantees the dignity of the human individual. That commitment was expressed by me unambiguously in the speech which I delivered before the congress on 9 December last and which certainly clearly expresses my idea concerning the primacy of political power.

Question: Whereas the 1977 and 1979 elections were struggles waged in the center of the pitch, to use a soccer term -- the centrist right was trying to win votes from the Spanish Socialist Workers Party and the socialist left was trying to win votes from the UCD -- last May, the Popular Alliance and the Spanish Confederation of Employers' Organizations tried out a bipolarizing approach in Andalusia. Will the UCD opt preferentially for the right-left axes, in its coming campaign or will defense of the constitutional system of freedoms against the attempts to return us to authoritarianism take priority in its stances?

Answer: The UCD's great achievement has been to shape a political panorama, hitherto unknown in our difficult history, in which a majority sector of the voters could resist the traditional Spanish tendency toward extremism. But at the same time, a second, complementary, effect which strengthens the previous effect, has occurred: the center being occupied by a majority political force, organized in a genuine mass party, a centripetal tension has occurred in the leftwing and rightwing parties, attempting to extend their electoral borders precisely through the center and, consequently, creating approaches of progressive moderation. In my opinion, that is the most positive fact of this period -- a fact of a really historic dimension which no one may legitimately endanger in the name of electoral convenience or party interest.

From this viewpoint, the UCD, in confirming its centrist option, will attempt to avert, as far as lies within its power, the bipolarization of Spanish political life, which has had such a negative impact in the past on the stabilization of freedom and democracy in coexistence among the Spanish people. Within this approach our will to defend and maintain the Constitution in its entirety is clear.

Question: What plans do you have laid down for the UCD's regeneration? What are your forecasts concerning the Liberals who still remain in the UCD following Antonio Garrigues Walker's entry on the scene?

Answer: The UCD's regeneration requires an effort at all levels, conducted on the basis of a refined and clarified membership and aimed at a renewal both of the election platform and of personnel. All party bodies will work in this direction over the next few months. Our greatest concern today is to present a list of specific solutions to the problems worrying the Spanish people, surmounting once and for all the political class' excessive attention to its own problems. Our aim, I repeat, is to arouse the Spanish people's hope and confidence in their own capability for progress under firm leadership and with definite aims, which is what we seek to offer.

As far as the Liberals are concerned, my opinion is that their ideological contribution has been one of the UCD's essential components since its foundation, and forms part of our political heritage in everything concerning basic rights and public freedoms, the constitutional state and our idea of the parliamentary system and civil society's leading role in political action. However, I do not believe in the feasibility of an independent and separate Liberal blueprint, except one of a token and electorally marginal nature.

Question: You have asked for 6 months from your party, which end 13 January. With this timetable ahead of you, where would you tend to place the calling of an election, and on what foundtions do you deem possible agreements with other parliamentary forces, capable of guaranteeing the date chosen? How are the dangers of regression, which recently seem to be threatening, caused partly by government weakness, to be dispelled?

Answer: Maintaining at all costs a legislative term until its normal constitutional expiry is not in itself a virtue. What can be described as positive is that the conditions which make normal duration of legislative terms possible should exist. But when those conditions do not exist, the logical and advisable thing is to call a new election immediately to ensure explicitly the connection between the people's will and their parliamentary representation. I am now analyzing the possibility that conditions for continuing the legislative term exist, although, in my opinion, it is not possible to create those conditions artificially, on the basis, for instance, of short-term pacts or coalitions contrary to the parties' nature and confusing for their electorate. In my opinion, if this logic of parliamentary democracy is followed honestly, the system is consolidated. Moreover, I do not believe in real dangers of regression, or, even less, that they could result from government activity. However, it does not seem to me mistaken to believe that those who create instability in the established parties are not cooperating much in the consolidation of a democracy established precisely on the parties.

Question: The progressive right of the UCD was able to win democratic votes unambiguously in 1977 and 1979, and the moderate left of the Spanish Socialist Workers Party was voted for without scruples by a large number of Catholics. The conduct of both parties interacted in such a way that Spain became politically habitable. Do you regard that electoral profile of the UCD as valid for the next election, or do you deem preferable a clarification with the basic aim of preventing a socialist triumph at all costs?

Answer: The UCD's political message, characterized by its firm will to modernize Spanish society and its stance of moderation in political activity, constitutes a valid electoral profile for the next election. Our belief in freedoms and our desire to serve our fellow citizens' greatest possible progress and prosperity complete that profile.

We wish to compare our option before the electorate with the socialist option and with the conservative option, from which it clearly differs. But our option is not one of pure rejection of either but one of assertion of our convictions. I am not in favor of mere definitions through antagonism.

Question: The so-called natural majority, concerning which a strange triumphalism has been created, succeeded on 23 May in Andalusia in reducing the center right's election results to figures well below those secured by the UCD alone in 1979. What is your stance on this permanent proposal by Manuel Fraga?

Answer: In my opinion, the so-called natural majority is not a potential reality but a myth, in the sense that this word has in the social sciences. It projects the image of a fictitious and unattainable future which it connects with sentiments of specific social sectors to draw them into action. Those sentiments, undoubtedly existing in certain circles of Spanish society, are based on the belief that the Spanish people must necessarily align themselves in two single political sides -- right-left -- and that outside them there can be only ambiguity, confusion and lukewarmness. I profoundly disagree with the presuppositions of this approach, which are leveled directly against centrism's very foundations. Hence, paradoxically, this proposal, with the personal respect due to the man who made it, has had more destructive than constructive effects without, in my opinion, being able to create any real majority in practice.

SOCIALISTS' GUERRA REJECTS ELECTION PACTS

[Interview with Spanish Socialist Workers Party Deputy Secretary General Alfonso Guerra conducted by Fernando Jauregui]

[Excerpts] Madrid -- Question: Now that the "natural majority" claimed by [Popular Alliance leader] Mr Fraga and the "majority for change" cited by the Spanish Socialist Workers Party [PSOE] are being discussed as conflicting ideas, perhaps it would be useful to start by specifying the substance of the rather nebulous concept of the "majority for change."

Answer: We are witnessing a policy -- which I reject -- of presenting faits accomplis with regard to what the Socialist Party will or will not do. We believe that perhaps people in Spain do not know exactly what must be done, but that they do know what they want. They do not want a continuation of the present situation: People are tired of what the Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] has stood for in its various governments. They must be offered a new approach to political activity, to tackling problems, to discussion, to offering people the opportunity to participate and to informing the public... At present this need for change -- which is very clearly expressed in Andalusia -- is identified principally with the PSOE. If we win the elections, we do not want to monopolize government action. We would not want to monopolize it because our party had managed to win the elections: We would want this task of change to involve everyone who felt attracted to it. We do not want anybody with the intellectual capacity, the will and the sense of change to stay home because nobody has offered them participation. This has nothing to do with contesting the elections with one party or another. We will not contest the elections jointly with any other party; let this be absolutely clear: We will not make electoral pacts with anyone.

We will make no electoral pact with the Democratic Action Party, for instance. It is another matter if individuals support our idea who previously belonged to the UCD and who decided at some point -- not now, but previously -- to leave the party because they saw a regression in what they considered the center path. We will not inquire about the background of whoever wants to join this autonomous socialist plan.

Question: Perhaps it would be more interesting to hear you talk about postelection pacts than about preelection ones. For instance, what role would a party such as Adolfo Suarez' Democratic and Social Center play in such possible pacts?

Answer: Our plan is to obtain sufficient votes to enable us to govern without the need for any pacts. Though we are not so unrealistic that we are not studying other alternatives, our aim is to have no need to form pacts in parliament for numerical reasons.

Be that as it may, it is difficult to know at present with whom it will be possible to govern, because we do not know what will emerge from the center. The situation is becoming insane, with [UCD Chairman] Lavilla saying that the UCD is the center-center, which is like calling a product "coffee-coffee." At this rate, Suarez will claim to be the center-center-center.... Adolfo Suarez needs to seek a position that will set him apart from the UCD and has chosen one that is difficult to refute -- namely, that whoever wins, even if it is the PSOE -- and he took it upon himself to scare the Spanish public in 1979 with the possibility of a PSOE victory -- he will facilitate its task of government. From the electoral viewpoint, this position is an intelligent one, but it is unrelated to any conversations with us or to anything of that kind. Of course, I have not contemplated the possibility of an agreement between a group such as Suarez' and us immediately after the elections.

Question: Has the PSOE leadership contemplated a possible postelection pact with the UCD to set the "majority for change" against the "natural majority" preached by Fraga?

Answer: No. The fact is that the natural majority includes the UCD too. However, it is not now the natural majority but the natural minority. Or merely natural. It seems more natural for Messrs Lavilla [Popular Democratic Party leader], Oscar Alzaga, Herero de Minon and Fraga to be together than separate. However, they are not a majority: They will be in the minority. Probably this group will gel after, and not before the elections. It is almost inevitable.

Question: I would like you to talk to me about what might seem like three delicate points in the formulation of the socialist government program: first, the much debated issue of nationalizations; second, abortion; and third, military reform.

Answer: I cannot act as spokesman for our electoral program because it is being discussed right now and has to be ratified by the Federal Committee, so I can only state my personal opinion. With regard to nationalizations, there is a party committee studying the subject. A great deal has been said about it and the direction in which things are moving is well known. The term "nationalization" has been sanctified, which is something that Franco and the UCD have practised a great deal. It does not seem that there is right now a demand in the country that the economic situation be nationalized. Rather there seems to be a demand for a rationalization of everything that has been nationalized in this country, which is in a truly disastrous state. Anyone acquainted with the functioning of the National Institute of Industry organization and of that body's related enterprises will be truly alarmed, because it appears to have been determined by enemies of the public sector. A surgical scalpel must be brought to bear on the country's public sector, rather than extending it to some areas, such as energy.

As for abortion, it is a complex issue, but I do not know why it is always made part of election campaigns. Landelino Lavilla will raise it, having already stated that they will present a program of respect for life; it will be raised by the entrepreneurs, who have said that they will ask the PSOE what it thinks of abortion -- but of what interest is it to the entrepreneurs what we think about abortion? I have always said that nobody can be pro-abortion, but nobody can be essentially anti-abortion when there are 350,000 women every year in Spain who have abortions under subhuman conditions. Legal regulations must be introduced for this. But the regulations must emerge from government action rather than from an electoral debate.

With regard to changes in the military administration, we realize that the structure in this field is virtually untouched. It seems senseless to keep it so within a democratic system, so a reform must be examined with the military leaders directly involved. The UCD governments have done no more than to commit serious errors in this regard, such as the recent appointments, in which additional strength seems to have been given to those who not only do not incline toward the Constitution but who reject it. Or such as when one reads in the press that some of those involved in the 23 February attempted coup consider themselves "discriminated against" because they are in a certain prison rather than another.

It occurs to me that it is the other prisoners, crowded four to a cell -- and what cells -- who should feel discriminated against. The latter prisoners could suggest that all the prisons be decorated by Artespana, as the former gentlemen's prisons have been decorated. We regard all this as normal, whereas in a healthy country our laughter would reach the far ends of the earth. So many things must be changed: For instance, a country cannot organize its troops with a conception of an internal enemy; the conception must be of an external enemy. Moreover, the military administration must be a reflection of the civil administration, with the same structure of members, government, and so forth. These changes will benefit both the administered and the administrators.

Question: Has the PSOE sounded out the military with regard to how willingly it would accept a socialist electoral victory?

Answer: From a political viewpoint, this cannot even be considered. Whoever does so is relinquishing his rights. We are in a democratic system, in which the parties submit platforms and the people have the right to incline toward whichever platform they prefer. There cannot be a sector of the administration that rejects this. Such a political notion cannot exist, cannot be discussed.

Question: Nevertheless, we are told by someone of Adolfo Suarez' stature that there is a real threat of regression and that democracy has not been consolidated in Spain.

Answer: This is a way of setting himself apart from the UCD and from [Prime Minister] Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo. But of course it is true that democracy has not been consolidated, that it is fragile on account of several issues, such as terrorism, the economic crisis or attempts at regression -- which are always civilian. The right always kept quiet by saying that "the full weight of the law" will fall on criminals. But it does not fall on the powerful, who are carrying out the regression and who are civilians.

Question: Would the PSOE reopen the investigation into the civilian conspiracy behind the 23 February coup?

Answer: The PSOE does not need to reopen anything. The civilian conspiracy is active. There are people struggling against the democratic system, as can even be read in certain publications. When the democratic framework is abandoned, action must be taken. What if some newspaper is closed down? Obviously when somebody acts against the prevailing law, this law must act against that person, or against that newspaper.

Question: The employers accuse the PSOE of not having -- or at least of concealing -- an economic program. It is true that many people wonder how this country's economy would differ following a Socialist victory.

Answer: Even if we issued a million copies of our economic program to every leader of the Spanish Confederation of Employers Organizations, they would still level the same charge against us. Because it is they who are concealing our program: It is not in their interest to say that they are acquainted with it. But this is part of dialectics. As for the differences in the economy if we win, it is true that they are a certainty and that the cold reality of the facts is unchangeable. This is true, but it is not the whole truth. The problems, which are very difficult, are very difficult for everyone. We will be confronted with a situation of unemployment -- the UCD was faced with 700,000 unemployed, but we are now approaching the 2 million mark -- that is a serious problem for the UCD and will be so for the PSOE. But there are many other issues that can indeed be resolved, which are not so serious but which have not yet been resolved -- whether out of incompetence or because there was no desire to resolve them, I do not know.

Question: For instance?

Answer: There are many of them. Social security, for instance. There must be a reform of the social security system, which is not so difficult. Perhaps we cannot create an ideal model, but we can reduce the disaster. Another example is the law of incompatibilities, which the government always says is something trivial, which will not resolve the economic crisis: perhaps not, but it is of enormous importance in setting a morale example for the country. If serious incompatibilities occur....

Question: Some say that the reform and moralization of the public administration is the major challenge that the PSOE has set itself. What time scale have the Socialists set for reforming the administration.

Answer: The time scale which we set ourselves for all the reforms that we intend to carry out is that of the legislative term -- 4 years. Of course this includes short-term -- the famous 100 days -- medium-term and long-term measures. The reform of the administration will be difficult, but unless it is attempted how will it happen? If we set objectives of 100 percent change and achieve about 70 percent, we have achieved something, whereas the UCD has not even considered it, claiming that it would be like running into a brick wall.

Question: If the Socialists win the elections will there be a further drop in investments and a further increase in the outflow of capital? How will the PSOE control both phenomena?

Answer: This always exists, even when no change of government is expected. There are always people afraid of a socialist change. In the majority of cases this fear is entirely unfounded. There is no question of causing upheavals for anyone. But there is also a sector -- a very small one-- that does have reason to be afraid: those who adulterate oil or who establish fraudulent companies and then leave the country with the money. They do have reason to be afraid. Of course I have some ideas for preventing the outflow of capital, which would lose their effect if they were announced now. These ideas are difficult to implement but they are imaginative and unprecedented and could satisfy the people, and this is what matters.

PSOE'S GONZALEZ ON ELECTORAL TACTICS, PROGRAM

PM241511 Barcelona LA VANGUARDIA in Spanish 21 Aug 82 pp 3-4

[COVER-LA VANGUARDIA report on Spanish Socialist Workers Party Secretary General Felipe Gonzalez 20 August press conference in Madrid: "Felipe Gonzalez Confirms 'No' to Nationalizations"]

[Excerpt] Madrid -- No sooner had he set foot in Madrid on his return from a fortnight's visit to Latin America than Spanish Socialist Workers Party [PSOE] Secretary General Felipe Gonzalez confirmed that nationalizations are not included in the Socialists' government program.

Appearing very self-assured and optimistic regarding his party's chances in the general elections expected this fall, Felipe Gonzalez also advocated early elections ("because this legislative term is virtually finished and it would be absurd to continue it artificially"). Gonzalez also confirmed that the PSOE has no desire to present itself to the voters in a coalition but that it does not rule out postelection pacts "if we do not achieve an absolute majority in parliament."

"The vast majority of Spanish employers is not worried about nationalizations that a Socialist government might carry out because they know that this is not our desire," Felipe Gonzalez said at Barajas Airport yesterday. "Nevertheless, although it may seem paradoxical, some leaders of the Spanish Confederation of Employers' Organizations are in fact worried about non-nationalizations.... I insist that it is certain entrepreneurial leaders who are worried about our moderation."

"The task of change," Felipe Gonzalez said, discussing with confidence his chances of coming to power, "transcends the confines of the political parties themselves." He said that the UCD won the 1977 and 1979 elections among other reasons "because of a certain fear of or psychological resistance to passing from an authoritarian system to a Socialist alternative.... These fears have been surmounted and the voters have turned their attention to a moderate leftwing option, among other reasons because the limit of the UCD's capacity for change has been reached. I believe that this is why the PSOE should now be a fundamental element in the implementation of change."

At first he avoided giving his opinion of Suarez' Democratic and Social Center operation, adding that it was difficult for him to discuss the problems of restricted world politics because he prefers to discuss the country's overall problems, but he did go as far as to say that the "drain" from the ruling party "is creating a threat of the UCD's disappearnce, without it being clear what could take its place. This causes me no particular satisfaction, rather the contrary." "I am worried about bipolarization," Gonzalez said, referring to [UCD Chairman] Lavilla's speech: "It is another matter whether bipolarization is a good thing when the UCD occupies a predominant position or is entirely bad when this position is occupied by others."

He denied immediate contacts with the leader of the Democratic Action Party [PAD], the Social Democrat Fernandez Ordonez or any other political leaders. "The PSOE," Gonzalez said, "will not form any preelection pacts with any political party. It would be illogical for a majority Socialist force that has achieved good results now to relinquish [the chance of] presenting itself with an autonomous blueprint. Postelection pacts are another matter. If we do not achieve an absolute majority in parliament that enables us to form a majority government, we will have to resort to such pacts, because the present situation in Spain's democracy does not permit the existence of a majority minority [that is, largest minority] government that is obliged to shop around for the vote it needs to approve a series of laws. From the viewpoint of electoral tactics we cannot say with whom we would form a coalition, because it would favor some forces and jeopardize th lectoral chances of others."

He did admit the possibility of PAD members joining the Socialist lists as independents: "An agreement could be reached with Fernandez Ordonez, but not with his party as such. In the conversations prior to this operation, which has not yet been defined, we made it quite clear that our lists will be presented under the PSOE's name."

Cover [possible reference to new news agency] persisted with the same topic, asking whether the same could occur with Adolfo Suarez' group. "Frankly," Gonzalez replied, "it would not be the same: It would be much more difficult for the voters to understand. It would not be the same for me to appear at an electoral meeting with Fernandez Ordonez as it would with Adolfo Suarez."

"The legislative term must not be extended beyond the minimum necessary," he said, in connection with the expected early calling of elections. He specified that before dissolving parliament "the map of the autonomies should be completed -- one of the few tasks that have managed almost to reach a happy conclusion. It would be illogical to leave pending the approval of the last four communities still to be set up".

EXPERT WELCOMES SOVIET OIL-PROSPECTING MOVES

PM241541 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 21 Aug 82 p 2

[Foreign Affairs Institute researcher Arne Olav Brundtland article]

[Text] It is obvious that we are now about to see increased Soviet offshore activity in the Barents Sea. Approaches to Norwegian firms which could supply equipment for such activities indicate this. It goes without saying that these activities are guided by considerations of Soviet interests and Soviet planning. But there is nevertheless good reason to welcome the oil-prospecting activities in the Barents Sea from the viewpoint of Norwegian energy policy, too. Soviet activities in the Barents Sea will provide experience which in all probability will demystify the Soviet Russians' ideas of what offshore oil-prospecting activities are. This will have to be seen as also benefiting Norwegian activities in the undisputed Norwegian sector of the Barents Sea. It is possible that we will reach greater clarity in the oil policy debate so that oil-prospecting activities on our part of the contental shelf in the north can take place on the foundation of oil policy and not security policy. The Soviet tendency to be unwilling to accept anything new and untried will be less evident in offshore activities the more the Russians themselves gain experience in the Barents Sea.

It has been pointed out in the debate that Soviet offshore activities in the Barents Sea will also involve the risk of activities in the disputed section of the sea. This is a problem which cannot be dismissed. But it can also be assumed that increased Soviet activities in the north could contribute to a greater understanding of the benefits of reaching a clear agreement on a demarcation line in the area. In the last few years it was only when it proved to be necessary from the practical viewpoint that it has been possible to reach agreements with the Soviet Union in the north, and the agreements have not gone any further than practical requirements demanded.

The possible involvement of Norwegian firms in Soviet offshore activities in the Barents Sea has been seen by some as a risk, because this could increase the probability that the Soviet Union would commence activities in the disputed zone. This is an assumption which is hardly relevant since the Soviet Russians could acquire the offshore equipment they need to start up in the disputed zone from non-Norwegian firms. The drilling ships supplied by Finnish shipyards are well suited for investigation of the disputed.

What Norway sees as an understanding for mutual restraint in order not to further complicate the negotiations on the outstanding issues in the north is a purely political understanding. It is central to Norwegian-Soviet relations whether the Soviet Union acquires this or that type of offshore equipment. A possible Soviet violation of this understanding would be a signal that the policy of low tension in the north cannot continue. On the basis of general Soviet foreign policy considerations and of security policy considerations in particular there is little to indicate that the Soviet Union is interested in increasing tension in the north. But what is important now is that the question should not be affected by whether it should be Norwegian or other firms which supply equipment for Soviet use in the Barents Sea.

At present it is difficult to say in concrete terms what could come from the chances of deliveries for offshore activities. The government has indicated that purely commercial agreements are okay, but that it assumes the new OECD credit regulations, NATO regulations on the export of sensitive equipment and the eliminitations which could be imposed by Norwegian firms' manufacturing licenses will be followed.

We have grown used to the idea that Norwegian offshore technology leads in many areas. But we could find that important components in what are otherwise Norwegian-developed systems, such as concrete drilling platforms, are manufactured under the type of license which requires U.S. approval for export to third countries. If this turns out to be the case and export permission is not given, we can probably look forward to a debate on embargo policy, and this on a much more concrete basis than in the case of the present conflict between the EEC and the United States over supplies for the Siberia gas pipeline, which has little effect on us in the present situation.

The conflict surrounding the U.S. boycott of supplies for the gas pipeline is one of the most serious burdens on U.S.-European cohesion at present. The boycott is also being sharply criticized by U.S. businessmen, and an overwhelming majority of the House of Representatives Foreign Relations Committee has dissociated itself from it and pointed out that it does more damage to U.S. and Western interests than it does to the Soviet Union's. It is difficult to predict how long the boycott will remain in force. Reagan has shown that he can carry out sudden changes in policy if these prove to be necessary.

Nevertheless, the possibility of new Norwegian exports to the Soviet Union on normal commercial terms does raise the question of trade as a tool in policy toward East Europe. For a small country like Norway, which is vitally dependent on massive foreign trade, it is probably correct that no political limitations should be placed on commercial trade with foreign countries. Varying moods and attitudes in different countries with which we trade could make it difficult in the long term to regulate trade policy in accordance with the changing desirability of demonstrations of political wishes. Recognizing this also means recognizing that our ability to pursue a demonstrative foreign policy is also limited.

LABOR PARTY'S FORDE CITED ON POLAND VISIT

PM241607 Oslo ARBEIDERBLADET in Norwegian 21 Aug 82 p 17

[Interview with Labor Party Deputy Chairman Einar Forde; date and place not given]

[Text] "Tense and nervous" is how Einar Forde described the atmosphere in Warsaw. Yesterday a Norwegian Labor Party delegation returned from a visit to Hungary and Poland. His meeting with the harsh economic realities in Poland has made Forde doubt the aims of the economic sanction against the country. The delegation also included Labor Party International Committee Chairman Thorvald Stoltenberg and Oslo Labor Party Chairman Bjorn Tore Godal.

Forde described the day-long visit to the Polish capital as a day of unusually hard work. The delegation met Gen Wojciech Jaruzelski and Foreign Minister Stefan Olszowski. They also held talks with representatives of the Catholic Church and had a number of informal contacts.

"As much a politician as a military man" is how Forde described General Jaruzelski. During the talks he showed himself to be a very intelligent man, a Polish patriot and a soldier.

The picture the delegation painted of the economic situation in Poland is extremely gloomy. This year there has been a 20-percent drop in wages in real terms. Living standards are now at their 1972 level and half of all factories are still closed.

One of the concrete issues which the delegation wishes to raise in the near future is the question of the economic sanctions against Poland. Forde said that he could not see that the policy of sanctions against Poland had any reasonable point, but that, on the contrary, it is working in a direction detrimental to the countries in West Europe.

The delegation had no opportunity to meet members of Solidarity in Poland. But Forde stressed that it is difficult to see any normalization of the situation in Poland without Solidarity.

"With the impressions from Hungary fresh in my mind, however, I believe that any possible changes in Poland would take a very long time. They will not take place overnight, but will take many years," Forde said, adding that it now looks as if there will be some liberalization of news coverage from the country. One of the things mentioned was that Dag Halvorsen [ARBEIDERBLADET's correspondent, working from Vienna] will receive Polish accreditation.

One of the pleasing things the delegation had noted was that the Norwegian aid given to Poland was highly thought of as an effective form of aid.

"Something which has struck me is that we have perhaps spoken too little of the situation of political prisoners in Poland," Forde said, voicing the hope that in the future it would be possible to direct more attention to the plight of this group.

AFTENPOSTEN: DEFENSE BUDGET INCREASE NEEDED

[Editorial: "Priority to Defense"]

[Text] It is reasonable that every section of the national budget should be subjected to political evaluation -- an independent assessment against the background of the general economic situation, but in which other factors should also play a part. There must be careful discussion of each individual area of proposed spending. Now that several individuals have found reason to point out that this is also true of the defense budget, we find it difficult to understand why something so self-evident can give rise to full-page spreads in the newspapers. No one approves a budget running into billions without having discussed it first.

But it is just as evident that, even though differing views and assessments can be put forward, a responsible government will have little room for maneuver with the economic framework on which a credible defense force is dependent at all times. This is especially true of the present government, formed from a party with clear political commitments in this very area.

It goes without saying that defense credibility is not necessarily connected with percentages. The differences between a 3, 3.5 or 4 percent increase in the defense budget -- the current subject of discussion -- are very small seen in relation to the total sums placed at the defense forces' disposal. Perhaps after closer examination it will be possible to get "more defense" out of the funds already granted. However, an analysis of the defense and security policy situation shows clearly that other considerations weigh much more heavily. In an overall assessment the decisive factor is this -- Norwegian defenses are today suffering from such serious shortcomings that it would be directly irresponsible of the government not to take the necessary steps, and all the more so, since the governing party's spokesmen have in the past provided persuasive arguments in support of increased defense efforts. And as far as AFTENPOSTEN's information indicates, the government has also reached the conclusion that a 4-percent increase in the defense budget should be proposed -- in accordance with the commitments the Conservative Party has made in the past.

We note with pleasure that the government is in this way helping to remove every shadow of doubt or uncertainty attached to the priority given to defense. The government's position is also a logical extension of NATO strength targets for the period 1983-88 with greater importance attached to improving the most serious shortcomings in the NATO nations' conventional defenses, and thus raising the nuclear threshold. Achieving these strength targets will require a 4-percent real term increase in annual defense budgets for the whole alliance throughout the 6-year period.

Such increases seem unavoidable given the calls that are being made for raising the nuclear threshold. Here we agree with Lt Gen Tonne Huitfeldt, NATO's international staff chief, who said in a speech the other evening: "It is difficult to voice anxiety that nuclear arms could be used on the one hand and not do what is necessary to prevent their use on the other."

Because of omissions, delays and cuts in the NATO nations' defense programs in a period of determined Soviet military buildup, military chiefs with NATO are concerned that their conventional defense could only have the effects of a delayed tripwire and that they will be forced into the early use of nuclear arms. The desire to strengthen conventional defenses should be assessed against this realistic background.

SFRY'S STAMBOLIC ARRIVES, MEETS WITH KIPRIANOU

[Text] Mr Stambolic, president of the presidency of Yugoslavia, who arrived in Cyprus today for a 3-day official visit, had talks with President Kiprianou on the Cyprus problem and on other international issues, on questions concerning the Nonaligned Movement and on the further promotion of Cypriot-Yugoslav cooperation.

The talks between the two leaders opened with a private meeting. This was followed by a broader conference with the participation of the foreign ministers of the two countries, Rolandhis and Mojsov, and of other officials from both sides.

In the afternoon the Yugoslav president received at the presidential mansion the heads of foreign diplomatic missions in Cyprus. Earlier he received and had talks with Mr Qaddumi, head of the PLO Political Department. During this meeting as well as during the one with the foreign diplomats, Yugoslav Federal Secretary for Foreign Affairs Mojsov was also present.

Meets With Qaddumi

[Text] In Nicosia, Brother Abu al-Lutf [Faruq Qaddumi], chairman of the PLO Political Department, yesterday met with Cypriot President Spiros Kiprianou and President of the Presidency of Yugoslavia [Petar Stambolic], who is currently visiting Cyprus. He discussed with him [presumably the Yugoslav president] the developments in the current situation in Lebanon. The Yugoslav president affirmed that his country -- people and government -- support the Palestinian revolution to restore the national rights of the Palestinian people on their land. He said: Yugoslavia will not spare any efforts, through the Nonaligned Movement, on all international levels and in the United Nations, to support the Palestinian issue and to provide help to the PLO in all domains.

The Yugoslav president has given Brother Abu al-Lutf a letter of appreciation to Brother Abu 'Ammar [Yasir 'Arafat] for the heroic struggle of the Palestinian people in the face of the Zionist onslaught. He also extended an official invitation to Brother Abu 'Ammar to visit Yugoslavia a time convenient for him.

Stambolic, Mojsov Decorated

[Text] During a special ceremony at the presidential mansion tonight, President Kiprianou decorated Yugoslav President Stambolic with the Grand Necklace of Makarios III and Federal Secretary for Foreign Affairs Mojsov with the Grand Cross of Makarios III.

In his address, President Kiprianou said he was conferring this decoration as an expression of great respect for Mr Stambolic himself and for the people of his country, for his struggles at the side of Marshal Tito both for the reconstruction of Yugoslavia and for the promotion of the nonaligned policy, and for the great interest which the Yugoslav president has been taking in Cyprus and the vindication of the Cypriot people.

The president of the republic extolled the relations between Cyprus and Yugoslavia, founded by the two great personalities, Makarios and Marshal Tito, whose task we have a duty to continue. President Kiprianou stressed that mankind is living in difficult times and that it is time for the Nonaligned Movement to be more decisive and to play a substantive role in diverting the dangers threatening mankind, and creating conditions of detente and a better climate for the solution of problems based on the principles of the Charter of the United Nations and of the Nonaligned Movement.

President Kiprianou then praised Federal Secretary for Foreign Affairs Mojsov and his contribution both to the United Nations and to other international organizations for the promotion of international peace and security and the principles of the Nonaligned Movement.

Receiving the decoration, Yugoslav President Stambolic said the decoration is an expression of the friendly relations between the two countries and their people. Stambolic then paid tribute to the work of Ethnarch Makarios and Marshal Tito in founding the good relations between the two countries.

Referring to the international situation, Stambolic said it is necessary for the two countries to jointly develop activities for the promotion of equal relations among the peoples. The Yugoslav president then decorated Foreign Minister Rolandhis with the Yugoslav Star with stripes, for his contribution to the development of relations between the two countries and to the struggle for strengthening the Nonaligned Movement. Mr Stambolic had decorated Mr Kiprianou during his visit to Yugoslavia with the highest order of the Grand Yugoslav Star with stripes.

DENKTAS ASKS GOBBI TO REMOVE ARMS FROM SOUTH

[Text] President Rauf Denktas has asked the UN secretary general's special envoy in Cyprus, Hugo Gobbi, to remove, as soon as possible, all the weapons and military equipment brought from Lebanon and left in southern Cyprus. Denktas invited Gobbi to his office today and conferred with him for some time.

In a statement he made after the meeting, President Denktas said: We discussed the issue of the weapons and military equipment brought from Lebanon and left in southern Cyprus. We asked the United Nations to do what is necessary to remove these from the island as soon as possible. We are justified in our demand and we will insist on it. We want to believe that the United Nations will fulfill its duties regarding this issue as soon as possible.

President Denktas also said that he drew Gobbi's attention to the issue of a cooperation between the Greek Cypriot administration and the Armenians. Denktas added: I drew his attention to the developments in southern Cyprus regarding the Armenians.

We have reliable information in our hands. I gave it to him and I asked him to draw the attention of the Greek Cypriot administration regarding this issue. If the Greek Cypriot administration does not prevent the developments regarding the Armenians and if it continues to make it possible for the Armenians to train terrorists there, this will lead to serious developments from all angles.

President Denktas noted that they also discussed with Gobbi the Cyprus question, about which the Greek Cypriots decided to apply to the United Nations. He concluded by saying, I believe that we share the view that there is progress in the intercommunal talks. Everybody knows the harm to be caused to the talks by this appeal to the United Nations by the Greek Cypriots. I explained our views on the matter to Mr Gobbi once again.

NEW COMMANDER APPOINTED TO TURKISH FORCES

[Text] Lefkosa, 24 Aug (AA) -- Brigadier General Hikmet Koksal took over Tuesday as commander of the Turkish Cypriot Security Forces.

President of the Turkish Federated State Rauf Denktas, speaking at the ceremony where Gen. Koksal took over from outgoing commander Brig. Gen. Kemal Yavuz, noted that the raison d'etre of the security forces was to ensure the existence of the Turkish Cypriot community in peace.

TERCUMAN CLAIMS BOMB ATTACKS IN NORTH FOILED

[Text] Lefkosa [Nicosia] (AKAJANS) -- It has been reported that a terrorist organization set up in the Greek sector of Cyprus was planning to launch bomb attacks on various vital establishments in the TFSC but that the Greek Cypriot police has detected and foiled this in time.

Giving evidence before the court on a terrorist organization set up in the Greek Cypriot sector of the island, a Greek Cypriot assistant commissioner of police stated that this terrorist organization, whose name he did not mention, was planning to launch bomb attacks on vital establishments in the Turkish Cypriot sector, preparing the ground for devastating the sector of the island which has remained in the hands of the Turkish Cypriots.

In his statement before the court, Assistant Police Commissioner Fanis Dimitrio testified that this plan was detected and foiled by the Greek Cypriot police in time.

On the other hand, it has been argued that Lebanese and Palestinian convicts have been secretly released from prisons of the Greek Cypriot administration.

ASSEMBLY ADOPTS ARTICLE ON ESTABLISHING UNIONS

[Text] The Consultative Assembly has adopted the draft constitution's 55th article, titled "The Right To Establish Unions." Under the article, adopted in this morning's session, workers and employers have the right to establish, without prior permission, trade unions and confederations of unions with a view to protecting and expanding the members' economic and social rights and benefits in their labor relations. Workers and employers are free to become members or to resign their membership and they cannot be forced to remain members or to resign from membership. Workers and employers cannot be members of more than one union simultaneously. The article also stipulates that the bylaws, administration and operation of the unions and their confederations may not conflict with democratic principles.

After adopting Article 55, the Consultative Assembly began to debate Article 56 on union activities. The debate was continuing when this news bulletin was prepared.

[Text] Ankara, 24 Aug (AA) -- Turkey has asked the Iranian Government to take the necessary measures to prevent the repetition of recent cases of obstruction against Turkey truck drivers carrying goods to Iran and seizure of their load.

The request was made through the Turkish ambassador in Tehran, Foreign Ministry officials in Ankara said, and Iranian authorities promised to take the necessary precautions.

LIBYA TO PAY DEBTS IN OIL: CONTRACTS REINSTATED

TA241647 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1555 GMT 24 Aug 82

[Text] Ankara, 24 Aug (AA) -- Libya has agreed to pay in oil its debts to Turkish contractors, exporters and workers which total around 150 million dollars.

In talks between a Libyan trade mission and (?officials) in Ankara, agreement in principle was reached on the importation by Turkey of 2 million tons of high-quality Libyan petroleum.

Energy and Natural Resources Minister Fahir Ilkel will be going to Libya soon to discuss the details of the agreement, such as price and shipments.

Libya has also decided to re-order 18 million dollars worth of import contracts with Turkey which it had cancelled earlier.

TRANSPORTATION OF AFGHAN REFUGEES CONCLUDED

[Text] The transportation of Afghan refugees of Turkish origin from Pakistan to Turkey has been concluded. The last convoy of 335 refugees, which arrived in Adana last night, was sent to its temporary center of residence.

The president of the interministerial committee on Afghan refugees, Kemal Yalcin, told Turkish Radio and Television that 3,806 refugees to be settled and another 21 free refugees were brought to Turkey aboard a total of 12 flights. Yalcin said that the refugees have been settled temporarily in empty public buildings or with their relatives in provinces where they will be permanently settled. The refugees were settled temporarily in Tokat, Kirsehir, Sivas, Gaziantep, Hatay, Urfa, Diyarbakir, Kayseri, Van, and Malatya. The refugees' permanent residences will be completed by 29 October 1982.

Meanwhile, the relevant ministries and organizations are continuing work in order to render the Afghan refugees productive as soon as possible. The refugees will be paid 4,000 Turkish lira monthly and 2,000 Turkish lira for children younger than 7 until they become productive.

MINISTRY REITERATES POSITION ON PIPELINE EMBARGO

[Excerpts] Bonn, 25 Aug (DPA) -- The Federal Economics Ministry has given moral support against the U.S. embargo to the turbine construction firm and AEG subsidiary, Kanis, as well as other firms participating in the European-Soviet natural gas pipeline project. A spokesman of the Federal economics Ministry said in response to questions on Wednesday that State Secretary Dieter von Wuerzen had expressly explained again the position of the Federal Government on the natural gas pipeline project in a 20 August letter to various firms. This repeated previous criticism of U.S. President Reagan's embargo policy.

The spokesman added that although the firms concerned have not been asked directly to complete the orders for the USSR that have been started, the letter could be considered an indirect recommendation.

BRANDT CRITICIZES PENTAGON NUCLEAR WAR STUDY

LD251332 Hamburg DPA in German 1253 GMT 25 Aug 82

[Text] Frankfurt, 25 Aug (DPA) -- SPD leader Willy Brandt today sharply condemned the U.S. Defense Department study on the possibility of winning a nuclear war with the Soviet Union. Such considerations are ghoulish, Brandt said in FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU (Thursday edition). On the occasion of the publication of the German version of the final report of the Palme Commission report on mutual security, Brandt said: "While the United States requests high government departments to think about how a nuclear war could be waged over 6 months and still won," the report of the commission states forcibly and clearly the consequences a nuclear war would have today.

FRG-GDR TRADE FIGURES FOR FIRST HALF OF 1982

[Text] Berlin, 24 Aug (DPA) -- Intra-German trade increased by 14 percent during the first 6 months of this year in comparison with the same period in 1981. Turnover increased by slightly more than 800 million clearing units (CU) to 6.8 billion CU (1 CU equals 1 DM), according to the Federal Economics Ministry report issued on Wednesday. The total increase for all of 1981 was six percent to 12.5 billion CU. GDR deliveries to the FRG rose by 15 percent or 452 million to more than 3.5 billion CU. Its imports from the FRG increased by 13 percent or 366 million CU to nearly 3.25 billion, thus gaining a surplus of 278 million CU. The surplus in goods, not including services, was 468 million CU. Thus its accumulated trade deficit with the FRG, including the use of the interest-free overdraft facility (Swing), sank to less than 3.4 billion CU in the first half of the year, as compared to 3.65 billion CU at the end of 1981. The GDR has clearly concentrated on intra-German trade because of its foreign exchange difficulties.

GDR imports from the FRG increased particularly in agricultural products. Here a figure of 334 million CU was reached, an increase of 132 million CU or 65 percent over the same period the previous year. Another reason for this development is that, for the first time in a long time, the GDR bought grain from the FRG -- 200,000 tons, worth 100 million CU. In addition, there were purchases of feed worth about 45 million CU. There was also a 35 percent increase in GDR purchases of crude oil from the FRG, amounting to nearly 439 million CU. Early purchasing might also play a role in this. In nonferrous metals a strong increase of 58 percent, to 223 million CU, was achieved. The most important GDR exports to the FRG were crude oil products worth 931 million CU, an increase of 16 percent in the first 6 months. There was an above-average increase of 26 percent, to 407 million CU, in chemical products. GDR exports of agricultural products, on the other hand, increased by only eight percent to 370 million CU, which is obviously also a result of the growing economic problems in the GDR. GDR iron and steel exports to the FRG even fell by five percent and only managed to reach 122 million CU.

FINLAND, USSR DISCUSS ENERGY COOPERATION

[Text] Oil-refining cooperation is one of the new projects proposed by the Finnish-Soviet cooperation commission's energy group. On Friday [20 August] the energy group wound up its sixth meeting, which was held in Helsinki. The protocol from the meeting points to the possibility of refining Soviet crude oil in Finland for subsequent dispatch to third countries.

The cooperation on refining would be arranged so that the Soviet Union would buy capacity from Neste [Finnish state oil company]. At present Neste has an overcapacity of around 1 million tons per year at its refineries. There have already been discussions between Neste and Soviet bodies. The intention is that oil would be collected from the Soviet Union or elsewhere and that the refined product would then be forwarded to third countries. The possibility of getting such a project going is at present quite small given the low price of oil products. But when prices gradually improve this type of cooperation will receive priority.

The cooperation commission's energy group was chaired this time by Director Erkki Vaara from the Trade and Industry Ministry. The Soviet delegation's leader was N.A. Lopatin. The group will next meet in September in Georgia. In the context of the oil question the possibility of transporting Soviet oil products to third countries via Finland was also discussed.

According to Director Vaara the energy group is now striving to give the proposals a more concrete form. It is intended that the ideas for cooperation on which agreement has been reached should be further worked on by various expert groups. As far as fuel questions are concerned, the Finnish delegation said that Finland is prepared to increase its imports of natural gas. Deputy Minister Lopatin said that at present Finland imports around 700 cubic meters of gas [figure as published] annually while past agreements have spoken of imports totalling 1 billion cubic meters. The Soviet Union hopes that Finland will be able to increase its imports so that the agreements can be fulfilled. Director Vaara said that a study of the best ways to extend the natural gas network was being conducted. The trade and Industry Ministry has a working group which is investigating the question. The working group is to present its report before the end of the year.

The nuclear power question is still being investigated, even though Finland has not yet reached any final decision on the matter -- the building of a new 1,000 megawatt nuclear power station. Next Monday [23 August] the Trade and Industry Ministry will publish a technical-economic study which has been conducted by a firm of Swiss consultants. Lopatin said that the Soviet Union has no doubts about the construction of nuclear power stations. They are the cheapest alternative. Coal-fired power stations are only economical in locations with local access to coal and where coal deposits will last for at least 100 years. He also pointed out that the Soviet Union is prepared to give Finland all the information it has on the problems concerning nuclear power.

The energy group's protocol also states that the two countries will in future be more determined than in the past in their search for regions in the world where they could cooperate in the delivery of nuclear, geothermal and hydroelectric power stations. They will also investigate the possibility of cooperation on electrification projects in developing countries.

The Soviet delegation also expressed its interest in Finnish equipment and technology for energy saving. Current cooperation projects include automatic heating plants, the exploitation of solar energy, the use of heat pumps, a reduction of waste in the electricity network and energy saving in the oil-refining industry. The group's members also described the supply of hydroelectric power stations to the developing countries as a promising new market area.

PLO SPOKESMAN ON UK ATTITUDE TOWARD PALESTINIANS

LD251608 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1455 GMT 25 Aug 82

[Text] Britain should give practical backing to its statements on the Middle East during the Lebanon crisis, a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organisation said in London today. Mr Khalid al-Hassan, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Palestine National Council, told a press conference that the PLO appreciated the change in Britain's attitude during the crisis. Britain now talked about the right of the Palestinians to have a homeland.

"But we want to see practical action, not just announcements. If this is a real change it must be connected with practical acts." And Mr al-Hassan suggested that Britain should recognise the PLO and deal directly with it.

The main danger after the Lebanon crisis was a political vacuum. The PLO wanted to see a political solution but had the means to act by force if necessary.

"I hope there will be no need to return to the type of violence of the 1960s. If the Palestinians get the right to self-determination and an independent state there will be no need for violence or war."

Asked how the Palestinians would fight, he replied: "There are so many ways to fight -- underground fighting, open fighting -- I do not know how it is going to happen."

Asked if the violence would be confined to the Middle East or if it might spread to Western Europe, Mr al-Hassan said: "We do not call our acts violence, we call it struggle. We must struggle against our enemy.

"I do not mean any kind of terrorist acts, if that is what is in your mind. It is our national struggle -- it is our right to use any means of struggle when peaceful means are not available."

Mr al-Hassan said the PLO had now to consider whether it would establish a government in exile. He did not think its activities would be restricted by the Arab countries in which PLO members were settling, and claimed that Arab peoples were "dissatisfied" with the way the Arab regime behaved in the last two or three months. "They were very important", he said.

CONSULATE-GENERAL IN SHANGHAI TO BE REOPENED

[By Tom McMullan, PA diplomatic correspondent]

[Text] Britain is to re-open its consulate-general in Shanghai, the Foreign Office said today. This follows negotiations with the Chinese Government under which China will open a consulate-general in Britain in a city to be decided. Negotiations are still in progress but there is a possibility that Britain's new consul-general will be in office by the time Mrs Thatcher reaches China next month on a visit.

Britain's last consulate-general in Shanghai was closed in 1967 during the cultural revolution when the local authority took over the building.

Today's announcement reflects increasing trade contacts between Britain and China. There is a small British community in Shanghai and with China's new approach to the West the number of British traders has been growing. The Foreign Office said that Britain was conscious of the need for greater export promotion in China.

KIPRIANOU ADDRESSES STAMBOLIC AT STATE DINNER

[Text] Mr. President, I should first of all like to welcome once again to Cyprus, you, your wife and your retinue. Your visit to Cyprus, in response to my invitation, is an indication and proof of your interest in Cyprus and at the same time a proof of your desire to further strengthen the ties between our two countries. The friendship and cooperation between our two countries and peoples was founded by our two great leaders, Tito and Makarios, who, besides laying the framework for a close friendship and cooperation between us, made history by their contribution to the cause of world peace and understanding, their contribution to their countries and peoples and the establishment of the Non-aligned Movement, which was destined to survive and play an important role in international affairs.

I have no doubt whatsoever that your visit to Cyprus will contribute to the further strengthening of the ties between our two countries and our cooperation in all fields without exception.

Humanity, Mr. President, is today going through a critical period. Besides the various problems existing in many parts of the world, lately there has been a general revival of tension. And nobody can claim that detente, which prevailed for some time, exists today. Political antagonisms are heightening and military armaments are increasing in a general atmosphere of acrimony, while unprecedented cases of violation of international principles occur in various parts of the world. A recent example is the Israeli invasion of Lebanon which was carried out with unusual barbarity at the expense of the Lebanese people and the Palestinian fighters.

Apart from these, there continue to exist also local wars, such as the war between Iran and Iraq, two countries belonging to the non-aligned world. There exist also many other international problems which do not seem to be nearing a solution. The international situation is generally explosive and dangerous. I, therefore, firmly believe that now more than ever there is need for the reactivation of the Non-aligned Movement, which may not have material power, but possesses enormous moral and political power, especially when it acts decisively and in conditions of unity. I hope that the forthcoming non-aligned summit will prove to be a historical landmark both for the Non-aligned Movement itself and for the contribution it will be able to make to the cause of peace and detente and the facing of internatioanl problems.

As is well-known, the Cyprus problem is among the problems which remain unresolved. At this point I should like to express the gratitude of the people and the Government of Cyprus for the support and solidarity which Yugoslavia has been giving to the Cyprus people who are struggling for freedom. Yugoslavia has shown dedication and faith in the ideals of non-alignment, the principles of the United Nations Charter and the human rights declarations. It has shown dedication and faith in the principles contained in the Helsinki final act which should always govern relations between states.

Mr. President, eight years have gone by since Cyprus has fallen victim of the Turkish invasion and no meaningful progress has been achieved so far toward a solution to the Cyprus problem. Despite the repeated UN resolutions, for the adoption of which Yugoslavia has played a leading role, a large part of Cyprus continues to be occupied by Turkish troops. One third of our people continue to be uprooted from their homes, while we are still trying to ascertain the fate of missing Cypriots.

In the free areas of Cyprus we have tried to do as much rebuilding as possible, but lasting peace and prosperity of all the Cyprus people lie in conditions of absolute freedom and unity. Our targets are immutable and cannot be but the withdrawal of the occupation troops, the return of the refugees to their homes, the complete independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity and unity of the island and a demilitarised and non-aligned Cyprus.

Regarding the internal aspect of the Cyprus problem, for which the intercommunal dialogue is being carried out, we have accepted federation. This, however, does not in any way mean that it would be possible for us ever to accept a solution of partition or division of any kind, or a solution which would divide Greeks from Turks on a racial basis. I repeat that the happiness of the people of Cyprus lies in the unity of the state and the people and the safeguarding of the inalienable rights of all citizens. We shall continue our efforts with a view to attaining our targets.

Upon the completion of the present phase of the dialogue and without denouncing the dialogue procedure, we shall call for a debate of the Cyprus problem in the UN General Assembly for we have to tell the world community what the situation is, who is responsible for the lack of progress, and to prove that there can be no progress unless Turkey abandons its expansionist and partitionist designs.

I believe that, despite the existence of many international problems, it would be a big mistake to underestimate the gravity of the Cyprus problem, for a bad solution to the problem, contrary to justice, or an indefinite prolongation of the present situation could lead to a new conflagration. Therefore, the Cyprus problem is a permanent threat to peace and security, particularly in this very sensitive area of the world. There must be an end to the Turkish occupation and foreign interventions.

I firmly believe that with a solution such as the one delineated by the UN resolutions and the high level agreements, Cyprus can prosper and become a bridge of understanding and friendship between three continents. Irrespective of difficulties our struggle will continue with determination. It is high time everyone was convinced that prolongation of problems, such as the Cyprus problem, serves no purpose, but on the contrary creates additional and greater dangers. Those on whom Turkey is entirely dependent must become aware of their responsibilities and their obligation to exercise their influence on Turkey. The drama of Cyprus, the struggle of the Palestinian people to regain their rights and to establish an independent Palestinian state, which we fully support, the Iran-Iraq dispute, other causes of conflagration and generally the international situation, as it appears today, necessitate the mobilization of the Non-aligned Movement to the greatest possible degree. Your country and Cyprus, together with Malta, as non-aligned countries, as well as the neutral countries of Europe, have tried, within the Madrid conference, to play a constructive role. This has been appreciated. Despite all efforts, however, nothing much has been achieved. Fortunately efforts are continuing, for the Madrid conference must bring results if the Helsinki final act is to have any substantial meaning.

Our countries are closely linked both within and outside the Non-aligned Movement. I am convinced that this cooperation will become even closer. Above all we have a duty to fulfill the visions of the founders of the Non-aligned Movement and to promote the goals and principles of the movement. At this moment, this appears to be a historical need and a historical duty.

Regarding our bilateral relations, Mr. President, they are at a very good level. However, there is always room for further improvement. I am convinced that your presence here and our talks will contribute to the further development of our cooperation in all fields. I hope that during your stay in Cyprus you will feel and see the sentiments of true friendship of the Cyprus people and their leadership towards the people of Yugoslavia and their leadership. We have a duty to continue the course which has been charted by Tito and Makarios, and which has linked our countries and peoples so closely, for the good of our countries and peoples, for the good of world peace and security, for the good of freedom and justice all over the world.

I once again express our gratitude for the support of your country, Mr. President, and for your keen personal interest, which I noticed this afternoon during our talks, and which I never doubted.

I once again welcome you to Cyprus, and invite everyone to drink to your health and that of Mrs Stambolic, the well-being and progress of the Yugoslav people, the friendship and cooperation between our two countries and to the success of our efforts to create a better world, as envisaged in the principles and ideals of the Non-Aligned Movement.

Stambolic Dinner Speech

[Text] Mr President, Madame Kiprianou, Dear friends.

I wish to thank you most sincerely for the warm words of welcome and for your cordial hospitality accorded to us since we set our foot on the soil of this lovely country, friendly Cyrpus.

Mr President, I am very pleased to have this opportunity to meet you and to visit your country which we in Yugoslavia have always regarded as a true friend. This friendship dates back to the days when Cyprus attained its independence, ever since the first meetings between the two outstanding personalities of your history and ours, the architects of the policy of nonalignment, President Tito and Makarios. These meetings have provided lasting foundations to our friendship, such as mutual respect, confidence and understanding. Today, in our mutual relations, we cherish these achievements, trying to promote them further by joint endeavours.

It is for these reasons that the Presidency of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia attaches great importance to the present visit. For us this is another confirmation of the fact that our Cypriot friends are anxious, as we are, to see our relations even stronger and our cooperation more diversified. Today, in the context of mutual relations between countries, such aspirations are of inestimable value. Therefore, this meeting affords us an opportunity to review our bilateral cooperation so far, particularly in the economic field, and to find out what we could do so that it becomes a true reflection of our responsibilities and needs. For us this is even more important, since we are linked by our geographical position and our destiny in a region which could not remain outside major world developments.

Mr President, we are deeply concerned, just as you are, over the current international situation which, in many respects, has the characteristics of an acute crisis. Productive and creative energies of a number of peoples and countries are being wasted in a multitude of wars waged in the world today. We are witnesses to a senseless stockpiling of weapons. While the blocs and great powers are competing by using all available means, a large part of mankind is ever more seriously affected by inequitable relations, particularly in the economic field. On the other hand, international institutions concerned with cooperation and safeguarding of peace are less and less effective in bringing about the reopening of the avenues of agreement and the starting of talks on the essential interests of mankind, with the participation of all. In our opinion, these are the consequences of imposing the bloc concept of international security, a concept which did not and cannot bring peace and stability to the world.

Yugoslavia and Cyprus, as European countries, are vitally interested in the strengthening of confidence, security and unhampered cooperation of our continent and, thereby, in the world at large. This also emanates from their international position and the essence of their commitment to the policy of nonalignment. Our two countries attach exceptional importance to the resumption of the Madrid meeting of the CSCE, since it is in the continuation of the spirit of Helsinki that we see the road leading to a stable and secure development of the countries of Europe and the Mediterranean -- regions of the largest military arsenals of the great powers and blocs.

Mr President, most closely related to these questions are the complex circumstances still prevailing in your country. We share the concern of many countries over the fact that no meaningful headway has been made towards resolving the Cyprus problem. We will continue to uphold -- as always in the past -- all efforts aimed at solving the Cyprus question in keeping with the United Nations resolutions and the positions of the Non-aligned Movement. Yugoslavia, as a friend of Cyprus, of the Cypriot Greeks and Turks, considers that the basis for this is the ensuring of full independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity, unity and the non-aligned status of the Republic of Cyprus.

As a multi-national community, we too have traversed an arduous road to achieve unity, equality and brotherhood of our nations and nationalities. Our own experience confirms even more our belief that conflicts can only benefit others, that therefore mutual trust should be built with patience and resolve, establishing such relations as will enable the two Cypriot communities to determine freely, in mutual dialogue and without outside interference and pressure, their own course of development. That is the only way, we believe, conducive to solutions which are in accordance with the legitimate and vital interests of the two communities, that is of all Cypriots. Only solutions along these lines can be lasting and just, and provide a concrete contribution to the strengthening of detente in Europe and the Mediterranean.

Mr President, dear friends, we have all pledged ourselves to transforming the Mediterranean into a zone of peace, security and cooperation. At the same time, we are witnesses to the tragic events in our immediate vicinity, in the Middle East region. Israeli aggression against a sovereign, non-aligned country, Lebanon, and the genocide of the Palestinian population arouse our profound indignation and great concern not only as a new manifestation of the arrogant and terrorist behaviour of one country vis-a-vis the entire international community, but also as a most direct threat to peace in this part of the world and in the world at large. The recent developments in Lebanon confirm that no durable and comprehensive peace in the Middle East is possible without the realisation of the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people to self-determination and the establishment of their own independent state on the national soil. Such was also the common position of the non-aligned countries at the recent meeting held in this city. We highly appreciate the role of friendly Cyprus as host to that ministerial meeting and as an active participant in the on-going activities for rendering concrete assistance to the Palestine Liberation Organisation.

Crises and armed conflicts are flaring up also in other parts of the world, in Africa, Southeast and Southwest Asia, Central America. In our views on the modes of resolving all these disputes and crises we have always proceeded from the same principles, the principles of the Charter of the United Nations and the policy of non-alignment. It is in this way that we also look upon the tragic already two-year-old conflict between two non-aligned countries, Iraq and Iran, with which Yugoslavia maintains friendly relations.

Mr President, at this difficult juncture in international relations, when the danger of war and uncertainty is hanging heavily over mankind, the principles and goals of the policy and movement of non-alignment confirm their viability and full value. We, who have committed ourselves to those principles and goals, are now called upon and bound to do our utmost to bring about a reversal of the current perilous development of international relations. In our view, shared by many countries outside our movement, non-alignment is, by its universal concept, the only guide for action which should and must be taken by the world today.

It is in this that lies the historical mission of the non-aligned policy. Precisely because of such a role of our movement, we attach exceptional importance to the holding of the seventh summit of non-aligned countries as soon as possible. I am saying this since we consider that full success of this highest gathering of the Non-Aligned can contribute to our joint activities and determine the basic course of our action aimed at resolving the vital questions of mankind, such as peace, security, freedom, development and universal progress.

The struggle for the realisation of these objectives constitutes a very significant field of cooperation between our two and other non-aligned countries. I am confident, Mr President, that the present Yugoslav-Cypriot meeting will constitute not only an important contribution to such cooperation, but also an impetus to our bilateral cooperation in many other areas, which is the wish of both sides.

In conclusion, allow me to raise this glass to your health, Mr. President, to the health of your esteemed wife and of all Cypriot friends, to the stable development of your country and prosperity of your people and to the further strengthening of the traditional friendship between our two non-aligned countries.

Kiprianou-Stambolic Talks End

[Text] The talks between the president of the Presidency of Yugoslavia Stambolic and President Kiprianou continued and ended this morning at the Presidential Palace. The two countries' Foreign Ministers Rolandhis and Mojsov as well as other officials attended the talks. An official joint communique will be released on the talks. After the talks Mr Stambolic met with the pan-Cypriot refugees committee and with the committee of relatives of undeclared prisoners and missing persons.

The Yugoslav leader leaves shortly from Larnaca Airport returning to his country.

IMPORT PERMITS FOR ISRAELI GOODS TO BE STOPPED

[Excerpt] Trade relations between Cyprus and Israel are being broken off or have at least diminished to a minimum after the invasion of Lebanon and the bustle that followed the importation of fertilizers from Israel, which had offered the lowest bid.

The government has been led to this decision after strong pressure not to accept the fertilizers and to suspend imports.

According to information we have received, the government will refuse in the future to issue import permits for goods from Israel, thus breaking off its trade relations with Israel. There are also reports that the government has refused lately to issue permits to Cypriot businessmen for the import of goods from Israel.

The fertilizers that have arrived in Cyprus, which were ordered a long time ago because of their low price, coincided with Israel's aggression against Lebanon and created serious problems for the government, which was pressured not to accept the fertilizers and to cancel the waybill. However, the government ultimately accepted the fertilizers but decided not to issue permits for the import of goods from Israel.

ONAN SAID TO URGE CONCESSIONS, FLEXIBILITY

[Text] This afternoon another meeting was held at Ledra Palace within the framework of the inter-Cypriot talks with the federal legislative authority as the issue.

In a statement to the press before the meeting, the Greek side's representative, Mavrommatis, mentioned that there is no unanimity in the two sides' approach to the issue. However, he added that each side explains its position to the other side. The representative of the Turkish Cypriot side, Onan, said in reply to a question as to whether there are points of approach on the issue, that the more the issue is discussed, the more points of approach appear. It is possible, Onan added, that we have reached the stage where both sides should make concessions and where the demonstration of flexibility by one side will be met by flexibility by the other.

Both interlocutors expressed the hope that during today's meeting the examination of the issue of the legislative authority, which began last Thursday, would be completed.

PAPER REPORTS ASALA TO OPEN OFFICE IN CYPRUS

NC250758 Istanbul GUNES in Turkish 22 Aug 82 pp 1, 10

[Metin Catan report from Lefkosa]

[Text] It is being reported that the Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA), for which life became untenable in Beirut, will open an official bureau in Nicosia, which it will use as a channel for directing its international activities. According to information obtained from reliable sources, ASALA will pursue its activities from three centers. The first of these centers will be in Paris, where matters concerning public opinion and the conducting of propaganda will be handled. The second center will be in Athens and it will concern itself with resolving the financial aspects of the organization. The third center will be in the Greek Cypriot sector of Cyprus, where Armenian youths joining the organization will be trained and where military matters will be directed.

The Armenian militants, who have had to abandon their bases in Lebanon following the occupation of Lebanon by the Israelis, have transferred their military center to the Greek Cypriot sector of the island, an action which implements the first stage of their survival. The second stage will be accomplished by bringing former EOKA leader Nikos Sampson to the leadership of the ASALA section which will prepare and implement ASALA's plans in the Middle East and Turkey. As is known, former EOKA leader Nikos Sampson was sentenced to death for murdering 32 British soldiers when Cyprus was under British administration. In 1960, when the Cyprus Republic was founded, Makarios pardoned him. Later, Sampson continued his EOKA activities through his newspaper MAHI, and finally he resorted to the militancy which led to the peace operation [by Turkey]. Sampson toppled Makarios and proclaimed himself the president of the Cyprus Republic. Following the Turkish peace operation, he was dismissed and subsequently arrested when Makarios returned to the island. He did not come back from France where he had gone for medical treatment.

On the other hand, it has been reported that Sampson secretly went to Greece from Paris and began contacts with a terrorist organization known as ALEK which stands for the Movement of the Armenian Peoples' Fighters. A Greek Cypriot newspaper called "ELEVTHEROTIPIA" carried an article signed by Yioryios Mavros, who says that a new leader specializing in terrorism has taken over and added that the Ankara raid should not be regarded as a surprise. The writer maintained that similar incidents will continue.

In the meantime, according to the Voice of America, Viken Charkutiyan, whom the French court has refused to hand over to the United States on the grounds that his case did not come under the extradition of offenders agreement between France and the United States, arrived in the Greek Cypriot sector of Cyprus after being driven out of France. The VOA report says that Charkutiyan carries a Greek Cypriot passport and that in all probability he is at the "foreign students' camp" opened in the east of Larnaca.

Allegation Denied

[Text] Yesterday the government spokesman categorically denied Turkish allegations that surposedly the government has allowed the secret Armenian organization [Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia] (ASALA) to establish itself in Cyprus.

TRADE UNIONS TO BE BANNED FROM POLITICS

[Text] Ankara, Aug 25 (AA) -- The plenary session of the Consultative Assembly approved Article 56 of the draft constitution which bans trade unions from pursuing political ends, conducting political activity, or cooperating with political parties, professional organizations or foundations.

Under the same article, unions are obliged to deposit their funds in national banks, while union activity cannot be cited as a legitimate reason for not working.

The article also included a clause by which members dues are to be paid "directly" to the union.

The article was adopted in the form proposed by the drafting committee, except for the addition of one word, after lengthy debate over several amendment motions.

Members in favor of motions for deletion of the ban on political activity by unions pointed out the ban would be putting too many restrictions on various groups, perhaps to the point of setting up a one-party regime, and cutting off trade unions from being one of the bases for democracy.

Another member said barring the poor from organizing with "abstract" concepts such as "prohibition on politics," would encourage "the underground."

The motion was rejected.

Ministers of Labor and Social Security Turhan Esener and Sadik Side were present during the debate on Article 56.

TURKMEN INTERVIEWED ON TERRORISM, MIDDLE EAST

NC260738 Istanbul MILLIYET in Turkish 21 Aug 82 pp 1, 9

[Interview granted by Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen to MILLIYET correspondent Nilufer Yalcin on 20 August -- place not given]

[Text] In an exclusive statement given to MILLIYET yesterday, Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen expressed his views on such matters as the latest developments in Lebanon, the nature of Turkish-Greek relations, the Greek Cypriot recourse to the United Nations, Turkey's role in the Iran-Iraq conflict and the incident on the Turkish-Soviet border.

Turkmen was asked: "Turkish public opinion is sensitive and worried about the fact that Turkish terrorists were captured in the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) camps, that the PLO and the Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA) are collaborating and that a large number of PLO guerrillas are based in Syria. What are your views on these matters?" The foreign minister replied: "The Turkish people's sensitivity is fully justified. It is deplorable that the Palestinian organizations have failed to take congnizance of this fact despite all our warnings. The PLO had assured us that there were absolutely no Turks involved in the attacks planned against Turkey by the organizations under its control. Now it is known that these terrorists existed, and the necessary investigations are being conducted.

"I do not really believe that the PLO members in Syria pose a great danger to Turkey. Lebanon was in a state of anarchy. In Syria, there will be a person directly responsible if any militant actions are attempted."

Replying to questions concerning the possibility of ASALA transferring its center to the Greek Cypriot sector of Cyprus or whether it will remain in Lebanon, Turkmen said: "As far as I know, Israel has not so far arrested any Armenian terrorists in Lebanon. It is known, however, that some ASALA members participated in the fighting in west Beirut. It is essential that from now on Armenian terrorists in Lebanon should not be allowed to carry out their militant activities. If, as you say, ASALA is permitted to transfer its center to the Greek Cypriot sector of Cyprus, this would be the most serious blunder the Greek Cypriot administration could ever commit."

When Foreign Minister Turkmen was asked to comment on the Soviet Government's avoidance of either apologizing for or deploring the recent border incident, his reply was: "We have constantly and consistently attached importance to the maintenance of good neighborly relations with the Soveit Union. The maintenance of such relations depends on the meticulous care taken in the preservation of mutual trust between the two countries. At this stage, it is impossible to reconcile the Soviet Union's approach to the border incident with what I have just said."

Question: Would you assess the effect of Arab-Israeli relations, particularly in light of thelatest developments in Lebanon, on Turkey's interests and on the peace of the region?

Answer: There is no doubt at all that the events in Lebanon have been characterized as a tragedy. The reason for this is that no one seemed to have taken into account the human dimensions of this tragedy. Thousands of innocent persons died in Lebanon and tens of thousands have been condemned to misery, hunger and hopelessness. Everybody watched the continuous, ruthless and immeasurable bombardment of Beirut on television. This was tragic indeed.

Undoubtedly, ending this aspect of the matter through the agreement reached is gratifying.

Question: What kind of developments do you think will follow this stage?

Answer: What is going to happen now? What is expected to happen is the creation of conditions necessary for Lebanon's survival as a sovereign and independent state, the adoption of further steps toward the recognition of Palestine's legitimate rights and the realization of permanent peace in the Middle East.

What is important from Lebanon's point of view is that it should be able to determine its own fate without any outside pressure, that no one should interfere in its internal affairs and that its territorial integrity and sovereignty should be respected. The necessary prerequisite for this is the withdrawal of Israeli forces from Lebanon.

Question: Aren't the Syrian forces also expected to leave?

Answer: This problem must be resolved in accordance with the decision of the Lebanese Government. It would be a great error to think that with the departure of the Palestinian fighters from Beirut that the Palestine question is over. The Palestine reality will persist. Peace and security will not be established in the Middle East unless the Palestinians secure the right to establish a state on the basis of self-determination. All the countries which will play a role in the establishment of peace in the Middle East should appreciate this fact.

Question: How do you explain the fact that the nearest countries, including most of the Arab countries, refrained until recently from accepting the Palestinian fighters?

Answer: It would be wrong to think that the delay in the departure of the Palestinians from Beirut was due to the refusal of any Arab state to accept them. I think that none of the Arab states had ever entertained such an idea. Their failure to announce their readiness to accept the Palestinians may have been due to their desire to see the Palestinians leave Beirut under safe conditions. It is certain that the Arab countries have not abandoned the cause of the Palestinians.

Question: In light of its attitude toward these developments, is the Egyptian Government on its way to getting itself accepted into the Arab community again? Will its efforts within the framework of the Camp David accords to secure recognition for the Palestinian autonomy be enough to resolve the issue?

Answer: We have all seen Egypt's reaction to the Lebanese events. There is no doubt at all that the Egyptians are ready to exert every effort to protect the rights of the Palestinians. On the other hand, as a big state in the area, Egypt will certainly continue to play an important role in the subsequent developments. As for the Camp David accords, it is obvious that it is not possible to resolve the Palestine question through autonomy. [as published]

Question: Can you say that the Arab states in the region sincerely support the Palestinians in their desire to establish an independent state?

Answer: All the members of the Arab League have pledged to support the establishment of an independent Palestinian state. This struggle is not yet over.

Question: A short time ago Turkey and Greece agreed to enter a period of tranquillity for the purpose of creating the atmosphere necessary for the resumption of a dialogue. But it is being observed that Athens is trying to take the Cyprus issue to the United Nations and to have all kinds of resolutions adopted both in the U.S. Congress and various European institutions. Is this approach compatible with the intention of creating the necessary atmosphere?

Answer: The essence of the gentlemen's agreement between Turkey and Greece is the creation of an atmosphere of mutual trust. That is why both sides must evaluate their attitudes toward each other in a general manner. I do not wish to express an opinion on the issues you have just touched upon. What I have said recently is enough for the time being.

Question: Do you hope that the dialogue will be resumed during your meeting with the Greek foreign minister at the beginning of October?

Answer: This is going to be my first contact with the Greek foreign minister. It is not fair that we should expect extremely radical results from such contacts. What is important is the creation of mutual trust and the achievement of some progress toward the settlement of the problems. With this goal in mind, both sides have to develop a positive and constructive approach toward mutual relations.

Question: The Greek Cypriot administration has decided to refer the Cyprus issue to the United Nations and it has already started preparations. Will this attitude lead to the disruption of the intercommunal talks and to the adoption of certain measures by the Turkish Cypriot side?

Answer: It is up to the Turkish Cypriot community to decide about the intercommunal talks. We can only say that a new debate on Cyprus in the United Nations would be futile and would have a negative effect on the intercommunal talks.

Question: Do you intend to submit a draft resolution on Cyprus to the Islamic Conference meeting to be held in Nigeria this weekend?

Answer: As long as the intercommunal talks continue and as long as the Cyprus issue is not discussed at the United Nations, we will refrain from referring to the Cyprus issue at the Islamic conference. If the matter is brought up at the General Assembly, we will naturally expect all the Islamic countries to behave in such a manner that would not in any way adversely influence the intercommunal talks in Cyprus. We shall express these views at the Nigeria conference.

Question: Various speculations are being ventured in connection with your recent visit to Tehran with the honorable prime minister. Can you enlighten us about the objective and the outcome of these contacts?

Answer: At the time, our ministry issued a statement on this matter. Secrecy is the first prerequisite in the efforts to find a peaceful solution to the dispute.

AUSTRIA

EXPORT SUBSIDIES REFUSED FOR ARGENTINE TANK DEAL

AU241229 Vienna DIE PRESSE in German 24 Aug 82 p 7

[Editorial report]

[Text] Vienna -- The tank deal between the Steyr Works and Argentina, reported by international agencies last week, was rejected by the Export Advisory Council. The Steyr Works wanted Austrian export promotion to finance the delivery of 28 track vehicles. The advisory council refused this, however, pointing out that Argentina is now involved in negotiations to reschedule its debts. As a result, the request was withdrawn. The Steyr Works now has some 250 units -- 1 year's output -- in stock.

VEW WORKS HOPES FOR SOVIET PIPELINE DEALS

[M.F. report]

[Text] The filling of orders for compressors for the Soviet gas pipeline by the Dresser-France firm, ordered by the French Government, has also revived the hopes of the state-owned VEW United Refined Steel Works for additional pipeline orders. There exists a cooperation agreement between VEW and Dresser-France under which both enterprises will jointly offer smaller compressors to the Soviet Union and other countries. Dresser-France is to supply the nucleus of these compressors whereas the VEW works would assemble the products in the Muerzzuschlag plant. Dresser-France and VEW had conducted preliminary talks about compressor deliveries for the pipeline in Moscow which were interrupted by Dresser-France because of the embargo. No offers have yet been made. It is now believed at VEW that these talks with Moscow will be resumed.

REPORTS ON 25 AUG COUNCIL OF MINISTERS SESSION

[Text] Here are the main points of the report on this morning's session of the Council of Ministers: On the subject of Lebanon, Minister of External Relations Claude Cheysson insisted on underlining the exemplary attitude of the French contingent and the cooperation among all the parties responsible for the evacuation of west Beirut. Pierre Mauroy presented the government program for the coming 3 months, a program which is split into four parts: First, a strengthening of the apparatus of production in order to fight unemployment, inflation and external upsets; second, a continuation of the structural reforms already underway; third, the realization of new social advances and the development of solidarity; and finally, the development of France's international cultural influence. The government hopes furthermore for a reorientation of savings into productive investments. In order to do this legislative measures will be taken to protect and encourage saving.

MINISTER CHEYSSON UNDERGOES MINOR SURGERY

[Text] Paris, Aug 25 (AFP) -- French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson yesterday underwent minor surgery, it was announced today.

The Foreign Ministry, which [words indistinct] not specify the nature of the operation, said everything went well. Mr Cheysson, 62, was replaced at yesterday's cabinet meeting by his deputy for European affairs, Andre Chandernagor.

PEACE FORCE SHIPS TO ARRIVE IN BEIRUT 25 AUG

[Text] (ANSA) -- Beirut, August 25 -- The first contingent of Italian troops will arrive at the port of Beirut this evening and disembark tomorrow, it was learned here today. The two Italian ships (?"Carole") and "Buona Speranza", will be in the area of Beirut around 1600 GMT (18 local time) [as received] and are carrying 250 "Bersaglieri" who will disembark tomorrow morning at 0500 GMT (0700 local time).

Tomorrow evening between five and six (1500-1600 GMT), a third Italian ship (?"Grado"), will arrive with the remainder of the men from the Bersaglieri battalion "Governolo". By Friday the entire Italian contribution of 500 soldiers to the multinational peacekeeping effort should be in west Beirut.

The task of the Italians is to oversee the exodus of Palestinians overland towards Damascus, a Western diplomatic source told ANSA today. It was also confirmed today that Syrian soldiers belonging to "ADF", the dissuasion force sent to Lebanon during the 1976 civil war, will also leave Beirut by land.

U.S. Envoy Philip Habib, the architect of the evacuation plan, is scheduled to meet today with Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon to confirm the pull-out agreements.

NETHERLANDS

STINGER MISSILE PURCHASE DECISION APPROVED

PM251203 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 20 Aug 82 p 3

[Excerpt] The Hague -- The Second Chamber's permanent defense committee yesterday approved Defense Minister van Mierlo's decision to buy 646 portable Stinger antiaircraft weapons for a total of around 160 million guilders. Initially there had been doubts in the Chamber about the arms purchase which took the form of a large number of questions to the minister. But the minister was able to dispel most of the doubts in his reply to the Chamber.

As the minister had already pointed out to the commission, the need for weapons to counter low-flying attacking aircraft is most urgent. So urgent that for part of its total requirement of 1800 weapons, the Netherlands could not wait for a European project for the manufacture of such arms. For this reason Van Mierlo wants in the meantime to buy 646 Stingers from the United States, while waiting for European products to make up the remainder.

LISBON REPORTS CREATION OF NEW NEWS AGENCY

LD252332 Lisbon Domestic Service in Portuguese 2200 GMT 25 Aug 82

[Excerpt] Fourteen [as heard] public and private news media organizations today signed a charter for a new news agency, "NOTICIAS DE PORTUGAL," which could begin operating in the second half of September. Formalities for a 150,000 contos subsidy from the government have first to be completed.

Macedo e Cunha, chairman of the inaugurating committee, said that a veto by President Ramalho Eanes of the government decree closing down the ANOP news agency would pose no problem for the new agency. He said "NOTICIAS DE PORTUGAL" is neither the successor nor the inheritor of ANOP.

SCHMIDT WRITES CONGRATULATORY LETTER TO REAGAN

[Text] Bonn, 27 Aug (DPA) -- In a letter to President Ronald Reagan, Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has praised Washington's budget policy and attributed the present lowering of interest rates in the Federal Republic and several other European countries to that policy. He said that the lowering of interest rates in Europe, thanks to preceding developments with regard to dollar interest rates, was attributable to a large extent to Reagan's success, which has opened up prospects for a reduction in the U.S. budget deficit through tax increases.

Schmidt, who over past months has repeatedly criticized the U.S. interest rate and budget policy, also wrote in the letter to Reagan, which was published by the Federal Press Office today: "I congratulate you and hope that the lowering of interest rates will be lasting and will benefit your economy and ours."

BRANDT ARTICLE ON PALME REPORT, NUCLEAR WAR

[Article by SPD Chairman Willy Brandt]

[Text] The German version of the final report of the so-called Palme Commission on "common security" was published recently.

While the United States requests high government departments to think about how a nuclear war could be waged over 6 months and finally still be won, the report states clearly and forcibly what a nuclear war would mean today: the certain death of many millions of people, the horrible lingering illness of additional tens of millions and even the possibility of our globe becoming uninhabitable for mankind at all. In the light of this, how ghastly is all speculation on the limitableness of nuclear wars and a "victory" in a nuclear conflict.

At the same time the report points to the dangers looming under the nuclear threshold; what a destructive effect the conventional weapons of our time can already have; how many wars after World War II have brought new misfortune down to men, above all in the Third World; and also what economic burdens result from the almost endless arms spiral. This is one of the main causes of the present world-wide economic crisis.

All this alone would have been worth the large effort the independent commission has undertaken, but equally important in my view are the proposals which have been submitted to avoid the catastrophe and halt the arms race. There are the numerous steps of a short-term effect which are recommended above all to the two world powers. They consist primarily of the proposal that the results already achieved of arms control negotiations be respected and abided by as a basis of more far-reaching proposals which are equally addressed to the East and West and boil down to the recommendation that in a comprehensive process of political confidence building tangible disarmament measures should be agreed upon which would mean a gain, not a loss, of security for both sides.

Especially impressive to me are the considerations referring to the United Nations, notably the strengthening of its ability to prevent, possibly from the start, or at least to quickly end armed conflicts, above all in the Third World. The terrible events in the South Atlantic, the Persian Gulf and Lebanon in recent months have drastically shown us how much suffering the people affected could have been spared if there were an internationally recognized peace-making force which could bring diverging interests into harmony by peaceful means.

I also want to mention the detailed suggestions which describe the possibilities of changing military industries into civilian productions, show the way of ensuring the nonproliferation of nuclear arms and aim at preventing the growing arms exports into the Third World. If realized, they could all substantially improve the chances of the future for our globe.

I am not supporting every individual proposal of the Palme Commission here. But each deserves to be closely studied and carefully considered. Public discussion on the ensuring of peace in the world will and must be continued in our country. If as many people as possible were guided by the analytical clarity and the strong desire for peace of the Palme Commission members, this would be a great gain for all of us.

CDU/CSU OFFICIALS MEET WITH U.S. SENATORS

[Text] Bonn, 26 Aug (DPA) -- Deputy CDU/CSU Party Group leader Manfred Woerner and the Union's foreign policy spokesman, Alois Mertes, had an approximately 2-hour meeting with a group of five U.S. senators on Thursday. They are in Bonn at present as part of a European tour. During the "very friendly and open exchange of views and information questions of the two countries' foreign and security policy were discussed according to the Union, including the recent differences between Europe and the United States.

Woerner and Mertes drew attention to the "extremely broad basis" which German-American friendship continues to have among the German people. In addition to the role of the Greens and Alternatives in the Federal Republic, economic questions in relations between the European Community and the United States and the need for a joint transatlantic strategy for economic relations between the alliance countries and the Eastern bloc were discussed. The visiting delegation, which had been received yesterday by Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, includes the majority leader in the U.S. Senate, Howard Baker, and Senators David Boren, Nicolas Brady, Paula Hawkins and Mack Mattingly.

SPD WEEKLY PREDICTS END OF COALITION WITH FDP

[Excerpts] Bonn, 26 Aug (DPA) -- Doubts regarding the continued existence of the SPD/FDP coalition in Bonn and conjecture about the FDP soon abandoning the government coalition are continuing. More fuel was added to the fire of discussion by a commentary in the SPD weekly VORWAERTS today which considered it likely that the FDP will change to a coalition with the Union before the end of this year. The CDU/CSU meanwhile has taken advantage of the serious differences within the ruling coalition regarding the 1983 federal budget to accuse the government of being incapable and the coalition of being practically at an end.

According to the VORWAERTS commentary, Federal Chancellor Helmut will not be able to count on FDP leader Hans-Dietrich Genscher much longer. "Perhaps after the Hesse diet elections, but probably not until after the Berlin FDP congress at the beginning of November, Genscher will risk the leap to Strauss and Kohl." Genscher is charged in the commentary with having abused the chancellor's loyalty for months and having deceived not only the SPD but also his own party with regard to his coalition plans.

FDP Spokesman Herbert Schmuelling stated that the FDP will no more let itself be provoked by the "snipers" who were behind the VORWAERTS article than by faux-pas on the part of the SPD in the Hesse regional elections. The arrows of VORWAERTS appear to be aimed only at the FDP, but in reality are directed at the chancellor. SPD Executive Spokesman Wolfgang Clement described the commentary in his party's weekly as the opinion of its author.

HALF OF PEACE FORCE DISEMBARKS, OTHERS DELAYED

[Text] (ANSA) -- Beirut, August 26 -- The first contingent of Italians in the multinational peacekeeping force for Lebanon disembarked at Beirut today to help with the evacuation of Palestinian guerrillas from the western sector of the capital.

Half of the 500 Italians in the special force arrived today.

The remainder, aboard the transport ship "Grado", had been delayed because of a mechanical breakdown during the trip.

The Italians will flank French paratroopers and United States Marines in overseeing the evacuation task.

As the 250 Bersaglieri came off the ship today they were welcomed by the ambassadors of the three Western nations taking part in the multinational force: Paul Marc Henry for France, Robert Dillon for the U.S. and Franco Lucioli Ottieri for Italy. They then went by convoy to the Sim'an zone which they are to control.

It is the Italian contingent that is to open the overland route the Palestinians are to take to Damascus.

The Italian ambassador said it was hoped that this mission would truly lead to peace in Lebanon.

To call the mission historic was too much, he said, but "we count on the fact that our presence can help settle the crisis."

Captain Marcello Morelli, one of the Italian officers who preceeded the troops by a few days, said that "ours is a mandate for peace".

As to the zone of operations assigned to the Italian contingent, he said that is neither easier nor more difficult than the others.

RED BRIGADES ATTACK ARMY TRUCK IN SALERNO

[Text] (ANSA) Salerno, near Naples, August 27 -- Responsibility for an attack on an Italian army truck here early Thursday afternoon has been claimed by the Red Brigades as medical sources reported that two of those wounded in the attack were "in a deep coma" early this morning. The Red Brigades message was received by a Neapolitan newspaper via the traditional anonymous telephone call yesterday evening.

"The Salerno attack is ours", the voice said, apparently locating the shootout in the campaign against NATO and the Italian Armed Forces announced by the Red Brigades last year.

According to eye-witness accounts, between ten and fifteen urban guerrillas, including some women, took part in the attack, opening fire on a truck with ten soldiers on board. Their booty was said to be only six rifles.

The shooting attracted the attention of a roving police patrol car. The urban guerrillas opened fire on the police agents, who replied, a first reconstruction showed. 24-year-old police agent Antonio Bandiera of Salerno was killed in the shooting, while three policemen, two soldiers and three civilians, including a seven-year-old child were injured. Of these, a policeman and a young passerby were said to be close to death in hospital.

This is the Red Brigades' fourth operation in the Southern Italian region of Campania, near Naples, this year. Police sources believe that the unit which made yesterday's attack is the same one as broke into the airforce barracks at Castel di Decima near Rome on August 19.

Experts say both attacks seem to form part of the campaign against NATO and the armed forces which the Red Brigades started in December last year by kidnapping American Brigadier-General James Lee Dozier in Verona. He was released in Padua more than a month later. Another action in the campaign was last February's assault on a barracks at Santa Maria Capua Vetere near Caserta. The Red Brigades' attacks on barracks are one of the means by which the urban guerrillas maintain their arms supplies.

POPE, AT MASS, URGES POLES 'NOT TO LOSE HEART'

[Text] (ANSA) -- Castelgandolfo, August 26 -- For Pope John Paul Two it is his duty to the Madonna, to his homeland Poland, and to the Polish Church to take part in the jubilee for the 600th anniversary of the Black Madonna's image at Czestochowa.

He made the affirmation today during a special mass at his summer residence at Castelgandolfo, near Rome, to celebrate the feast of the Madonna of Jasna Gora.

The papal mass was beamed live over Vatican Radio to Poland and all of Eastern Europe where it was doubtless heard with special emotion at Czestochowa where thousands of pilgrims gathered around the sanctuary of Jasna Gora.

Several Polish prelates and Vatican secretary of state, Cardinal Agostino Casaroli were among those present at the special service held today in the pope's private chapel under the image of the Black Madonna, placed there by Pope Pius the Eleventh who had served as nuncio to Warsaw.

John Paul Two had promised last year to be at Czestochowa today for the celebration, but after martial law was imposed on Poland on December 13, the planned papal journey became more and more difficult, until last July Polish officials definitively turned thumbs down on the idea.

However, celebrations for the Black Madonna continue into next year and the same Polish officials told the pope that he would be allowed to make a trip to Poland in 1983.

Karol Wojtyla has already made a trip to his homeland since being made pope. The visit took place in June of 1979.

In his message beamed over Radio Vatican today, the pope recalled that during that 1979 trip he had been invited to return to Poland for the jubilee and that he felt confident that the statements made in relation to this pilgrimage would be carried through, an evident reference to the promises made him by Polish authorities in July.

He urged his fellow poles not to lose heart and not to cut themselves off from their roots, but instead to seek and find the spiritual strength shown by generations of Poles before them.

John Paul said he felt a deep link with Jasna Gora.

The pope concluded by saying that Poles should stick by each other, eliminating no one, so as to unitedly reconstruct the common good, not through force and violence, but through dialogue, eloquence and reason, which meant respect for every man and the ability to convince others.

SPOKESMAN DISCUSSES PLO EQUIPMENT, FRENCH PLANT

[Text] The government spokesman has stated that the Cyprus Government has agreed to receive Palestinian military vehicles and to place them in its temporary custody in order to facilitate the agreement for peace in Lebanon. A relevant agreement was reached between Foreign Minister Rolandhis and Mr Qaddumi, head of the PLO Political Department, following contacts with the U.S. side. The spokesman added that the vehicles will remain in the government's custody until the entire issue is settled and will then be delivered wherever they should be delivered.

On the Cyprus Government's reaction to press reports that France is building factories in the occupied areas, the government spokesman said the Foreign Ministry is in touch with the French Foreign Ministry and the French Embassy in Nicosia.

OFFICIAL DENIES PRESENCE OF ARMENIAN 'TERRORISTS'

NC251528 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1500 GMT 25 Aug 82

[Text] The government spokesman has stated that Turkish Cypriot leader Kenktas' allegation that there are Armenian terrorists, as he called them, in the areas under the Cypriot Government's control is absolutely unfounded. The spokesman said: There are no armed Armenians in Cyprus nor is there any question of Armenians arriving in the future. The government spokesman added: Mr Denktas' allegation as well as similar statements made recently by Turkish officials are part of a propaganda campaign by the Turkish side aimed at portraying the Greek Cypriots as supporting armed action against Turkish targets.

JUDICIAL POWERS DISCUSSED AT INTERCOMMUNAL TALKS

NC261958 Nicosia Domestic Television Service in Greek 1730 GMT 26 Aug 82

[Text] Another meeting within the framework of the inter-Cypriot talks was held at the Ledra Palace Hotel this afternoon. A UN communique on the meeting says there was a general discussion -- according to the agenda -- on the question of the federal judicial powers. The talks will be continued on Tuesday, 31 August.

Prior to today's meeting, Mr Gobbi, the UN secretary general's special envoy in Cyprus, said in answer to questions that prior to the discussion of the territorial aspect there are still some other elements to be discussed besides that of the judicial powers.

Asked about the UN stance on Turkish Cypriot leader Denktas' statement and threats in connection with the transfer to Cyprus of Palestinian vehicles which are under the government's custody, Mr Gobbi said Mr Denktas protested to the United Nations and that the question is being studied. He added, however, that the United Nations never intervened in this operation.

Mr Gobbi also said he had a meeting with U.S. Senator Percy, but declined to discuss the contents of the meeting, simply saying that the U.S. senator wanted to be briefed on the Cyprus problem.

SFRY'S STAMBOLIC ENDS VISIT, DEPARTS 26 AUG

Joint Communique Issued

["Text" of 26 August joint communique issued on the visit of President of the Presidency of the SFRY Petar Stambolic to the Republic of Cyprus]

[Text] 1. At the invitation of the president of the Republic of Cyprus, Spiros Kiprianou, the president of the Presidency of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, Petar Stambolic, paid an official and friendly visit to the Republic of Cyprus from 24 to 26 August 1982.

2. The president of the Presidency of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, Petar Stambolic, and his associates were accorded warm welcome manifesting cordial and friendly relations between the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and the Republic of Cyprus and the mutual respect existing between the two countries

3. The president of the Presidency of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, Petar Stambolic, and the president of the Republic of Cyprus, Spiros Kiprianou, had a detailed exchange of views on the international situation and all current international issues, as well as on the further promotion of bilateral relations and all-round co-operation.

4. The following personalities took part in the talks between the president of the Presidency of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, Petar Stambolic, and the president of the Republic of Cyprus, Spiros Kiprianou:

On the Yugoslav side:

H.E. Lazar Mojsov, federal secretary for foreign affairs
H.E. Cvijeto Job, ambassador of the Socialist Federal Yugoslavia to the Republic of Cyprus
Mr. Dragoslav Pejic, counsellor for foreign policy affairs to the Presidency of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia
Mr. Ilija Djukic, head of the Department for the Neighbouring Countries in the Federal Secretariat for Foreign Affairs

On the Cypriot side:

H.E. N.A. Rolandhis, minister of foreign affairs
H.E. St. Katsellis, minister to the president
Mr. P. Stavrou, under-secretary to the president
Mr. A. Sotiriadhis, ambassador of the Republic of Cyprus in Yugoslavia
Mr. K. Mikhailidhis, ambassador, ag. director-general of the Ministry to the President
Mr. E. Ipsaridhis, ag. director-general of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs
Mr. A. Siambos, counsellor-director, Foreign Minister's Office

The two sides expressed their deep concern over the deteriorating situation in the world causing a complete stagnation of detente, increased presence of the cold war elements and particularly the aggravation of the dangerous hotbeds of crisis in the Middle and Near East and elsewhere which deepens the already grave state of international relations in general. Direct violation of peace in some regions and threats to peace in other parts of the world, together with the increasingly dangerous arms race and effects of other negative factors of the current situation seriously jeopardize world peace and security.

Both sides devoted particular attention to the Middle East crisis, especially to the Israeli aggression against Lebanon, the Iran-Iraq war, the question of Cyprus, the situation in southern Africa as well as to the situation in Europe.

The two sides condemned Israel's brutal aggression against Lebanon and the genocide of the Palestinian and the Lebanese peoples in Beirut, which constitutes the continuation of the policy pursued by Israel since its establishment, aimed at expanding its territory at the expense of its Arab neighbours and exterminating the Palestinian people. They underlined the great responsibility borne by Israel and all the countries supporting it.

The two sides reiterated their support for the positions contained in the joint communique of the extraordinary ministerial meeting of the Co-ordinating Bureau of non-aligned countries on the question of Palestine held in Nicosia, Cyprus from 15 to 17 July. They voiced their great concern over the extremely grave situation caused by the Israeli aggression, expressing their full support for the heroic struggle of the PLO and the Palestinian people. They underlined that peace in the Middle East is indivisible and that it must be based on a comprehensive, just and lasting solution of the Palestinian question and the Middle East conflict. Such a solution, which should be sought within the framework of the United Nations, must be based on the unconditional withdrawal of Israel from the Palestinian and other Arab territories occupied in 1967, including Jerusalem, thus enabling the Palestinian people, under the leadership of the Palestine Liberation Organization, their sole and legitimate representative, to exercise their inalienable rights, including the right to return to their homes and their land, the right to self-determination, national independence and the establishment of their own independent and sovereign state in Palestine.

The Yugoslav side expressed its full appreciation to the Government of Cyprus for the successful organization of the recently held extraordinary ministerial meeting of the Co-ordinating Bureau of non-aligned countries on Palestine.

The two sides expressed great concern over the continuation of the Iran-Iraq war which directly harms not only the interests of the two countries and their peoples but also those of the Non-aligned Movement, endangering also world peace. They called for the cessation of hostilities and peaceful settlement of the problems between the two countries and pledged their support to all the efforts exerted towards that end.

Both sides expressed their conviction that the policy of non-alignment, regardless of the difficulties and obstacles it encounters, remains the only factor and force ready to strive for, and capable of redirecting international relations to the road of peace and equitable international co-operation. In this context, the two sides emphasized their irrevocable adherence to the policy of non-alignment as an independent, global, non-bloc factor opposed to the policy of force, bloc rivalry, spheres of influence, intervention, imperialism, hegemony, racial and all other forms of foreign domination.

Considering that the non-aligned countries have a special responsibility in the present grave international situation, the two sides particularly stressed the need for a dynamic and joint action of the Non-aligned Movement at this juncture, especially with regard to the holding of the seventh summit of non-aligned countries as soon as possible. In this context, it was stressed that the non-aligned countries must adhere to the original principles, goals and criteria of the policy of non-alignment also in their mutual relations and in their activities on the international scene, as a norm of democratic international relations.

The two presidents noted with satisfaction that the way has been opened for an agreement on the venue and the time for holding the seventh summit of the non-aligned countries. They stressed the urgency for the settlement of the remaining questions in the matter, since the holding of the seventh summit as soon as possible is of essential importance not only for the unity of the non-aligned countries, but also as an action of the overwhelming majority of mankind aimed at reversing the further perilous deterioration of the international situation and rechanneling it to the road of detente encompassing all international issues and all regions of the world, with the participation of all countries.

9. The two sides expressed their concern at the fact that all efforts exerted so far have failed to solve the Cyprus crisis, the continuation of which jeopardizes peace and security in the region. They stressed that the cessation of the military occupation of part of the territory of the Republic of Cyprus, the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Cyprus and the complete demilitarization of the republic are indispensable for a just and lasting solution of the Cyprus problem which would be in the interest of peace and security in the Mediterranean region and beyond. The two sides pledged themselves to an early solution of the Cyprus question on the basis of the relevant UN resolutions, the declarations of the Non-aligned Movement and the high level agreements of 1977 (Makarios-Denktas) and 1979 (Kiprianou-Denktas) and through meaningful, substantive and result-oriented direct negotiations, without any foreign interference or pressure on an equal footing between the two Cypriot communities, under the auspices of the United Nations.

The Yugoslav side reiterated its lasting support to the independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity, unity and non-alignment of the Republic of Cyprus as an important factor of peace and security in the Mediterranean and beyond, and as a country which plays a significant role in the activities of the Non-aligned Movement and of the group of neutral and non-aligned countries of Europe. The Cypriot side expressed its gratitude to the government and people of Yugoslavia for their consistent and full support, especially as a member of the contact group of the non-aligned countries for Cyprus.

10. The two sides voiced their concern over the aggravated international economic situation, particularly of the developing countries, and emphasized the need for exerting additional efforts to convene the United Nations conference on global negotiations, which would constitute a political step towards finding a way out of the deadlock, i.e. towards surmounting a stalemate in the negotiations and dialogue between the developed and the developing countries.

11. Yugoslavia and Cyprus have been following with concern the continuing arms race seriously threatening the independence of states and peace in the world.

Despite the known difficulties and obstacles, they are determined to continue to exert efforts, together with all non-aligned and other countries, aimed at its halting and launching the process of genuine disarmament.

12. The two sides agreed that active involvement and maximum efforts are necessary, particularly on the part of the neutral and non-aligned countries of Europe, to bring about the successful conclusion of the Madrid meeting which will be resumed on 9 November 1982. In this connection, the two sides attach great importance to the forthcoming meeting of ministers of non-aligned and neutral countries of Europe to be held in Stockholm on 29th and 30th August 1982.

The Yugoslav side expressed its full appreciation to the Government of Cyprus for its successful guidance of the regional group of non-aligned countries of Europe since 1979.

13. The two sides reiterated firm support for the liquidation of colonialism, racism and apartheid in southern Africa, condemned the recent aggressive acts of South Africa against Angola and Mozambique, and expressed their full support for the liberation struggle of the people of Namibia headed by SWAPO.

14. The two sides noted with satisfaction the very successful development of the traditionally friendly relations and co-operation between the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and the Republic of Cyprus in a number of fields which are continuous, stable and characterized by mutual respect and trust. They expressed their readiness to further develop these relations and to take concrete steps for further promoting and expanding their co-operation.

15. The two sides noted that additional efforts are required in order to broaden and increase trade exchanges and overall economic co-operation -- since there exist considerable unutilized possibilities -- and underlined their interest in promoting more advanced forms of co-operation, especially in the field of production and investment on a long-term basis.

16. The two sides noted that their relations in the cultural, educational and scientific fields were developing successfully and expressed their readiness to expand them further. They also voiced their mutual interest in further strengthening co-operation in the field of the press, radio and television.

17. All meetings and talks during the visit of the president of the Presidency of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia to the Republic of Cyprus took place in an exceptionally cordial and friendly atmosphere. The two sides noted identity or great similarity of views on all the issues discussed.

18. The president of the Presidency of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, Petar Stambolic, extended an invitation to the president of the Republic of Cyprus, Spiros Kiprianou, to pay a visit to Yugoslavia. The invitation was accepted with pleasure.

[Dispatch from I KATHIMERINI Paris correspondent Rikhardhos Someritis]

[Excerpts] Paris -- If there is no political decision by the French Government very soon to cancel earlier official approvals, France will be the first Western country to contribute -- considerably, too -- to the industrial development of Turkish-held Cyprus with all the political and, consequently, diplomatic consequences that this would inevitably bring about regarding the consolidation of Denktas' "state."

One of the largest French multinationals and a giant oil firm, Elf Aquitaine (the majority of this firm's shares belongs to the state and it is controlled by the government with regard to policy on petroleum products initiatives) has signed an important agreement with the Turkish petroleum products firm ONEL, which is building a lubricating and engine oils plant in the Cypriot city of Famagusta, which is held by the Turkish Army.

This case, which was only recently revealed through reports in the Turkish Cypriot press, led a few days ago to strong diplomatic representations by the Cyprus Republic to the French Ministry of External Relations, which promised to study the question in consultation with Industry Minister Jean-Pierre Chevenement and Foreign Trade Minister Jobert (who recently visited Greece). Representatives of the firm maintain that the agreement is "legal from all aspects," and hint that they do not have the right not to "honor" it.

The controversial plant, whose yearly production is expected to be 5,000 tons, will operate within the wider area of Famagusta harbor. According to concrete indications, the site to be "conceded" is Greek Cypriot property. According to reports, Elf Aquitaine signed the agreement (it has taken care that the contract not explicitly mention occupied Cyprus, but has left open every possibility of option with the Turkish firm) under pressure from the Turkish subsidiary of Renault, which is controlled by the Turkish officers' pension fund. Other reports connect the Famagusta affair with the well-known Elf Aquitaine interest in the likely possibility of "Turkish oil" (Could it be in the Aegean?).

Although the Greek Cypriot side is observing secrecy on the issue, its importance is not lessened; no one in Paris has any doubts that if the French Government (probably on the occassion of Mitterrand's visit to Athens) fails to change Elf Aquitaine's stance the Republic of Cyprus will suffer one of the most obvious and significant defeats in its struggle for survival which it has been waging since 1974.

SPOKESMAN COMMENTS ON SENATOR PERCY'S ROLE

ASSEMBLY ADOPTS ARTICLES GOVERNING STRIKES

[Text] Articles 58 and 59 of the draft constitution regulating the principles concerning strikes and lockouts and banning strikes and lockouts in small worksites have been adopted. Another article was sent back to the drafting committee for amendment.

Article 58, under the heading "The Rights of Strike and Lockout," which was adopted by the Consultative Assembly this evening, is as follows: The parties possess the right to strike and to lockout in case of disagreements during collective bargaining. The conditions and rules of using these rights are regulated by law. The rights of strike and lockout cannot be employed in contradiction to the rules of good will and in a manner detrimental to the community and to the national wealth. The trade union is responsible for damages caused by the workers and their union during a strike at the place where the strike is being held. Conditions under which strikes and lockouts might be banned or postponed are regulated by law. In cases where strikes and lockouts are banned or postponed, the disagreement is resolved by the High Arbitration Council. Strikes and lockouts for political purposes, strikes and lockouts of solidarity, general strikes and lockouts, occupation of workplaces, reduction of production and resistance [direnis] are prohibited. Sanctions are specified by law. Those who are not striking cannot be prevented from working.

Article 59, which was amended by the drafting committee in line with the motions submitted, stipulates that there can be no strikes, lockouts or collective bargaining in small workplaces employing no more than five workers and in charity associations and societies which are under state protection and which engage in public service. According to the article, suitable working conditions applicable to workers employed in the above-mentioned places will be determined by the Council of Ministers in accordance with collective bargaining periods.

The Consultative Assembly then referred to the drafting committee Article 60, which deals with the order of economic and social life and which regulates the principles concerning market control. The assembly will resume its debate on the articles at 1000 tomorrow morning.

VOTCP SCORES CONSTITUTION ARTICLES ON LABOR

[Station commentary: "No to Every Line of the Junta's Constitution"]

[Text] Certain crucial articles concerning the working class are now on the Consultative Assembly's agenda. The 10 articles, from 50 to 60, of the junta's constitution are really knives thrust into the heart of the working class. These articles aim to perpetuate the fierce exploitation of labor and tyrannically oppress the economic struggle of the working class. They totally eliminate the limited syndical rights granted by the 1961 Constitution.

Article 52 already evinces that this constitution is the constitution of the exploiting class. The state, the article notes, protects the balance of interests in worker-employer relations and the labor peace. Dear listeners, what is the labor peace mentioned in the constitution? In a statement recently at tycoon Ibrahim Bodur's factory in Canakkale, junta ringleader Sahinkaya explained this, saying that his administration has established labor peace and will not allow its disruption. This is exactly what Sahinkaya said. This is what they mean by labor peace. Labor peace is what the junta has been doing for the past 2 years. It consists of silencing the working class through tyranny and sentencing it to starvation. According to the bourgeoisie, labor peace exists if the working class is silent and unable to enhance its struggle.

This can only be achieved through tyranny, because, contrary to what is written in the junta's constitution, a balance of interests can never be established between worker and employer in a capitalist society. Of course it cannot be established. One side is the owner of the factory and is yielding profits from every worker, which is his goal. The other side is the worker and possesses only his labor. The state, on the other hand, is supporting the bosses. As can be seen, their labor peace merely consists of forcing the worker to consent to what the boss is giving him. With this purpose, the junta's constitution makes the unions useless to the working class and the class struggle. The constitution does not allow free collective wage agreements. The high arbitration council will intervene on the bosses' behalf on every issue. Moreover, collective agreements will only compromise the issue of wages and the like. Issues such as the reduction of working hours and increased vacation time will henceforth be regulated by law alone. We have witnessed what the workers were given by law over the past 2 years. The working class is thus being prevented from broadening its rights. Furthermore, unions are banned from political activity, which prohibits the working class from taking an interest in the country's problems, acting in a bid to resolve these problems in its interest or uniting in action with other mass organizations. The junta's constitution very clearly reflects how the sovereign exploiting forces fear the working class and its revolutionary and leading role.

This constitution also aims to put an end to syndical organizations in factories and other work premises. It renders it impossible for workers' representatives to conduct any syndical activity in workplaces. Through this constitution, those who created an outcry because the safes of a few banks in the covered bazaar in Istanbul were broken into during the Ecevit government are now coveting the unions' safes. They wish to control the unions on behalf of the bosses. They are blatantly interfering in the internal affairs of the working class.

The junta's constitution has fully transformed the right to strike into a showpiece. Even in laws enacted according to the 1961 Constitution the right to strike was very restricted. Strikes were permitted only after numerous procedures and ceremonies and they were subject to the arbitrary bans imposed by the government. Now, even this limited right is being eliminated. Strikes are being transformed into weapons that do not function. Article 58 states that the right to strike may not be used in contradiction to the rules of good will. Since the working class can never have good will toward the bourgeoisie, which exploits it to the bone, it is up to you to imagine how useless the right to strike will become. The constitution further stipulates that a strike cannot continue for more than 60 days.

The junta's constitution attempts to divide the working class. Workers working at places employing less than 10 workers will not be considered workers. These workers' right to strike and make collective agreements or form unions is not recognized even on paper. The junta abandons millions of workers to the mercy of savage capitalists and at the same time it attempts to create strife between workers employed in small and large places. Past experience has shown that civil servants who do not have the right to form unions have continuously been provoked against workers. Now, the same thing is being attempted with workers employed in small work places. There are attempts to create enmity among workers and civil servants, who share equal interests and who should wage a joint struggle. The bosses, who will benefit from all this, on the other hand, are being accorded the right to lockout. If the workers are not satisfied with what the boss deigns to give -- and it is clear that they will never be satisfied -- then the boss will resort to a lockout. The bosses will impose their wishes on the workers through this threat.

The working class will say no to this constitution. It will say no to it not only in order to protect its own interests but also because this constitution does not safeguard the interests of all toilers, civil servants, small shopkeepers or peasants and it does not favor labor.

NEW CALEDONIA LEADER MEETS ON INDEPENDENCE

[Text] Paris, Aug 26 (AFP) -- A Melanesian pro-independence leader from the French overseas territory of New Caledonia said today that the measure of autonomy which Paris plans to grant the South Pacific island should lead to independence by 1984.

Jean-Marie Tjibaou, vice-president of New Caledonia's Government Council, said after meeting with French Overseas Secretary of State Henri Emmanuelli that "only the native population -- excluding the French nationals living there -- should be consulted on the future possibility of independence."

Noting that the local parliament in Noumea, New Caledonia's capital, had already rejected three out of four Paris reform projects tending towards mere autonomy for the island, he said he had asked for an appointment with President Francois Mitterrand to press his point.

The pro-independence front already dominates the Government Council, the executive of the mineral-rich island, whose president however is named by France.

The current president, French High Commissioner of New Caledonia Christian Nucci, said in a television interview today after returning here from a visit to the South Pacific, Australia and New Zealand that "not a single state, not a single leader I met, wanted France to quit this territory."

Mr Nucci said that on the contrary the Pacific states "hoped for increased French influence in this part of the world grouped around three main themes -- the economy, scientific and cultural know-how and cultural affairs."

He predicted that the region would develop immensely in the next 20 years.

GOVERNMENT CRISIS REPORTEDLY LOOMS OVER ECONOMY

WA261300 Copenhagen BERLINGSKE TIDENDE in Danish 20 Aug 82 p 4

[Article by Magnus Gudmundsson of RITZAUS BUREAU]

[Text] Reykjavik. Lack of agreement within the Icelandic Government on new economic measures to deal with the most serious crisis since 1968 led on Thursday [19 August] to speculations regarding the viability of the government.

A week ago, the Central Bank of Iceland suspended quotations on the Icelandic krona. At the same time, the bank presented a proposal to the government for a devaluation of approximately 13 percent, as well as an increase in interest rates of from four to six percent. Already on Friday, the government said that the proposal of the Central Bank would be studied as part of a package solution.

But the government parties have not been able to agree on the contents of an economic package. Well informed sources are saying that the internal conflicts within the governing parties have worsened the situation.

The Icelandic coalition government consists of a breakaway group from the conservative Independence Party, the liberal Progressive Party and the leftist Socialist People's Alliance Party. Prime Minister Gunnar Thoroddsen, who also is head of the breakaway conservative group, is attempting to mediate among the conflicting parties in his government. But the Porgressive Party and the People's Alliance are now openly blaming each other for the fact that that no economic rescue action has yet been decided.

Both the governing parties and the opposition have already begun preparations for an election campaign. They have placed advertisements in newspapers, in which they are trying to recruit candidates for their election committees. They assert that these preparations are only a formality, so that they will be prepared for a possible election campaign, whether it begins [earlier than scheduled] in the fall or [as scheduled] next summer.

Crisis Said Resolved

[RITZAUS BUREAU dispatch: "Anker Jorgensen Arrived and Icelandic Crisis Was Resolved"]

[Text] Reykjavik -- When Danish Prime Minister Anker Jorgensen arrived for an official visit to Iceland on Sunday evening [22 August] the serious Icelandic Government crisis had already been resolved. The night before Anker Jorgensen's arrival the coalition government's three parties had reached a compromise solution to the country's most serious economic crisis since 1968. Official sources said that the solution had been speeded by the prime minister's visit. One of the Icelandic Government's decisions is a devaluation of the krona by 13 percent. This is part of a comprehensive economic recovery program. Yesterday evening Anker Jorgensen and his wife were the guests at a private dinner given by Icelandic Prime Minister Gunnar Thoroddsen.

DEMOCRATIC ACTION WILLING TO RUN ON PSOE TICKET

PM261457 Madrid YA in Spanish 24 Aug 82 p 6

[Text] Democratic Action Party (PAD) Secretary General Francisco Fernandez Ordonez stated yesterday that he would not mind running in the general election on the Spanish Socialist Workers Party [PSOE] ticket, in statements made to the newspaper INFORMACION of Alicante at his summer residence in Santa Pola (Alicante). "I would not mind running in the election on the Socialist Party ticket." He said: "The problem is that I have a party -- the PAD -- and I must know what will happen afterward." "I am convinced," he continued, "that we will be in the same boat, and that both during the campaign and after the election we will both be attacked." "There may or may not be an agreement with the PSOE." He added: "I believe that there will be, but what is clear is that the line of least resistance is placing our people on the Socialist lists. When considering names, no objection has ever been raised to our taking part in the operation. Moreover, for my part I have never demanded to be among the foremost places on the list for Madrid." "I fully understand the attitude of the PSOE," he emphasized, "whose grassroots wish to run under its name, but everything can be resolved."

"Since it appears that they are going to win," he stated, "this deprives me of moral strength when negotiating. Moreover, it escapes nobody that we are a dwarf and the PSOE is a giant. In any event, all that I wish to do is to guarantee the PAD's survival before and after the election." "It is not that I am saying in advance," he explained, "that we are going to swallow the PSOE's program completely, although I believe that it is something that can be accepted without too many problems. I believe that no difficulties will arise in this respect."

"The two problems which could arise in reaching an agreement -- or rather, in not reaching one -- are already clear in Alfonso Guerra's statements: The pressures from their grassroots on the one hand, and the delicate matter of finding a formula which will appeal to us." Fernandez Ordonez concluded his statements by referring to Adolfo Suarez' Democratic and Social Center (CDS) in these words: "In my opinion, Suarez' operation, in which the PAD will never take part, is based on all the debris of the Union of the Democratic Center."

APEL: PIPELINE DISPUTE ENDANGERS WESTERN DEFENSE

[Text] Frankfurt, 27 Aug (DPA) -- Federal Defense Minister Hans Apel believes that the dispute between the United States and Europe over the gas pipeline deal is endangering the West's defense. NATO cannot live with this kind of exacerbation in the long term, he told the German Atlantic Society in Frankfurt today. The gas pipeline deal has become an issue of prestige. "We cannot go on carrying things to extremes. That is intolerable," he said.

BUNDESWEHR GENERAL VIEWS WARSAW PACT CAPABILITY

[Text] Bonn, 27 Aug (DPA) -- Lt Gen Wolfgang Altenburg, the commanding general of the 3rd Bundeswehr Corps, believes that, given an adequate early warning period, the Bundeswehr and its allies under the forward defense strategy could probably stop an attack by the first strategic echelon, the combat troops, of the Warsaw Pact forces. In an interview, he told the journal DEFENSE TECHNOLOGY that there would be problems if the enemy were able to put his second strategic echelon, that is, his reserves, into the battlefield before the allied divisions could be brought from overseas.

Altenburg, who is predicted to succeed Juergen Brandt as Bundeswehr inspector-general, said the first strategic echelon of the Warsaw Pact are the forces stationed in the GDR, Poland and Czechoslovakia. The forces based in the Western military areas of the Soviet Union are the second strategic echelons. In the event of war, he said, the essential task of the Western air force is not to fight the tanks "in front of my nose" but rather to cut the enemy supply lines.

In Bonn it was learned today that the Soviets have been enhancing for 1 year the striking power of their forces in the GDR. As part of a structural change they have increased the firepower and mobility of their land forces. According to Western estimates, 525,000 Soviet soldiers are now stationed in the GDR as well as 7,100 tanks. Some 2,000 new artillery systems will be added by the end of 1983. At present there are 20 Soviet divisions in the GDR. Competent quarters in Bonn are closely watching the numerical growth of the Soviet forces as well as the steady imporvement in the quality of their weapons.

GOVERNMENT 'RESERVED' ON NICARAGUAN MEDIATION

[Text] Bonn, 27 Aug (DPA) -- Bonn has responded with distinct reserve to the desire by the Nicaraguan junta for the Federal Government to join Venezuela and Mexico in taking steps to secure a peaceful solution to the crisis in Latin America. Daniel Ortega, the junta coordinator, recently announced in Managua that he will request mediation when he visits Bonn at the end of September.

Bonn diplomatic sources said today that the Federal Government has been working for some time together with the United States and all interested countries in Europe for a peaceful solution to the crisis in Central America. In Bonn's view, this can best be achieved by economic cooperation. This conflict should be resolved without the intervention of nonregional forces. The Federal Government is seeking through its contacts, including the coming visit by Ortega, to work for a peaceful settlement.

Against the background of the different assessments taken by Washington and Bonn of the situation in Nicaragua and the role played by the Sandinist junta, the Federal Government is clearly anxious not to upgrade the importance of Ortega's visit.

Government circles expressly emphasize that he will be visiting the Federal Republic at his own request. It is understood that he will meet Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher on 26 September, Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt on 28 September and pay a courtesy call on Federal President Karl Carstens.

Whereas Washington regards the junta as stooges of Cuba and Moscow and has suspended aid to Nicaragua, Bonn believes that to isolate the Sandinists can only aggravate Nicaragua's situation. Since the 1979 revolution Bonn has provided over DM137,000,000 for Nicaragua with its 2.5 million inhabitants.

SCHMIDT, JORGENSEN DISCUSS FISHING QUOTA

[Text] Bonn, 29 Aug (DPA) -- In a talk during an SPD election meeting in Wiesbaden yesterday, Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Danish Prime Minister Anker Jorgensen failed to reach agreement in the dispute over the quota of catches for German deep-sea fishermen in the area off western Greenland. There had been no agreement in the legal views of the situation taken by the two men, a Bonn government spokesman said today.

In his talk with Schmidt Jorgensen said that he would communicate the Danish view in the fishing dispute to the chancellor in a written form. The spokesman said that Schmidt, during his talk with Jorgensen, had expressed much understanding for the very hard conditions of life of the Greenland islanders, for whom fishing is vital. In agreement with the Danish Government Schmidt invited the premier of Greenland, J. Motzfeldt, to visit the Federal Republic. The chancellor was hoping, said the spokesman, that Motzfeldt would visit Bonn in September.

SPD'S BAHR VISITS BEIJING, COMMENTS ON TALKS

[Text] Beijing, SPD Chairman Willy Brandt will visit the People's Republic of China next spring. The Chinese side has affirmed the invitation to Brandt in talks with SPD politician Egon Bahr in Beijing. Bahr said in Beijing today that Brandt would link his first visit to China at the end of March or the beginning of April with his trip to a Socialist International meeting in Australia.

For some time now the Chinese leadership has been trying to establish contacts with social democratic and socialist parties in Western Europe. The SPD does not yet have official links with Beijing.

Bahr, who has been in China since Monday, today met Zhang Wenjin, vice foreign minister responsible for Western Europe. In an interim assessment of his political talks in China, Bahr told DPA that his impression was that the difference and political disagreements between China and the Soviet Union are too great for them to be overcome in the foreseeable future. As a "large-scale normalization" is thus not possible, attempts are now being made to achieve small settlements, Bahr said, and pointed to the forthcoming resumption of trade between China and the USSR in the border area, sports contacts and other bilateral measures.

Asked about relations between China and the United States, Bahr said that the Chinese had stressed that for them the problem of American arms supplies to Taiwan has not been solved by the recent communique agreed on between with the United States as merely a first step and now wants to wait and see if the Washington administration keeps to the communique. In its relations with the United States the Taiwan question plays an "enormous role."

Bahr also said that he had a "very frank talk" with Vice Foreign Minister Zhang Wenjin about the world situation and the growing threat to world peace. They also discussed arms control questions.

Earlier, Bahr had also met Qian Liren, deputy director of the International Liaison Department of the CPC Central Committee. At the end of next week Bahr will travel to Moscow.

DM4.5 BILLION LOAN FROM SAUDI ARABIA PLANNED

DW301029 Hamburg DER SPIEGEL in German 30 Aug 82 p 103

[Text] Neither Saudi Arabia nor people in Bonn are saying how much money the Federal Government will borrow from the Arab oil state. However, it will be about as much as the Education Ministry will spend this year -- DM4.5 billion. As of mid-August, the Saudis had transferred 2.7 billion of the total. Thus, in 1982 Bonn will incur considerably fewer debts with the Saudi state bank SAMA than in previous years. In 1981 the Federal Government borrowed DM11.2 billion from the kingdom and in 1980 about DM8 billion. The issue of credits was not a subject discussed in Riyadh the weekend before last during Finance Minister Manfred Lahnstein's visit. The Bonn minister discussed the forthcoming annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund in Toronto.

[Text] Frankfurt/Bonn, 29 Aug (DPA) -- The family of the secretary to the GDR ambassador in Colombia arrived in Frankfurt today on a scheduled flight. The secretary, Ursula Jantschek, her husband, Manfred, and their two sons had requested consular assistance in the FRG's Embassy in Bogota. In Bonn it was learned that the GDR Embassy in Bogota had tried to stop the Colombian Foreign Ministry from issuing an exit permit for the family.

FIRST GROUP OF IRANIAN DEPORTEES DEPARTS

[Excerpt] Mainz, 27 Aug (DPA) -- The first 5 of 81 supporters of the Iranian revolutionary leader, Ayatollah Khomeyni, who have been in custody since the end of April following a brutal attack on compatriots with differing political views at a Mainz students' hostel, have been deported. The Rhineland-Palatinate Interior Ministry confirmed in Mainz today in reply to questioning that they were flown to Ankara on Tuesday and taken from there by railway to Tehran.

The Iranians agreed to their deportation. The ministry spokesman gave no details about when the Iranians still in custody would leave the Federal Republic.

REPORTS DIFFER ON NUCLEAR STATION ACCIDENT

[Excerpts] Duesseldorf/Karlsruhe, 27 Aug (DPA) -- Conflicting accounts were given today about a mishap which occurred on 20 August at the Wuergassen nuclear power staion. The North Rhine-Westphalian Labor Ministry confirmed that radioactive dust was released when a sand filter was exchanged. But the exposure of workers and the room concerned was well within the permitted radiation level. "No one suffered injury," a ministry spokesman said.

However, according to the Federation of Environmental Action Groups, two workers were taken to the hospital. The staff had been asked to keep the incident secret. The 600 MW nuclear power station has been switched off since May for maintenance work. It was commissioned in 1972

CDU'S WISSMAN EXPECTS GOVERNMENT CHANGE

DW271035 Cologne Deutschlandfunk Network in German 0421 GMT 27 Aug 82

[Interview with Matthias Wissman, federal chairman of the CDU Young Union, by reporter Heribert Schwan; date and place not given -- recorded]

[Excerpt] [Question] It is again permitted to doubt the continuation of SPD/FDP coalition in Bonn. Political observers expect the FDP to jump to the CDU/CSU this year. Do you expect it too?

[Answer] I think there is a good chance that a change will take place this year.

[Question] CDU chief Kohl has given the FDP up to the end of this year to implement a changeover to the CDU/CSU. Is that the correct strategy?

[Answer] I think it is correct not to run after the FDP but to make it clear that if they do not make a political change, showing the courage to make a new beginning, the CDU/CSU must do everything to achieve an absolute majority in 1984. We cannot wait for 2 years and we will not run after the FDP for 2 years.

COMMENTATOR VIEWS EFFECT OF BANK RATE CUT

[Commentary signed FK: "At the Upper Limit"]

[Text] The new interest rate cut of the Central Bank Council was considerable. The Federal Bank went to the upper limit of the expectations it had itself created. A delay of the interest rate cut or a smaller cut would certainly have been considered as bad economic news. Now the businessmen, the average house builders and private credit customers can be happy about the considerable cost alleviations promised by Federal Bank President Poehl; according to the first reactions of the credit economy, it looks as if much more of the cheaper money will "reach" the final consumer this time. Not even the Federal Bank expects, however, that the cost alleviations will become a distinct impetus for the deteriorating economic situation. In order to achieve this bitterly necessary effect, the interest rate cut should have gone considerably beyond expectations. This is no longer a taboo, even for conservative bankers, because of the interest rate cuts in the United States and the regained balance of German trade. The Central Bank Council has again acted according to the principle of giving "priority to carefulness." The economy can expect further small interest rate steps; it will therefore wait before making investments.

It remains an absolute secret of the Federal Bank why the interest rate decisions should support the Bonn budget planners. Such an effect could be achieved through an improvement of the economic situation which would promise increasing revenues. It should be at least indicated to the Bonn politicians that they should not react to revenue decreases caused by the economic situation with constant expenditure cuts which aggravate the crisis. The bankers of the Federal Bank know very well that the unused capital market could stand further raising of credits.

MINISTER PLEDGES TO MAINTAIN PIPELINE CONTRACTS

[Text] Paris, Aug 27 (AFP) -- France will not go back on contracts already pledged for the trans-European Siberian gas pipeline and also maintains its independence, French Research and Industry Minister Jean-Pierre Chevenement stressed today.

Mr Chevenement told the press here today that the contracts France had signed with the Netherlands, Algeria and the Soviet Union were aimed at reducing the country's dependence on oil, mainly imported from the Middle East and "often delivered by U.S. companies."

Washington's embargoes against Dresser-France and Creusot-Loire, he said, demonstrated that "a technological dependence has been established which could, in the future, limit our national independence in energy of in other domains." But there "cannot be a good alliance," he added, which "fails to respect national independence."

Commenting on U.S. sanctions against Creusot-Loire, Mr Chevenement said that "no fact" could explain the moves. It was comparable to a "hostage" attack, he said, adding that the government had called for an in-depth inquiry into the consequences of the sanctions.

This minister stressed that current problems between Washington and Paris should not be exaggerated. But he said that investigation into how to reduce France's technological dependence had begun.

[Word indistinct] Mr Chevenement said, "holds a position of solidarity." But he added that the ongoing pipeline issue could have the positive effect of triggering the development of competitive technological know-how. This would reduce "the disturbing technological dependence set up in the past," he said.

Europe, he said, could possibly upgrade cooperation with Japan.

Meanwhile, Dresser-France's management described the current situation as "serious" and said it was "deeply concerned" by the U.S. sanctions. The application of those sanctions, the management said, could lead to the company failing to receive the parts and supplies needed for continued production.

The management of Creusot-Loire refused to comment on the sanctions. But sources here said that a top-level team from the company had left for the United States.

MINISTRY DENIES REPORT OF MIRAGE SALE TO PRC

[Text] Mirage aircraft for China? It is rather difficult this evening to determine the truth. What is known is that there are negotiations in progress between France and China for the sale to Beijing of Mirage-2000 aircraft. The Chinese, in fact, want to modernize their air force and early this week confirmed that they were interested in the French Mirage aircraft. According to REUTER's, Charles Hernu, French minister of defense, has reportedly announced Paris's agreement to sell Mirage aircraft to the Chinese, a contract involving several billion dollars, naturally, which would provide for the assembly in China of some of these aircraft.

But this evening the Ministry of Defense categorically denied this report. These are imaginary reports, they say in Paris. No statement has been made either by the Ministry of Defense or by the minister himself. It is consequently rather difficult to work out the truth.

THREE IRA TERRORISTS ARRESTED IN PARIS SUBURB

[Text] Paris, Aug 30 (AFP) -- The two men and one woman arrested Saturday night in the Paris suburb of Vincennes are Irish nationals and members of the Irish Republican Army, an authoritative source said here today.

The three, whose names figure on a list of international terrorists, were preparing to attack the British naval attache in the Dutch capital of The Hague, the source added.

The alleged terrorists were still being heard today by French criminal police, who refused comment.

They were also planning to attack British personalities and property in France and other European countries, according to authoritative sources here.

But reports sweeping Paris overnight that they planned to set off bombs in the French capital on Sunday in public places to kill and maim people were formally denied.

Their names were expected to be released by police this evening. France's leading police officer, Chief Commissaire Robert Broussard, is personally questioning the trio.

(In The Hague, Dutch police were today inquiring, at the request of Interpol, into the authenticity of identity papers found in the flat where the three alleged terrorists lived in Vincennes, a Justice Ministry spokesman announced.

(The spokesman said there was "a link" between these papers and the Netherlands, but did not give details.

(The spokesman said that information provided by Interpol did not mention any plans of attack against one or more British military attaches).

The provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) has carried out a number of attacks abroad against British targets. They assassinated the British ambassador to The Hague in 1979 and have bombed several British military targets in West Germany.

The IRA was founded in 1916 in Dublin "to fight for a united Ireland free from British oppression".

ITALIAN EXTREME LEFTIST CAPTURED IN PARIS

There was an international arrest warrant against Mr Scalzone, 35, in connection with two assassination attempts in Milan in 1977. He was first arrested on April 7, 1979, together with Toni Negri, another leader of Workers' Autonomy, and held without trial on charges of "armed insurrection against state power."

Released from prison temporarily for health reasons in 1980, he spent six months under house arrest before fleeing the country.

BERSAGLIERI ESCORT PLO, SYRIAN TROOPS TO SYRIA

[Excerpts] (ANSA) — Beirut, August 27 -- About two thousand Syrian and Palestinian troops were escorted from west Beirut to the Syrian frontier by Italian soldiers today in the first movement out of the Israeli-besieged Lebanese capital by land since the Palestinian evacuation began.

The Italian Bersaglieri infantry, who provided the escort, form part of a multinational buffer force that also includes American and French troops.

The convoy consisted of 225 military trucks, hired buses, jeeps, cars of all types and requisitioned civilian trucks forming a colorful, claxon-mad snake under the hot sun.

Some of the vehicles were stacked [with] the Palestinians' personal belongings including TV sets.

Frequent check-points on the seventy-kilometer route slowed progress to a rush-hour crawl.

Meanwhile, Italian military sources denied this morning that an Italian infantryman was wounded at the Galerie Sim'an in the last 24 hours.

The galerie is the area assigned to the Bersaglieri, just five hundred of whom recently got into Beirut. Yesterday, a news agency said one of them was hit in the leg by a stray bullet shot off by Fedayeen celebrating the departure from the Lebanese capital.

FOREIGN MINISTRY OUTLINES LEBANESE AID PROGRAM

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, August 27 -- A series of aid measures for Lebanon worth more than eight million dollars were announced by the Italian Foreign Ministry here today, according to a Foreign Ministry communique, both to give emergency assistance in various fields and to help in the "more ample" task of helping to start rebuilding the areas ravaged during Israel's invasion of the country and siege of Beirut.

The aid, which will go to Lebanese and Palestinians alike, will include anything from blankets and medicines to dried foods and finance. It will be channeled through airlifts, sea-links, and international organizations.

According to a detailed breakdown published by the Foreign Ministry, the aid planned so far is as follows:

--An airlift via Larnaka in Cyprus transporting medicine, tents and blankets to collection centers set up by the UNRWA, the UN organization in charge of aid to the Palestinian refugees.

-- The dispatch to Damascus of twelve tons of dried food to be sent on to Palestinian collection centers in Lebanon organized by the Palestinian Red Crescent, the local Red Cross.

--About 400,000 dollars sent to the Italian Red Cross to buy food, medicine, health equipment, tents and blankets.

-- Six thousand tons of rice to be sent as food aid through the Food and Agriculture Organization.

-- Contribution of about 180,000 dollars to UNICEF, the UN's children's fund, emergency plans to help children of Lebanon.

-- Commitment to a further contribution of 250 million dollars to the second phase of the emergency plan which UNICEF is drawing up for Lebanon.

This phase will involve direct aid, assistance for homeless mothers and children, the restoration of essential services in the Palestinian refugee camps, the reestablishment of water supplies, the rebuilding of health infrastructures, and the reestablishment of schools.

SOVIET SHIP ARRIVES FOR PIPELINE EQUIPMENT

[Text] (ANSA) -- Leghorn, August 28 -- The first two pumping stations made by the Florence-based engineering firm, Nuovo Pignone, for the Siberia-West European gasline are about to leave this port for the Soviet Union, a communique from the Cipriani Shipping Agency said here today.

The Soviet ship, Dubrovnik, of ten thousand tons, put in at the port yesterday. It will embark the machinery by September 4.

Each pumping station has three electric motors produced under license from the U.S. firm, General Electric. 42 motors are to be supplied for fourteen of the nineteen pumping stations along the entire gasline.

The Italian machinery was bought by the Soviet Union before the Reagan administration put on an embargo in an attempt to pressure Moscow over the situation in Poland.

PRESS COMMENTS ON RED BRIGADE ATTACK IN SALERNO

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, August 27 -- The Red Brigades attack on an army truck in Salerno yesterday afternoon grabbed the headlines in the Italian dailies this morning, with most of them warning that the urban guerrilla group has finished its habitual summer truce and is back on the attack -- "in search of weapons and revenge" as the Rome newspaper LA REPUBBLICA put it.

The same paper said that the attack was undoubtedly a continuation of the Red Brigades' promised campaign against NATO and other military installations.

According to LA REPUBBLICA, one explanation for the attack may merely be that the Brigades need arms and that attacks on targets like barracks is one way of getting them.

Another hypothesis, LA REPUBBLICA argued, is that these attacks form part of an "aberrant plan to create the sensation of civil war, a psychological trick to hide the disastrous state of the terrorist gangs -- in brief, aiming high to conceal the reality".

Another Rome daily, PAESE SERA, pointed out that there is "alarm" over the fact that the southern region of Campania is becoming the "far west of a Red Brigandry that is increasingly insolent and bloody, which has put down roots in the soil of organized crime too, and which is reorganizing and rearming with a ferocious velocity".

The Turin daily, LA STAMPA, made the point that the Red Brigades have not moved south just to seek support from organized crime, but also to "lean on a population that has already been harshly tested and is therefore more available for rebellion".

The Communist Party daily, L'UNITA', argued that the grave thing is that the government and the competent authorities "have not taken the indispensable measures of vigilance and prevention in time".

According to L'UNITA', the attack was a blow at the military institutions with the aim of "disconcerting them and thus renewing the attack on the republican state".

Further Comment

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, August 28 -- The need to refurbish their arsenal and a determination to strike at the army as a key institution in the Italian state were the factors that led the Red Brigades to attack an army convoy at Salerno Thursday, the Italian dailies agreed today.

The Rome daily, LA REPUBBLICA, added that the Brigades are also using southern Italy as their stomping ground in order to "recruit urban proletarians" and strengthen already existing ties with organized crime.

"This transformation," the daily asserted, "in fact coincides with the end of the Red Brigades as a clandestine structure impermeable to infiltration."

"But what they lose in secrecy, they are seeking to win back in ramifications and alliances", LA REPUBBLICA said. "This is the difference in quality of this fourth phase (of the Red Brigades history) and this is the real dangerousness of the phenomenon that could spill over into attempts at 'social war.'"

According to the Milan daily, IL GIORNO, seizing arms and munitions is only a secondary objective. "The major objective is linked to a certain political-military image that the terrorists want to offer of themselves" IL GIORNO asserted.

The same daily called on the Italian army to improve its organization and acquire the "mentality adapted to facing unexpected and sudden dangers" as a step towards improved self-defense. [sentence as received]

The Socialist Party mouthpiece, AVANTI, argued that the attack showed there had been a reorganization in the Red Brigades. "Probably, a strategic re-definition of the armed struggle is under way" AVANTI said.

IL MANIFESTO, the leading voice to the left of the Communist Party, said the Red Brigades' "new course" was aimed primarily at a "propaganda message".

According to IL MANIFESTO, military vehicles are attacked because of their symbolic value. "They strike at the armed forces and pierce military prestige, thus attempting to relaunch the decrepit myth of invincibility and super efficiency" the paper said.

Police Predict Autumn Campaign

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, August 28 -- The Rome and Naples Red Brigades cadres have joined forces and are attempting to arm themselves to mount a terrorist campaign in the autumn, according to anti-terrorist police investigating the armed assault on an army jeep and van Thursday in the southern city of Salerno in which a policeman was killed and eight people were injured.

In the evening, at the end of a meeting chaired by Defense Minister Lelio Lagorio on anti-terrorist strategy, police sources said investigators are certain that the Brigades activities in the two cities are flanked by terrorists from the north still at large after the spring crackdown.

Despite the effective police work conducted in freeing American Army General James Lee Dozier from his Brigade captors in January, in a raid on a Padua apartment, and substantial inroads made against the Brigades in the north and in Rome since then, many Brigade veterans have eluded capture, these sources noted.

Indicating the August 19 assault on an army barracks on the outskirts of Rome, in which terrorists made off with some twenty rifles and machineguns, and the attack earlier this week, these sources said that the unified Brigades terrorists have chosen army targets to replenish their weapons stocks.

According to the latest reconstruction of the terrorist ambush in Salerno, Thursday, three groups of terrorists opened fire on an army van and the escort jeep carrying enlisted men to the local barracks for the changing of the guard. After capturing six submachine guns, an exchange of fire was opened between the terrorists and public security policemen in a passing patrol van in which one policeman was killed and two soldiers, two other policemen and four passers-by were wounded. One of the soldiers and one onlooker were reported still in critical condition Friday night.

According to investigations in Naples, another hint that the Brigades may be planning an autumn campaign lies in a number of cars stolen in Naples over the last few days.

Three armed men stole a car from a Neopolitan garage Friday night and investigators said they had the impression they may have been urban guerillas.

There was a similar theft in another garage in the morning when two armed men stole a Fiat 132 after immobilizing the guard.

Early in August, the Brigades stole the three cars used on Thursday in the Salerno attack on the army convoy.

POLICE ANNOUNCE LARGE-SCALE DRUG ARRESTS

[Text] (ANSA) Milan, August 30 -- 62 people were arrested at the weekend in an ongoing operation against drug traffickers in the north of Italy which has led to a total of 160 arrest warrants signed by Trento magistrates and the seizure of huge quantities of morphine and heroin, police in Milan reported Sunday.

What was described as one of the biggest drug rings operating in Italy imported morphine from Turkey, stored it in warehouses in the northern cities of Trento, Verona and Bolzano and sent it down to laboratories in Sicily for processing, before exporting the derivative, heroin, to the United States via the south France port of Marseilles. Through the same channels, the ring distributed uncut heroin in northern Italian cities.

A member of the Trento judiciary coordinating the investigation said that a number of the people taken into custody in the weekend dragnet will also be charged in connection with the alleged import of arms from the Middle East.

The magistrate underscored the ties known to exist in Italy between common crime and terrorism and disclosed that the drug ring is thought to have supplied arms to terrorist groups.

On Saturday, Milan police found seven-and-a-half kilograms of uncut heroin in a hotel room abandoned by a 25-year-old Egyptian national, (Abdel Monem Anwar Ismail), identified as one of the key figures in the north Italian drug ring.

The man had been arrested in June for carrying a false passport then dropped out of sight after his release August 14.

PCI OFFICIAL SCORES CONTINUED PSI-DC TIES

PM271535 Venice L'UNITA in Italian 25 Aug 82 pp 1, 12

[PCI Secretariat Member Alfredo Reichlin article: "To the Socialist Comrades"]

[Excerpts] When it came to the crunch, having stretched things to the limit, [PSI Secretary] Craxi returned to the alliance with the DC. Why, if, as this crisis shows, there is no longer any acceptable justification for it and its price is even higher than before? It is difficult above all to avoid the following thought: That he is afraid of a break in the PCI's isolation (which is what he gains from his position and the precondition for his bargaining power). It is not at all true that he fears being outmaneuvered by the PCI and an agreement on our part with the DC: This is the excuse invented by [PSI Deputy Secretary] Martelli, since it is quite obvious that our proposal of a different kind of government was directed not against the PSI but the DC power system. If the anticommunist prejudice lapses, the entire left comes into play, other forces and ideas are involved and the dialogue and the conflict with the DC undergo a qualitative change and take place no longer on the basis of the apportioning of power but on the basis of a quite different substance. Is this what Craxi fears?

The Socialist comrades will pardon us if we too now speak somewhat bitterly. But they must believe that we are not motivated by any desire for controversy or for propagandist revenge. The fact is that this cannot continue -- and this applies to the PSI too, whose loss of prestige is evident. An entire political phase is coming to a close. And we have not the least intention of limiting ourselves to complacently pointing to the ruins of so-called governability. The attempt made on various sides over the past 3 years to emerge from the crisis by means of a moderate stabilization and a shelving of the knot of historical, political and social -- but also state -- problems known as the "Communist question" has failed. But we are well aware that this has opened the way to a counter-offensive by the employers and the right, which now threatens to assail the entire left, for which the real problem is how to tackle it with others. However, the time has gone when only the Communist Party was made to undergo examinations. A far-reaching debate must be reopened within the PSI too. Is it permissible to press for it, or is this regarded as an attack, a provocation?

But Craxi will not accept it. It is true. However, let us be careful to ensure that this does not ultimately provide an excuse for factionalism and for abandoning the attempt to impart a new thrust to unitary initiative on the left. That would imply a failure to understand that in fact the conditions for such a new thrust are now more favorable. Why, and on the basis of what arguments, does Craxi not agree with this? This is the new factor to be used in order to address the entire socialist world with profound conviction. Until yesterday there were basically two arguments that to some extent justified the PSI's policy, even in the eyes of a certain sector of leftwing opinion. The first was that even if the difficult alliance with the DC did not constitute a turning point, it nevertheless constituted a "possible change" and in any case dealt a blow to the conservative forces. The second was that this path was an obligatory one, insofar as the "K factor" [PCI's degree of attachment to Moscow] ruled the PCI out of the game -- and not through any fault of the Socialists, who did no more than unwillingly recognize the anticommunist discrimination.

Both these arguments have been disproved by events and no longer hold water.

I belive that it is unnecessary to say that to respond to these obvious needs with a repetition of the Spadolini government is not arrogance; it is proof of blindness and impotence.

However, the questions troubling our comrades remain and are exascerbated: how is it possible to defend the left's unitary heritage without openly opposing a policy which threatens to break up the foundations of and destroy the requisites for that unity. And, on the other hand, how is a frontal confrontation which would lead to a laceration of the fabric and the instruments of struggle of the Italian workers movement (local authorities, trade unions, cooperatives, mass culture and so forth) to be averted?

These are the real dilemmas. There seems to me to be only one answer: to give the democratic alternative increasingly the scope of a great plan for transformation capable of involving the entire left, the broadest working class sectors and the country's modern intelligentsia.

How? Not only by defending our opinions but by taking up problems, opinions and values which, although distorted, underlied the political and social trends of the last few years, including the Socialists' growth.

An alternative, therefore, not as a deferral to the future, as a mere hardening of opposition, but as an attainment of a strong, independent position from which a great reforming party such as the PCI will redefine a constructive platform, conduct politics in all directions and formulate a democratic and unitary response equal to the Italian society's new problems.

POPE CONGRATULATES NEW LEBANESE PRESIDENT

[Text] (ANSA) -- Vatican City, August 26 -- Pope John Paul Two today sent a telegram of congratulations to Lebanon's President-elect Bashir Al-Jumayyil.

In his message, the pontiff voiced the hope that Jumayyil would successfully lead his country to peace in independence, promote national unity in respect for the rights of everyone, and pursue reconstruction and fraternal relations among all of the populations present in Lebanon.

The telegram ended with the pope invoking divine blessing for the Lebanese leader and people.

CORTES DISSOLVED; EARLY ELECTIONS SCHEDULED

Dissolution Decree Signed

[Text] King Juan Carlos has accepted the dissolution of the Cortes proposed by the prime minister. The king has signed the corresponding decree. The decree for the dissolution of the Cortes will, according to the EFE agency, be published on Monday 30 August in the official state gazette which will foreseeably allow general elections to be held on 30 October, exactly 2 months from the date of publication.

Prime Minister Addresses Nation

[Address to nation by Prime Minister Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo -- live or recorded]

[Text] I have asked his majesty the king to sign the decree dissolving the Cortes. Article 115 of the Constitution allots responsibility for this important decision exclusively to the prime minister after deliberation by the Council of Ministers. This deliberation took place this morning and confirmed the veiw which I formed some time ago. In accordance with Article 115, the decree of dissolution sets the date of the elections and these will take place on Thursday, 28 October.

Since the investiture, I have on several occasions expressed my intention not to substantially bring forward the date of general elections, although I have always added that this intention should not be interpreted as a desire to finish the legislative term at all costs and to the last minute regardless of parliamentary and political circumstances. These circumstances have changed over the past few weeks with the creation of new political parties, so that they are different from those in which the present deputies and senators were elected 3 and 1/2 years ago.

In my opinion this situation does not permit the commencement of a new period of parliamentary sessions under acceptable conditions of stability and effectiveness. For this reason I decided on dissolution immediately before legislative work resumes in September.

It is a fact that all governments since 1977 have been minority governments. It is also a fact that in each case they have been able to find the necessary political support to carry out their programs. However, the government over which I preside would now be forced to enter into difficult and artificial pacts which would confuse public opinion and necessarily distort its views. I do not believe that either the prestige of the institutions or the effectiveness of government action would benefit if I were to insist on maintaining the appearance of parliamentary normality under these circumstances.

I have not been influenced by any party considerations in deciding to dissolve parliament. I have sought to be mindful only of the interests of Spain; respect for the Cortes and the desire to do what was necessary for the nation to have a government with majority support as soon as possible have been uppermost in my mind and above any other consideration.

Although there are always outstanding questions in political life I believe I have fulfilled the basic commitments of my investiture as far as economic policy, autonomous policy, public order policy and foreign policy are concerned. The singular and difficult circumstances of the past year and a half have not stopped us from making decisive advances in the construction of the state and the consolidation of the institutions. To go further -- and in politics one always has to try to go further -- it is now necessary to go to the country and ask the electorate to use its vote to create a parliamentary majority to continue the job.

In a democracy there is no room for a political vacuum and neither will there be one now while society is called to elections. The Constitution does not relieve the government of its responsibilities until the new Cortes is constituted and the debate and vote on the investiture is held in congress and the new government over which I preside will continue until that time, fulfilling its obligations with the same dedication and will which have always motivated it.

I would not like to turn this necessary explanation of the dissolution of the Cortes into the first part of an election campaign, but I do venture to ask those listening to see this dissolution as a normal procedure of any parliamentary regime and in no way as a sign of fatigue in those of us who have accpeted the responsibility of government.

The legislature which is coming to an end has seen a deep transformation of Spanish society and the government party has enjoyed an effective majority in support of peaceful and ordered change. This is the central feature of our political evolution and the one which should continue to be its driving force in the near future. The government party has the ability and the hope of once again enjoying the confidence of the people in order to continue the task undertaken in 1977. Nothing makes a change of majorities necessary, but it is the electorate which must now decide and I am confident that it will show calmness and maturity.

Many thanks.

AFP Report on Situation

[Text] Madrid, Aug 27 (AFP) -- The third series of legislative elections in Spain's seven years as a democratic country will take place on October 28, it was announced today, after King Juan Carlos abruptly dissolved parliament.

The voting will take place after a three-week campaign -- from October 6 to 26 -- that analysts said could seal the downfall of the Center Democratic Party, the only ruling group Spain has known since the death of Francisco Franco in 1975.

The main benefactor of the dissolution would be the Socialist Party -- for which polls have consistently predicted victory in any early election. Yet such a development could further compromise Spain's fledgling democracy, given the powerful military's antipathy toward the Socialists.

The Center Democratic leader, Prime Minister Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo, was faced both with growth in Socialist popularity and as many as 40 defections since June from within the group's own ranks.

So, during the first cabinet meeting since the government returned from a summer break, Mr Calvo-Sotelo decided not to seek compromise with three new centrist parties made up of defectors.

In a 10-minute televised speech tonight, Mr Calvo-Sotelo himself said that he made the decision "to avoid difficult and artificial pacts" with newly created centrist parties.

Since the Center Democrats had only 122 seats of 350 in the Cortes (parliament), Mr Calvo-Sotelo had no choice. After the cabinet meeting, he went to Palma de Majorca, where King Juan Carlos was vacationing, and asked him to dissolve parliament.

After the king complied, Mr Calvo-Sotelo explained on television that he had originally not wanted to move up the election date by five months.

He said his first mission, after an unsuccessful military putsch on February 23, 1981 led to his appointment, was to take the legislature to the end of its March 1983 mandate.

But, he said, the defections and creations of new parties had left him with no choice. "In a democracy, there is no room for a political vacuum," he said.

He added that any alliance with the other parties would have been simply an attempt to "keep the appearance of a normal parliamentary life." The Christian democratic image, he said, had already suffered enough.

Reaction was critical. Many of the Christian democrats' adversaries, who may have preferred time to prepare for elections, said the move was too sudden.

The Communist Party called the decision "precipitous. ...These are not early elections, they are overly early elections," said a spokesman. "The dissolution does not surprise us, but we didn't believe that the elections would be in October."

The three new centrist groupings -- former Prime Minister Adolfo Suarez' Center Democratic and Social Party, the Democratic Liberal Party of Antonio Garrigues Walker, and the Democratic Popular Party (demo-Christians) of Oscar Alzaga -- also protested the decision's suddenness.

Mr Suarez also used the term "precipitous" to describe the decision, as did Mr Alzaga. Mr Garrigues said he thought the elections would take place "during the last 10 days in November."

The Socialists of Felipe Gonzalez and the conservative Popular Alliance of Manuel Fraga Iribarne -- the two parties who came out with the best showings in regional elections last fall in Galicia and last May in Andalusia -- would have preferred more time, analysts said.

But both reacted calmly. The Socialists said [words indistinct] Calvo-Sotelo's action reflected "governmental weakness," and Mr Fraga said the dissolution "does not take us by surprise."

Under the campaign timetable released late today, party lists of candidates for the Senate and Congress of Deputies must be submitted between September 8 and 10. Any coalition of parties must be announced before September 12.

The campaign period will coincide with a visit by Pope John Paul II, set for October 14 to 22. A papal nuncio, Father Antonio Innocenti, said the pontiff will visit Spain as scheduled and "speak as the pastor of all Catholics and all Spaniards.

"He will not place himself on a political level," Father Innocenti added.

But a Socialist Party official accused the Center Democrats of purposely scheduling the campaign to coincide with the visit. It is "absolutely intolerable," he said, for the government to "seek to involve" the pope in an election campaign.

Parties Begin Organizing

PA271831 Madrid EFE in Spanish 1726 GMT 27 Aug 82

[By Juan Frisuelos]

[Text] Madrid, 27 Aug (EFE) -- Spain will go to the polls on 28 October to elect a new parliament after King Juan Carlos I signed a decree today dissolving the chambers, presented to him by Prime Minister Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo.

This puts an end to recent speculation about whether the elections were going to be advanced. The elections were supposed to have been held in March 1983. This decree sets the party electoral machines into motion with the elections as their goal.

These machines must be ready on 6 October, the date set for the beginning of an electoral campaign that will last until 26 October.

Most political parties -- except for the government party -- had been expressing their opposition to the advancement of the election, favoring completion of the present legislature.

However, the Socialist opposition admitted that perhaps there was no other alternative in the face of changes experienced in the country's political picture. A spokesman of the government party said that he believed the legislative period was already "about to end."

However, observers saw in Calvo-Sotelo's decision an attempt to no longer prolong his work under uncertain legislative conditions after the "flight" of a long number of deputies from his party to join other splinter groups of the Union of the Democratic Center (UCD).

In addition, it was believed that the advancement of the elections would hinder the electoral organization of the parties that split, particularly the Democratic and Social Center created by Adolfo Suarez, former chief of government and UCD founder and leader, and the formation of the Christian democratic Popular Democratic Party of Oscar Alzaga, which is promoting an alliance of conservative forces.

According to political circles, the Spanish prime minister and his team had sufficiently discussed these extremes at the time when they made the decision to dissolve the parliament and advance the elections.

Ever since Suarez announced the creation of his new party, there have been daily defections of party members, leaders and UCD legislators to join the Democratic and Social Center, which has not denied that it favors a government alliance with the Socialists.

The Socialists, who according to the latest polls would be the winners in the next elections, were cautious in expressing an opinion about the possibility of establishing post-electoral pacts and announced that they want to obtain a majority in government by themselves after making a good showing in the elections.

What hasn't been established yet is if the advancement of the elections will affect Pope John Paul II's pastoral trip to Spain between 14 and 24 October, although church circles stressed that "the preparations for the holy father's visit are still underway.

Party Leaders Comment

PA280012 Madrid EFE in Spanish 2225 GMT 27 Aug 82

[Text] Madrid, 27 Aug (EFE) -- The decision made today by Spanish Prime Minister Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo to dissolve the parliament and to move the general elections forward was received with a measure of surprise by the political parties, which have already started up the electoral machinery.

Adolfo Suarez, former president and leader of the Democratic and Social Center [CDS], said that Calvo-Sotelo's decision adds to the difficulties of the recently constituted CDS.

When Suarez was asked during a press conference whether he believed he was responsible for this decision, following the transfer of Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] deputies to the CDS, he denied this possibility and recalled that these deputies have remained at the unconditional disposal of the government party on parliamentary issues, and that he has done the same with his seat.

In conclusion, commenting on the coincidence of the pope's visit to Spain and the electoral campaign, Suarez said he felt that the pope's presence in Spain at this moment was not timely, "because there could be some people who would want to use the pope's messages and speeches as instruments."

Antonio Garrigues, leader of the Liberal Democratic Party [PDL], stressed that the moving forward of the general elections "is a surprise that forces a speeding up in the consolidation of the PDL."

For Luis Urunuela, executive member of the Andalusian Socialist Party, the dissolution of the parliament is a "frivolous policy with the sole objective of avoiding the breakdown of the government party."

Miguel Roca, a spokesman for the Catalan nationalist minority in the parliament, said the presidential decision "is bad but seemed inevitable."

He added that "because it was anticipated and not unexpected, the dissolution of the parliament prevents us from denouncing the origin of this decision, since it has to do with a transfer of state policy that is merely an internal confrontation of the UCD." [sentence as received]

In conclusion, Xavier Arzullus, leader of the Basque Nationalist Party [PNV], said that his organization was not in agreement with moving the elections forward, although this action "favors the PNV, since its membership is stable."

FINNISH FOREIGN MINISTER VISITS, MEETS OLESON

[Thomas With RITZAUS BUREAU report]

[Excerpts] Finland is preparing the introduction of restrictions on the import of shoe soles for the Finnish shoemaking industry beginning with the new year. Danish exports worth around 20 million kroner are threatened.

The Danish Foreign Ministry takes such a serious view of the affair that it was raised by Danish Foreign Minister Kjeld Olesen at his meeting with his Finnish counterpart Par Stenback, who was paying a short visit to Copenhagen yesterday, RITZAUS BUREAU reports.

The problem was not mentioned at the press conference given by the Finnish foreign minister after his talks with Olesen, but he did say that the two foreign ministers had discussed "minor trading problems between the two countries."

This was the Finnish foreign minister's first official visit to Denmark, and he said at the press conference that his talks with Olesen had chiefly been an orientation. The two ministers discussed the Madrid conference, the Middle East and Olesen's visit to Washington, as well as Nordic questions. The ministers agreed on a Danish-Finnish cultural fund — there is one such fund already in existence, but hitherto it has been under purely Danish control.

Foreign Minister Stenback also said that during the Lebanon crisis the Finnish Embassy in Israel has acted as a contact channel between the Soviet and Israeli Governments.

"We have passed on four letters, but regardless of whether or not we know their contents we have no right to comment on them," Stenback said. He said that since the Soviet Union broke off diplomatic relations with Israel after the 1967 war the Finnish Embassy has been representing Soviet interests in Israel.

During his short stay the Finnish foreign minister also visited the Finnish Embassy in Copenhagen and Rosenborg Palace.

COALITION GOVERNMENT AGREES ON CRISIS PROGRAM

WA301145 Stockholm DAGENS NYHETER in Swedish 23 Aug 82 p 18

[Article by Kicki Borhammar]

[Text] From DAGENS NYHETER special correspondent, Reykjavik. A strongly restricted purchasing power, devaluation and measures to restrict imports — these points finally became the compromise which the Iceland coalition government could agree upon in order to save the country from its acute economic crisis.

Immediately after midnight [21 August], following the end of regular television programming, Prime Minister Gunnar Thoroddsen, came on the air in a special broadcast to appeal to the Icelandic people for understanding of the measures which the government had decided to take. His appearance came after several weeks of tension following the closing by the banks of their foreign exchange departments and rumors of a government crisis in the media.

The most important of the measures which the government agreed upon is that the Icelandic krone will be devalued by 13 percent. The goal is to strengthen industry, especially the fishing industry, which is finding it increasingly difficult to assert itself in international competition. In addition, the fishing fleet is receiving direct subsidy in order to cover previous losses. It is thought that these measures will insure full employment and will reduce the deficit in the balance of trade, which otherwise is expected to rise toward nine percent.

The government also considered itself forced to break the tie between devaluation and inflation through a tight limiting of the so-called cost-of-living supplements, which are to be cut during the remainder of this year. A provisional law will limit the September supplement to 2.9 percent, while the December supplement will only be half as large as it would have been had the system been left unchanged.

According to estimates, this means that purchasing power will decline by about eight to nine percent.

This measure has aroused concern within government, but the People's Alliance -- which is close to the labor unions -- finally agreed on the limiting because, among other reasons, funds are set aside for compensating the lowest paid workers, and because the entire cost-of-living supplement system will be reformed next year. There are 13 sections in the crisis package, and aside from cost-of-living changes, the limitation on imports also plays a decisive role. An extra tax on certain import goods will be introduced with a six-month period, and purchasing of ships from abroad for the fishing fleet will be halted for two years.

Already on Sunday [22 August] the reactions to the crisis package were vocal, and the opposition was saying that the measures will not have any effect in the long run.

The package has caused irritation within the labor unions, and it is still not certain that the workers will accept the measures.

KIPRIANOU TO ADDRESS UNGA IN SEPTEMBER

[Text] It has been announced today that President Kiprianou will leave for New York on or about 21 September to attend and address the UN General Assembly during its general debate. Among other things, the president of the republic will brief the General Assembly on the present phase of the Cyprus problem. During the debate on the Cyprus issue, he will stress the need for actions and measures to promote the implementation of the UN resolutions on Cyprus.

SPOKESMAN VIEWS TURKMEN'S 'FORTHCOMING SOLUTION'

NC271526 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1400 GMT 27 Aug 82

[Text] Referring to Turkish Foreign Minister Turkmen's statement [made at the Nigeria Islamic conference] about a forthcoming Cyprus solution, the government spokesman has stated that the government is not aware of the existence of any facts justifying this appraisal.

PERCY BID FOR KIPRIANOU-DENKTAS TALKS REPORTED

[Excerpts] According to authoritative reports, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Charles Percy, who is visiting Cyprus, wants a meeting between President Kiprianou and Turkish Cypriot leader Denktas for discussion of the establishment of a U.S. university in Cyprus and other practical issues for a rapprochement between the two communities. The reports say Denktas has already accepted Percy's idea for the establishment of a prestigious U.S. university in Cyprus. Percy will not propose a meeting between Kiprianou and Denktas before he has fully explored possibilities both for its acceptance and success.

According to our reports, Percy will seek to visit and tour the occupied city of Famagusta, in which he has demonstrated special interest, during his contacts there. Percy has also shown great interest in the issue of the missing persons, which he compares with the issue of the U.S. missing in Vietnam. The senator has promised to raise the issue of the Cypriot missing persons both in the Senate and with the administration immediately after his return to the United States.

FRANCE NOT TO SANCTION TURKISH CYPRIOT TRADE

[Text] Replying to a question on press reports that French factories will be established in the occupied territories of Cyprus, the government spokesman stated that the French side has given assurances that the French official position is not to allow the spread of French companies in the occupied part of Cyprus. He also added that a French Foreign Ministry official gave assurances that he would suggest the French authorities intervene to end possibly existing commercial relations between French companies and a Turkish Cypriot company.

The government spokesman said that 2 days ago a representative from a French company assured the Cyprus Embassy in Paris that no agreement has been signed with a Turkish Cypriot company, that his company has no relations with occupied Cyprus and that a purely commercial agreement had been signed with a Turkish company for the supply of certain raw materials for the manufacture of engine oils.

PLO WOUNDED ARRIVE IN LARNACA 27 AUGUST

[Text] An International Red Cross hospital ship arrived in Larnaca this morning with 167 wounded PLO fighters. Twenty disembarked and have been transported to Cypriot hospitals for treatment. The rest will be taken to Greece. Welcoming the wounded, Minister of Health Pelekanos said the government's offer to accept Palestinian wounded is an example of solidarity with the struggling Palestinian people. It is, he added, an offer by the Cyprus people, who suffered the same ordeals during the Turkish invasion.

In addition, the president of the Lebanese Red Crescent, [as heard] Dr Fathi 'Arafat, brother of Palestinain leader Yasir 'Arafat who is accompanying the wounded, thanked the Cyprus Government for its offer.

DENKTAS SCORES KIPRIANOU'S 'RESORT' TO UN

TA261247 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in English to Cyprus 1030 GMT 26 Aug 82

[Text] President Denktas has stressed that reporting to the UN General Assembly at a time when the intercommunal talks are continuing at a determined pace was destructive to the talks. President Denktas was replying to claims made by the Greek Cypriot leader, Mr Kiprianou, that the Greek Cypriot excuse for his resort to the United Nations was for telling the world community what the situation was and who was responsible for the lack of progress. He stressed that these claims were adding insult to injury because neither Mr Kiprianou nor any Greek Cypriot on his behalf had a mandate to tell anyone, let alone the United Nations, anything about a bicommunal matter without giving the same right to the other side to the talks, namely the Turkish Cypriot side.

President Denktas said Mr Kiprianou's presumption that he could do this was based on false premises and could not be accepted by the Turkish Cypriot people in any way or form. He stressed that Mr Kiprianou's attempt to (?inform) the world assembly one-sidedly was tantamount to international deception.

Mr Kiprianou's reference to what he calls the expansionist and partitionist designs of Turkey, President Denktas said, is a vain attempt to cover up the real causes of the Cyprus tragedy. President Denktas named these as the agreement between Archibishop Makarios and the then Greek premier, Mr Papandreou, to destroy the bicommunal partnership and independence of Cyprus with a view to annexing the island to Greece so as to expand Greece's boundaries to the shores of Africa in the wake of Alexander the Great. President Denktas recalled that Mr Kiprianou had been an active member of this conspiracy to destroy the bicommunal partnership republic [words indistinct]. But for the resistance of the Turkish Cypriot people to this [words indistinct] plot and Turkey's active objection to it today, Cyprus would have been colonized by Greece long ago. The president said that in the light of these realities, Mr Kiprianou's statement was a monumental example of international deception.

He stated that Turkey had liberated the Turkish Cypriot people and prevented the colonization of Cyprus by Greece. He stressed that Mr Kiprianou could not change this reality by resorting to international forums, and one-sided resolutions from such assemblies could not solve the bicommunal Cyprus problem. President Denktas reiterated: The place to solve the Cyprus problem is in Cyprus through the intercommunal talks. The formula for solving it is in the four-point agreement I made with Makarios and later confirmed with Mr Kiprianou. The objective is a bicommunal, bizonal federal republic. Any attempt to run away from these realities and to claim the right to speak for the whole of Cyprus will bring no good to the Greek Cypriot side.

TO VIMA SAYS 'ARAFAT TO ARRIVE IN ATHENS

[By Panos Loukakos]

[Excerpt] Palestinian leader Yasir 'Arafat is coming to Athens this week, probably Wednesday or Thursday. 'Arafat will board a Greek passenger ship, which will be accompanied by three warships, one Greek, one American and one French. The convoy will go to Piraeus, where a popular reception will probably be organized. Yasir 'Arafat will stay for a day or two in Athens, where he will hold talks with Prime Minister Papandreou. He will then leave for Tunisia or Yemen on the same ship. The passenger ship Atlantis, which Yasir 'Arafat and 60 members of his staff will board, already set sail from Piraeus yesterday afternoon.

The Greek Government, in agreement with the U.S. mediator Mr Habib, are keeping the Palestinian leader's departure from Lebanon completely secret. Mr Habib has repeatedly expressed his thanks to the Greek side for the important role it has been playing in the bloodless withdrawal of the Palestinians from Lebanon. Yasir 'Arafat has probably decided to come to Athens to express the Palestinian people's gratitude to the Greek Government and also to meet Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou before proceeding to his new place of residence.

According to the same exclusive information obtained by TO VIMA TIS KIRIAKIS, during his voyage from Lebanon to Greece, the Palestinian leader will be accompanied by Greek officers and a representative of the Greek Government, who have already left for the location where 'Arafat and the 60 members of his entourage will be received. At the same time, stringent security measures are being taken in Athens for Yasir 'Arafat's imminent arrival, which coincides with French President Francois Mitterrand's visit to Greece. However, the Palestinian leader's stay in Athens will not exceed 1 or 2 days at the most, as was primarily stated by an official source.

Today's TO VIMA TIS KIRIAKIS' report also resolves the more general confusion prevailing in the world on the Palestinian leader's movements. Foreign news agencies have repeatedly reported in cables from Lebanon that the Palestinian leader has already left the Lebanese capital by ship and that he is still there. Accordingly the initial timetable prepared by the Greek Government in cooperation with the PLO and U.S. mediator Philip Habib, Yasir 'Arafat will leave Lebanon on Monday morning and will be in Athens on Wednesday. However, changes in this initial plan cannot be ruled out because of the prevailing situation in Lebanon today and the arrival in Athens of French President Francois Mitterrand, which falls at the same time.

Wounded Palestinians Arrive

[Text] At 0755 today, the International Red Cross hospital ship Flora arrived at Piraeus with 148 wounded Palestinians. They were welcomed by Fathi 'Arafat, a brother of the PLO leader, who had arrived in Athens to welcome the wounded Palestinians. They were also welcomed by Health and Welfare Minister Paraskevas Avyerinos, Merchant Marine Minister Yeoryios Katsifaras, Public Order Minister Ioannis Skoularikis and other officials.

Awaiting the wounded Palestinians at the pier were buses from the Injury Rehabilitation Center for those slightly wounded and 30 ambulances for those more seriously wounded. The wounded Palestinians will be taken for medical treatment to six hospitals in Athens.

DEPUTY MINISTER RESIGNS; EXPELLED FROM PASOK

[Text] Deputy Interior Minister Evstathios Panagoulis submitted his resignation to Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou this morning, giving him at the same time a letter explaining the reasons for his resignation. The prime minister immediately accepted the resignation. Later, the prime minister and PASOK chairman, together with the movement's Executive Bureau, decided that the views Mr Panagoulis expressed in his resignation letter undermine the government's task of change and of the movement. For this reason, they referred the case to the PASOK Disciplinary Council, which met this afternoon and, with its decision No 392, decided to strike from PASOK membership Evstathios Panagoulis, member of the party Central Committee and deputy.

After his resignation, Mr Panagoulis made the following statement: I called on Prime Minister and PASOK Chairman Andreas Papandreou this morning and submitted my resignation from the government. In a letter, I explained to the prime minister the political reasons that led me to this decision. I consider it unnecessary to stress that, even after my withdrawal from the government, I will continue to firmly struggle for substantive social change and for socialism.

Commenting on the contents of Mr Panagoulis' resignation letter, a government spokesman stated: Among other things, Mr Panagoulis accuses the government of not immediately withdrawing from NATO and the EEC and of not removing the U.S. bases from our country.

In its decision to dismiss Mr Panagoulis from PASOK, the movement's Disciplinary Council judged that Mr Panagoulis' letter to the movement's chairman constitutes an (?expression) of a concrete plan to destabilize the course of change. Another factor noted is that the resignation letter is dated 24 August and was handed to the prime minister on 27 August, whereas on 26 August, that is, yesterday, Mr Panagoulis participated in the Cabinet meeting without expressing any disagreement. The Disciplinary Council's decision says the contents of the letter include impermissible, false and insulting characterizations of the movement's features and government strategy. These characterizations were aimed at creating the base for acts of rebellion [apostasia], and it was attempted to present these characterizations allegedly as disagreements with the movement's policy, whereas in the charting of this policy Mr Panagoulis was participating in the determinating collective organs without ever expressing the slightest disagreement and even a political view.

The Disciplinary Council notes in its decision that in the past Mr Panagoulis repeatedly caused problems through his petty policy, which the movement's leadership tolerated because of its respect for the struggles by the Panagoulis family and in memory of his brother. In conclusion, the Disciplinary Council assesses that it is no accident that this time was chosen for this specific political action which attempted to undermine the cause of change in the face of critical political battles.

Papandreou Letter

["Text" of 27 August personal letter from Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou to resigned Deputy Interior Minister Evstathios Panagoulis]

[Text] Mr Panagoulis: You have chosen a new method of rebellion [apostasia] in order to deal a blow, in vain of course, to the course toward socialist transformation during a phase when the government of change, based on the people's inexhaustible forces, has started on a new, great attempt. In the face of critical political battles, you are attempting to deal a perfidious blow.

Today, however, we are not in 1965, and it is truly sad because today a member of the Panagoulis family is following the rebels' fate. Honoring this family's struggles and the memory of your brother, we accepted you into the movement and elected you a deputy for 3 years after 3 September [the date of his brother Alexandros Panagoulis' death]. You are the last who can invoke this historic initiative for the Greek people's path. Thanks to this memory, we even tolerated your petty partisan behavior, which is well known to every cadre and member of the movement. You participated in all the responsibilities for charting government policy and in the determinative collective organs of the government and the movement without ever expressing any reservations.

I have always received [Dhekhthika] you directly whenever you requested it without you ever expressing the slightest political view or even suspicion for diversification. Suddenly, you discovered your disagreements today and submitted your resignation from your post as deputy interior minister, which I immediately accepted. You have dressed your resignation with impermissible political characterizations. It is a pity that you chose this path.

ELEVTHEROTIPIA VIEWS NEW U.S. CYPRUS INITIATIVE

[By our correspondent]

[Excerpt] Nicosia, 29 August -- Reports from Western diplomatic sources state that the Americans are moving toward a new, but this time, unofficial, initiative on the Cyprus issue. However, in order that they may proceed with this initiative and submit specific suggestions, they first want to secure a green light from both sides, which hesitate to give their consent, each one for its own reason.

Both Percy's and Derwinski's fact finding visits to Nicosia, as well as the visits of other U.S. congressmen and senators which will take place in September, strengthens the reports that the Americans want to play some kind of a role in the Cyprus issue, but that, at the same time, they do not want to show that they are acting behind the back of the United Nations.

On the other hand, it is clear that the Americans like some other Western countries, do not want the Cyprus issue to be debated at the UN General Assembly. However, the Cyprus Government is categorical on this matter, and it has already prepared a UN recourse, which President Kiprianou himself will submit when he goes to New York on 21 September to attend the General Assembly.

According to press reports, Senator Percy, who is continuing his stay in Cyprus, is pursuing a personal meeting between President Kiprianou and Mr Denktas for discussing his proposal on the establishment of a U.S. university in Cyprus (up to the standards of the Beirut university), as well as other matters concerning rapprochement between the two communities.

While the Americans aim at a new approach toward the Cyprus issue, the Turks are trying to create new tension by alleging that the "Secret Armenian Army" and the "Asala" organization have transferred their headquarters to Cyprus and that the Armenian guerrillas have allegedly camped in the Troodos Mountains. The Cypriot Government has described the Turkish allegations as unfounded and suspicious.

MINISTER ANNOUNCES ECONOMIC POLICY FRAMEWORK

[Text] National Economy Minister Yerasimos Arsenis today defined the general framework of the government's economic policy, particularly that concerning the investments-industry-development cycle, which includes economic measures that will be announced in September.

Mr Arsenis stressed that in its first 10 months, the government intervened decisively and checked the country's economic decline to the point that today prospects are better. He also stressed that the only way out for the development of the Greek economy is to directly increase productivity throught new investments. Mr Arsenis said the resources for the realization of the government's investments program will mainly come from reducing public deficits and streamling problematic enterprises that absorb large amounts of money as well as through increasing savings. At this point, the national economy minister said public corporations should stop being organizations of camouflaged underemployment and become models of effective organization.

Mr Arsenis classified the problematic enterprises into three categories and announced a series of measures, including the establishment by year end with the participation of other banking institutions of a special bank that will be under direct or indirect state control and which will provide development capital.

Mr Arsenis said three organizations will make the investments: the state, which will become the basic buyer of Greek products; private industry, which will be given facilities for this purpose; and foreign investors, provided, of course, that they serve our national interests. Mr Arsenis also said: In its development drive, the country needs the working people's help and support. He stressed that the conquests of the working class will be defended through decisions which, however, should be based on democratic procedures.

In conclusion, Mr Arsenis emphasized that our country is in the position to mobilize the necessary resources existing in Greece, utilize its human potentials and set into motion the process of investments and economic development without reducing the Greek people's standard of living.

PAPANDREOU MEETS SOCIALIST INTERNATIONAL GROUP

[Text] The Socialist International delegation that came to Athens from Beirut today described to Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou the dramatic situation prevailing in Lebanon and its evaluations of that country's future. During the discussions the delegation held in Beirut with the PLO leadership, the Palestinians told its members that only four European personalities gave them substantive aid. They are French President Francois Mitterrand, Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou, former Swedish Prime Minister Olav Palme and Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky. At the same time, the Palestinians stressed the non-existence of a Soviet presence.

MILITARY ATTACHE IN OTTAWA ASSASSINATED 27 AUG

[Text] The military attache at the Turkish Embassy in Ottawa, Air Force Staff Col Attila Altikat, was martyred at 1800 Turkish time. An Armenian terrorist organization has claimed responsibility.

According to reports reaching the Turkish Radio and Television news center, the incident occurred at a crossroads in an area of Ottawa housing embassies. Staff Colonel Altikat's car had stopped at a traffic light when an Armenian terrorist came out of another car and opened fire. Staff Colonel Altikat died instantly. The Armenian terrorist then fled into a nearby park on foot. Staff Colonel Altikat's body remained there for more than 1 hour.

News agencies report that the Canadian police have captured one person in connection with the incident, but that they have not made any statements about his identity. The police are checking all the roads in the area of the incident looking for the second assailant. The car driven by the second terrorist was later found abandoned near an apartment building.

A person called the AFP bureau in Montreal a short time after the incident and said that an Armenian terrorist organization claimed responsibility for the attack.

Evren Issues Message

TA271918 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1900 GMT 27 Aug 82

[Text] Head of State Gen Kenan Evren issued a message following the murder of Turkey's military attache in Ottawa, Air Force Staff Col Attila Altikat. Pointing out that the Armenian terrorists' base attacks were continuing, Kenan Evren said in his message: The Turkish Government is determined to take all the necessary measures to put an end to these murders which have assumed the nature of a war against the Turkish Republic and the Turkish nation. In this struggle, it has become essential for our state to use its power in the necessary places at the necessary times.

General Evren also said it was essential and useful for all humanity and responsible states to prevent the further spread of these base methods, which were a stain on humanity, in the international field.

Patriarch Condemns Killing

TA281946 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1540 GMT 28 Aug 82

[Text] Istanbul, 28 Aug (AA) -- Patriarch Snork Kalustyan, head of the Armenian Church based in Istanbul, denounced the "inhuman murderer who does not recognize the God" who assassinated Turkish military attache in Ottawa, Col. Attila Altikat Friday. In a message of condolence to Head of State Gen. Kenan Evren, Mr Kalustyan expressed deep sorrow over the incident, stressing that "it caused deep sorrow for all Turkish citizens of Armenian origin as in the case of previous attacks of this kind."

SPOKESMAN ON ARMENIAN 'TERRORISTS' IN CYPRUS

[Text] Foreign Ministry spokesman Amb Nazmi Akiman has said that it would be a great error on the part of the Greek Cypriot administration to allow Armenian terrorists to base themselves in the Greek Cypriot sector of Cyprus. Reacting to journalists who noted that there are reports that the Armenian terrorist organization ASALA is settling in the Greek Cypriot sector of Cyprus, Akiman said the developments on this matter are being very closely followed. Akiman said: Such a development would constitute a great error for the Greek Cypriot administration.

EVREN ADDRESS ON CONSTITUTION, DISSIDENTS

[Public address by Head of State Gen Kenan Evren in Afyon on 29 August -- recorded]

[Excerpts] Dear citizens of Afyon, as the time nears to make the transition to a normal and democratic order, those who long for the old period [prior to 12 September 1980], the slaves of communism, anarchists and terrorists who have not been captured yet, traitors and enemies of the nation among us or those without country who have fled abroad are engaging in activities -- at times slyly and at other times overtly -- in a bid to slander this administration. They are disseminating unfounded and false reports. As you know very well, immediately after the 12 September operation, the elements opposed to this operation -- those elements wishing to divide and ruin the country do not hesitate even to sell the country to serve their interests -- attempting to continue their resistance for some time. When they realized that they would not succeed in this and that they were continuously being caught, some of them fled to foreign countries. Those who stayed behind did not hesitate, together with those who fled abroad and with external forces wishing to divide Turkey and abandon it to the claws of communism, to undertake subversive activities. They tried to apply pressure on Turkey through various pretexts via these external forces. Allegations that torture and human rights violations are taking place in Turkey were among these pretexts.

Now, I wish to call on those who made these allegations. Are the actions undertaken recently against foreign workers, especially Turkish workers, employed in various European countries -- actions such as burning down their homes or killing them by banging their heads against the ground -- compatible with human rights? The right to live is the most basic human right. Why do they not demand that measures be taken in all countries against the murder of our innocent diplomats who have not committed any crimes, and even our very valuable military attaches? Why do they not ask that these assailants, who have so far not been caught, be captured? Why do they remain silent when the assailants who have been taken to court are released after shamefully light sentences? Is this because the victims are Turks?

We have so far given numerous warnings, but these warnings have yielded no results. As of now, the Turkish state, the Turkish nation will feel free to take the necessary measures. My dear citizens, the Turkish nation is patient, but its patience has a limit. No one can stop it once this limit has been reached. This nation waited patiently for 11 years during the Cyprus incidents. However, in the end, it defended the right of our citizens there. We displayed great patience until 12 September, but when this wall of patience was crossed, the 12 September operation took place. In other words, let them not push us to the limits of our patience.

My dear citizens of Afyon, those who are collaborating with the external forces that I just mentioned also exerted extensive efforts to cut off foreign aid to Turkey. When they realized that they would not be able to ruin Turkey through this method, they engaged in an extensive campaign to secure the rejection of the new constitution. They began their work inside the country parallel to two communist radio stations, which started this campaign a long time ago which always broadcast against Turkey.

I would now like to briefly refer to the matter of the constitution. As I mentioned in my [word indistinct] speech, the constitution has assumed its final form. However, I would like to point out the following to those who say this constitution takes us further back than the 1961 Constitution: I have never at any place said that the new constitution will bring more advanced liberties than the 1961 Constitution.

On the contrary, I said the 1961 Constitution was too loose for us, we started moving too freely in it and this movement brought us to 12 September. I also added that we have to make certain sacrifices concerning individual rights and interests for the sake of the security and tranquillity of the community.

The radio stations that I mentioned earlier refer to my statement as workers' rights and interests rather than individual rights and interest. They are doing this in order to incite our self-sacrificing worker citizens.

My dear citizens, we must draw up a constitution suitable to our own structure, characteristics and conditions and with our strategic location in mind. We are not obliged to conform with Western constitutions. There is not just one single form of democratic government in the world. If you look, then you will see that they all have democratic names. Let us not take everything from the West and put it on like ready-to-wear clothing.

GENERAL EVREN ISSUES VICTORY DAY MESSAGE

[Head of State Gen Kenan Evren's Victory Day message on 30 August 1982 -- recorded]

[Excerpt] This nation which sanctified this Anatolia -- which belonged to it for 1,000 years -- by the blood of millions of martyrs and turned it into its motherland, has been betrayed numerous times and is still being betrayed by internal and external movements and efforts which aim at dividing it and its country. I would like to reiterate once again that it is impossible for a foreign state to be established on even an inch of this land through lies, false allegations and slanders. Regardless of who the supporters of these ugly slanders are, it should be known that these aims will never be achieved, not through force, terrorism or any other method.

Numerous attacks have been launched in almost all the periods of our history to make use of our country's weaknesses, to divide the country and, ultimately, to eliminate the Turkish existence. Our nation faced these dangers in unity each time and overcome them. The price paid for being a free and independent state is the blood and tears and the suffering.

For this reason, we must know our history as a nation and geopolitical realities as a country. We are situated in the most critical region -- the Middle East -- in itself a sensitive area in the world balance. I would like to point out that the Middle East is now the stage for dangerous developments for world and regional peace and that these developments are causing concern. We must be strong against any kind of dangerous development. As I had pointed out earlier, we have friends when we are strong, but when we are weak even those who seem to be friends withhold their friendship.

In the world we live in and in accordance with historical evolution, the free and independent existence of states is closely connected with the balance of national interest that they can ensure in international relations. The conflicts of interest that rooted in history and assume their form in the country's geopolitics must be resolved by the leaders of a country in a future-oriented way and by taking into consideration any possible future developments. If these realities are ignored, the state's existence and permanence may be eliminated or irretrievable losses may be suffered. Such examples can be seen in the world.

As much as possible dangers from outside, we must be able to calculate how certain dangerous developments within the country can affect us. The Turkish nation has witnessed and lived through examples of this in its recent future and before 12 September 1980. Whenever there was a movement away from Ataturk's principles, which were at the basis of Ataturk's Turkey, the country's unity was endangered and the nation suffered very dark days.

FOREIGN MINISTER TURKMEN RETURNS FROM NIGER

[Text] Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen, who participated in the Islamic foreign ministers conference held in the capital of Niger, Niamey, has returned to Turkey. International problems and primarily the Palestinian and Middle East problems were discussed at the Niamey meeting.

TRADE MINISTER CANTURK RETURNS FROM NIGERIA

[Text] Trade Minister Kemal Canturk completed his visit to Nigeria and returned to Turkey today. In a statement at Istanbul's Yesilkoy Airport, Canturk said the commercial agreement signed between the two countries on 25 August would increase in their commercial relations. Under the agreement, he said, Turkey would buy oil, iron and coal from Nigeria, and sell agricultural and industrial products to that country. Canturk also said an agreement was reached whereby Turkey would set up a beer factory in Nigeria.

FINANCE MINISTRY SAYS DEBTS TO JAPAN RESCHEDULED

[Text] Ankara, 27 Aug (AA) -- Some 188.6 million dollars of Turkey's debts to Japan have been rescheduled, the Finance Minister announced in Ankara Friday.

Letters have been exchanged between the director general of the Treasury and Japan's ambassador to Ankara for repayment of guaranteed commercial loans extended by Japan to Turkey through the OECD and maturing from mid-1981 to mid-1982 over a period of 10 years, including an initial grace period of 5 years.

VOTCP: CONSTITUTION DENIES KURDS NATIONAL RIGHTS

[Station commentary: "No to Every Line of the Junta's Constitution"]

[Excerpts] Dear listeners, one of the most frequently mentioned concepts in the junta's constitution is separatism and the indivisibility of the nation. Apparently, the junta's members are opposed to separatism. Through this, they are attempting to eliminate the Kurdish people's right to freely determine their own future. However, it is the junta's members themselves who are engaged in real separatism.

Article 75 of the junta's obscure constitution, which is currently being discussed by the Consulative Assembly, states that everyone who is connected with the Turkish state through the tie of citizenship is a Turk. According to this article, the Kurdish citizens in our country are considered Turkish.

The national existence of some 8 to 9 million citizens is thus being denied. One is even not permitted to say that they are a Kurd. This was the case in the past and the junta is perpetuating this racism.

This, dear listeners, is real separatism. It creates enmity between Turks and Kurds. Just think for one minute: Some 8 to 9 million Kurds do not have the right to study in their own language, develop their culture or live freely as they want. However, they exist and will continue to do so. In other words, according to the constitution, the citizens are not equal before the law. The Kurds do not have the same rights as the Turks. Why is this so? What right does the junta have to usurp the national rights of millions of Kurds? This is real separatism. The junta's constitution does not grant the Kurds the rights to study in their own language, develop their national culture or freely determine their own future. The constitution is thus advocating separatism.

All Kurds will say no to this constitution. The Kurdish people want to live with the Turkish people with equal rights and in a brotherly manner. They do not want to be slaves. We call on our Turkish listeners -- to those who can say how fortunate it is to be a Turk and who cherish the historical and cultural values of the Turkish nation: If a constitution had banned you from saying you are a Turk or from reading and writing in Turkish, what would you have done? The 8 to 9 million Kurds are now faced with this situation and they are justifiably waging a struggle for their national rights and the right to say how fortunate it is to be a Kurd and they will continue to wage their struggle.

The Turkish Communist Party [TCP] defends the interests of all -- Turkish and Kurdish -- toilers in Turkey. It favors the friendship and fraternity between the two peoples. The TCP believes that a constitution securing the national autonomy and equality of rights of the Kurds is necessary for this. Harmony between the two nations can only be attained in this manner.

UK'S PYM ARRIVES; HOLDS TALKS WITH GENSCHER

[Text] Bonn, 30 Aug (DPA) -- British Foreign Secretary Pym arrived in Bonn on Monday for a visit of several hours. Pym is to discuss European and international issues with Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher. Pym, who assumed office in April, is in Bonn for bilateral talks for the first time at Genscher's invitation. In June, he took part in the Bonn NATO summit with British Prime Minister Mrs Margaret Thatcher.

Topics Discussed

[Excerpt] Bonn, 30 Aug (DPA) -- Hans-Dietrich Genscher, and his British counterpart, Francis Pym, unanimously stressed in Bonn Monday the "vital significance" of the U.S.-European partnership for joint security. Therefore, everything should be done to prevent problems of the Soviet Bloc from becoming problems of the Western alliance, the two ministers stressed in an informal exchange of views, according to reports from the Foreign Ministry.

Regarding the developments in Poland, Genscher and Pym reiterated that the Western states expect that situation in the country under martial law [words indistinct]. In regard to the Middle East, they expressed the hope that after the acute crisis in Beirut has been overcome, serious efforts will be made to resolve the problems of the Palestinians. Bonn and London want to do everything in their power to help in the attempts at reaching a solution. The two ministers also discussed the problems of the EEC and stressed in this connection that the fishing dispute in the EEC should be (?resolved) soon.

FRG SEEKS HALT TO EASTERN BLOC RADIO JAMMING

[Text] Bonn, 30 Aug (DPA) -- The Federal Government is still making efforts "with the means at its disposal" to stop the jamming of Western radio broadcasts by the Eastern bloc countries. This fact emerged from the FRG Government's response -- made public today -- to Werner Marx, chariman of the defense committee. It was pointed out in the response that Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher has called on his Bulgarian counterpart to stop the jamming of Deutsche Welle broadcasts in Bulgarian.

Marx said that according to the government statement, emphatic protests were made last Spring to the Soviet Embassy in Bonn regarding the Soviet jamming of Deutsche Welle Russian and Polish language broadcasts. At the plenary session of the CSCE followup conference in Madrid, Genscher criticized Poland's jamming of radio broadcasts. Marx commented that in the past few weeks an increasingly massive campaign by Soviet-controlled media has been observed against American transmitters in particular. One could assume that the Polish military regime is trying to blame its increasing internal difficulties on the so-called influence of foreign "agitation stations." Everyone knows that the American stations and Deutsche Welle in particular aim at the highest degree of objectivity in their broadcasts in order to be able to truthfully inform people in Eastern Europe about events.

LEFTIST FDP MEMBERS RALLY AGAINST GENSCHER

[Excerpt] Resistance is growing in the FDP to the political course of party chief Hans-Dietrich Genscher. Some 40 of the 400 FDP federal party congress delegates and a total of 1,100 leftist liberals throughout the Federal Republic have so far signed the leftist Berlin "Steglitz Initiative" appealing to Hans-Dietrich Genscher to resign.

Heinz Loeffler, an attorney in the federal cartel office, who initiated the appeal, told DIE WELT yesterday that a resignation motion will be submitted by the leftist delegates at the FDP federal party congress in early November in Berlin if the FDP fails to gain more than 5-percent of the vote in Hesse.

FDP, SPD DIFFER ON BUDGET, SHARPEN DISPUTE

FDP Chairman Genscher said in Wiesbaden that the FDP must pursue a forward-looking policy with a partner who is prepared and able to do so. He said that the Federal Republic is at a crossroads. Changed conditions now call for basic decisions on how to resolve the problems. The 1983 budget will be the test of our determination to pursue a forward-looking policy. Limiting the public sector borrowing requirement must remain the key point of the budget discussions.

Federal Economics Minister Lambsdorff called for a joint strategy which will clearly set forth the responsibilities of the state, business, employers, and employees to invest more in creating new jobs. He warned against assuming that the unemployment problem can be solved by implementing investment and economic controls, by raising taxes and levies, and by increasing debts. It is feared that the SPD will turn the resolutions of its Munich Congress into specific demands. If that happens, the Social Democrats will have to look for another coalition partner. "There is nothing doing with the FDP," he added.

JESUIT ENVOY RETURNS FROM VISIT TO E. EUROPE

LD311536 Vatican City in English to Central and West Europe 1345 GMT 31 Aug 82

[Text] Father Giuseppe Pittau, assistant to the pontifical delegate to the Society of Jesus, has returned to Rome at the end of his visit to the Jesuits of Hungary and Poland. In Hungary, where he stayed 3 days, Father Pittau was able to see and speak in groups with all the 94 Jesuits still there. A communique from the Jesuit Press Office in Rome states that the presence is, in a certain sense, tolerated and, with the exception of three religious congregations of men and one women's congregation, religious [as heard] have not been officially recognized in Hungary since 1950. At the beginning, following immediately the decree to suppress them, all their goods were confiscated and about 100 Jesuits were imprisoned. This persecution no longer exists but Jesuits may not recruit new members and are condemned to a slow extinction. They cannot even have their own work. Many Jesuits have worked in factories and offices and only at the weekends have they been able to help in churches. The youngest Jesuit in Hungary is 57. Many of the old ones are in old people's homes and the government gives them a pension. Father Pittau presented the religious and government authorities with a strong request for permission not only for Jesuits but also for other religious [as heard] to be allowed to accept novices, to start their own works and thus to be able to assist the country's ecclesial needs.

The situation in Poland, where Father Pittau stayed 7 days, is completely different. There are some 700 Jesuits in Poland, with 400 in the Krakow province and 300 in the Warsaw one, while every year there are about 40 new novices. There are restrictions in Poland: They cannot open schools, in 30 years they have not received permission to open new houses or churches, they cannot publish magazines. But recently some permits have been received. But, despite these restrictions the Jesuits, in collaboration with the hierarchy, have created a network of well-organized apostolates.

[Text] (ANSA) - Rome, August 31 -- Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo today assured his Somali counterpart Jama Barre of the Italian Government's willingness to make every effort to help normalize the situation in the African Horn.

In a meeting here in Rome, Colombo and Barre, who is on a private visit to Italy, discussed the latest developments in the African Horn crisis and clashes along the Somali-Ethiopian border.

According to a communique issued after the meeting, Colombo "voiced Italy's solidarity with the friendly Somali people".

The two ministers also discussed the state of Italo-Somali relations, particularly development cooperation.

INTERIOR, DEFENSE MINISTERS ON TERRORISM

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, August 31 -- Italy's Red Brigades terrorist organization has been forced to attack army installations to replenish their stocks of weapons because arms sources in the Middle East have dried up in the wake of the Israeli offensive in Lebanon, Interior Minister Virginio Rognoni told a joint session of the defense and interior commissions from the two houses of Parliament.

The defense minister, Lelio Lagorio, addressing himself to terrorist assaults on army bases near Rome and in Salerno, in the south, said that the terrorists are aiming at two objectives. He identified these as demoralizing public opinion and the nation's defense apparatus and stocking up on military hardware with considerable firepower.

Lagorio declared that the nation's armed forces are more powerful than the Red Brigades terrorists and the new terrorist strategy will be seen to have been a big mistake.

The interior minister, in his statement to the joint meeting, reported that since the beginning of the year, 358 terrorist suspects have been captured by police, as compared to the 196 alleged terrorists arrested in all of 1981.

In early August, terrorists raided a military installation on the outskirts of Rome and made off with some twenty automatic rifles and machineguns. Last week, a terrorist attack on an army van and jeep in Salerno led to an exchange of fire with public security policemen in which two of the policemen were killed. The terrorists escaped with an undisclosed number of rifles and machineguns.

EXTRADITION OF TERRORIST REQUESTED FROM FRANCE

Scalzone was taken into custody in Italy on April 7, and charged with armed insurrection against the state. After one-and-a-half years of pre-trial detention, the autonomy leader was admitted to hospital because of his deteriorating health and later released.

Six months later, he fled the country to take up residence in France, where he was living at the time of his arrest at the weekend with a regularly authorized residency permit.

At the time he left Italy, Scalzone wrote to another prominent leftwing activist, Franco Piperno, to the effect that he felt he "could not survive" another term of pre-trial detention. (Two requests for the extradition of Piperno from Canada in connection with his alleged connection to the Moro case have been denied by Quebec provincial courts).

Scalzone was linked to the kidnapping and slaying of the Christian Democrat statesman and former premier by testimony given to police by Antonio Savasta, a self-confessed Red Brigade terrorist involved in the kidnapping of American Army General James Lee Dozier in December last year.

NORDIC CONFERENCE ENDS, COMMUNIQUE ISSUED

[Text] The Middle East situation was the subject of special attention at a meeting of the Nordic foreign ministers which ended in Helsinki today. Other key international issues were also discussed at the meeting, at which the foreign ministers expressed concern over increased tension and insecurity in the world. Hannu Reime reports on the Foreign Ministry press conference which has just ended.

The search for a correct wording, satisfactory to all five countries, about the Middle East apparently gave rise to the longest discussion among the Nordic foreign ministers at their meeting in Helsinki. The final communique, which was adopted unanimously, states that the Nordic countries give their full support to the efforts for a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement of the Middle East conflict. The settlement should be based on the principles whose starting points are in UN Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338. After referring to these frequently-cited documents, the foreign ministers say they support two principles in the Middle East. One is the security of all states of the area, including Israel, and the other is justice for all nations, including the Palestinian people. The legal national rights of the Palestinians should be implemented in such a way that they will gain the right to self-determination, which includes their right to take part in talks on their own future. Further, the Nordic foreign ministers support UN statements which condemn Israel's invasion and occupation of Lebanon as well as Israel's refusal to obey the Security Council resolutions. After expressing regret over the sufferings of the civilian population in Lebanon, the Nordic foreign ministers expressed their satisfaction that further bloodshed has now been ended. The foreign ministers give their strong support to the efforts of the United Nations.

Among other crises, the Nordic foreign ministers mention the situation in Poland, which is still described as serious. In this connection they express the hope that the partial release of internees will be followed by the release of all the internees. Further, the Nordic foreign ministers refer to the serious situation in South Africa and Namibia and condemn the policy of South Africa.

Referring to the disarmament talks taking place in different quarters and the strivings for disarmament, the foreign ministers exchanged views on a nuclear-arms free zone in the North: Unanimity in this matter went as far as a decision to continue contacts on the nuclear-free zone. Norway in particular views the idea of the zone with great reservation, and this became apparent at the press conference held at the end of the foreign ministers' meeting. At the press conference Norwegian Foreign Minister Svenn Stray said that it is not possible to agree on the matter among the Nordic countries alone.

ENVOY DETAINED DURING WARSAW DEMONSTRATIONS

[Text] The Finnish ambassador to Poland, Taneli Kekkonen, and two embassy officials were detained by the militia yesterday during the demonstrations in Warsaw. This happened near the Finnish Embassy. They were released fairly quickly, and the incident was explained as a misunderstanding. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs said this morning that the details of the incident are being investigated.

ICELAND

OPPOSITION PARTIES DEMANDING AUTUMN ELECTIONS

WA311600 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 26 Aug 82 p 9

[Text] Reykjavik (NORSK TELEGRAMBYRA) The opposition parties in Iceland are demanding that new elections be called for in the fall, since it became clear on Tuesday that the coalition government no longer has a majority in the lower house of the Althing.

Member of the Althing Eggert Haukdal, who until now has assured the government a majority by his vote in the lower house, provoked the new situation when he announced that he had gone over to the opposition.

Prime Minister Gunnar Thoroddsen's government still has a majority in the upper house, and a majority of one in the combined Althing, where a possible no confidence motion may be presented.

The opposition parties -- the conservative Independence Party and the Social Democrats -- are demanding that Althing members be called immediately into special session from their summer vacation as a result of Haukdal's announcement. The Althing is presently scheduled to meet at the beginning of October.

As a result of the new situation, the government will have problems keeping in place a number of economic measures it promulgated Monday [25 August] through provisional orders.

However, an Althing member from the governing coalition stated that Thoroddsen will probably put the provisional orders on ice until the budget bill for next year is debated in the combined Althing.

In this way, the government would be able to postpone the consequences of Haukdal's transfer to the opposition until after the beginning of the year. Since it is not possible to have elections in Iceland in the middle of winter, Thoroddsen would be able to maintain power into the spring, which is only a few months before the next regularly scheduled Althing elections are to be held.

WILLOCH SAYS NORWAY TO BE MAJOR GAS EXPORTER

[NORSK TELEGRAMBYRA report: "Norwegian Gas to Europe in the Nineties"]

[Excerpt] Stavanger -- On Tuesday [24 August] Europe was informed of Norway's ability and desire to assume the role of an important supplier of gas on commercial terms beginning in the early 1990's.

At the opening of the ONS-82 oil fair in Stavanger Prime Minister Kare Willoch said that for technical reasons it is impossible to supply our European friends with gas from Sleipner, Troll or the Tromso field in the present decade. However, early in the 1990's the first of these fields, Sleipner, could come on stream. "Given these obvious limitations Norway is both willing and able to supply significant quantities of gas. This will be of great benefit to Europe's attempts to reduce its dependence on external energy supplies," Willoch said.

AFTENPOSTEN VIEWS PIPELINE BAN COMPLICATIONS

[Editorial: "The Gas Pipeline and the United States"]

[Text] U.S. foreign policy has gotten into a mess after the decision to block deliveries for the Soviet gas pipeline to Western Europe. There will be every need for all new Secretary of State George Shultz's negotiating skill and loyalty -- two qualities for which he is esteemed -- when he will have to try to steer clear of all the problems the decision has led to.

The complications can be assessed from several viewpoints. The four leading West European allies on this point can be viewed as a collision between what is desirable in principle and what is possible in practice. It is possible in principle to have reservations about a project which will lead to a certain degree of energy dependency on the Soviet Union and which will also give the Soviet Union considerable foreign exchange income when the gas deliveries get under way. But in practice it is probably impossible to prevent the completion of the pipeline -- the Russians are quite able to build it themselves and measures taken by the West can hardly result in more than simple delays.

In the past Shultz has asserted that punitive economic measures against a state like the Soviet Union have no effect and he can point to a large number of such examples in this century. This view also lay behind his opposition to President Jimmy Carter's decision to make drastic cuts in grain exports to the Soviet Union after the invasion of Afghanistan almost 3 years ago. He also took the view that such a breach of contract would give the Americans a reputation for being unreliable trading partners and would therefore damage long-term U.S. interests.

In the present situation Shultz will be worth little unless he behaves loyally toward President Ronald Reagan. And at the same time he must work to maintain the best possible relations with the major U.S. allies. The latter part of his task seems to be growing ever more difficult, now that a U.S. company has been instructed by a court to halt its deliveries, while the company's French subsidiary has been instructed by the French Government to go ahead with them.

Behind this conflict the Russians are smiling -- in addition to the economic gains they will make from the export of gas they will also reap political capital from a disagreement which helps to increase the distance between Western Europe and the United States. The disagreement is even deeper, because a European assent to the boycott would cost jobs and earnings in a situation in which there is a surplus of neither.

Nor will the disagreement reach calmer waters since the reports that Soviet prisoners have been put to work on the pipeline. These have been denied by Moscow. But for one thing, such things are covered by the regime's concept of state secrets, so that it is "permissible" to treat the truth in an adaptable ad hoc fashion. And for another, a number of major Soviet industrial projects have been carried out with the help of prisoners even since the twenties. For economic reasons this is an advantage -- and for trade union, food and accommodation reasons too -- of course, from the "employer's" viewpoint. And the bitterness these prisoners must feel is far greater than the bitterness which has entered relations across the Atlantic.

THATCHER SEEKS TO IMPROVE ANGLO-IRISH RELATIONS

[Political correspondent James Wightman report: "Thatcher May Repair Links With Haughey"]

[Text] Mrs Thatcher now seems prepared to try to repair with the Irish Republic the relations which were damaged by the Dublin government's lack of support for Britain over the Falklands conflict.

Diplomatic moves towards "fence mending" are expected soon.

There is likely to be discussion about a summit between Mrs Thatcher and Mr Haughey, the Irish prime minister, in Dublin towards the end of the year.

Ministers and officials will seek clarification of Dublin reports that Mr Haughey is losing enthusiasm for the proposed formation of a British-Irish parliamentary council.

The council has been under discussion since last year when London and Dublin agreed to extend contacts through intergovernmental committees of ministers and officials.

Hope of Links

There had been some hope of inter-parliamentary links being opened during the lifetime of this Parliament in London.

The plan has been for the council to comprise representatives from Westminster, the Dail (the Dublin Parliament), and the new Belfast assembly which Mr Prior, Northern Ireland secretary, is hoping to establish after elections on Oct. 20.

The council would be a "talking shop" for politicians without constitutional powers.

Mr Haughey gave the proposal his support initially, but he is reported to have changed his mind because of the frosty relations which developed between himself and Mrs Thatcher over the Falklands.

Mrs Thatcher was furious with him for his government's decision to break with the EEC sanctions supporting Britain against Argentina.

Plans Forgotten

Plans for a Dublin summit between the two prime ministers last July were quietly forgotten as Mrs Thatcher signalled that she was in no mood to meet the Irish premier.

But, with cross-border cooperation against the IRA still deemed by Britain to be working well despite the rift between the two governments, Mrs Thatcher now seems ready to move towards improving relations.

Mr Haughey's reported new attitude towards the inter-parliamentary council is seen as being related to the decision by the nationalist Social Democratic and Labour Party [SDLP] not to participate in the proposed Belfast assembly.

Mr Prior has said he hopes that the SDLP, the mainly Roman Catholic party, will alter its decision.

SPOKESMAN VIEWS GREEK GOVERNMENT'S STATEMENT

NC312212 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1900 GMT 31 Aug 82

[Text] The government spokesman in Nicosia welcomed the Greek Government spokesman's statement as a reassurance of the need for total cooperation between the two governments and stressed that the matter of the occupation troops' withdrawal has always been and continues to be the basic goal of the Cyprus Government, as is the securing of the prerequisites for a totally independent, sovereign, territorially integral, united, nonaligned and demilitarized state of Cyprus.

Kiprianou To Visit Athens

INTERLOCUTORS DISCUSS INTERCOMMUNAL TALKS

[Text] A new session of the intercommunal talks was held this afternoon at the Ledra Palace Hotel. A UN statement says that at today's session a discussion began on the issue of the regional governments. The next meeting will be held on Thursday afternoon.

Before the meeting, the Greek Cypriot representative, Mr Mavromatis, when asked to evaluate the present scope of the talks, said the situation continues to be the same as he had previously described. Asked to elaborate on the issue of the regional governments, Mr Mavromatis stated that in a federal system there is a federal government and regional governments. The issue being discussed, Mr Mavromatis added, is not a difficult one. Nevertheless, he said, it is possible that some difficult points might be discussed. Asked if the present round of talks will be completed by 21 September, when President Kiprianou is expected to leave for New York to address the UN General Assembly, Mr Mavromatis replied that it is hoped the greatest part of or even the entire evaluation will be completed. In answer to a question, Mr Mavromatis said it is very early to talk about a second round of talks.

The Turkish Cypriot interlocutor, Mr Onan, described the discussion on the issue of federal judicial power as very enjoyable. Asked if there was any progress on this issue, Mr Onan replied that he is very happy with the way the talks are being held. If we say, he added, that we have completed the discussion of the issue, that means both in depth and in width. Asked to disclose his views on the issue of the regional governments, the Turkish Cypriot interlocutor said he will first disclose his views to Mr Mavromatis. Asked, finally, if all the issues on the agenda will be covered by the middle of September, Mr Onan replied that he does not think it is right to fix a timetable. He added: We do whatever we can. He also expressed the view that the discussion will be completed in a reasonable time.

'ARAFAT ARRIVES IN ATHENS ON ATLANTIS 1 SEP

[Text] Athens, Sep 1 (KUNA) -- Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasir 'Arafat arrived in Athens at noon Wednesday. 'Arafat was received at the port by Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou and four Cabinet ministers.

On hand to greet the PLO chief also was Faruq Qaddumi, head of the PLO Political Department, Dr Sidqi ad-Dajani, member of the PLO Executive Committee, in addition to Yasir 'Abd Rabbuh, Mahmud Abbas and Dr. Fathi 'Arafat, head of the Palestinian Red Crescent Society. The latter PLO officials had earlier arrived in Athens.

PAPANDREOU, KIPRIANOU DISCUSS RECOURSE TO UN

[Text] President Kiprianou had a telephone conversation today with Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou on the draft plan for Cyprus' recourse to the United Nations.

The prime minister reassured Mr Kiprianou that the Greek Government is always ready to express its views on the final formulation of the text in a way that would serve the steady pursuit to bring about the withdrawal of the occupation forces from Cyprus and the foundation of an independent and unitary Republic of Cyprus.

TURKMEN ON ARMENIAN 'TERRORISTS,' CYPRUS ISSUE

[Text] Ankara, 31 Aug (AA) -- Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen said Greek Cypriots would be sorry if, as reported, they allow the Armenian terrorist organization ASALA to move its base to southern Cyprus.

At a press conference Tuesday following his return from the Islamic Conference foreign ministers meeting in Niamey, Niger, Turkmen declined to give any names, but concurred that Armenian terrorists were receiving external support in the form of funds, supplies and training.

Turkmen said it would be a "mistake" to take the Cyprus issue to the U.N. General Assembly, for that would cut off intercommunal talks.

TURKMEN DISCUSSES RELATIONS WITH GREECE, USSR

NC310754 Istanbul CUMHURIYET in Turkish 23 Aug 82 pp 1, 11

[Interview with Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen by Sedat Ergin in Ankara; apparent first part of an interview, the final part of which was published in the 31 August Western Europe DAILY REPORT -- date not given]

[Text] Question: What do you expect from the meeting you are going to have with your Greek counterpart Kharalambopoulos in Ottawa at the beginning of October?

Answer: The fact that the meeting is going to take place is in itself a positive development. Naturally, this is going to be the first contact. It is not fair to expect substantial results from a first contact.

Question: Can this meeting leave the door ajar to a dialogue?

Answer: The objective, as I see it, is to open the door to negotiations.

Question: Greek Prime Minister Papandreou has resorted to two concrete moves: First, he has persuaded the Greek Cypriot administration to refer the Cyprus issue to the United Nations. Second, he has improved his relations with the United States by using the Greek lobby against Turkey, the decision of the House of Representatives being an example. How wise is it for Turkey to soften its attitude toward Greece at a time when Papandreou is displaying such behavior?

Answer: I have no doubt about the wisdom of this agreement. The continuation of this tense atmosphere between the two countries is as much against Turkish as it is against Greek interests. The entire world is aware of this gentleman's agreement. It is certain that the side failing to observe this agreement will have to shoulder the responsibility.

Question: To what extent do Papandreou's acts tie in with efforts being made to create an atmosphere of mutual trust which this gentleman's agreement is to promote?

Answer: There are always contradictory situations in foreign policy.

The important thing is to be able to devise a policy in line with the interests of the state and according to the dimensions of this contradiction.

Question: How do we view the Greek Cypriot administration's recourse to the United Nations?

Answer: We know from past experience what will happen if the Greek Cypriots resort to the United Nations. Debates in the UN General Assembly have never been conducive to the settlement of the Cyprus issue.

Question: How do you assess present Turkish-Soviet relations?

Answer: We are compelled to assess Turkish-Soviet relations in light of the recent border incident. Turkey has always attached importance to its relations with the Soviet Union and it has expressed this importance. However, for these relations to continue it is necessary to preserve an atmosphere of mutual trust. It is obvious that the latest developments do not conform to these prerequisites.

Question: Does this mean that some fluctuation has occurred in the traditionally neighborly relations?

Answer: In referring to the good-neighbor relations with the Soviet Union, we are not referring to general relations. We are directly referring to bilateral relations. Efforts have been exerted thus far to preserve this atmosphere of trust in bilateral relations. We believe that the Soviet Union has to continue to exercise care in this respect. This care has not been exercised by the Soviet Union.

Question: Similar disagreeable situations also occurred before the border incident, such as the criticism directed against Turkey in the Soviet press. Would you please comment?

Answer: Yes, we remember such articles appearing in the Soviet press. However, in its official statements the Soviet Government has told us that it attaches great importance to the continuation of the relations. We have expressed similar convictions. We are, however, unable to reconcile their attitude toward the latest incident with their past statements and approaches.

Question: At one time there was talk that you were going to visit Moscow....

Answer: There is no agreement whatsoever on this matter.

VOTCP SAYS IT 'SCARES' MILITARY GOVERNMENT

TA010903 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 1 Sep 82

[Excerpt] This is the Voice of the Turkish Communist Party [VOTCP]. VOTCP is the voice of truth. It defends the interests of workers, peasants and the toiling people. It advances shoulder to shoulder with the democratic forces that struggle against the reactionary military junta. Every broadcast of VOTCP is echoed by the people and enhances their struggle. On the other hand, VOTCP scares the reactionaries and the tyrannical military junta. This is why the reactionaries are doing their utmost to obstruct the voice of the TCP. The reactionaries are exerting efforts to separate the democratic forces from VOTCP and stab the democratic front. The latest example is Evren's speech in Afyon.

The listeners of VOTCP are increasing daily. The democratic forces are listening to the voice of truth and to VOTCP. It is a duty to further increase the number of VOTCP listeners.

'OUR RADIO' RESPONDS TO EVREN'S CRITICISM

TA310844 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0500 GMT 31 Aug 82

[Excerpt] The head of the junta, Evren, discussed the broadcasts of Our Radio and the Voice of the Turkish Communist Party [VOTCP] during his public address in Afyon. It is obvious that Our Radio's broadcasts make the junta uneasy. Every administration based on oppression and brute force which conceals the truth from the people has been uneasy about Our Radio. They are right: Our Radio tells the truth. It is impossible for the people's enemies to be pleased about our broadcasts.

The head of the junta, Evren, said that we say "There is widespread torture in Turkey." It is true that we say that. Let Evren answer us: Is there not torture in Turkey? Earlier, we listed the names of those killed by torture. The junta has never commented on this. Everybody knows that torture is widespread in our country, that the junta's prosecutors, police force and martial law have arrested hundreds and thousands of patriots based on statements extracted through torture. Furthermore, the junta has had to start so-called investigations about certain torture incidents it has not been able to conceal. Trials, even if they were just for show, have been held and the junta has had to admit to torture in some of the incidents.

Now Evren says in Afyon that we have started a campaign about false allegations of torture. Evren may not blush but can he say that Our Radio lies? Let him say that. The people know very well who lies and who tells the truth.

The head of the junta, Evren, says that we are opposed to the constitution. Yes, we are opposed to this reactionary constitution. We are not the only ones who are opposed to it: the workers are opposed to it; the villagers are opposed to it; the farmers who have been pushed into misery are opposed to it; the civil servants and the patriotic democratic intellectuals are opposed to it. Shall we list more? In short, the people are opposed to it.

Now, Evren says that those who are opposed to his constitution are communists. No, not all those who are opposed to the junta's black constitution are communists. The junta knows that as well. In fact, that is why the junta is in a state about this. It is taking measures because it is afraid it might not get what it wants from the constitutional referendum. It says that everyone who is opposed to his constitution is a communist so that it can increase oppression and brute force. Will all those who want democracy give up on the struggle just because Evren is saying that? Will they be frightened and give up? That is the dream of Evren's gang. No, things will not turn out as they hope. The junta's threat will not affect or frighten the workers, peasants and intellectuals who are angered by the constitution. Our Radio will continue to tell the truth. It will continue to call on our people to struggle against the junta and the junta's black constitution. [Our Radio's signal jingle] This is Our Radio. Our radio has been waging a struggle for democracy for 22 years. Our Radio is the voice of the democratic forces, of the people. Our Radio is the merciless [word indistinct] of the enemies of the people. Our Radio reveals all the facts, one by one, concealed from the people. That is why the enemies of the people are so angry at Our Radio. Evren, the head of the reactionary military junta, tried to complain about us, about Our Radio, to the citizens of Afyon. Our people have been listening to Our Radio for the past 22 years. They have never heard us tell a lie. Evren is the head of a junta that conceals the truth from the people. Listen to Our Radio to learn about the truth concealed from the people by the junta. Make your friends and relatives listen to Our Radio.

CPCZ'S FOJTIK MEETS WITH KPOE'S MUHRI 30 AUG

[Text] Vienna -- On Monday Jan Fojtik, CPCZ Central Committee secretary, who has been in Austria for several days for an unofficial visit, called on Austrian Communist Party [KPOe] Chairman Franz Muhri, accompanied by CSSR Ambassador Milan Kadnar.

In the talk, which, on behalf of the KPOe was also attended by Comrade Hans Kalt, Comrade Muhri welcomed the planned visit to Austria by CSSR President Gustav Husak. In this context, he expressed the hope for the continuation and further development of state and economic relations, which are of great importance for safeguarding jobs in Austria. In the cordial talks both sides stressed the importance of the need of specific steps for safeguarding detente and peace.

ETA-PM SEVENTH ASSEMBLY DISBANDS ITSELF

LD011020 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 0600 GMT 1 Sep 82

[Text] Although we do not have full details as yet, the news this morning is that ETA-Political Military Front (Seventh Assembly) has decided to dissolve itself. The report is published today by the Bilbao newspaper DEIA. This is undoubtedly good news, a step forward in the struggle against terrorism, which could help to bring peace to the Basque Country. This branch of ETA-political Military -- the Seventh Assembly -- is the one which renounced armed struggle a year and a half ago, following the 23 February coup attempt. It is the branch of ETA-political Military which has sought peace, as opposed to the other branch -- the Eighth Assembly -- which obstinately persists in using the language of machineguns. Some members of Seventh Assembly are believed to have profited from the recent pardon measures resulting from the talks which have been going on between the government and Euskadiko Ezkerra [Basque Left Party].

OFFICIALS RESPOND TO U.S. PIPELINE EMBARGO

[By Jan Kristiansen]

[Text] Paris, Sept 2 [AFP] -- Washington's sanctions against West European firms involved in the Soviet gas pipeline deal are a "dangerous precedent," according to West European trade officials. International experts and company executives say business confidence could be hurt by the punitive sanctions imposed against two French-based firms, one of them a subsidiary of a major U.S. corporation, which began deliveries last month of components for the Siberian pipeline.

By order of the French Government, they were defying a U.S. embargo on the supply of American oil and gas technology to the Soviet Union. They said efforts to improve the climate of international investment could be undermined by exposing companies to what one official described as "political arm-twisting."

Experts and officials in West European capitals questioned by AFP agreed that the underlying issue in the row between the United States and its Western European allies was not a commercial problem, but political disagreement over their economic approach to the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. The sources also suggested that the freedom of transfer of technology might be threatened if the U.S. sanctions, and the embargo itself, are maintained. They said there was a barely-veiled threat of countermeasures in the sharp protest note against the U.S. embargo that the 10 member-governments of the European Economic Community presented in Washington on August 12.

The note, which has so far not received any formal response, said the credibility of West European companies as "reliable suppliers" would be damaged in the longer term if they heeded the embargo. It said the "usefulness of technological links between European and American firms" would inevitably be called in question "if contracts could be nullified at any time by decision of the U.S. administration."

Officials of some West European countries said they felt the U.S. sanctions were "against the spirit" of the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) 1976 declaration committing OECD members not to discriminate against "foreign controlled" enterprises, but to grant them "national treatment," save when "[word indistinct] security interests" or similar concerns were at stake. It also laid down "guidelines" for multinational enterprises (MNES) to encourage "positive contributions" to their host countries and help resolve problems stemming from their operations, including those stemming from "concentration of economic power." The guidelines are "recommendations" addressed to MNES, not to governments, and deal with their relations with host rather than home governments. They say MNES should "take fully into account established general policy objectives of the member countries in which they operate" and that their affiliates "are subject to the laws of these countries." The text also says these enterprises should, "when granting licences for the use of industrial property rights, or when otherwise transferring technology, do so on reasonable terms and conditions."

Contract clauses requiring licencees to observe U.S. export legislation are not considered "reasonable" by European governments. One expert said Britain and France were likely to raise the problem of "extraterritoriality" at the next meeting of OECD's committee on investment and multinational enterprises.

PAHR ON IZVESTIYA-DIE PRESSE 'CONTROVERSY'

AU021235 Vienna DIE PRESSE in German 2 Sep 82 pp 1-2

[Special DIE PRESSE report]

[Excerpt] Vienna -- At the Foreign Ministry an attempt is being made to play down the attacks by the Soviet Government organ IZVESTIYA on the U.S. administration and DIE PRESSE. Foreign Minister Pahr referred to the issue as a "controversy between newspapers" on which he did not want to comment.

As DIE PRESSE reported in its late Wednesday edition, IZVESTIYA had made a report by our Washington correspondent Georg Possanner the occasion to speak of "attempts by the Pentagon to torpedo Austria's status as a neutral country."

PAHR RECEIVES UN KAMPUCHEA CONFERENCE DELEGATION

[Excerpts] Yesterday, Foreign Minister Pahr received a delegation of the ad hoc committee of the International Conference on Kampuchea headed by Ambassador Mrs Edmonde Dever for a talk on the latest developments in the Kampuchean issue and its being dealt with within the framework of the United Nations. On this occasion, the delegation informed the Austrian foreign minister of their visits to various states. In turn, Foreign Minister Pahr informed the delegation of the results of the talks -- in some cases repeated talks -- which he has held during the past year with all foreign ministers directly interested in the Kampuchean issue (the ASEAN states, Vietnam, the USSR, the PRC and Burma).

Pahr, who is chairman of the UN International Conference on Kampuchea again stressed his skepticism regarding the Kampuchean resistance coalition, which includes followers of former chief of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the anticommunist National Liberation Front of Son Sann, and the Khmer Rouge. Following his talks with Indonesian foreign minister, Prof Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja, Pahr declared that his ASEAN counterparts were taking a more optimistic view about reducing the influence of the Khmer Rouge in the alliance in favor of the noncommunist groups.

At any rate, all sides are in agreement that China will play the decisive role in the further development of the Southeast Asian region, the Austrian foreign minister declared. He added that he did not have the impression that the Soviet Union had any intention of expanding its position in that region, referring in this context to his visits to the USSR and to the SRV last spring and summer. Rather, it seemed to him that both Vietnam and the Soviet Union were interested in coming to an agreement on the Kampuchean issue.

The minister also stressed that he had been encouraged both by the ASEAN states and Vietnam to promote a dialogue between the parties involved.

In addition to the Kampuchean problem and the treatment of it at the forthcoming 37th UN General Assembly, Pahr and Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja also discussed the results of the consultative meeting of the European neutral and nonaligned states ("N and N" states). The Indonesian foreign minister will pass on Pahr's views on the position of the European "N and N" states on various international questions, especially within the framework of the United Nations, to his ASEAN counterparts.

REAGAN MIDEAST PROPOSALS RECEIVED WITH 'INTEREST'

[Text] Bonn, 2 Sep (DPA) -- President Reagan's new Middle East proposals were received with "interest" in Bonn today. Diplomatic circles also said that the U.S. initiative should be examined as soon as possible within the EEC. In Bonn it was attentively noted that Reagan placed the future of the Palestinians in the foreground as a central problem of the Middle East conflict. Middle East experts pointed out, however, that compared with the EEC's Venice Middle East declaration of 1980, the positions of the United States and the EEC countries continue to demonstrate important differences.

FDP lower house Deputy Juergen Moellemann, Middle East expert and president of the German-Arab Society, described Reagan's initiative as a "helpful step in the right direction." He stressed, however, that the principle of self-determination means that there is an obligation to see that "those affected are themselves involved in the creation of thier own Palestinian state or confederation."

Reagan had come out expressly against an independent Palestinian state in west Jordan and the Gaza Strip.

Alois Mertes, foreign policy spokesman of the CDU/CSU parliamentary party, called the proposals "constructive and balanced." They take into account all points of view that are important for a permanent Middle East peace settlement. The decisive problem is the form that the exercising of the Palestinians' right to self-determination takes. Mertes indicated that, like Reagan, the CDU/CSU considers a type of confederation with Jordan to be the most promising solution.

Regarding the question of Palestinian self-determination, in 1980 the Europeans went much further than Reagan, who rejected an "independent" Palestinian state. Bonn and its EEC partners want "full application of the right of self-determination." According to the prevailing interpretation, this includes the possibility of the formation of a Palestinian state. However, Middle East experts view the fact that Reagan warned against an Israeli annexation of west Jordan and the Gaza Strip and supports a negotiated settlement of their final status as a step towards the EEC position. There is also agreement that Israel's existence with recognized frontiers must be secured.

Further Reaction to Initiative

[Text] Bonn 3 Sep (DPA) -- The Federal Government has welcomed President Reagan's new Middle East initiative, which has already been firmly rejected by Israel. Government Spokesman Klaus Boelling said in Bonn today that the core of Reagan's proposals corresponds with the objective of the EEC's 1980 Venice declaration. Above all, this was expressed in the American emphasis placed upon the Palestinian question being the central issue of the Middle East conflict. Boelling underscored the need for a secure existence for Israel as a necessary element of a settlement.

Diplomatic circles in Bonn see no insurmountable contradiction in the American President's rejection of an "independent" Palestinian state and the Europeans' demands for "full exercise" of the Palestinian right to self-determination. They pointed out that the EEC Middle East declaration also did not call for an independent state. However, the full existence of the right to self-determination means that the Palestinians themselves would determine the political form of their future home, they said.

Boelling said that at their meeting in Copenhagen next week, the EEC foreign ministers will discuss the Reagan initiative, which has also been positively received in Paris and London.

FIRST REACTION OF SCHMIDT TO CABINET RIFT

[Excerpts] Darmstadt 2 Sep (DPA) — The "lack of self-discipline" of some cabinet members cannot, according to Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, simply be restored by a "stern word" [machtwort]. Schmidt was reacting personally for the first time on Thursday in Darmstadt before journalists, to the confrontation which openly broke out at the latest cabinet meeting between him and the FDP ministers, particularly with Otto Graf Lambsdorff. The federal economics minister had stated in a newspaper interview that the continuation of the Bonn government coalition and the future coalition policy of the FDP were dependent on the results of the Hesse Landtag elections on 26 September. Schmidt recalled that the members of the Federal Government were subject to the guideline authority of the federal chancellor. "This is aimed at Mr Lambsdorff," said the chancellor.

POLISH PRIMATE STRESSES NEED FOR CALM IN POLAND

[Text] Essen, 2 Sep (DPA) — According to the primate of the Catholic Church in Poland, Archbishop Jozef Glemp, his country requires calm in order to overcome future problems. "There is no sense in throwing stones," Glemp told some 500 fellow-countrymen today during a visit to the Golden Madonna in Essen Cathedral. He made a clear appeal to the Germans to continue to send food, medicine and cleaning supplies. He expressed thanks for the help so far, which has come "through Christian and human solidarity."

LIFTING OF TRAVEL RESTRICTIONS SOUGHT FROM GDR

[Text] Bonn, 2 Sep (DPA) — The governments of the two German states continued their discussions on the relaxation of personal restrictions desired by Bonn.

This discussion took place in Bonn on Thursday between Minister of State Hans-Juergen Wischnewski of the Federal Chancellor's Office and Permanent Representative of the GDR in Bonn Ewald Moldt. A Bonn government spokesman gave no details of the discussion.

The spokesman restricted himself to the announcement that Wischnewski conveyed the Federal Government's position to the GDR's answers in May to the GDR representative. In those answers, the GDR stated its position on Bonn's wishes for improvements, especially regarding travel. These desires had been expressed by Egon Franke, federal minister for intra-German affairs, at the intra-German summit meeting of December 1981. East Berlin's answers were privately described by the Federal Government as unsatisfactory. In particular, the GDR refuses to reduce the minimum exchange amount for visitors to the GDR.

CALLS TO MOSCOW CANCELED — Bonn, 2 Sep (DPA) — Beginning today, STD telephone calls between the Federal Republic and Moscow are no longer possible. The Federal Postal Ministry said that telephone conversations with the Soviet capital must now go through the operator, as was the case earlier. The halting of the STD service, for which no reason was given, marks a new level in restrictions on telephone traffic between the Soviet Union and Western countries. Moscow had told the Federal Republic, Austria, France, Britain, the United States and other Western countries to expect a drastic reduction in STD telephone service beginning 1 July. The unofficial reason given for this is "technical problems." However, Western diplomats have suggested that the Soviet Government wants to prevent rapid and uncontrollable contacts between Soviet dissidents and the West. Connection by the operator means that phone calls to Moscow must be registered with the telephone exchange, which then makes the connection with Moscow. There can be a delay of several hours. MITTERRAND 'FAVORABLE' TO REAGAN INITIATIVE

LD021902 Paris Domestic Service in French 0600 GMT 2 Sep 82

[Text] France is generally favorable to the initiative taken by the American President as evidenced by the comments of Francois Mitterrand, who is still in Athens concluding his official visit to Greece. Here is Francois Mitterrand talking to Dominique Souchiez [France Inter correspondent]:

[Begin Mitterrand recording] Let us follow the path of good sense. On the one hand, any measures which will allow the Palestinians to emerge from the tragic situation in which they find themselves today -- deprived of a country and thus of a homeland -- anything that will enable them to set up in a country, their country, the structures of which are their choice, one can discuss or think about what is the embryonic or completed nature of a state [sentence as heard]. In any case, this is the path which must be followed and that is what I told the Knesset when I visited Israel in March.

Moreover, one could not expect less from Mr Reagan nor from France either. Every policy in this region presupposes both the recognition of the State of Israel and the necessary guarantees for the existence of the other states. Everything that follows this path, the path of dual recognition, is accepted by me, by French diplomacy, as a favorable direction. It is not forbidden, even if this is a little late, to make one's thoughts clear in this sad business. I must say that the position of Mr Reagan appears to follow the path that we ourselves have defined. [end recording]

FOREIGN MINISTRY CONDEMNS POLISH POLICE VIOLENCE

[Text] The French Government condemns the use of violence by police in Poland. In a communique, the Foreign Ministry noted that the events of 31 August confirm the belief that martial law is not a solution. A spokesman of the Quai d'Orsay stated that the goals defined by the French Government are proving to be more justified than ever. These goals include lifting the state of seige, releasing political prisoners and resuming a dialogue among the Poles.

PRESS LEAK PREVENTS ROMANIAN DEFECTIONS

OW021722 Paris AFP in English 1611 GMT 1 Sep 82

[By Serge Manucci]

[Text] Paris, Sept 2 (AFP) -- A French Secret Service plan to arrange the defection of Bucharest-based officers of Romania's "Securitate" spy service was ruined by a press leak, informed sources said today.

On Tuesday, the daily MATIN DE PARIS revealed that an exiled Romanian writer, Virgil Tanase, believed captured and killed by "Securitate" in Paris last May, was in fact, alive and well.

The daily said that Mr Tanase had in fact, been kidnapped by French Secret Service (DST) agents to prevent his assassination by a "Securitate" Colonel "Emil", acting on personal orders from President Nicolae Ceausescu.

Colonel "Emil" later gave a press conference along with Mr Tanase and exiled Romanian author Paul Goma, also on the alleged death list, and the DST has been unanimously praised for the operation.

But the Romanian Embassy here today "categorically" denied Bucharest's involvement in plans to eliminate the writer and said that the "alleged" Romanian "agent," Colonel "Emil", was totally unkown "at least in Romania."

The charges laid against Romania, it said, were "totally abnormal within the framework of relations between states," and could "seriously endanger" relations between the two countries.

Meanwhile, informed sources said today that there had been a further phase to the "Securitate" operation (?—) the flight to the West of several senior "Securitate" colonels and generals.

The daily QUOTIDIEN DE PARIS said that the DST had in fact arranged the defection to Paris of the powerful boss of "Securitate," General Pleiceta himself.

Colonel "Emil", who has been given political asylum with his family, had also promised to provide the DST with top secret "Securitate" documents.

But the story in LE MATIN DE PARIS and a French monthly magazine, ACTUEL, ruined this last part of the operation.

Informed sources here said the "DST believe that there was a 70 percent chance of General Pleiceta himself defecting to the West as he knew that he would be instantly dismissed and punished once the truth became known that Tanase had not been eliminated as ordered by the Romanian leader."

"In 1978 Securitate was practically annihilated by the president when its chief, General Pacepa, defected during a visit to West Germany. More than 200 Romanian agents abroad were recalled. Pleiceta, who is married to a relative of the president's wife, was then promoted to succeed Pacepa."

In their press conference, both Colonel "Emil" and Mr Tanase expressed regret that the press had revealed the whole affair too early, because it meant the failure of the final phase. But they did not say what it was.

The Socialist daily MATIN DE PARIS was deliberately "leaked" the whole Tanese story by a leading Socialist personality. The QUOTIDIEN today charged that it was President Francois Mitterrand himself, and that he was unaware of the final phase.

As for Mr Tanase, he today left the country house where he had been hiding out under police protection since May, to return to his Paris flat. But he told reporters that he still felt threatened by attacks from the Romanian president's men.

SPADOLINI OUTLINES NEW GOVERNMENT PLATFORM

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 2 -- Premier Giovanni Spadolini returned to the lower house today to insist on the need to avert the dissolution of Parliament and early general elections in a statement to close confidence debate opened Monday when he presented his new five-party government to Parliament and the new government platform.

After affirming that the nation's economic, social and moral situation is too serious to allow delay, the premier said, "In this area, we feel we have gathered around us a new alliance for larger consensus for this government from the world of work and culture and from the coalition partners themselves".

Spadolini went on to reaffirm the validity of the five-party coalition in the government which is, at the same time, "the same and different". His remarks in this area were in response to sharp criticism from the opposition that the nation's 42nd postwar government, sworn in August 23, is an exact duplicate of the cabinet Spadolini headed from June 28 last year until August 7, when it folded following the pullout of the Socialist ministers.

The premier said in his reply today that the government is "the same in the makeup of the cabinet and in the parliamentary alliance but different because it has brought in platform elements intended to stimulate the political and institutional progress of the government."

Since he received his second mandate in August, Spadolini has complained that the structure of Italian Government is the weakest in Europe and will require institutional remedies to avert another government crisis of the type which occurred this summer.

After affirming that the new government intends to move quickly to come to grips with the social and economic ills of the country, the premier said that also "institutional problems" will be taken up.

"We have the experience of every type of coalition, he said, "including those supported by the opposition", a reference to the government of national unity which ruled with support in Parliament from the Communist Party from 1978 to 1979.

Among the more pressing "emergencies" cited by Spadolini were those connected to the economy and the resurgence of terrorism.

In the foreign policy area, the premier reiterated Italy's commitment to peace in the Middle East, to the European Economic Community and, with reference to developments in Poland, called for "the observance of the 1975 Helsinki Final Act, signed also by Poland".

Receives Vote of Confidence

[Excerpts] (ANSA) -- Rome, September 3 -- The second government coalition of Premier Giovanni Spadolini, after winning a vote of confidence from the lower house Thursday, has gone before the Senate where the vote is expected Saturday morning.

The new government, a duplicate of its predecessor, is a partnership of five parties: the Christian Democrats (DC), the Socialists (PSI), the Social Democrats (PSDI), the Republicans (PRI) and the Liberals (PLI). All of them (?voted) in favor of the government yesterday, along with the South Tyrol Volkspartei, an ethnic minority grouping.

The opposition forces voting against the government were: the Communist (PCI), the "MSI" neofascists, the Radicals, the Proletarian Democrats and the leftwing Independents.

The vote was 357 to 247 and was called on a motion containing twenty points: ten on economic policy and ten on institutional policy. Spadolini has stressed that although his new government is the same in its cabinet makeup and in its parliamentary alliance, it is at the same time different because it has brought in platform elements intended to stimulate the political and institutional progress of the government. Since he received his second mandate in August, Spadolini has complained that the structure of Italian Government is the weakest in Europe and will require institutional remedies to avert another government crisis of the type which occurred this summer.

After affirming that the new government intends to move quickly to come to grips with the social and economic ills of the country, the premier said that also institutional problems will be taken up.

Spadolini's fellow Republican, Adolfo Battaglia, head of the PRI deputies in the house, last night stressed that the government did not plan to speed up its timetable for relaunching the economy through law decrees, despite threats by opposition froces to mount a strong filibustering campaign in the parliament.

Battaglia made the remark to squelch rumors that the government planned to call a series of confidence votes soon to win approval for important decrees governing economic policy. The Republican caucus leader said that it was legitimate to envision a general accord that would take into account the filibustering strategy without forcing the work rhythms of the two chambers.

COLOMBO HAS TALKS WITH U.S. MIDEAST ENVOY HABIB

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, September 2 -- Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo voiced appreciation today for the latest U.S. Mideast proposals in his one-hour meeting with U.S. Presidential Envoy to the Middle East Philip Habib.

Habib came to Rome to brief Italian officials on the orderly evacuation of Palestinian combatants from Beirut, supervised by a multinational force of American, French and Italian troops.

Colombo also reiterated the Italian position that the Palestinian issue is the key to an overall solution of the Mideast crisis. Habib voiced his personal gratitude for the contribution of the Italian contingent and the support of Italian diplomacy in the negotiations to evacuate the PLO.

Habib also said that the evacuation of Beirut has not solved all problems. "The next step is to restore Lebanon's integrity and sovereignty and the United States has clearly spelled out its point of view on how to accelerate the peace process."

Colombo thanked Habib for his efforts for peace in the Middle East and said that the evacuation of Beirut is an important step for the peace process.

"We will continue to cooperate with European nations and the United States for an overall peace and a central point is a solution of the Palestinian problem". Colombo added that the latest proposals made by President Reagan are interesting. "We believe these proposals move in the right direction".

JORGENSEN ANNOUNCES GOVERNMENT'S RESIGNATION

[Text] Copenhagen, Sep 2 (AFP) -- Danish Prime Minister Anker Jorgensen's nine-month old Social Democratic minority government resigned here today.

Mr Jorgensen told the Danish state radio that the government would stay on in a caretaker capacity until a new cabinet was formed.

The surprise resignation of Mr Jorgensen's minority government came on the same day that the government had announced sweeping new economic measures aimed at reducing the nation's huge budget deficit.

But by the end of the day, Mr Jorgensen realized that he lacked the necessary political support -- both inside and outside Social Democratic Party ranks -- to enable his government to carry out its plan.

Later he announced that he will present his government's notice of resignation to Queen Margrethe II tomorrow, without calling elections.

An election so soon after polls last December 8, 1981 would not help solve the nation's problems, he said.

It is not yet clear whether the prime minister himself or one of the leaders of the non-Socialist opposition parties will take on the task of trying to put a new coalition government together.

SKP PARLIAMENTARY DELEGATES TO VISIT MOSCOW

[Text] A delegation of Communist Party [SKP] Diet Deputies will go to Moscow for about a week's visit on Sunday. The delegation will be led by the chairman of the Finnish People's Democratic League [SKDL] Diet group, Vikko Saarto. A decision on the composition of the delegation was made by the SKP Politburo yesterday.

Besides Saarto, the delegation includes Diet Deputies Ulla-Leena Alppi, Matti Jarvenpaa, Ensio Laine, Pentti Lides, Helvi Niskanen, Unto Ruotsalainen and Sten Soderstrom. The invitation to the delegation was extended by the CPSU Central Committee.

The visit has already aroused disagreements in the SKDL. The composition of the delegation is regarded as one-sided because only members of the SKP are included. The party has stated that the disagreements are due to a misunderstanding; it was originally thought that the invitation had been extended to the Diet group of the SKDL, when in fact it was extended solely to the SKP, and therefore, the delegation is composed of just SKP members.

SPOKESMAN REITERATES DRAFT RESOLUTION PROVISIONS

NC021730 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 2 Sep 82

[Text] The government spokesman today reiterated that the draft resolution in connection with Cyprus' forthcoming recourse to the UN General Assembly includes a demand for the withdrawal of the occupation troops. The spokesman rejected allegations about a decisive AKEL role in the shaping of the draft resolution and added that the draft resolution has not yet been discussed with any party, neither with AKEL nor with the appropriate political organ of the Democratic Party. The spokesman said that the draft resolution has been prepared so that it can be the subject of consultations with the Greek Government. He added: Therefore, any amendments that may be found necessary can be effected as a result of these consultations.

UN ENVOY SAYS 'OUTSIDE FACTORS INFLUENCE TALKS'

[Text] This afternoon a meeting within the framework of the inter-Cypriot talks was held at the Ledra Palace Hotel to discuss the question of regional governments.

In a statement prior to the meeting, Mr Gobbi said that outside factors -- such as political needs and ambitions -- are influencing the climate of the inter-Cypriot talks.

Mr Mavrommatis, the Greek Cypriot side's representative at the talks, answering a question on the view put forward by Mr Gobbi, said that he does not think that outside factors have influenced the climate or the atmosphere of the talks. He added: Of course, some statements and actions may exert some influence. Mr Mavrommatis also said that after completing the discussion on the transitional provisions, which will follow the question of regional governments, discussion on the territorial aspect will start.

In a statement, Mr Onan [Turkish Cypriot representative] said that the atmosphere at the talks is excellent and quite constructive. He added: Of course, outside statements which are not constructive influence the atmosphere. The Turkish Cypriot interlocutor also spoke about making quite satisfactory progress although, as he added, the stage of putting down in writing what has been achieved has not yet been reached.

PROTEST TO FRANCE OVER FAMAGUSTA REFINERY

PM020921 Paris LE FIGARO in French 30 Aug 82 p 3

[Jean Delamotte dispatch]

[Excerpts] The Turkish oil company Onel has signed an agreement with the French company Elf-Aquitaine under the terms of which the latter will help in the construction of the factory which the Turks are building in Famagusta. That factory is to produce 5 million tons of oil products and industrial oils per year.

Cyprus' foreign minister presented a very violent protest note in Paris a few days ago. The Quai d'Orsay replied that it would study the question in conjunction with Industry Minister Jean-Pierre Chevenement and Foreign Trade Minister Michel Jobert.

It is being pointed out in Cyprus that the official visit which Francois Mitterrand is due to make to Athens on 1 and 2 September will enable him to take the decision to wait and to order "the whole question to be reconsidered.

DENKTAS REQUESTS INFORMATION ON ARMENIAN TERRORISTS

There were repeated reports recently that Armenian terrorists who left Lebanon are setting up their new base in the Greek Cypriot zone.

ATAKOL RETURNS FROM NIAMEY, MAKES STATEMENT

TA011737 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1530 GMT 1 Sep 82

[Text] Foreign Affairs and Defense Minister Kenan Atakol has said that, as in previous years, the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus did not elicit a resolution on the Cyprus issue from the Islamic Conference in accordance with the Denktas-Kiprianou agreement, and will observe very carefully the attitude the Greek Cypriots adopt at international forums.

Atakol, who had been abroad for some time, returned to the island this afternoon. In a statement at Ercan State Airport, Atakol said that several political, economic and cultural resolutions were adopted at the Islamic Conference foreign ministers' meeting this year envisaging solidarity among the Islamic countries. He added: As in previous years, we did not elicit a resolution on Cyprus from the Islamic Conference, in accordance with Article 6 of the 1979 Denktas-Kiprianou agreement. We will observe very carefully and with great determination the attitude the Greek Cypriots will adopt in international forums in return for our sensitiveness and good will.

Atakol said that during the meeting in Niamey he held bilateral talks with the foreign ministers and representatives of various Islamic countries. He states that during these talks they discussed the political and economic problems of the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus, adding: We saw great understanding and a close interest on the part of the Islamic countries.

MILLIYET ON PLO ARMS REMOVAL, ASALA IN CYPRUS

[Akay Cemal report from Nicosia]

[Excerpts] TFSC President Rauf Denktas has stated that the U.S. Embassy has given assurance that the arms reported to have been brought to Cyprus by the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) guerrillas from Beirut will be removed from the island.

Denktas further stated that he was informed by the U.S. Embassy that the 21 Sshara jeeps brought to Cyprus have been placed in U.S. depots in Cyprus, and added that these jeeps did not carry arms and that they will be removed from Cyprus this week by the Americans.

Reliable sources say that a group of Armenian militants were in Cyprus before the Palestinian guerrillas were flown to other countries from Larnaca and remained there afterward. It is reported that around 30 membets of ASALA will be sent to various European countries. It is further reported that ASALA members themselves have asked the Greek Cypriot administration for facilities. A secret agreement had been reached in this respect.

MITTERRAND HOLDS ATHENS PRESS CONFERENCE 2 SEP

[Recorded reportage by Greek Radio-Television correspondent Aris Xipolitidhis]

[Text] French President Francois Mitterrand this afternoon gave a press conference for Greek and foreign journalists at a hotel in the center of Athens. President Mitterrand arrived at the hotel accompanied by Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou. Mr Mitterrand was introduced to the journalists by Mr Papandreou, who said:

[Papandreou] Ladies and gentlemen, good evening. I consider it a special privelege to introduce the president of the French Republic, Mr Francois Mitterrand, to this press conference. For us, for all Greeks, his presence in our country has a special significance. In addition to the close friendly relations binding us within the framework of many common struggles in the European arena, this time we are also linked by the big experiment of the course to democratic socialism. Thank you very much.

[Correspondent] Then, President Mitterrand opened the press conference with the following statement:

[Mitterrand in French with superimposed Greek translation] (?In addition) to what Prime Minister Papandreou has said, I would like to express my pleasure at being before the press, moreover before the Greek and the international press, which includes the French press, of which I recognize many members here. I hope that basically this conference will deal with the aspects of my presence in Greece and with bilateral Greek-French relations, international relations within the framework of the European Community of the Ten, international relations in general, the Middle East problem and the conflicts on our planet. All of these topics were discussed either in my talks with President Karamanlis or in my talks with the prime minister.

We also had the so-called (?broadened) talks with the appropriate ministers. We have held discussions since yesterday morning through the end of this morning. We made a review, as far as it was possible in the short period of time, in a friendly climate. I have found myself again in a country I love, among officials whom I know very well and with a prime minister with whom we have old, friendly relations.

We ascertained a coincidence of views and very few deviations between Greece and France on political problems. In the international arena this is a rare event, and I believe it is worth noting.

Now, I will follow the tradition, that is, I will answer your questions.

[Correspondent] Then Mr Mitterrand answered questions from journalists and, among other things, said that: France will offer all its good offices, if requested, in maintaining the principles of the sovereignty and independence of Cyprus and the autonomy of its populations; France supports every effort for the Palestinians to acquire a homeland with the provision of granting guarantees for the existence of the state of Israel; there is no absolute coincidence of views between Greece and France on the Middle East issue, but, of course, Greece as an independent state has a sovereign will emanating from the assessment of its interests; during his discussions with the Greek Government, the question of Greece purchasing French Mirage military aircraft was raised but no final agreement has been reached; and that he was not disturbed at all by the simultaneous visit to Greece by PLO leader Yasir 'Arafat.

Supports Reagan Proposals

[Text] Athens, Sep 2 (AFP) -- French President Francois Mitterrand today said President Ronald Reagan's proposals for a resolution of the Palestinian issue "seem to be headed in the same direction" as those put forward by France.

Mr Mitterrand, addressing a press conference here during an official visit to Greece, said France backs any policy that enables the Palestinians "to establish their own structures on their own land" and affirms the recognition of Israel and the guarantees necessary for its existence.

President Reagan yesterday put forward a five-point plan that called for full autonomy for Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip "in association with Jordan."

[French President Francois Mitterrand's interview to TA NEA journalist Ira Feloukatzi on 18 Aug 1982 -- place not given]

[Excerpts] [Question] Mr President, France is playing a major role in the Mediterranean. Do you not think that during your term of office France has increased its presence there?

[Answer] I will not make any comparison with the tasks achieved by my predecessors. I will simply say that I was particularly prepared to consider that one of the political axes of French policy pass through the Mediterranean in both ways: East-West -- Middle East, Greece and France -- and North-South, due to the extension of France's policy to Africa initiated a long time ago and reactivated during the past few months.

I will add that within the framework of my previous functions as leader of a major political party in France I had already set up, in conjunction with the present Greek prime minister, a body designed for permanent consultations among five countries from what could be called Mediterranean Europe, even though Portugal is included. Since then we have organized several activities, cultural events in particular, which enabled us to better work out the Mediterranean dimension. Henceforth, I fully uphold what you have just said.

[Question] According to generally established opinion, the policy of the present government in Athens might make Greece a bridge between Europe and Middle East countries, in particular Arab countries. Mr President, what would be your assessment of this?

[Answer] I have already used this privileged relationship, if I may say so, and before making major decisions within the framework of France's relations with the various, often antagonistic countries in the Middle East. I have never failed to consult the Greek authorities, including during the recent Lebanon events.

[Question] In this regard, you will certainly allow me to ask whether Greece has always felt sympathetic to France's stand on the question of Cyprus?

[Answer] Yes, the Cyprus problem. On several occasions our minister of external relations has made our position known. It is necessarily aimed at strengthening the personality and the sovereignty -- therefore the unity -- of Cyprus. This calls for an approach based on negotiations with a view to overcoming the differences of which you are aware.

[Question] The Greek Socialist Government has stressed that it is confronted with a serious defense problem. A possible attack is expected not from the Warsaw Pact, but from a neighboring country, which also happens to be a NATO member country. What would then be the position of the alliance in which France is a member? Would NATO take measures? Which ones?

[Answer] I do not want to be led into such discussions. I will certainly have the opportunity to talk about this with Mr Karamanlis and Mr Papandreou, and if you agree, I will let those two leaders to be the first to be informed of France's position. It would not be appropriate for me to discuss this vital problem beforehand. Therefore, what I can say is that France feels its relations with Greece are very strong and we disapprove of anything that might harm Greece. But I will discuss all this with the two authorities, Mr Karamanlis and Mr Papandreou.

[Question] Mr President, can the European socialists -- and to what extent -- contribute to the improvement of the current situation in Europe and the world at large?

[Answer] Are you referring in particular to the relations with the Third World?

[Answer] In Europe, we are part of the EEC. We are trying to improve the economic and social reality. We want this reality to fit in an indispensable social framework. Without the support of this social framework and this social reality, how can an economic policy possibly be devised? In this connection, I must say that Greece is one of the countries which has given me the greatest help.

The extension of the Common Market remains a question. As socialists, we abstained from voting on the admission of Greece. This did not mean we refused to see Greece join Europe; it was because we felt our government should give us certain assurances, in particular concerning the prospects for Spain's admission. The then-ruling government did not give us these assurances. This notwithstanding, I am pleased that Greece and France are now both in the 10-member Community. Concerning the admission of Portugal and Spain, the approach is different. During my recent trip to Spain, I made my position clear. For political reasons, I support their admission. If I lay down conditions on the economic front, it is with the hope that they will be met within a reasonably short time. This implies a sound dialogue, which we have begun.

[Question] Mr President, you are very experienced. I want to ask you this: Do you believe that Europe will again be economically independent?

[Answer] Yes, this depends on it. Europe will find reserve energy in itself. Europe is the world's greatest commercial power.

It has not succeeded in translating this commercial power into political power. What is needed is a common political will and the capability to overcome its contradictions in spite of being torn between East and West. Indeed, it is an essential part of the West. But we cannot ignore the geography and history of Europe. We must maintain relations with the East. And in view of this, we have not yet made sufficient headway. In a nutshell, what Europe lacks now is a clear political will and I intend to continue my efforts to develop this will.

[Question] Mr President, how do you consider relations between Europe and the United States? Our question particularly concerns the problem now posed by the American reaction to the construction of the gas pipeline from Siberia to Western Europe.

[Answer] Our relations with the United States are generally good. We have an old alliance which has continued (?without any) hitch for more than 2 centuries now. Besides, we recently celebrated the anniversary of the decisive battle of Yorktown where the French and American troops won a victory over the British and thus ensured the independence of the United States of America. We are faithful to this alliance; we merely want to be characterized by respect for state sovereignties.

Concerning the affair of the gas pipeline, at the Ottawa summit conference of 1981 I told Mr Reagan beforehand that I was in favor of this project and that I would not accept an interdiction. There was therefore nothing new when I recalled this in Versailles a year later. I had already said it in Ottawa. Moreover, I expressed this in almost the same terms as Chancellor Schmidt. Therefore, we did not take the Americans by surprise. We have always maintained the following position: We have trade relations with the Soviet Union. Besides, these relations are quite weak. We have no reason to associate ourselves in a sort of economic blockade against the Soviet Union because this would be an act of war and we must do everything to avoid war. We support the regulations of the Western countries on the precautions to be taken concerning the sale of certain so-called strategic products. We are loyal allies, but there is no reason for us to do more than that and we want measures independently taken by France to be respected by our American allies. This is especially so because many of their arguments are excessive. We do not depend on the Soviet Union in any way: In 1990 the Soviet gas supply will represent 5 percent of our energy consumption. I wish to add that since the contract will be paid for in French francs at this time, when the price of the dollar has reached a really intolerable level, the Americans will understand that this is simply a reasonable reaction on the part of France.

[Question] Mr President, is this especially true because the United States also has trade relations with the Soviet Union?

[Answer] Yes, they have been selling their wheat while at the same time subsidizing the American producers. It is true that they are selling for spot cash, but they are selling all the same. If France is offering the Soviet Union credit facilities involving an 11.6 percent interest while private German or Japanese firms are offering credit facilities involving 8 percent interest, people should talk about this matter a little more reasonably.

[Question] Mr President, France is among the countries supplying military equipment to Greece. Would you envisage the possibility of a parallel cooperation in the fields of advanced technology, which would be supplied by France and which Greece would develop in the industrial and commercial sector?

[Answer] I am completely prepared to envisage such a possibility. I rejoiced over the military agreement signed between Charles Hernu [French defense minister] and his Greek counterpart and I earnestly hope that this technological cooperation will be developed. We are prepared to continue with the discussions.

[Question] Mr President, are you optimistic concerning the talks between the two superpowers on disarmament? Do you think that there will be a balance between the two?

[Answer] In any case, this is what we should search for because peace depends on a balance between the two superpowers. I believe that what you and I have just said clearly demonstrates that they will be compelled to negotiate. As a matter of fact, they are negotiating, with a lot of interruptions, but they are heading in that direction. As far as I am concerned, I expect negotiations more especially because it is absolutely essential to put a stop to the arms race. In fact, it is not a question of disarmament but of reducing the arms stockpile. When the two superpowers begin to disarm -- they already have the possibility of destroying each other many times over -- France will examine which part it can play in this negotiation. This is not yet the case, however, and it is necessary that the two superpowers go much further in their discussions.

[Answer] I hope it does. We are one of the very few countries possessing nuclear arms, but we are against the inclusion of these in the negotiation of the two superpowers because of the reasons I have just given: Before one could achieve a veritable disarmament involving a country like France, water would unfortunately flow under bridges. [as received]

[Question] Mr President, what is your position concerning the pacifist movement now developing in the world and even the United States?

[Answer] I always have sympathy for the pacifist movement. The development of great ideas has always contributed to the progress of mankind. However, we must try to distinguish between true pacifism and one that is not true. In Europe there exists a sort of pacifism that is sometimes inspired by powers like the Soviet Union which want the development of opposition to NATO's armament in Europe. Sometimes there is also a sort of national movement in certain countries like Germany which do not have the possibility of acquiring nuclear arms but which see the accumulation on their soil of arms over which they have no control. Thus, these countries may one day become theaters of operation and victims in the very first hour or quarter hour of war. There also exists, therefore, the pacifism that refuses this holocaust and this is understandable. But there is also the pacifism which is against Germany remaining in a dependent situation. I have nothing against this movement, I only want their promoters and militants to understand that a country's national independence is always defended at a great cost. As far as it is concerned, France -- which has no intention of attacking anyone and only wishes to defend its independence -- cannot afford the luxury of renouncing the means to achieve this independence.

EVREN 29 AUG REMARKS ABOUT COMMUNIST BROADCASTS

Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish at 1600 GMT on 29 August rebroadcasts General Evren's public address in Afyon, enabling the following passage to be inserted in the version of Evren's address published in the Western Europe DAILY REPORT of 30 August, thereby providing the text of the speech:

Insert after paragraph four. I would now like to read to you as a lesson some of the venom spit out daily by these two Communist stations. Listen well, my citizens: Look what they say. One of the radios is called the Voice of the Turkish Communist Party. At one point it says: "The Turkish Communist Party [TCP] calls on all our people. The situation is far worse for the working masses now than before. The obstacles before the struggle of the working masses are now more numerous."

Of course they are more numerous, we took many measures. The radio continues: "The struggle of all these masses calls for great sacrifice, for a stronger organization. It is necessary, during this harsh struggle, to gather forces for each step, to strike, with an energy 100 times more powerful than before, the weakest points of the plans of the enemy" -- by enemy they mean us, my dear citizens, they consider us their enemies -- "then to push back the enemy's counterattacks, thus becoming (?unified), to learn to win by losing time after time."

In other words, the radio says you cannot win if you do not learn how to lose. It says go on fighting.

The other radio, Our Radio, says: "Comrades..." Look how it addresses the people, not "my citizens" but "comrades." "...Comrades, those inside are being tortured, those inside are resisting." By "those inside" they mean the convicts. "Those inside are continuing to wage the struggle. The struggle outside must be stepped up." That is a directive to those who are not in prison to step up the struggle. "If we want to encourage those inside, to express our solidarity and join their resistance, we must unite the people's hatred and anger in our class struggle." They want to divide the nation into classes and win through a class struggle.

The radio of the TCP says on another day: "The TCP is saying to our people: If you want peace you must oppose NATO, slavery to the United States and the dictators. If you want democracy, you must struggle against U.S. imperialism, which is the main supporter of the junta that abolished democracy."

It would not be so bad if there was democracy in the country the radio is transmitting from, for then I would have said there were wide democratic rights there. We have a saying: Those in glass houses should not throw stones.

The radio goes on to say, "If you want work, bread and land, then you must oppose Turkey's membership in NATO and the arms expenditires which take the lion's share of the natural resources." Of course, their job will be easier if there is disarmament.

On another day, I am not saying the dates, the radio says: "The Turkish Peace Committee trial continues." The allusion is to a trial in Istanbul. "The leading scientists, artists and politicians of our country are on trial. The TCP calls on all our people: Let us save the officials of the Peace Committee from the hands of the military administration. Let us not allow peace to be put on trial. Let us eleminate the U.S. bases on our lands. Let us ave our future."

On another day, the radio says: "Many comrades are going through hard times because they were acquitted in the TCP trials that were based on tortures and slanders and are dying to do something with a great sense of duty and enthusiasm. On the other hand, party organizations are facing the attacks of the enemy at points of resistance they have set up. We did not reach the top of the bourgeoisie [as heard] but the military administration, the junta, has not given up starting new TCP trials or looking for resisting party organizations." [word indistinct] They say the junta has not given up trying them. I am not, and we are not initiating the trials. The prosecutors of our just courts are initiating the trials.

The radio says: "Another harsh duty awaits the acquitted comrades and all the progressive and patriotic forces: Strong beliefs and morale are essential for the struggle under conditions in which the enemy attacks continue. We must turn to our relatives, friends, our circles. We will weigh the party policies in our social circles. For that reason, we must know the party policies well. We must listen to Our Radio, which is a high-level comrade."

All the directives are being given to TCP elements within Turkey by means of these radios. There are more quotes but I do not want to waste time. Lately, these radios have started a campaign against the constitution. Every day they broadcast lies, slanders. I read you the quotes so that you will know about them, and so that you will know, if there are people like that around you, where they get their directives from. [end of inserted passage]

I would now like to briefly refer to the matter of the constitution. As I mentioned in my Erdek speech, the constitution [providing indistinct word]

CONSULTATIVE ASSEMBLY ADOPTS DRAFT ARTICLES

Articles on Religion, Press

[Text] The Consultative Assembly adopted another seven articles of the draft constitution. The first to be adopted was Article 24 on freedom of religion and conscience. This article, which was rewritten by the constitutional committee, stipulates that everyone has the freedom of conscience, religious belief and opinion. Worship, religious rites and ceremonies are free but cannot conflict with public order, general morals or with laws enacted pertaining to this subject. Nobody may be forced to worship, to participate in religious rites and ceremonies or to reveal his religious beliefs and opinions. Nobody may be condemned or accused because of his religious opinion and beliefs or because he has or has not carried out the requisites of his religious faith.

The article stipulates that classes on religion and morals are obligatory in elementary and secondary schools and must be carried out under the supervision of the state, but non-Muslim students have the option of not taking religion classes. It adds: Because it is contrary to national sovereignty and republican principles, no one may exploit or misuse in any way religion or religious feelings or things considered sacred by religion with the aim of basing the basic social, economic, political or legal order of the state, even if partially, on religious rules or for the purpose of achieving political or personal advantage or influence. Those who violate this prohibition or who instigate others to violate it will be punished according to the law.

Article 30 on the protection of press organs, which was rewritten by the constitutional committee, was approved by the Consultative Assembly today. It stipulates: Printing houses and their annexes that were set up as press organizations in accordance with the law may not be taken over, confiscated or prevented from operating on the grounds of being criminal tools except if convicted of a crime committed against the state's indivisible unity with its country and nation, against the republic's basic principles or against national security.

Article 34, which was also rewritten by the constitutional committee, says that everyone has the right to stage rallies and demonstration marches, without arms and unaggressively without obtaining prior permission. The form, conditions and methods to be abided by in using this right will be specified by law. The state cannot postpone a demonstration by more than 2 months, except in those cases specified by the law. Organizations, trade unions and professional organizations that have the character of a public institution may not stage nor participate in rallies or marches outside their fields and aims.

Article 37, adopted by the Consultative Assembly after being rewritten by the constitutional committee, regulates the principles on crime and punishment. It says that except for exceptions specified by the draft constitution a punishment of general confiscation cannot be given and the administration cannot give a punishment that limits personal freedom. [as heard]

It stipulates that responsibility for a crime is personal and no one can be considered guilty until his guilt is determined. No one may be forced to make a statement or reveal evidence that would incriminate him or his relatives. Citizens may not be extradited to other countries for crimes.

Article 38, rewritten by the constitutional committee and adopted by the Consultative Assembly, stipulates that no one may be punished for an act which was not considered criminal by the law in force at the time of its commission. It also says that no one may be given a punishment more severe than the punishment imposed for that crime by the law in force at the time of its commission.

Article 41 stresses that the family is the basis of the Turkish society and stipulates that the state take the necessary measures and set up the necessary organizations for the purpose of ensuring the peace and welfare of the family and for the protection and education of the father and especially the mother and children.

Article 42 on the right and duty of education was adopted in its rewritten form. It says that no one may be deprived of the right of education and that education is one of the main duties of the state. Education must be in line with Ataturk's principles, with contemporary science and education principles and under the supervision of the state. Places of education that do not conform with these principles cannot be opened. The article also stipulates that the state take the necessary measures to extend literacy in the country.

After these articles were adopted, the Consultative Assembly began to discuss Article 44 on land ownership. The debates on the article were continuing when this newscast was prepared.

Political Party Activities

[Excerpt] The Consultative Assembly today adopted another three amended articles of the draft constitution. The assembly began debating the articles included in the 'executive' section of the part entitled 'The Republic's Basic Organs'.

During today's session, which began at 1000, the assembly adopted in its initial form an article under the heading of the protection of small shopkeepers and artisans. The Assembly had earlier decided to add this article to the draft constitution. The article stipulates that the state will take measures to protect and encourage artisans and small shopkeepers.

According to Article 78, which outlines the regulations for political parties, these parties will not be allowed to engage in activities outside their statutes and programs. Political parties will be permanently closed if they engage in activities aiming to disrupt the state's indivisble unity between country and nation, to endanger the existence of the Turkish state or republic, eliminate basic rights and freedoms, install a government of the state by one individual or class or secure the sovereignty of one social class over another, create linguistic, racial, religious or secterian discrimination or establish through any other means a state based on these concepts or views.

The other provisions for the behavior of political parties are listed in the article as follows: Political parties may not join forces materially or spiritually with associations, unions, funds, cooperatives, professional organizations of a public nature or their parent organizations with the aim of pursuing or enhancing their own policies. The internal operations and decisions of political parties may not contradict the principles of democracy.

The article also stipulates that the financial supervision of political parties will be carried out by the Constitutional Court. The Chief Public Prosecutor's Office will in turn control the statutes and programs of the established parties and the compatibility of their founders' legal situations with the provisions of the constitution and law.

The activities of political parties will continuously be followed by the Chief Public Prosecutor's Office. It will be possible to close down political parties by the Constitutional Court following a suit to be filed by the Chief Public Prosecutor's Office. Party founders and members of the central administration organs who have been found -- through a Constitutional Court decision -- to have caused the closing down of the party by their actions or statements will not be able to establish new parties, even under another name or program. Moreover, they will not be allowed to operate in the administrative or supervisory organs of existing political parties.

Articles on Presidency

[Excerpt] The Consultative Assembly today adopted Article 115 of the draft constitution which defines the responsibility of the president. The article says that the president can be found guilty of treason to the homeland upon the proposal of at least 1/3 of the full membership of the Turkish Grand National Assembly and upon the decision of at least 2/3 of the Assembly.

Article 116, which deals with instances when an acting president can replace the president, was also adopted by the Assembly. The article stipulates that the president of the Grand National Assembly will be the acting president of the republic and will exercise his power until the president returns to duty in cases where he heaves his duty temporarily and until the election of a new president in cases where the offices of the president is vacated.

[Excerpts] Ankara, 2 Sep (AA) -- The Consultative Assembly Thursday rejected motions for popular election of the president and adopted Article 110 of the draft constitution which provides for election of the president by parliament.

Presidential candidates may be either from among members of parliament or others nominated by at least one-fifth of the membership. The candidate must be at least 40 years of age, with higher education, and a Turkish citizen for at least 10 years.

The president will be elected for a term of 7 years, but will not be eligible for re-election. His membership in the National Assembly and in any party expires upon his taking office as president.

Before the voting, several Assembly members had submitted motions to amend draft Article 110 in order to provide for popular election of the president. Suleyman Sirri Kircali claimed the parliamentary system was not in keeping with the Turkish national character, whereas a presidental system would prevent long-lasting vacancies in the presidential chair. Ertugrul Zekai Okte noted in Turkish history, the head of state has the symbol of unity, and was identified with the state.

Okte claimed popular election of the president would be "in keeping with our history, national culture, and aspirations." Election of the president by parliament would bring back party democracy to Turkey, to which he objected.

Besir Hamitoglullari also favored popular election of a strong president, but believed holding of the presidential election at the same time as the popular referendum on the draft constitution would weaken the president's position.

Drafting committee member Kemal Dal expressed concern over potential conflict between a strong president and a prime minister who would be backed by a parliamentary majority.

Member Halil Ibrahim Karal opposed popular election of the president, noting the parliamentary system was the "tradition" in the Republic of Turkey, including the era of Ataturk.

Noting the presidential system in underdeveloped countries deteriorated into a race by the generals, Karal said the era of heroes and egos was over. If the parliamentary regime had been degenerated, he added, it would be easier to degenerate an individual.

Drafting Committee Chairman Orhan Aldikacti said his committee opposed the motions. They had based the draft constitution on the parliamentary system, for they believed there were many risks to the other alternative, the presidential "ambitious political leaders" of badly system [as received] in a country where there were "ambitious political leaders" and malfunctioning political parties. The fact that the military had had to intervene 3 times since 1960 demonstrated that Turkish political parties had malfunctioned, Prof. Aldikacti added.

Article 84, adopted by the Consultative Assembly, allows citizens of at least 30 years of age and with primary education to run for election to the National Assembly. Judges and members of the armed forces are not eligible unless they resign first.

Council of Ministers

[Text] The Consultative Assembly has adopted Article 127 on the Council of Ministers' assuming duties and a vote of confidence and Article 128 on a vote of confidence while the cabinet is already in office.

According to Article 127, the cabinet list will be sumbitted in complete form to the Grand National Assembly; if the Assembly is in recess it will be called into a session. The article stipulates that within a week from its establishment the cabinet's program is to be read by the prime minister or a minister at the Grand National Assembly and that a vote of confidence is to be sought in the Assembly. Debates for the vote of confidence will begin after the passage of two full days after the reading of the program and the voting is to be held after the passage of a full day after the ending of the debates.

Article 128 on a vote of confidence while the cabinet is already in office is as follows: The prime minister may, if he considers it necessary after discussion in the cabinet, ask for a vote of confidence from the Grand National Assembly. The request for a vote of confidence may not be debated until the passage of a full day from the notification of the Assembly, and may not be put to a vote until the passage of a full day from the ending of the debates. A request for a vote of confidence may be rejected with only a simple majority of the full membership.

Article 126 on the formation of the cabinet was returned to the drafting committee for amendments. The assembly will meet at 1000 tomorrow to continue discussion of the articles of the constitution.

EVREN, COUNCIL MEMBERS VISIT ISLANDS IN AEGEAN

[Text] Head of State Gen Kenan Evren and the National Security Council members today visited Gokceada and Bozcaada, two islands off Canakkale. General Evren was briefed on the problems of the island this morning by the Gokceada district officer. Tevfik Fikret Dincer from the Turkish Radio and Television news center reports that General Evren later talked with citizens from Gokceada, including citizens of Greek origin who told him that they had no problems and were happy living on the island.

General Evren and the delegation accompanying him then went to Bozcaada. The National Security Council members, Ground Forces Commander Gen Nurettin Ersin, Air Force Commander Gen Tahsin Sahinkaya, Navy Commander Adm Nejat Tumer, Gendarme Commander Gen Sedat Celasun, 1st Army Commander Gen Haydar Saltik, the National Security Council secretary general, and other generals and admirals accompanied General Evren on these visits.

General Evren and the commanders then went to Canakkale. The head of state and the National Security Council members will return to Ankara tomorrow.

TURGUT OZAL INTERVIEWED ON FUTURE PLANS

NC011253 Istanbul MILLIYET in Turkish 26 Aug 82 pp 1, 11

[Interview granted by former Deputy Prime Minister Turgut Ozal to MILLIYET correspondent Emin Colasan at Side -- date not specified]

[Excerpts] Question: It is rumored that you will plunge into politics. Can you comment on this?

Answer: I have always wished to serve the state and the nation. But human beings go through certain stages in life and acquire experience. Then those stages are left behind. I surely cannot be expected to accept an office of secretary general at the prime minister's office or of secretary general at the state planning organization. If I am to serve the nation from now on, it has to be politics. Because I feel I have attained that stage. My age is 55 and, after all, I am a pensioner too.

Question: How do you propose to extend this service under the present circumstances in Turkey?

Answer: I know that this service is extremely difficult under present conditions. My notion of politics is different. We have to tell the truth about everything.

Question: Did past political practices in Turkey run counter to your views?

Answer: The old practices have come to an end in Turkey. The nation wants politicians who can tell the truth. It needs politicians who can say: "This is the correct path. You want to follow another but you are on the wrong path." It seems to me that the nation is expecting a politician who is prepared to struggle for it. We shall wait a while longer and see.

Question: If your political plans do not materialize, what will you do? It is being rumored that you are going to join the World Bank.

Answer: If I do not enter politics, I will somehow earn my livelihood. Joining the World Bank at my age is out of the question.

Question: A while ago you said that could serve the nation only through politics. Are other doors closed to you?

Answer: Naturally, I can't be expected to accept employment anywhere. This is possible only through politics. However, I have not decided on this at the moment. I consider it still too early to decide. No one knows yet what stages our country will go through. But all this is providential. If it is preordained that I should do so, it will happen some day. But at this moment I am not committed to any such organization. I have made no clear-cut decision to enter politics. If conditions are suitable in the future and if I see that I can muster popular support, and if at that time I believe that I can serve, then it becomes natural for me to enter politics and serve my nation. This should be considered normal.

Question: Let us suppose that conditions turn out to be favorable and the party has been set up. Certainly you will be the leader of the party, won't you?

Answer: At this moment all this is entirely hypothetical. I cannot say anything.

Question: Let me ask you this then. In what party would you like to serve?

Answer: I can't answer that question either. I do not know what shape things will take. Turn off your tape recorder and let us talk more comfortably.

USSR EXPRESSES REGRET FOR 2 SOLDIERS' DEATHS

[Text] Ankara, Sep 3 (AFP) -- The Soviet Union has formally expressed regrets over the deaths last month of two Turkish soldiers during an incident on the Turkish-Soviet border, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said here today.

The two soldiers, who had accidentally wandered into Soviet territory while on patrol on August 10, were killed by Soviet frontier troops

This triggered off strong protests from Ankara, which said the Soviet conduct violated existing agreements for the peaceful settlement of border incidents.

Rejecting Soviet claims that the Turkish soldiers opened fire first, Turkish authorities maintained they were shot in the back and refused medical treatment as they slowly bled to death.

The incident had led to the postponement by Ankara of a visit to Moscow by an official delegation.

The Turkish spokesman said today that "Turkey's relations with the Soviet Union will continue their normal course on the basis of good neighbourly relations."

TURCUMAN: COMMUNISM BEHIND ARMENIAN TERRORISM

NC030750 Istanbul TERCUMAN in Turkish 31 Aug 82 p 4

[Article by Prof Fair Armaoglu]

[Text] It has now become clear that the Armenian terrorism directed against Turkey is another method established by international communism for the purpose of dividing and dismembering Turkey. This method is being implemented in two ways: On one hand, it aims at grabbing part of the Turkish fatherland and placing it under the hegemony of Soviet Russia in the disguise of an independent state. It is not at all difficult to imagine the enormity of the strategic advantages the realization of this dream would secure for the Soviet Union.

On the other hand, another aim of Armenian terrorism is to destroy Turkey's foreign relations, particularly those with the Western powers. Today the center of gravity in Turkey's foreign relations is the NATO alliance and its ties with the West. The reaction to be felt against a Western country after every Armenian crime committed is a blow dealt by international communism to these ties. According to their calculations, the more these ties are weakened, the more Turkey will be pushed into isolation so that the realization of the first aim will become possible.

The aim of the terrorist activities in Turkey before 12 March and 12 September was as much to destroy Turkey internally as to render it unstable and weak in the eyes of the West. We observe a similar characteristic in Armenian terrorism. We have noticed that whenever effective measures against terrorism are taken and efforts to consolidate internal stability are successfully made in Turkey, resulting in the improvement of relations with the West, Armenian terrorism is intensified. To put it briefly, Armenian terrorism is being employed as a means for the implementation of the multipurposed plans of international communism.

This situation brings before us a joint issue which both Turkey and the Western powers should study very carefully.

Turkey's problem is that it has to see that the reaction which our public shows toward the attitude our friends and allies adopt whenever terrorism is committed in their country is careful and reasonable. If we act harmoniously with our government in showing these reactions, we do a great service in dashing the hopes of international communism in this respect. This is extremely important. We must be exceedingly careful about not being tricked while we are making efforts to resolve our problems.

In response, our Western friends and allies should view the situation from the point of view of the extensive danger and threat to which the Western alliance and solidarity is exposed today. Turkey is capable of coming to grips with its own problems. But when it decides to do so , it may emerge the West, not Turkey, suffers the consequences. Efforts to forestall the reactions of the Turkish public toward Armenian terrorism would be to the benefit of the West more than anything else.

PAPER ON PEACE OFFENSIVE AGAINST ASALA IN CYPRUS

["Corner Street" column by Ergun Goze]

[Text] The Palestinian guerrillas and the Palestine cause are two different things, just as a section of the Palestinian guerrillas forms part of ASALA [Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia], which aids and abets Armenian terrorism. What have they got to do with holy Jerusalem or the Palestinian people? According to the findings of TERCUMAN, ASALA managed to leave behind in Cyprus "a suicide commando unit" while the Palestinian guerrillas were being transported from Beirut.

They say, "Something good comes out of everything." One outcome of the ruthless and unjustified treatment meted out to the people of Palestine by Israel was ASALA's return to Cyrpus, that is, to its fatherland. Thus, the bloody and filthy inner feelings of ASALA, the Greek Cypriot administration and Greece have been exposed once again. It has become undeniably obvious that they have jointly set up a terrorist club. The hands of ASALA, of the Greek Cypriot administration and of the Greek Government are stained with the blood of the 20-odd murdered Turkish diplomats. They carry the blood of our diplomats on their sinful shoulders. No one can deny this now, even the most pro-Greek members of our foreign service.

Now there is someone we can address ourselves to. The press reports that the Turkish Cypriot forces are in a state of alert. We see that our Foreign Ministry has drawn attention to this situation. Denktas' statements and the representations he has made through Hugo Gobbi are of serious significance. The least that can happen is that when the slightest harm comes to Turkish diplomats, Turkey and the Turkish Cypriot state will have the right to "launch a legitimate peace offensive against the Melkonyan Institute, which is the source of this movement."

This will, moreover, afford us the opportunity to explain on international platforms what sort of mischiefmaker the Greek Cypriot administration is. So much so that even if the whole of the island were to be occupied by the Turks, everyone would immediately realize that this would be less an act of occupation than an act of extinguishing the nest of international terrorism.

Now our foreign service must embark on certain diplomatic representations. It must stress that "as of now, if any harm comes to our diplomats, the Greek Cypriot administration and the Greek Government will be held jointly and successively responsible and the Turkish Government will pay back [in the same coin].

The foreign service must also convey this message to the United States, the Soviet Union, the Islamic Conference, the United Nations and NATO. This statement must make it absolutely clear that Turkey is serious and that the legality of the situation belongs entirely to Turkey. This is the official aspect of the affair. Another probably undesirable result of this situation may emerge. You may find that an underground organization calling itself "an association to protect the existence of the Turks against Armenian terrorism" will come into being and undertake to carry out reprisals against the Armenian terrorist in the Greek Cypriot sector. No one can know or imagine what may follow.

Who knows? There is a saying, "This is a blessing in disguise." We may rid ourselves of ASALA and of the perversity of those who are trying to take advantage of ASALA's parasitic nature, thus avenging the blood of our martyrs.

As Turkish journalists, we must "carefully watch" developments in this respect. We are using the word "watch" in its true sense, that is, in the way that the police watch bandits, murderers and criminals and hunters watch jackals, bears and wolves. ASALA must be watched....

OFFICIALS STUDY OPTIONS TO END PIPELINE DEADLOCK

LD031910 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1833 GMT 3 Sep 82

[By John Pienaar, PA political reporter]

[Text] Senior officials from Britain, France, Italy and West Germany today agreed [on] a set of options for their governments to study before deciding their response to American sanctions over the Siberian gas pipeline.

At a four-hour meeting in Whitehall, they drew up a range of moves to break the deadlocked trade dispute. Afterwards the Foreign Office issued an optimistic statement. It said: "Various proposals for action were put forward in the spirit of cooperation and solidarity, bearing in mind the wider aspects involved and the role of the European Community." "These proposals will now be considered by the four European governments."

Britain was represented at today's talks by Sir Julian Bullard, Foreign Office political director. No mention was made of what the proposals might entail, and there was no specific reference to the meeting's attitude to proposals from the American special trade envoy, Mr William Brock, for an alternative set of anti-Soviet sanctions. But if ministers decide to adopt one or other of the options, the next stage will be a further meeting involving a representative from the United States, and an escalation of the talks to ministerial level.

No such move has so far been agreed, but the keen desire of Britain to find a solution to the confrontation has been openly stated by Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym.

The various governments, however, are united in looking to the United States to accept a reasonable compromise and drop the sanctions on firms taking up contracts in the massive pipeline project.

There is strong feeling in Whitehall, and among Britain's European partners, that major policy decisions should not be influenced by overt pressure from the American State Department. In particular, Britain and the other countries see the embargo as unjust, while operated at the same time as America is signing its biggest-ever grain deal with Russia. A meeting at ministerial level now seems likely after Sir Julian, the deputy permament under secretary responsible for European political issues, presents the package to Mr Pym at the same time as his counterprarts in the various European trade and foreign ministries.

Meanwhile, the chairman of the John Brown Engineering Group, Sir John Mayhew-Sanders, told shareholders today that the sanctions threatened over the pipeline contract may be less than originally feared.

He said he thought the sanctions would be restricted to contracts in connection with the pumping of oil and gas pipelines.

Two American-designed Italian turbines for the pipeline will be loaded onto a Soviet freighter tomorrow, a shipping company spokesman said in Rome tonight.

The Italian turbines are part of a 280 million pound order from Nouvo Pignone for 57 turbines and 19 compressor stations along the 3,500 mile pipeline.

ICC CHIEF DISCUSSES U.S. PIPELINE EMBARGO

[By Jan Kristiansen]

[Text] Paris, Sept 6 (AFP) -- Hans Koenig, secterary-general of the International Chamber of Commerce (ICC), which speaks for the world business community, today reaffirmed ICC opposition to economic sanctions, which he said, "have never worked."

Questioned on the effects of United States sanctions against European companies defying the U.S. embargo on supply of U.S.-designed equipment and technology to the Soviet Union, Mr Koenig said in an interview: "The ICC has taken a stand against economic sanctions several times. It has said that experience has shown that sanctions will not work. They sometimes produce exactly the opposite (of the intended) effect."

Recourse to economic sanctions amounted to "disrupting international trade, international transfer of technology (and) international division of labour," he added.

Commenting on the extension of the U.S. embargo to overseas subsidiaries and licensees of U.S. corporations, Mr Koenig said: "We object to extra-territorial application of national law." There had been attempts in the past, by the U.S., by the European Economic Community or Western European countries, to extend their national legislation outside their own territory, for instance in the field of anti-trust law. This "should not be encouraged," he said.

Mr Koenig said recourse to sanctions was also contributing to undermining business confidence.

"Business is...to a certain extent based on psychological factors," he said. "Since we are not yet as far as robots dictating business policy, human beings [word indistinct] -- and if there is no confidence, nothing will be done."

The ICC chief executive said empirical evidence showed that economic sanctions "have never worked." Likening the use of sanctions to "interference by man in nature" -- the introduction of the rabbit into Australia had resulted in a "national catastrophe" -- Mr Koenig said such measures could also have "unexpected results, (that were) certainly not in line with what was intended."

The ICC groups over 7,000 business and industry organisations and private enterprises in more than 100 countries.

KREISKY CALLS REAGAN MIDEAST PLAN 'MARVELOUS'

AU031055 Vienna KRONEN-ZEITUNG in German 3 Sep 82 p 2

[Kurt Seinitz report on President Reagan's new Middle East initiative and first reactions]

[Excerpt] In an interview with KRONEN-ZEITUNG, Chancellor Kreisky said that he was "extraordinarily satisfied" with President Reagan's Middle East speech. "Now one can at last hope that a Middle East solution will be found because as everyone knows, America truly occupies a key position. As is known," the chancellor declared, "in the past I was not among Reagan's unreserved admirers, but what Reagan has now said on the Middle East is simply marvelous [einfach grossartig]."

Regarding the Israeli-U.S. dispute, Kreisky said it was the fault of those who had touched off the Middle East war. Although in world politics there will now be criticism of details and disputes over how to interpret the Reagan plan, the decisive aspect is nevertheless that the basic problem -- namely, the Palestinian question -- has been recognized, he said. Everything else will now take care of itself, and what a U.S. president has very clearly stated can never be revoked, Kreisky said.

Assails Begin, Sharon

[Report on Austrian radio interview, broadcast on 4 September, with Chancellor Bruno Kreisky in Majorca, where he is vacationing -- date not given]

[Excerpts] A large part of the interview was devoted to the Israeli problem. The Chancellor repeated what he had declared in an interview with the FRG magazine STERN: "I no longer want to have anything to do with this Israel, never again." Becoming more specific, he added that while Austria would maintain correct relations with Israel, he personally no longer wanted to have anything to do with Israel's present leaders. He said that he was convinced that there would have been a chance for a peaceful solution of the Palestinian problem had Israel's leaders been ready for negotiations. The fact that they resorted to the methods of war, however, he regarded as an expression of a fascist mentality.

Kreisky said: "To me, Begin and Sharon are exponents of a mentality which was rightly called fascist in the past." He added that this had already been stated by Ben Gurion, and that he was merely repeating Ben Gurion's opinion.

Asked whether Hitler and Begin had anything in common, Kreisky said Hitler, too, resorted to war to enforce his policy. Kreisky declared that he made all these statements about Israel "least of all as Austrian chancellor" but that he felt morally obliged to make them because he was of Jewish origin and no one could accuse him of having an anti-Semitic mentality.

PAHR: U.S. PIPELINE POLICY 'COUNTERPRODUCTIVE'

[Special DIE PRESSE report by "KH"]

[Excerpt] Alpbach -- Austria has now also officially joined the rejection front against the U.S. embargo policy on the gas pipeline deal with the Soviet Union. At a press conference in Alpbach, Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr described the U.S. policy as "not effective and counterproductive." Although Austria is not directly affected, he said it would not accept "any outside" influence on its trade policy. "We pursue our own course," he added.

Pahr does not believe, either, that the U.S. embargo can help the Poles. "The only effective policy is a combination of strength and cooperation."

AUSTRIAN PRESIDENT, MINISTERS ARRIVE IN BONN

LD060938 Hamburg DPA in German 0908 GMT 6 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn 6 Sep (DPA) -- Austrian Federal President Rudolf Kirchschlaeger arrived in Bonn Monday for a state visit. He was greeted on his arrival at Cologne-Bonn Airport with a 21-gun salute. He then went on to the federal president's residence for a military reception ceremony.

Kirchschlaeger is accompanied by his wife Herma, Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr and Trade Minister Josef Staribacher. In addition to Bonn, the 4-day state visit will take in Bremen, Munich and Bamberg.

Banquet Speeches Given

[Excerpts] Bonn 6 Sep (DPA) -- Federal President Karl Carstens and the Austrian head of state, Rudolf Kirchschlaeger, voiced their concern this evening about the political situation in the world. The occasion for the speeches was a banquet given by Carstens in the baroque Palace of Bruehl in honor of Federal President Kirchschaeger's visit to the Federal Republic. Kirchschlaeger said that Austria looked with apprenension towards Madrid where the CSCE conference had not yet arrived at concrete results. Kirchschlaeger affirmed that Austria intends to contribute to a decision on a European disarmament conference.

Carstens underlined his concern at the "extraordinary arms efforts in the area of the Warsaw Pact" and stressed that only a balance of forces could ensure peace in Europe. Carstens thanked Austria for its contributions in the CSCE conference. In addition he referred to what the two states had in common historically and culturally from Freud and Kokoschka to Arnold Schoenberg and Ingeborg Bachmann. Kirchschlaeger appeared pleased that no problems exist between the two states. The state guest, who had forgone a visit to Berlin, stated, however, "for us also, the international situation around Berlin is a gauge for the state of the international situation, not only at the European level, but at the global level as well."

Earlier today, Kirchschlaeger met with Carstens on East-West policy, the situation in Poland, the North-South dialogue, and disarmament and security.

SCHMIDT ON GOVERNMENT NEED FOR SELF-DEFENSE

[Text] Dusseldorf, 3 Sep (DPA) -- In the view of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, an individual can give up his right to self-defense, but a government cannot do so. The government is responsible for a whole people. Thus, armed forces and membership in the Western defense alliance are necessary actions the Federal Government must take. The chancellor made this statement on Friday evening at a large rally of the 87th German Catholic Conference held in the Dusseldorf Rhine Stadium.

Schmidt told some 35,000 listeners that in the Soviet Union it is apparently not realized that the USSR itself has a "quite exaggerated security complex," and does not realize that this causes fears and counterthreats in the West. The NATO dual decision is the result of the increased build-up of SS-20 nuclear missiles. Its significnace, however, lies in the fact that for the first time, it will not automatically lead to counterarming, but has provided 4 years time for negotiations on the reduction of missiles. The dilemma of nuclear deterrence can only be solved by total disarmament of nuclear weapons.

Amid occasional protests by young demonstrators, Schmidt said that for its part, the FRG has decided not to avail itself of nuclear weapons. It is therefore only fitting that the German federal chancellor should call on the nuclear superpowers to give up their nuclear arms.

The chancellor stressed the need to meet the security needs of one's neighbors also. He who does not talk to his neighbor nor listen to him, cannot preserve peace. Conflicting interests must be reconciled through compromise. He who cannot conclude any treaties cannot preserve peace either.

According to the chancellor, the preservation of peace is also necessary internally. If in a state, social peace "goes to the dogs" then external peace is also soon endangered. Many believe that peace would naturally follow if the FRG were to renounce all weapons. Schmidt does indeed respect an unconditional pacifist. However politicians, who have responsibility for many people, cannot renounce the defense of a whole people.

Both Chancellor Schmidt and CDU Chairman Helmut Kohl received lengthy applause at several points. This was mixed with catcalls from groups of young people, who had come into the stadium with banners such as "Is your god the bomb?"

BONN DOUBTS U.S. ATTITUDE REGARDING CSCE

DW061055 Hamburg DER SPIEGEL in German 6 Sep 82 p 14

[Text] The Foreign Ministry views pessimistically the chances of the CSCE [Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe] follow-up conference in Madrid. The Bonn officials fear that the Americans, as they have previously, want to use the CSCE to expose the Soviet Union for the martial law policy in Poland. It is assumed that Washington is still not interested in serious negotiations on a European disarmament conference. Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher tried in vain last week to interest his British colleague, Francis Pym, in an initiative to exert influence on the United States. The Englishman did not want to put additional strain on European-American relations, which are already burdened by the natural gas pipeline deal.

NEW 'CONTROLLING SYSTEM' ANNOUNCED FOR ARMY

[Excerpt] Bonn, 6 Sep (DPA) -- The Bundeswehr will be managed more economically in the future. Defense Minister Hans Apel (SPD) announced in Bonn on Monday a new organizational concept -- a "controlling system". A "controller" directly responsible to the minister is to coordinate all arms programs, supervise production programs and supply the defense minister with information at all times. The "controller" will be at the center of the whole network.

This is designed to eliminate financial mistakes, such as that of the new "Tornado" fighter plane. According to Apel, Ministerial Director Heiniz Padberg is being considered for the post of "controller." At present Padberg is in charge of the arms department.

HONECKER ON DEVELOPMENT OF FRG-GDR RELATIONS

[Text] Leipzig, 5 Sep (DPA) -- According to state and party chief Erick Honecker, the GDR wants to continue development of relations with the Federal Republic based on his talks with Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt at Werbellinsee. The GDR is resolutely determined to adhere to what has been agreed upon, said Honecker today at the start of the Leipzig autumn fair. When journalists asked him whether he would be visiting the Federal Republic this year, Honecker replied that arrangements for a visit have not been made.

The head of the FRG's permanent mission in East Berlin, Secretary of State Hans Otto Braeutigam, said in a short statement addressed to Honecker that the Federal Republic will make every effort to ensure a continual, stable and reliable development of relations and the creation of trust between the two German states.

Referring to the considerable increase in trade between the two states, Braeutigam underlined the desire for "favorable growth" in the political sphere, as well. In this area it is important to achieve steady advances, as have been made in the past. This also applies to progress in areas which "directly benefit the people." This serves both bilateral and international interests. Braeutigam is clearly alluding to stresses in relations between the two states caused by the drastic increase in the minimum exchange rate for Western visitors to the GDR which was implemented almost 2 years ago.

In his reply to Braeutigam's remarks, Honecker said that relations between the two Germanies have undergone a positive development along the lines embodied in the joint communique issued at the Werbellinsee meeting. In this connection, he referred to "atmospheric and other irritations" in the world.

Referring to economic cooperation, Honecker underlined the GDR's willingness to continue being very cooperative in this field in the future. This has a very favorable impact on the people of both German states. In view of high unemployment in the West, trade between East and West presents the best opportunity for improving employment now available. Braeutigam said that the FRG has also noted with satisfaction that trade in the first 6 months has again improved favorably.

The state of intra-German relations is to be discussed soon by Minister of State Hans-Juergen Wischnewski from the federal chancellor's office, and important politicians in East Berlin when Wischnewski attends the opening of an architecture exhibition from the FRG there on 13 September. Wischnewski will meet with GDR Foreign Minister Oskar Fischer and, probably, other leading politicians. It is anticipated that the international situation will be among the topics discussed.

Trade Breakthrough Unlikely

[Excerpt] Leipzig, 5 Sep (DPA) — GDR state and party chief Erich Honecker, and the head of the FRG's permanent mission in East Berlin, Secretary of State Hans Otto Braeutigam, underlined the positive development of intra-German trade at the Leipzig autumn fair which opened on Sunday. During a short visit to the display of the chemical firm BASF during his tour, Honecker said that this year a turnover of about DM13 billion is anticipated. Braeutigam described developments in the first half as remarkable in view of the present economic conditions, with an increase in turnover of 14 percent compared with last year, to a total of 6.8 billion clearing units.

West German exhibitors are cautious in their expectations concerning the further development of trade with the GDR. According to a survey by the German Chamber of Industry and Trade (DIHT), the majority of FRG firms represented in Leipzig do not expect a significant breakthrough in trade with the GDR.

GDR URGED TO HOLD DIALOGUE ON DISARMAMENT

[Excerpt] Bonn, 6 Sep (DPA) — FDP Chairman and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher has called on the GDR to undertake joint disarmament initiatives.

Genscher told the FDP Presidium on Monday, according to FDP spokesman Herbert Schmuelling, that the possibilities that the CSCE final act offers for cooperation between the Federal Republic and the GDR have by no means been exhausted. Despite their membership in different alliances, both German states can make important contributions to the disarmament debate. He cited as an example the Federal Republic's support for proposals concerning greater clarity and verifiability in disarmament agreements. The invitation to the GDR to engage in a dialogue on these issues is still open.

LAHNSTEIN VIEWS ON TORONTO IMF CONFERENCE

DW021041 Cologne Westdeutscher Rundfunk Network in German 1300 GMT 1 Sep 82

[Interview with FRG Finance Minister Manfred Lahnstein by reporter Koelsch; date and place not given -- recorded]

[Excerpt] [Question] What results do you expect to return with from this year's IMF conference in Toronto, in connection with the FRG's economic and finance policies?

[Answer] First, we must try to reach conclusions based on a discussion of the world's economic situation. The discussion will probably be quite extensive in Toronto. We note that economic development is generally slower, particularly in the industrial states. We will try to find out how strong an effect this will have on the FRG. The figures I just received from the IMF give little reason to deviate from the figures on which we have based our own considerations, including our budget considerations. We'll see once I'm there to what extent these figures will be adapted and enlarged upon.

Second, by supplying the IMF as well as the World Bank with reasonable means, we want to help ensure that the problems between rich and poor member countries of these two organizations -- problems which have not become smaller -- will not become even more complicated. The ability to limit the problems of developing countries through sufficient activities of the Fund and the World Bank, and not reduce the capability for positive developments to be maintained. In regard to this, there will be interesting and possibly controversial discussions with the United States. We cannot hope for anything more than interim results because formal decisions can only be made next year.

Third, we will try to obtain a picture of certain critical developments in individual areas -- I cite Mexico just as an example -- so that during the talks, not only between delegations but also between delegations and numerous banks present, it will be possible to look for ways to better prevent such crises so that perhaps they won't occur in the future.

POLISH PRIMATE ON CONTINUING FOOD SHORTAGE

[Text] Essen, 3 Sep (DPA) In the view of Archbishop Jozef Glemp, primate of the Catholic Church in Poland, the average Pole's monthly income is not sufficient to buy food. Glemp was reacting in a conversation with Caritas of the Ruhr Bishopric in Essen today to the concern of many German donors that there are adquate supplies of food in Poland now. "One can live on flour, milk and bread, but the people performing heavy labor cannot get by on this," the primate said. There is still a great shortage of meat, lard, medicine and baby food.

CHEYSSON APPROVES REAGAN MIDEAST PROPOSALS

[Text] France and America agree on the way in which to settle the crisis in the Middle East. The Quai d'Orsay has approved President Reagan's plan which consists of creating Palestinian autonomy on the West Bank. It is this plan, as you know, that the Israelis have categorically rejected.

However, French Minister of External Relations Claude Cheysson has noted that the U.S. proposals are inspired by the two principles to which France has always been attached -- the recognition of the right of states to live in security and the recognition of the legitimate rights of the Palestinians.

After the events in Beirut, the Quai d'Orsay adds, the political dimensions of the Palestinian fact impose themselves on everyone.

LE MONDE REPORTS OUTLINES OF 1983 BUDGET

PM031243 Paris LE MONDE in French 2 Sep 82 pp 1, 31

[Alain Vernholes report]

[Text] A major curb on public spending; moderation in fiscal measures and the limitation of the deficit. The draft budget examined by the government on Wednesday, 1 September, bears the stamp of the times: austerity, desire to adjust public accounts, and extreme caution in innovations.

The state's revenues are up around 10 percent in the 1983 budget, in other words a considerably slower increase than spending (up 11.8 percent).

They comprise mainly taxes and largely continue the emergency measures taken last year for 1982. For instance, taxpayers whose taxes due this year were more than Fr 25,000 must pay an additional 10 percent, which is applied to the part of tax above Fr 15,000. That provision will be maintained for 1983 while being simplified and reduced. In next year's budget the threshold at which the additional charge starts will be increased to Fr 28,000. It is therefore only on taxes due in 1983 on 1982 incomes above that figure that the taxpayer will be affected by the tax. The alteration is mainly in the method of calculation: the section of tax exceeding Fr 28,000 will be subject of an additional 7 percent (and not 10 percent) instead of the section above Fr 15,000 as is the case this year.

The maintenance of the emergency measures also includes the limitation of the family allowance and the taxation of general bank charges.

The innovations are very limited. The decision to create a 65 percent band on the income tax scale had still not been taken before the cabinet meeting on 1 September. The "cautious" people pointed out that, for a relatively low revenue (less than Fr 2 billion) there was a likelihood of causing anxiety on the exchange market, on which the franc's position depends, of once again hitting the salaried cadres, already paying through the emergency an additional 10 percent, and the ceiling on family allowance, while aggravating the inequality of income created by tax fraud.

The advocates of this measure, however, pointed out that in a difficult period when the purchasing power of the majority of Frenchmen is going to drop, it is vital to do something to make the effort proportional to each man's means. Those remarks carried all the more weight since a difficult dialogue is starting with the trade unions on ending the wage freeze.

Although the debate on the 65 percent band remained open, the debate on succession rights seemed to have been concluded on the afternoon of Tuesday, 31 August. The basic allowance for direct legacies was to be increased from Fr 250,000 to Fr 275,000. Another innovation is that a fairly high rate, much higher than the present marginal rate of 20 percent, was to be introduced for the fraction of legacies exceeding Fr 10 million. On Tuesday it was decided to do nothing: neither to relax nor toughen the measures. But the debate was reopened at the cabinet meeting on Wednesday.

The fiscal part of the 1983 budget contains pleasant surprises, particularly the raising of the threshold for calculating wealth tax from Fr 3 million to Fr 3.2 million. This threshold is increased from Fr 5 million to Fr 5.4 million when the taxpayers liable hold professional property.

The raising of all bands of the income tax scale to take account of inflation (up by 10 percent) is also a pleasant surprise. This measure will prevent an insidious increase in tax pressure.

The fiscal aspect of the measures announced at the end of August to encourage long-term saving and direct it toward industry also has favorable aspects for taxpayers: an increase in the basic allowance on income and shares from Fr 3,000 to Fr 5,000; the institution of a 20 percent tax credit applicable to net purchases of French shares by future holders of share savings accounts; the replacement of fiscal credit by a system of tax credit for shares incomes. These measures are also favorable for companies which will be able to deduct the dividends paid on new shares form profit tax.

The 1983 budget could also contain the reduction and simplification of the present value added tax system in favor of a 15 percent fixed tax [taxation forfaitaire]. All these measures encouraging long-term saving are, it is true, tempered by the increase from 42 to 50 percent in the discharge levy on public deposits and from 38 to 45 percent on personal deposits. The whole operation would cost the state several hundred million francs in 1983 and would be balanced in 1984. Finally, the 1983 budget contains several tax and duty increases: on tobacco (up 8 percent) and on automobiles (up 8 percent on average, more for cars with bigger engines).

CARRIER FOCH REPORTEDLY SAILING TO INDIAN OCEAN

[Text] Toulon, France, Sep 5 (AFB) -- The French aircraft-carrier Foch, escorted by the missile-launching frigate Duquesne, will sail for the Indian Ocean tomorrow, presumably because of increased tension over the Hormuz Strait, key bottleneck on the oil tanker route from the Gulf, according to persistent reports here tonight.

In Paris, the Defense Ministry refused to comment on the reports, which said shore leave had been canceled for crew members of the Foch and for pilots assigned to the carrier and that the Duquesne had been put on alert Friday. The French Navy already has 15 other vessels steaming in the Indian Ocean near the strategic strait, where Iraq claimed over the weekend to have destroyed two oil tankers and two freighters and where Iran has threatened to "create insecurity" if its oil revenues are threatened by its conflict with Iraq.

[Excerpt] (ANSA) -- Rome, September 4 -- After winning a confidence vote in the Senate today the five-way coalition government of Giovanni Spadolini has assumed its full constitutional powers.

The number of senators voting was 292 and 146 constituted a majority. The vote was 177 in favor and 115 against.

The government won a confidence vote in the house last Thursday with 357 ballots cast in favor and 247 against.

COLOMBO: REAGAN PLAN HAS 'POSITIVE ELEMENTS'

AU031950 Rome ANSA in English 1935 GMT 3 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, September 3 -- Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo today said that the Mideast peace plan elucidated by U.S. President Ronald Reagan contained important and positive elements for efforts aimed at ensuring peace to the region.

These elements come at a time when the evacuation of Palestinians from Beirut has been completed and underscore the centrality of the Palestinian political problem, a centrality that Italy has always recognized, he said.

Yesterday, Reagan proposed the creation of an autonomous Palestinian entity associated with Jordan, the Gaza Strip and the West Bank (territories occupied by Israel since 1967).

The foreign minister said that it was important that the American proposals reiterated the need to broaden the negotiations so that they involved the Palestinians in addition to Jordan. The American pledge to seek this wider consensus was in tune with positions taken repeatedly by the European Community and by Italy (such as the Venice Declaration) in favor of a global, just and lasting solution for the Middle East, Colombo said.

Colombo's remarks today backed up what he told U.S. Envoy Philip Habib in Rome yesterday. On that occasion the Italian official first voiced his approval of the Reagan initiative. Colombo also said that U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz had sent him a detailed message spelling out the Reagan plan more fully.

ORGANIZATIONS OUTLINE MEDICAL AID TO LEBANON

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, September 3 -- The most seriously wounded victims of the Lebanese war will be cared for in Italian hospitals and clinics, the Italo-Arab Friendship Association, the Solidarity Committee with the Palestinian People and the Italo-Palestinian Medical Association announced today.

The three organizations said in a communique released today that they have sent about 30 tons of medicines and medical equipment, more than 60 thousand vaccine doses, two ambulances, ten campers and two field hospitals to Lebanon. The aid was made possible thanks to contributions of private citizens, trade unions, the Foreign Ministry, the Transportation Ministry, local municipalities, the Alitalia Airline and the airforce.

POPE REMEMBERS POLISH DEAD IN SUNDAY SERMON

[Text] (ANSA) -- Castel Gandolfo, near Rome, September 6 -- Pope John Paul II chose his Sunday sermon at the papal summer residence here to remember the victims of the recent rioting in Poland on the second anniversary of the Gdansk agreements marking the birth of the Solidarnosc labor organization.

Addressing a group of pilgrims from his homeland, the pope made explicit mention of those who "died tragically" there in the last few days. He also had a special message in English for a group of Canadians of Ukrainian origin.

Will Call for Dialogue

[Text] Vatican City, Sept 4 (AFP) -- Pope John Paul is about to renew a call for dialogue between the government and social forces in his native Poland, to avert irreparable harm being done, according to Polish church sources here.

The pope, silent on the issue since Wednesday, had no intention of giving up his attempts to promote harmonious relations in Poland, and was convinced the Polish "crisis" was a stumbling block to international detente, Polish prelates said.

The pope did not refer to Poland at his Wednesday public audience this week, following Tuesday's demonstrations in 30 Polish cities, though he usually alludes to Poland in Polish at all general audiences.

But Polish clergy said that "if he remained silent then, it was to intervene later after having received direct and accurate news about the incidents..."

The pope's bureau in Castel Gandolfo, his summer residence near Rome, has been gathering information about Poland over the past few days. Prelates have been coming in from Poland, embassies here have transmitted reports from diplomats in Warsaw, and the Polish primate, Archbishop Jozef Glemp, is believed to have phoned the pope from Dusseldorf.

It is already known here that the pope plans to echo demands made to the Polish Government by Msgr Glemp with the support of other Polish bishops. These were for appropriate conditions for a resumption of dialogue, the release of all 637 inteernees including Solidarity leader Lech Walesa, an amnesty for all sentenced under martial law, and progressive resumption of trade union activity.

A week ago, the pope renewed his insistence that these demands be accepted by Polish head of state General Wojciech Jaruzelski.

At a mass at Castel Gandolfo this week, when he had earlier planned to visit Czestochowa for the 600th anniversary of Poland's "Black Virgin" patron saint, the pope said: "One cannot build the common good through force and violence. It can only be built by dialogue among social groups excluding no one."

He urged Poles to avoid provocation, and backed a statement by Msgr Glemp asking Poles not to give way to anger and not to go out on the streets where the clandestine leaders of Solidarity had asked them to gather for 'peaceful demonstrations.'

The pope also renewed his backing for Lech Walesa -- whom he met last year -- on condition the Solidarity trade union remained "cautious and moderate" and avoided violence.

The pope was deeply concerned by the demonstrations on Tuesday and Friday, which spread to Czestochowa itself, and by the mounting tension in Poland, but he was still not discouraged, aides said. "He is hoping still that Gen Jaruzelski will backtrack.... He knows that there is no solution other than dialogue.

"To prepare for this, a goodwill gesture would be enough, such as the announcement of a date for the pope's pilgrimage to Jasna Gora (monastery home of the 'Black Virgin' representation), which has still not been fixed."

All the Poles would take this gesture as an overture to the pope and Polish Catholics for a reconciliation which otherwise would become increasingly difficult to achieve, Polish clergy said.

SICILIAN POLICE CHIEF ASSASSINATED 3 SEP

[Excerpts] Palermo, Italy, Sep 3 (AFP) -- The former chief of Italy's anti-terrorist squads, General Carlo Alberto Dalla Chiesa, was assassinated tonight in the center of this capital city of Sicily. His wife was killed with him.

The general had been recently named police chief here, with the special assignment of fighting the mafia.

Mafia Suspected

[Excerpts] (ANSA) -- Palermo, September 4 -- The identity of the organization responsible for slaying Palermo's prefect, General Carlo Alberto Dalla Chiesa, and his wife, in an ambush here yesterday evening was still shrouded in mystery early this morning as investigabors continued sifting evidence that might point a finger at the killers.

[Words indistinct], the Rome government's highest representative in the Sicilian capital, was apparently the work of a hit squad riding at least one high-powered (?motorcyle) [words indistinct] hospital sources, the police agent in Dalla Chiesa's backup car 32-year-old Domenico Russo, was in a coma and "clinically dead" as a result of the attack.

According to first reconstructions of the attack, the hitmen opened fire at just after 2130 local [time] (1930 GMT), shooting first at the small A-112 rpt A-112 car in which the general's wife was driving Dalla Chiesa home from work, and [word indistinct] at the Fiat 132 backup car.

Police sources said bullets extracted from Russo's head (?showed) that the arms used in the attack included a Soviet-made (?AK-47) Kalashnikov. Neither of the two cars was armor-plated.

Later, at 2248 local [time] (2048 GMT), an anonymous voice called the daily, LA GAZZETTA DEL SUD, in Messina to claim responsibility for the attack on behalf of the "guerilla party." "We have killed General Dalla Chiesa, a communique will follow," he added before hanging up.

Despite the phone call, most experts here believed the slaying was probably the work of the mafia, rather than political terrorists. They also pointed out that the Kalashnikov is used by organized crime and urban guerillas alike. According to these experts, one factor for blaming the killing on the mafia is that urban guerillas have never dared challenge the "honored society" on its own turf, where its control and complicities are virtually total.

Another factor was that Dalla Chiesa resumed his old battle against the mafia as soon as he took up his new posting in this Sicilian capital.

In one important move which may have led the mafia bosses to order the assassination, he met with Finance Minister Rino Formica Thursday to firm up a plan to track down the mafia's ramifications and chieftains through checks on bank accounts, apparently legitimate companies and business activities, and tax evasion, much as Dalla Chiesa used microscopic checks on home ownership and rentals to smoke out Red Brigades hideouts in the seventies.

Those who favor the idea of the urban guerillas' hand pointed to Dalla Chiesa's many successful operations against political terrorists in the seventies.

Apart from the phone call in Messina, there was also one to the ANSA bureau in Florence claiming the general was "eliminated by the organized proletarians," but investigators pointed out that both calls were made after the news of the slaying had gone out over the television.

Suspects Checked

[Excerpts] (ANSA) - Rome, September 6 -- Checks have been made on more than 120 persons in the continuing investigation of the slaying Friday in Palermo of General Carlo Alberto Dalla Chiesa.

Meanwhile, a policeman wounded in the ambush, 32-year-old Domenica Russo, fought what appeared to be a losing battle for his life in a local hospital.

At the site of the attack in which both Dalla Chiesa and his wife were killed, someone has placed a sign which reads: "This is where the hope of honest Palermo citizens died." People today were still bringing flowers to lay at the site of the brutal slayings.

A day before Dalla Chiesa was killed, Finance Minister Rino Formica held a press conference in Palermo in which he said that the Finance Guard had compiled a report on fortunes suspected of being tainted by mafia links. Dalla Chiesa was present at the press conference and the impression was that the prefect had been given this file.

However, the Finance Guard report has not been found among his papers and the Sicilian magistrate's office has ruled out the possibility that the prefect had it in his possession.

Apparently the mafia ordered Dalla Chiesa's assassination without concerning itself with whether the file had yet reached him or not.

Officials, Parties Comment

[Text] (ANSA) - Rome, September 4 - Demonstrations in memory of slain Carabinieri General Carlo Alberto Dalla Chiesa and against the violence of both the mafia and political terrorism were scheduled up and down Italy today as head-of-state Sandro Pertini cut short his vacation to follow the situation from the Quirinale presidential residence.

Breaking off his holidays for the second time -- the first was for the government crisis -- Pertini voiced "my, and the Italian people's, indignation and pain at this ferocious killing." He also described Dalla Chiesa as a "figure representative of the Italian people's determination not to give in to the barbarities threatening us."

Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini promised that his administration would show that "democracy is stronger than any criminal organization, however vast its protections and cover."

The Christian Democrats described the slaying as "one of the most tremendous moments" in the clash between civil society and "those who want to destroy democracy," urging a response of "exceptional firmness."

The Communists, the Christian Democrats' major rivals and the major opposition party, said that the mafia's aggressiveness starts with the "democratic state's weakness" and argued that those responsible for slaying Dalla Chiesa had "complicity within the very apparatus of the state."

Push for Anti-Mafia Bill

[Excerpt] (ANSA) -- Rome, September 4 -- The Rome cabinet will be holding an emergency session here tomorrow morning to speed up approval of the anti-mafia bill currently before Parliament in response to the slaying of Palermo's prefect, General Carlo Alberto Dalla Chiesa, Friday evening.

The decision to push through the legislation as quickly as possible was taken this morning after intense consultations among the government parties and between the two houses of Parliament.

Sunday afternoon, Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini will be answering questions on the fatal ambush in the Senate, and he will speak in the lower house on Monday. Monday afternoon, after Spadolini's speech, the lower house's justice and interior commissions will meet in joint session to continue examining the anti-mafia legislation.

The draft bill is a fusion of a draft submitted by the government last year and proposals from the Italian Communist Party signed by late MP Pio la Torre, the Communist Party's regional secretary for Sicily slain in a mafia ambush on April 30. The bill has 37 articles. The measures that still have to be discussed include some covering the property of, and preventive detention against, suspected mafiosi.

Meanwhile, in outlining their questions for Spadolini in the Senate, the opposition parties, and not only they, denounced, explicitly or implicitly the complicity between the mafia and the primarily Christian Democrat powers-that-be in Sicily.

New Decree

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, September 6 -- Italian President Sandro Pertini today signed the government decree setting up the new overlord's office for the battle against the mafia. The measure gave the high commissioner ample powers, including "powers of access to, and checks in, banks or other public or private institutes."

The new anti-mafia strategy ideated [as received] by Dalla Chiesa involved identifying those in Sicily, the mafia's stamping ground, who have got wealthy suspiciously quickly, in order to check out the presumably criminal origin of their wealth. According to the measure, the high commissioner can also monitor telephones and require companies involved in public contracts to supply all the information needed to establish who their effective owners are.

Replacement Named

[Excerpt] Rome, Sept. 5 (AFP) -- The government today named secret service chief Emanuele de Francesco to replace Italy's assassinated mafia fighter, General Carlo Alberto Dalla Chiesa.

Labor Minister Michele de Giesi said after a cabinet meeting that the 60-year-old Mr. Francesco, former police chief in Rome and Turin, was named government commissioner for Palermo, General Dalla Chiesa's official title. Mr. Francesco was named head of the Italian secret service (Sisde) in July 1981, replacing General Grassini, who had been implicated in the Masonic lodge scandal.

SOLIDARITY INTERVIEW ON BERN EMBASSY EVENTS

[Text] The Solidarity spokesman in Paris categorically states that one thing is certain. The attackers of the Polish Embassy in Bern have nothing to do with the Solidarity Trade Union. (Daniel Czernik) was interviewed by (Brigitte Renaldy).

[Begin (Czernik) recording] This action has nothing in common with Solidarity. Solidarity, right from (?its beginning), has always shown that it is a humane movement and that the struggle itself, has been (?confined to) peaceful demonstrations since 13 December 1981. It has never envisaged the use of violence in relation to the military power in Poland. As for armed struggle or violence, (?it is not used) and never will be used. Solidarity has never had any armed groups among its members, not even clandestine ones. This action is really shocking and embarrassing for us, since the use of force with the situation that exists in Poland at present is, I think, something that will do no good. I think that this action is the work of rather irresponsible people and will really be of no help to the Polish people, who are presently under the yoke of the military regime. [end recording]

POUL SCHLUTER NAMED TO FORM NEW GOVERNMENT

[Excerpt] Copenhagen, Sept 3 (AFP) -- Conservative Party leader Poul Schluter has been asked to begin negotiations aimed at forming a majority government, it was announced here today.

Queen Margrethe made the request after Prime Minister Anker Jorgensen tendered the formal resignation of his Social Democratic minority government earlier today, after failing to muster sufficient political support for a new economic program.

Mr Schluter heads Denmark's second largest party with 26 seats in the 179-seat parliament. He is in line to become Denmark's first Conservative prime minister since Jacob Estrup in the 1890's if he succeeds in assembling a working majority from the five other centrist and rightist parties.

After his meeting with the queen, Mr Schluter said he would not rule out the possibility that negotiations might lead to a minority government.

Last night, he had stated his preference for Conservative-Liberal coalition, while Liberal Party leader Henning Christophersen said he favoured a broader coalition government with a working majority in parliament.

Acting Prime Minister Jorgensen has said that neither he nor his party would participate in the first round of negotiations.

Mr Jorgensen said last night, however, that he did not rule out the possibility of his party stepping in again if talks between the opposition parties failed to result in a government.

The option of calling elections also remains open to the caretaker prime minister.

Mr Jorgensen announced his resignation last night when it became clear that left-wing parties would not support the government's planned cuts in public spending and welfare, and rightist parties rejected proposed new taxes on pension funds and foundations.

JAPAN'S SAKURAUCHI CONFERS WITH FOREIGN MINISTER

OW061441 Tokyo KYODO in English 1241 GMT 6 Sep 82

[Text] Copenhagen, Sept 6 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi, now visiting Copenhagen, met with Danish Foreign Affairs Minister Kjeld Olesen Monday.

Sakurauchi and Olesen exchanged views on Japan-Europe political cooperation, relations between the United States and Europe, East-West relations and the situation in Poland. They agreed on the need to step up dialogue between Japan and Europe.

Sakurauchi, on a 13-day tour of India, Pakistan and Europe, is scheduled to proceed to Amsterdam from Copenhagen Tuesday before returning to Japan on Wednesday.

SWEDISH NUCLEAR WASTE -- The Environmental Protection Department of the Ministry of the Interior asks for an urgent statement about Sweden's plans which call for nuclear waste to be deposited in the sea area in the municipality of Oesthammar in the vicinity of the Forsmark nuclear power plant. The department holds the view that according to the information released so far it is not possible to estimate sufficiently the significance of the project to Finland and the Baltic marine environments. A letter sent by the department to the Foreign Ministry stresses the protection agreements concerning the area. The Swedish Government contends that the restrictions are a violation of the 1975 Helsinki agreements covering East-West relations.

FOREIGN OFFICE WELCOMES REAGAN MIDEAST PROPOSALS

[By Chris Moncrieff, PA chief political correspondent]

[Text] Britain today welcomed President Reagan's new proposals for the Middle East. A Foreign Office spokesman said: "His initiative offers a new opportunity to rebuild confidence between the parties in a politically realistic way. We welcome it as a constructive and imaginative step. The new U.S. ideas represent a serious attempt to take account of the concern of the interested parties and recognise that the future of the Palestinians is central to Middle East peace."

Mr Reagan's proposals were in a letter which he sent to Israeli leader Mr Menahem Begin. The president has called Israel to stop building and expanding settlements in the occupied West Bank, and has also urged closer links between the West Bank, the Gaza Strip and Jordan. According to Israeli sources, he also warned Israel against further annexation of territory.

The Foreign Office said: "None of the parties concerned will find them wholly to their liking but it would be a tragedy if they were rejected out of hand. We hope very much that real progress can now be made towards a comprehensive settlement." But the Foreign Office was silent about Israel's response of the President's initiative.

JAPAN'S FOREIGN MINISTER IN LONDON FOR TALKS

[Text] London, Sept 4, KYODO — Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi, now visiting Britain, Friday met with British Foreign Secretary Francis Pym and exchanged views on political and economic affairs between the two countries and the Middle East, Asia and East-West relations. During the three-hour London meeting, Sakurauchi and Pym discussed the official visit of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to Japan, scheduled to start September 17.

The foreign minister arrived in London from Islamabad Thursday on the third leg of official visits to India, Pakistan, Britain, the Netherlands and Denmark. At the meeting, he proposed the strengthening of political consultation between the two countries at both ministerial and high working levels by taking advantage of the forthcoming visit by Thatcher to Tokyo. Pym said the British prime minister would talk with the Japanese Government leaders about ways to further promote Japan's direct investments in Britain and to improve the economic and industrial cooperation between the countries while she is in Tokyo.

Pym also agreed basically to Sakurauchi's proposal for the promotion of political ties between Tokyo and London. Pym said Britain looked like one of the best markets for direct Japanese industry and business investments, as Britain is a favorable ground as an export base for Japanese goods to be shipped to other European Community countries. Sakurauchi later briefly talked with British Secretary of State for Trade Lord Cockfield.

Cockfield asked Sakurauchi for Japan to take necessary steps to rectify the trade imbalance between the two countries, lopsidedly in favor of Japan, as a way to further expand bilateral trade relations. The foreign minister, in reply, asked him to watch closely for the time being the results of the Japanese Government's package to open its market for imported goods, although these trade policies were not likely to bring about effects in a short time. Discussions between Sakurauchi and Pym also included the Middle East peace proposal recently made by the U.S. President Ronald Reagan and Palestinian affairs.

Sakurauchi will leave London for the Netherlands Saturday after completing his itinerary in Britain, and later proceed to Denmark before returning home Tuesday.

GOVERNMENT-AKEL DIFFERENCES ON RECOURSE TO UN

NC021125 Nicosia I SIMERINI in Greek 2 Sep 82 p 1

[Excerpts] After the strong reaction by Athens on the draft plan of the Cyprus recourse to the United Nations, Nicosia was forced to change its text in a way which would approach Greek views, and specifically Mr Papandreou's philosophy, for the repositioning and internationalization of the Cyprus issue.

Reliable sources disclose that the long extraordinary session of the Council of Ministers the day before yesterday was crucial. Ministers maintained in it that the draft resolution plan must be changed to further coincide with the joint Athens-Nicosia line for repositioning and internationalization and to give more stress to the claim for the withdrawal of the Turkish occupation troops.

The same ministers also suggested to President Kiprianou that he contact Prime Minister Papandreou directly and express to him his sorrow for what has happened and assure him that the Cyprus Government is ready to conform to his proposals so that Athens-Nicosia relations do not deteriorate.

The ministers' suggestion was obeyed, the text of the draft plan was changed and Kiprianou contacted Mr Papandreou, telling him of the Cyprus Government's decision to change the text. During the telephone conversation it was also agreed that Foreign Minister Rolandhis would go to Athens for consultations with the Greek Government.

The same sources disclose that AKEL is reacting to the changing of the draft plan and is insisting that it remain as is. According to AKEL, thus the differences with Athens will end once and for all, and what "Cyprus decides" will be practically defined, something which Mr Papandreou must understand.

AGREEMENT WITH ATHENS ON DATE OF UN RECOURSE

[Text] The Governments of Cyprus and Greece have agreed that recourse to the present UN General Assembly on the Cyprus problem should take place next March -- after the presidential elections in Cyprus to avoid involvement of the national issue in the election campaign. The decision was made during Foreign Minister Rolandhis' talks in Athens. A joint statement on Mr Rolandhis' talks with Greek Prime Minister Papandreou says the following:

Within the framework of the close and sincere cooperation between the Governments of Greece and Cyprus for the promotion of the national issue, Mr Rolandhis, foreign minister of the Republic of Cyprus, visited Athens and was received by Greek Prime Minister Papandreou at Kastri. During the consultations that took place, the question of Cyprus' recourse to this year's UN General Assembly [UNGA] was studied in detail. Both governments reaffirmed their decision to seek to discuss the Cyprus issue at the present session. With regard to the timing of a debate, the difficulties that might emerge because of the election campaign in Cyprus were put forward and were jointly assessed. The present session extends to September 1983 and, in view of these difficulties and to avoid involving the national issue in the election campaign, it was decided to seek recourse and a debate in March 1983 -- after the presidential elections in Cyprus. It was also agreed that following President Kiprianou's New York contacts, the two governments should discuss further actions to be taken before March 1983.

Mr Rolandhis also met Deputy Foreign Minster Kapsis.

Present at the meeting with the Greek prime minister were -- from the Cypriot side -- Cypriot Ambassador in Athens Khatzimiltis, Ambassador Mikhailidhsi and the director of the foreign minister's office, Mr Siambos. From the Greek side, the talks were attended by Deputy Foreign Minister Kapsis and Greek Ambassador in Nicosia Zakharakis.

Reasons for Postponement

NC061030 Nicosia ALITHIA in Greek 6 Sep 82 p 1

[By ALITHIA special correspondent]

[Text] Athens, 5 Sep -- Political observers close to the Greek prime minister have mentioned that differences between Athens and Nicosia have temporarily been put on ice, and that recourse to the United Nations has been postponed for the following reasons:

1. The Cyprus Government has said that renouncing the positions agreed to with AKEL would in essence mean ousting it from power. However, the government has let it be understood that previous promises have not been adhered to -- and that if Kiprianou is reelected, he will immediately identify himself with the Papandreou line and flout or ignore any other commitments.

2. The Greek Government bears in mind that soon U.S. or other Western initiatives will be manifested which will test Kiprianou's relations with AKEL.

3. The Cyprus Government cited reaction by various nonaligned countries and the Greek Government has in mind Russian reaction to the inclusion in the recourse of the demand for the withdrawal of Turkish forces as a priority issue.

Specifically, in its "draft plan" the Cyprus Government appears to be referring to the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Cyprus' territory [last word in English] alleging that this expression does not include the British bases which are "sovereign," thus obscuring the entire issue. Athens, however, feels that there is a need for strongly publicizing the demand for withdrawal of the occupation forces which are equated with the Greek military presence in the island but which is limited and of a defensive nature.

In addition, according to the same observers, Athens calls to mind previous firm promises given by Kiprianou from which he deviated under pressure from AKEL. Those promises concerned issues of political defense strategy.

According to other diplomatic circles in the Greek capital, the Kiprianou-AKEL cooperation cannot possibly continue vis-a-vis Greece's current relations and the initiatives the Greek prime minister is undertaking among the allies.

The same source observed there if AKEL was not in disagreement with Athen's course, there would have been no reason to cite possible preelection exploitation of the line of recourse.

Government Comments

[Text] Replying to a pertinent question, the government spokesman has stated that the Cypriot Government knows nothing about a Reagan plan for the Cpyrus issue.

The government spokesman also stated that the various press conjectures regarding the reasons that dictated the decision to discuss the Cyprus issue at the UN General Assembly in March 1983 instead of November 1982 are unnecessary.

The reasons for adopting this decision, the spokesman added, are only those clearly presented in the joint statement on the talks between Foreign Minister Rolandhis and Greek Prime Minister Papandreou. The spokesman further stated that the efforts by certain papers to present the two governments as acting on the basis of criteria other than the aim to promote the Cyprus cause in the best possible way are unacceptable.

EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT MEMBERS TOUR FAMAGUSTA

TA051612 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in English to Cyprus 1115 GMT 5 Sep 82

[Text] Members of the European Parliament visiting the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus have said that they support the settlement of the Cyprus problem through the international negotiations. They were speaking to reporters yesterday after touring the Famagusta area, where they visited the mass graves of the Turkish Cypriot civilians massacred by the Greek Cypriots, as well as the old city in the port area.

The parliamentarians said that so far they had one-sided information on the Cyprus problem, and that their visit to the Federated State had given them an opportunity to complete what was lacking in information they had on the problem. Referring to the international aid being sent to Cyprus, they said it was illegal for only the Greek Cypriot side to benefit from this aid. They would see that the Federated State also benefited from it.

Visitors Comment

[Text] European Parliament members who paid an unofficial visit to the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus [TFSC], told reporters their impression of the TFSC. The delegation spokesman, Danish parliamentarian (Karl Morber), said that they were pleased to have the opportunity to see what was happening in Cyprus and to learn the difficult problems facing the Turkish Cypriots. He said that [words indistinct] and that they would brief the European Parliament groups they belonged to on the things they had seen and heard, and the things they would see in the TFSC. He added that he would personally relate the things he had seen in the TFSC at the opening session of the European Parliament.

The FRG parliamentarian stressed that the economic embargo implemented against the Turkish Cypriots by the Greek Cypriots was contrary to everything they believed in and valued. He said that he wanted to be briefed in detail about the issue, adding that the information he received would enable the establishment of an attitude and policy based on respect for human rights and helping the two communties equally.

Netherlands parliamentarian (Arie de Budde) said that he would ask the Council of Europe what was being done for the Turkish Cypriots in the north while talks were held with the Greek Cypriots in the south.

British parliamentarian (Firs) said that it was inconceivable for only one cummunity to benefit from aid to a country while the other community got nothing. Stressing that this was contrary to democratic principles, he stated that one of the two communities living on the island was being discriminated against and human rights were being violated. He added that under these circumstances it was a mistake to extend aid only to the south.

'ARAFAT CONCLUDES 3-DAY VISIT TO ATHENS

Receives Rolandhis

NC031802 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 3 Sep 82

[Text] Cypriot Foreign Minister Rolandhis today met in Athens with PLO leader 'Arafat. Rolandhis conveyed a warm message of support from President of the Republic Kiprianou and reaffirmed the government's and the Cypriot people's full support of the Palestinian struggle. He also conveyed, on behalf of the Nonaligned ministerial committee, a wish for a meeting by its members with 'Arafat. The Palestinian leader stated that he is ready to meet with the committee as soon as possible.

Thanks Papandreou, Greece

NC040721 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 0700 GMT 4 Sep 82

[Text] Yesterday, shortly prior to his departure from Athens for Tunisia, Palestinian leader Yasir 'Arafat held a press conference. Referring, among other things, to PLO relations with the Greek Government as well as with Greece in general, 'Arafat stressed that prior to this war these relations were very strong, but now, he added, we are grateful to Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou and the friendly Greek people for what they have done to support our fair struggle, and our people will never forget this strong support. He said: I am sure that through this friendly and strong support we will succeed in our struggle, we will be victorious. In conclusion, the PLO leader stressed: In the name of our people, our fighters, the PLO Executive Committee, I wish to say that we are grateful to the Greek people, very grateful to our friend, Mr Papandreou, for what he has done.

MESIMVRINI Interview

[Excerpts] In an interview he gave yesterday to Greek Radio Television before his departure, Palestinian leader Yasir 'Arafat claimed that the invasion of Lebanon was not an Israeli attack but a "great U.S. conspiracy against the Lebanese, against the Palestinians, against the Arabs." 'Arafat attributed the fact that the Palestinians "had not been fully supported" by the Arabs to "U.S. influence."

"The United States" -- he stressed -- "used all its prestige to hamper not only the Arabs [from helping the Palestinians] but also others. This is most significant because it was quite obvious that it concerned a U.S. operation."

Furthermore, 'Arafat denied that there is some change in U.S. policy (despite the existence of the Reagan proposals), but added that "some change" is taking place in U.S. public opinion.

However, the Palestinian leader refused to reply to the question of whether he accepts the coexistence of Palestinians and Israelis in two separate states with an evasion: "Before we talk of the Israelis we should talk about the rights of the victims."

Concluding, 'Arafat expressed his gratitude for the support the Greek people and the Papandreou government gave to their struggle.

Departs for Tunis

[Text] Palestinian leader Yasir 'Arafat left at 1700 for Tunisia by a special plane sent by Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba. Five Tunisian ministers were on board the plane from Tunisia in order to serve as an escort of honor for the Palestinian leader.

At noon 'Arafat called on Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou at Kastri. During their meeting the two leaders examined the latest Palestinian developments. Shortly afterward Deputy Foreign Minister Karolos Papoulias gave a luncheon in honor of the PLO chairman at his hotel.

GREEK PLAN FOR PALESTINE TO 'OUTFLANK REAGAN'S'

[Report by Alexandros Velios]

[Text] Is our country going to attempt to mediate for the solution of the Palestine problem? This question was put to the government spokesman yesterday and his answer was as follows: "Until this moment there is nothing in this connection." He recalled that a long time ago there was a Greek initiative and recommendation to the EEC on the Palestine problem.

However, according to well-informed sources, the Greek Government intends to take a draft proposal to the EEC for the establishment of a Palestinian state. According to the same reports, this draft was the basic object of discussions which were held the day before yesterday at Kavouri between the prime minister and Palestinian leader Yasir 'Arafat.

The preparation of the final document regarding the Greek initiative has been undertaken by Deputy Foreign Minister Papoulias who called on 'Arafat at Kavouri yesterday and had a 1-hour talk with him. It is also assumed that the Palestinian leader extended his stay in Athens by (at least) 24 hours for this reason.

The Papoulias-'Arafat meeting was preceded by a long meeting of the PLO Executive Committee at Kavouri under 'Arafat. This meeting was attended by all the members of this supreme administrative organ of the Palestine organization currently in Athens. According to the same reports -- there has been no official statement in this connection -- the object of the meeting was the Greek draft proposal to the EEC.

It is pointed out that the Greek mediation, provided that it would take final shape, would outflank the Reagan plan which provides for "full autonomy" for the people on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip (while the Greek proposal will refer to an "independent Palestinian state").

SPOKESMAN HAILS STATE DEPARTMENT STATEMENT

[Excerpts] Following the Arab and European countries which have hailed the Greek Government's initiatives during the recent bloody crisis in Lebanon, the United States, in a statement released today by the State Department, voices absolute satisfaction with Athens' peace initiatives.

Commenting on the State Department statement, the government spokesman, Mr Dhimitris Maroudhas, made the following statement: The recognition of Greece's role in the pacification of the Middle East causes deep satisfaction. The Greek Government is watching developments carefully and it will definitely not hesitate to exercise any constructive influence in the interests of all the peoples of the region, of international peace and for the vindication of the Palestinian people's struggles.

PAPANDREOU SPEAKS AT PASOK YOUTH FESTIVAL

NC041658 Athens ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 4 Sep 82 p 16

["Text" of 3 Sep speech by Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou at opening of the PASOK "Youth Festival 82" in Zografos]

[Excerpts] Youth of Greece: This is the most majestic gathering of our country's youth, of the democratic people. Together we shall lay the foundations of the new Greece that many generations envisioned but could not build. Tonight, this unprecedented historic gathering constitutes the most decisive confirmation that our unyielding people will proceed with the opening of the avenue leading to the big change, to a socialist Greece, to a Greece which will belong to its people.

Youth of Greece: Out of the contradictions of world bipolarity, of the two centers, we aim at securing our territorial integrity and safeguarding our homeland's autonomy and national independence. Our country's geopolitical position has a significant peculiarity. North and South, East and West meet here. Therefore, in order to formulate a victorious national strategy, it is our duty to integrate this strategy within the complex of the corelation of forces in the European, Mediterranean and Balkan areas. It is imperative that our steps be weighed and, at the same time, be decisive and bold so that they may open the road to our national independence and the complete safeguarding of our national integrity.

Youth of PASOK, Youth of Greece: Because they tell us that we have deviated from the course we charted as a movement, that we do not keep the contract of honor we signed with the people on 18 October 1981, on 3 September 1974 [date of PASOK establishment], I would like to shout out loud from here -- so that all our compatriots in every corner of the Greek territory may hear it -- that the predominant targets of our movement are and will be first of all the dissolution of the two cold war military blocs. It is our firm belief that Greece must be out of the cold war blocs. It is also obvious that we cannot say that we have accomplished the target of national independence so long as there are foreign military bases.

Greece wants to belong to a pan-European society of people, a Mediterranean society of people. This means a struggle for us and a struggle for the people of the Mediterranean and Europe until they also shake off their chains and realize the people's sovereignty and full independence.

With consistency and faith in our movement's targets, we choose our foreign policy steps: First, we are formulating our relations with the Atlantic alliance, an alliance which resulted in the ordeals of the 7-year dictatorship in our country and the big tragedy of Cyprus. Second, we will soon proceed to renegotiate on the U.S. bases in our country, based on our goal that our national independence is incompatible with their presence.

[Following passage in bold type] Always bearing in mind not to endanger the country's territorial integrity; to contribute toward detente, peace and disarmament. [end bold type]

At the same time, as you already know, we have opened a dialogue with the EEC for the formulation of a special relationship that would allow for national planning. We have made it clear in our program and declarations as a government that this is a condition for Greece to stay within the EEC framework.

Of course, as far as our strategy is concerned, the critical factor in formulating our concrete policy is the danger from the east that our country has been facing for years. It is clear that Greek-Turkish relations color and affect our every move on the international chessboard and in our defense policy.

However, concerning our sovereign rights in the Aegean, I would like to particularly stress again that we do not claim anything, we threaten nobody, we lay the foundation of peace in our area. But we will never cede even an inch of territory nor even a inch of territorial waters or airspace. At the same time, we should also stress that — regardless of the outcome of a dialogue which has become chronic in Cyprus between the Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriot side, which is virtually Ankara and not Denktas — regardless then of this course, we align with and participate in the struggle for a Cyprus without occupation troops, for a united, independent and nonaligned Cyprus.

Youth of our country: Perhaps our people's and country's national defense readiness has never been so necessary. Only thus can we defend our territorial integrity and guarantee peace. However, this national defense unity and readiness mean unity between the people and the army, between the people and the armed forces. Only in this way we will be able to simultaneously guarantee peace and our borders.

GOVERNMENT FAILS TO EXPOSE AIRSPACE VIOLATIONS

[By Alexandros Velios]

[Text] The Turks continue at a steady pace to violate our national airspace (of the 10 miles) even after the agreement reached on the moratorium. The government not only fails to announce these violations but, according to all indications, also avoids intercepting the Turkish aircraft or making relevant protest representations to Ankara — apparently so as not to disturb the (unilateral) truce (and, of course, not to irreparably expose Mr Papandreou's "nationally proud" policy toward Turkey).

For the same reason, the messages on Turkish violations are not even communicated to the Foreign Ministry by the Air Force General Staff [GEA], as was the case before the moratorium, but are conveyed "by hand" to the prime minister and Deputy [Foreign] Minister Kapsis — alone....

According to completely verified reports from the GEA (where the tactics being followed have caused some discontent among the officers), the Turks are maintaining a... regular tempo of two to three intentional violations a week. It is indicative that the first violation took place in the northeastern Aegean on the same day the agreement for the moratorium was ceremoniously announced [22 July].

More recently, two violations took place around the end of last week, one near Limnos and the other near Lesvos Islands. The latest violation took place at noon on 3 September when a Turkish aircraft entered our national airspace up to one nautical mile from Samos Island and went out of the Athens flight information region without being intercepted. According to appraisals by the GEA, this violation was made "on purpose."

So, under the so far impenetrable cover of the moratorium and with the government's tolerance, Turkey is stirring up its firm claims in the Aegean while we are approaching the time when the foreign ministers of the two countries will meet in Ottawa (2 October). Turkey is also renewing excatly the same provocations which Mr Papandreou some time ago, as the leader of official opposition, so strongly denounced....

FOREIGN MINISTRY REACTS TO REAGAN PROPOSALS

[Text] Turkey has received U.S. President Ronald Reagan's proposal on the establishment of an autonomous Palestinian administration under the protection of Jordan as a significant development toward securing a lasting peace in the region. Speaking to journalists, Foreign Ministry spokesman Ambassador Nazmi Akiman said the following on the issue:

[Begin recording] We view President Reagan's recent proposals regarding the Middle East dispute as a significant development aimed at securing a lasting peace in the region. Our first impression is that the guidelines of these proposals will contribute to formulating a basis and a framework for negotiations aimed at achieving a comprehensive and lasting peace in the Middle East. We will continue to carefully analyze President Reagan's proposal and follow the reactions of the countries of this region to these proposals. [end recording]

In reply to a question on whether or not there was a change in Turkey's Middle East policy, Akiman said the following:

[Begin recording] We have not changed our view concerning the right of the Palestinians to self-determination. What we would like to state is not that the Reagan proposals incorporate the necessary formula for a comprehensive solution. We would like to state that these proposals have factors that might contribute to a basis and a framework for negotiations. [end recording]

ASSEMBLY ADOPTS ARTICLES ON STATE OF EMERGENCY

[Excerpt] The Consultative Assembly adopted three more articles of the draft constitution today. Another article was referred back to the constitutional committee. The articles adopted this evening regulate the states of emergency.

Article 135 stipulates that the Council of Ministers, under the chairmanship of the president, may declare a state of emergency for no longer than 6 months in one or more regions of the country or throughout the country in cases of natural disaster, dangerous contagious diseases or grave economic crisis.

Article 136 makes it possible to declare a state of emergency for reasons of widespread acts of terrorism and serious disruption of the public order. According to the article, the Council of Ministers, under the chairmanship of the president, may declare a state of emergency for no longer than 2 months in one or more regions of the country or throughout the country if there are serious indications of widespread acts of terrorism aiming to eliminate the free democratic order or the basic rights and freedoms established by the constitution, or if the public order is gravely disrupted due to acts of terrorism.

Article 137 sets forth the arrangements regarding states of emergency. According to this article, the decision to declare a state of emergency will be published in the official gazette and will immediately be submitted for approval to the Turkish Grand National Assembly. If the Assembly is in recess, it will be called for a meeting immediately. The Assembly will be able to change the duration of the state of emergency and to extend this duration each time by 2 months at most, upon the request of the Council of Ministers.

Labor Dispute Article

[Excerpt] Article 149 of the draft constitution, which was adopted by the Consultative Assembly, stipulates that the high arbitration board directly and finally resolves labor disputes in cases where strikes or lockouts are banned or postponed. The board resolves disputes in cases where the strike or lockout continues for 60 days, upon the appeal of one of the sides or the labor minister. The sides can agree to appeal to the high arbitration board for the solution of their conflicts without resorting to a strike or lockout, or during the strike or lockout.

SUPREME COURT HEAD CRITICIZES DRAFT CONSTITUTION

[Excerpt] Head of the Supreme Court of Appeals Dervic Turhan, in an opening statement at a ceremony on occasion of the commencement of the judicial year, has said that irrespective of the system accepted, arrangements that will limit the independence and control of the juciciary or that will render it dependent on legislative and executive organs should be avoided in the new constitution. He added that the new arrangements should introduce provisions which will enable the judges to fulfill their duties without any cause for anxiety. Noting that certain articles of the draft constitution being discussed at the Consultative Assembly are not compatible with the principle of the independence of judges, Turhan added that these articles might render the judiciary dependent on the executive organ and that they might place it under the (?influence) of political powers. He concluded by saying that independence and guarantee of judges can only be insured through the principle of self-administration.

CURFEW IMPOSED FOR VOTERS' REGISTRATION 5 SEP

[Text] Ankara, 4 Sep (AA) -- A nation-wide curfew will be in force Sunday as thousands of specially trained men and women will pay visits to households to register elegible voters for next November's referendum on Turkey's new constitution.

The curfew, to begin at 0500 hours, will last until 1900 hours. Every Turk over the age of 21 is elegible to register as a voter. The new law on the referendum says that every single eligible voter will have to register. Failure to do so is punishable by law, and violators may receive prison sentences of up to 6 months and a TL 5,000 fine.

Registration Completed

[Excerpt] The registration of eligible voters for the forthcoming referendum on the constitution has been concluded. The registration was reported to have been conducted normally throughout the country. The curfew imposed for the purpose of registration at 0500 has ended.

High Election Council Chairman Orhan Aydin said that the citizens abided by the rules and the registration was conducted in a satisfactory manner. In a statement to Turkish Radio and Television, Aydin said that the voting lists will be put up on 25 September.

TURKMEN SPEAKS AT MILITARY ATTACHE'S FUNERAL

[Excerpt] A state funeral was held in Ankara today for Air Force Staff Col Attila Altikat, Turkey's military attache at the embassy in Ottawa who was killed there by Armenian terrorists. Altikat's body was placed on a stand in front of the prime minister's office at 1130. After a minute of silence was observed, Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen delivered a speech in which he said: The infamous and villainous Armenian terrorists have murdered a distinguished representative of our glorious army. Our nation is extremely angry and indignant. We are all impatient to settle accounts for this despicable murder.

Turkmen said Altikat had represented his country and army in the best possible way in Canada. He added that Turkey expected the Canadian Government to do everything possible to capture the murderers.

Turkmen said: Our country has faced systematic Armenian terrorism since 1973. Twenty-three persons have been killed abroad and seven in the country. Sixteen officials and citizens have been wounded abroad as a result of this terrorism and 82 inside the country. Some of the victims will be victims throughout their lives and some are still fighting death.

Armenian terrorism is being fed with a racist propaganda that distorts history and recklessly spreads lies and slanders against Turkey and the Turks. Our experience with Armenian terrorism and propaganda is not new. At the end of the 19th century and the beginning of the 20th, Armenian organizations resorted to the same methods to achieve their political goals, killing hundreds of thousands of Turks with hair-raising ferocity in Anatolia. Then they tried to make the world believe that these cruel murders were committed against them.

The foreign minister pointed out that there were some who believed in these slanders because the Armenian terrorists did not get the necessary answers. However, he added, this big lie will be seen for what is is once the historical truths are documented.

Turkmen stressed that the Armenian allegations were now being received with increasing doubt and suspicion and that strong reactions against Armenian terrorism were forming. Turkmen added: We will continue to fight Armenian propaganda with all the means at our disposal and with great determination.

The foreign minister reiterated that efficient international cooperation was the realistic way of ending Armenian terrorism which, from every aspect, is part of international terrorism. He noted that Turkey is doing all it can in that field, that it is constantly warning the countries where terrorism exists and that, in international forums, it insistently defends the necessity for international cooperation. He expressed his concern and disappointment over the fact that no substantial progress had been made on this matter. He said: The obstacle we meet in this field is the passiveness of certain countries in the face of terrorist incidents not aimed specifically against them; and, in some cases, even their tolerance of Armenian terrorism due to political considerations. There are countries that tolerate the training and equipping of terrorists in their territory, which almost grants them immunity by supplying them with [word indistinct] and which permits their official media to be constantly used by Armenian propaganda.

Turkmen noted that so far 25 Armenian terrorists have been captured in various countries, that some of them were released and some received sentences which were not proportionate to their crimes. He added: A lesson should be learned from the fact that those countries that opened their doors to Armenian terrorist and propaganda activities are now becoming the main targets of international terrorism.

The foreign minister stressed that Turkey would continue to strive for international cooperation against terrorism, adding that the dimensions of Armenian terrorism clearly show that in fighting terrorism it was not enough to rely solely on international cooperation.

Turkmen said that due to its conditions since 1975, Lebanon had become the main base of Armenian terrorism. He said: Lebanon should now stop being a center for terrorism. It must insure that now. On the other hand, we cannot tolerate the formation of another base in our region by the terrorists who left Lebanon.

Turkmen recalled that even at the weakest period of its history, the Turkish nation had not allowed Armenian terrorism and propaganda goals to be achieved. He added that those who thought they would be able to extract a few concessions from Turkey -- which had strengthened its national unity and solidarity and become the soundest and most stable country in the region -- were bound to be bitterly disillusioned. He said: It would be in their favor to grasp this truth, to give up their sick obsessions and to stop adding shameful pages to the book of world history.

Evren Answers Trudeau Message

[Text] In a reply message to Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau's condolence message [over the death of the Turkish military attache in Ottawa], Head of State Kenan Evren has said that terrorism and acts of violence, which constitute a joint threat to humanity, can only be averted through international cooperation and joint determined action.

Evren said that threats of terror and repeated acts of violence against determined Turkish officials have caused great pain and concern in Turkey. He said: I was extremely moved by your expression of solemn promise in your message that Turkey is not alone in its struggle against terrorism. In fact, terrorism and acts of violence threaten humanity. This threat can only be averted through close international cooperation and determined joint actions. We sincerely hope that the investigation being carried out through the decisive attitude of your government will bring the culprits of these atrocious acts before the law. This will be a considerable deterrent force to the repetition of such treacherous acts.

IRAQI MISSILES SINK TURKISH VESSEL 4 SEP

[Text] Ankara, Sep 6 (AFP) Iraqi forces sank a Turkish vessel on September 4, the Turkish Foreign Ministry confirmed here today.

The Mars Transporter was hit by three missiles fired from the shore or from Iraqi military helicopters, which killed three crew members and wounded three more, the ministry said in a communique issued this afternoon.

The ministry did not specify the type of the ship. Captain Adnan Tok and 29 surviving crew members were taken to Tehran aboard [words indistinct] the communique said.

Announcing that the vessel when hit was in the front of a convoy about to enter the river leading to the Iranian gulf port of Bandar Khomeyni, the communique said that the Iraqi high command had as early as August 12 declared the area of this port and the oil terminal on Khark Island a dangerous zone.

The ministry also referred to an Iraqi communique issued on September 4 which said that two tankers were destroyed near Khark Island and two other cargo ships trying to enter Bandar Khomeyni were bombed.

Two tankers, flying Greek and South Korean flags, were sunk in the same zone in July, the communique said.

KREISKY SHARPLY CONDEMNS JARUZELSKI REGIME

AU071402 Vienna KRONEN-ZEITUNG in German 4 Sep 82 pp 2-3

[Kurt Seinitz report on interview with Chancellor Bruno Kreisky in Palma de Majorca -- date not given]

[Text] The latest developments in Poland: mass protests, shot demonstrators, the further exacerbation of the regime's policy through mass arrests, exemplary punishment of "rebels," show trials against opponents of the regime, and purges at universities and factories have now caused even one of the most patient observers of the Jaruzelski regime -- namely, Chancellor Kreisky -- to man the barricades. Kreisky, in a KRONEN-ZEITUNG interview said, "such a course is doomed to failure!"

Up to now, Kreisky had been one of those Western statesmen waiting for the fulfillment of the Polish martial law regime's promise to open a constructive dialogue with the people. But nothing has been done in this respect, and since the events of 31 August, the gap between the regime and the people is wider than ever. Kreisky: "The new situation in Poland makes it virtually impossible to find a reasonable solution." The chancellor adds pessimistically, "things can certainly not go on like this much longer."

The news of the deadly police fire at demonstrators touched off a furious reaction by the chancellor: "That is naturally the result of the Crimea and of what was discussed there (early in August between Jaruzelski and Brezhnev). What is happening now in Poland is even worse than what happened in the past in the CSSR or earlier still in Hungary, because there the country's own people did not lend themselves to such things."

The chancellor is "downright pessimistic" regarding his own initiative planned for the fall for preserving Poland's ability to pay its debts and for bringing about an easing of the political situation in Poland. He said: "In view of the events in Poland, I fear that such an initiative will simply not meet with any support from Western public opinion. The prospects for Poland are bad, very bad."

AUTOMATIC DIALING TO USSR NO LONGER POSSIBLE

AU032042 Vienna Domestic Television Service in German 1730 GMT 3 Sep 82

[Text] As of yesterday, automatic telephone dialing between the Soviet Union and several European countries, including Austria, is no longer possible. As recently as a few months ago, the Soviet authorities announced without giving any reasons that the number of lines between Moscow and Vienna would be drastically reduced, thus making automatic dialing impossible. People placing phone calls to the Soviet Union must now once again place them through the post office, which results in delays of several hours.

TRADE WITH USSR -- In the first half of 1982, Austrian exports to the USSR totaled 4.6 billion schillings, 23.7 percent more than during the first half of 1981, while imports declined 9.5 percent to 8.8 billion schillings in the same period. To ensure the continuation of this favorable trend, which would enable Austria to considerably reduce its trade deficit with the USSR -- last year's record deficit was 13.1 billion schillings -- two Austrian delegations will visit Moscow in September. These include a delegation of experts headed by Chamber of Commerce Chairman Sallinger 5-8 September, and a delegation headed by Trade Minister Staribacher 20-24 September to attend the 14th session of the joint Austrian-Soviet commission. PAPER WELCOMES U.S. CHANGE OF 'TONE' ON MIDEAST

[Text] The thing which characterizes President Reagan's "new peace initiative" is a new tone rather than original ideas or the solutions proposed. For the first time a U.S. leader has placed the Palestinian problem at the center of the search for a settlement to the Near East conflict and has done so in terms which are unusual for Washington, clearly stating that the war in Lebanon did not solve anything. "The military losses of the PLO have not diminished the yearning of the Palestinian people for a just solution of their claims.... The departure of the Palestinians from Beirut dramatizes more than ever the homelessness of the Palestinian people. Palestinians feel strongly that their cause is more than a question of refugees. I agree.... For peace to endure, it must involve all those who have been most deeply affected by the conflict."

In reaffirming the U.S. pledge to defend Israel's security, President Reagan also stressed that its military victories "alone cannot bring just and lasting peace to Israel and her neighbors" and that it is now necessary to "reconcile Israel's legitimate security concerns with the legitimate rights of the Palestinians." Those facts may well be self-evident but they still had to be, and have been, clearly stated by the U.S. President following the Palestinian fighters' eviction from Lebanon.

Although, as regards principles, Mr Reagan calls on the Israelis to recognize the Palestinians' aspirations and on the latter to recognize that their demands are linked to Israel's security, he did not make any particularly original proposals. While remaining faithful to the broad outlines of Camp David (free elections and transfer of internal authority in the occupied territories), he nonetheless prejudged the issue by ruling out the idea of a Palestinian state and Israel's annexation of the West Bank and Gaza (an annexation which would, however, violate Resolution 242, regarded as the cornerstone of any settlement), and above all by stating that "the final status of the occupied territories will have to be full autonomy in association with Jordan." Indeed, the second phase of the Camp David agreements makes provision for negotiations on the final status of those territories and does not specify or rule out any solution.

Israel's reaction was not slow in coming: a categorical and unanimous no from the Begin government.

On the Arab side caution seems to be de rigueur to the extent that Mr Reagan's statements coincide with some demands: a freeze on Israeli settlements, rejection of annexation and importance attached to the Palestinian question. On the other hand, there is no indication that the Arabs -- especially the PLO -- will be satisfied with preferential ties between an autonomous Palestinian territory and Jordan in place of an independent state. Moreover, there is no indication that King Husayn of Jordan is prepared to launch into such a political operation alone. He would probably not do so without the approval of the Arab countries and the Palestinian people, in other words the PLO, to which things inevitably come back.

Mr Reagan's proposals are a continuation of the September 1978 Camp David agreements, rejected by the whole Arab world and by those primarily concerned -- the Palestinians in the occupied territories. The regional context has now changed. So has Washington's tone. Dialogue could at least begin if the U.S. ideas, which are still vague -- who, for example, would represent the Palestinians at the negotiations? -- were to be clarified.

FDP SPOKESMAN DENIES GENSCHER TO RESIGN

[Excerpt] Hamburg/Bonn, 7 Sep (DPA) -- According to the Hamburg magazine DER STERN, FDP Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher intends to resign from his post as party chairman if the FDP fails to clear the 5-percent hurdle at the Hesse elections on 26 September. If his party remains in the Wiesbaden Diet, Genscher intends to terminate the Bonn government coalition with the SPD before the Berlin FDP federal congress on 5 November, DER STERN notes, drawing from remarks apparently made by Genscher at a birthday celebration for the wife of top manager Bruno Schubert in Bogenberg, Bavaria.

Party spokesman Herbert Schmuelling commented in Bonn on Tuesday that this report is "like many others at present, part of a confusing game without any basis of truth."

SCHMIDT DETERMINED TO RETAIN GOVERNMENT POSITION

LD071654 Hamburg DPA in German 1604 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn, 7 Sep (DPA) -- Chancellor Schmidt today reaffirmed his determination not to relinquish government responsibility and not to give the coalition partner [FDP] any excuse for switching to the CDU/CSU. Speaking to the SPD parliamentary party, he rejected the idea of asking for a vote of confidence again in the Bundestag. The coalition partners supported a vote of confidence in the Bundestag in February. Schmidt expressly supported the budget decisions which were arrived at in conjunction with the FDP.

INTERVIEW WITH SPD'S BAHR ON CHINA TALKS

DW071041 Cologne Deutschlandfunk Network in German to East and West Germany 0547 GMT 6 Sep 82

[Correspondent Kroenig interview with Egon Bahr, member of the SPD Presidium, on the latter's visit to Beijing; date and place of interview not given -- recorded]

[Excerpt] [Question] What made the Chinese party chairman seek the dialogue with you?

[Answer] I believe that the Chinese took a look at the talks I had in Beijing earlier with the foreign policy experts in the party headquarters and the deputy chief of the general staff. They then deemed it appropriate, and perhaps also interesting, to have this dialogue materialize.

[Question] An offer was made for the opening of formal party relations, as it were, between the German Social Democracy and the CPC. But your reaction was not enthusiastic. Why is it that the German Social Democrats are reluctant to do something similar to what the Socialists in France are doing?

[Answer] Well, with the Social Democrats it's like this: We have made a decision which says that we will not establish any official party relations with communist parties. The French can do as they see fit. That's their business. The Chinese party boss did not come up with a proposal on this question. He just raised it, and I later answered it along the lines of my foregoing reply. This does not rule out talking with each other if and when discussions are of interest and both sides consider it appropriate. After all, we do have such talks with the Yugoslavs just as we had them with the Italians. And if anyone goes to Moscow or to East Berlin he simply has no choice but to talk with those in government, and that means the communists.

[Question] Surely it is interesting to hear in such contacts how the Chinese leadership views the world. All of us are aware of their suspicion of the Soviet Union. But in the meantime, the skeptical attitude toward the United States has obviously intensified as well.

[Answer] What I found is that the Chinese would like to keep the two superpowers at a distance and that they do not trust either of them. As far as China is concerned, the Soviet Union of course, constitutes the most serious threat, even though the Chinese do not believe in the existence of any danger of aggression. Nor do I believe that they need to be afraid of that. For China is practically invincible barring large-scale use of nuclear weapons, which no one is thinking of.

Especially after the foolish acts committed by the Americans recently with the arms deliveries to Taiwan, the Chinese have lengthened the distance from the United States. And the matter is not yet settled, which means that it is legitimate to assume that the topic of Taiwan will remain a permanent topic between the Chinese and the Americans. They oppose both superpowers, whom they believe harbor hegemonic ambitions.

[Answer] Yes.

[Question] Is this how they assess the United States now under Reagan?

[Answer] Yes.

[Question] That is a deviation from the former approach?

[Answer] You can well say that.

[Question] What do the Chinese say to the European discussion partners? What advice do they give the Europeans regarding their position between both superpowers?

[Answer] The Chinese are for independence. I have told them that they can afford that better than we can. Our situation is not comparable to theirs. The Americans stand with their forces on our territory and we need the Americans for security reasons, or stating it more correctly: We need the alliance, or even more correctly: Without the Americans, Western Europe is unable to establish a security balance with regard to the Soviet Union.

The Chinese understand that, but they maintain nevertheless that European unification must proceed more quickly to demonstrate greater independence with regard to the two superpowers. We have discussed it very thoroughly. We have also discussed the Geneva negotiations on medium-range missiles.

[Question] Are the Chinese equally interested? Do they understand the urgent wish of the Europeans that no deployment take place and that there should be disarmament?

[Answer] I have very thoroughly explained the meaning of our detente policy. I believe it was the first time I explained it so intensely. From this ensues the wish you have just mentioned in your question. I believe the Chinese are beginning to understand it. The problem is that they are very skeptical with regard to the chances of success. They believe that the chances of successful Geneva negotiations on medium-range missiles are very slight.

[Question] Why?

[Answer] They believe that the two superpowers will do what they want without regard to the interests of others. At the moment neither of the two is interested in achieving results accordingly to the Chinese.

[Question] What did you tell the Chinese in this connection? You share the skepticism of the Chinese don't you?

[Answer] No, I am of the opinion that you cannot yet judge these negotiations. I don't believe you can judge the negotiations prior to the U.S. elections in mid-November or in early November. I don't expect much to happen there until that time. Only thereafter will we get an impression or be able to decide whether negotiations will make sense and have promise.

[Question] At any rate, it is interesting for you and now also for our listeners to hear how the Chinese assess the situation in the disarmament sector and how skeptical they are. How do you explain this skepticism?

[Answer] You could almost believe that if the negotiations were unsuccessful it would spare the Chinese making a decision. It is absolutely clear that if negotiations are successful and a few SS-20 missiles are removed and deployed where they can reach China, that it would mean that the Chinese must ponder in this connection the shifting of global power. This was an important point of the talks, which we discussed repeatedly in the course of the day. I think that the Chinese are pondering that more than they did a relatively short time ago.

KIRCHSCHLAEGER ON DECISION NOT TO VISIT BERLIN

[Text] Bonn, 7 Sep (DPA) -- Austrian Federal President Rodolf Kirchschlaeger met Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt for talks in the Bonn chancellor's office on Tuesday. This morning on the 2d day of his state visit to the Federal Republic, Kirchschlaeger received Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher (FDP) and Deputy SPD chairman, Minister-President Johannes Rau for separate talks at his residence, Schloss Gymnich, near Bonn.

At a press conference, the Austrian president defended his decision to omit a visit to West Berlin on his 4-day stay although the Federal Government had suggested it. He said the need for such a visit should still not be taken for granted. His decision is certainly not a demonstration against anyone, but is intended to prevent the situation in Berlin, which he sensed is a little more quiet at present, from becoming "topical" through possible protests. Neither is his decision to not visit Berlin a decision to "soften up" the GDR, which he intends to visit next year. In this connection, Kirchschlaeger stressed that neutral Austria maintains excellent relations not only with Bonn but also with East Berlin.

The SPD Parliamentary Group in the Bundestag regretted Kirchschlaeger's decision not to visit West Berlin. The group representative in the Foreign Affairs Committee, Peter Maenning, said that the SPD group is nevertheless still "fully aware of Austria's consistent and committed support for the interests of Berlin and Germany as a whole."

[Hamburg DPA in German at 1438 GMT on 7 September reported that an important topic of Kirchschlaeger's talks in Bonn was the disputed Rhine-Main-Danube Canal. Kirchschlaeger, addressing the press, again spoke strongly in favor of carrying on the project, the economic benefits of which are doubted by the Federal Government.]

AEG-KANIS TO SUPPLY TURBINES FOR USSR PIPELINE

[Text] Frankfurt 7 Sep (DPA) -- AEG-Kanis (Essen) will supply two turbines for the planned Soviet natural gas pipeline from west Siberia to West Europe this month.

The daily newspaper DIE WELT reports in Wednesday's edition that this is reliable information from the AEG head office in Frankfurt. The newspaper quotes the source as saying that now that French, British and Italian firms have supplied turbines to the Soviet Union, which include parts made under U.S. licenses, in spite of the U.S. embargo, AEG-Kanis no longer needs to hold back. Moreover, Bonn has encouraged the supplying of the turbines, it says.

The turbines that AEG-Kanis has contracted to supply involve licenses from the U.S. General Electric Company. The rotors from the two turbines that are now to be delivered were supplied by General Electric before the embargo was imposed. Three further rotors are in stock, which means that three more turbines can be completed. AEG-Kanis is to make a total of 47 turbines for the gas pipeline. The contract is worth about DM700 million.

EEC'S THORN ON U.S. PIPELINE SANCTIONS

[Text] Berlin, 7 Sep (DPA) -- In the view of EEC Commission President Gaston Thorn, economic sanctions of the type imposed by the United States in connection with the European-Soviet gas pipeline deal worsen the climate between Western countries.

Thorn stressed on Tuesday in Berlin that the dispute with the United States over this matter has to be settled, although basic positions need not necessarily be altered. The EEC countries are not all equally enthusiastic about the gas pipeline deal, but there is agreement that after the contracts had been signed the imposition of sanctions was not the right step.

Thorn, who has been meeting Mayor Richard Von Weizsaecker and other Berlin politicians during his visit to Berlin, stressed that the EEC will do its utmost to help Berlin in its special situation, including in relation to the crisis affecting the economically stricken AEG Telefunken electronics concern.

CHANGING U.S. EMBARGO POLICY REVIEWED

[Commentary signed STS: "Back Door]

[Text] President Reagan now seems prepared to give in with regard to the embargo conflict concerning the construction of the Soviet natural gas pipeline. The door he had not very diplomatically slammed shut in the face of his allies by threatening to impose sanctions against European firms has opened a crack again for a transatlantic dialogue.

The juridically contestable supply restriction on the giant Siberian project was of no use anyway. The turbines are presently being loaded on ships in England and Italy and martial law continues to be imposed in Poland despite the threatening economic gestures. Now the amicable Washington offer indicates that the Europeans should at least delay the building of the pipeline. If the Europeans accepted that compromise, they would not be very reliable trade partners in the eyes of the Soviets and also admit succumbing to Reagan's changing foreign political moods.

Nevertheless, if the President -- surprised by the allies' protest -- is now looking for a back door through which he can withdraw from the sanction problem without losing face, the Europeans should not slam that door shut.

DANISH RELATIONS AFFECTED BY FISHING DISPUTE

[Text] Bonn, 2 Sep (DPA) -- The Federal Government is concerned about the development of relations with Denmark as a result of the fishing dispute. According to a government spokesman in Bonn on Thursday, Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has noted "with great attention and concern" a letter from Danish Premier Anker Jorgensen in which the latter expresses the Danish protest against fishing off of West Greenland by German fishermen. Because of the importance of the matter, Schmidt has instructed Secretary of State Hans-Juergen Wischnewski to deliver the chancellor's answering letter in person.

In his letter to the Danish Government leader, Schmidt emphasizes once again the legal basis of the Federal Government's position which is also shared by the EEC Commission, according to which, German fishermen, in spite of the Danish and Greenlandic protests, are allowed to catch 2,000 tons of cod off west Greenland up until 22 September. Secretary of State Wischnewski will attempt to explain to Jorgensen the difficult position of the German deep-water fishing industry and its processing plants on the coast. The Federal Government hopes that the Danish Government will respect the decision of the Brussels commission.

As a precaution, the federal chancellor has also written to EEC President Gaston Thorn asking the commission to institute proceedings for breach of treaty against Denmark in accordance with Article 169 of the EEC treaty. Furthermore, Bonn is demanding early dates for possible proceedings before the European Court.

DANISH JOURNALIST ACCUSED OF SPYING FOR GDR

[Text] Karlsruhe/Flensburg -- A Danish journalist has been arrested on the German-Danish border near Flensburg on strong suspicion of having spied for many years for the GDR. The Karlsruhe Federal Prosecutor's Office revealed this on Saturday after a radio station in Copenhagen had reported the incident.

The 51-year-old Dane is to appear on Saturday evening before the investigating judge of the federal court in Karlsruhe. He will be informed of the opening of proceedings based on an arrest warrant, issued on 6 August. It will also be decided whether the accused will be detained or released on bail.

According to investigations carried out so far, the journalist, who was arrested in Friday while leaving the FRG for Denmark, is strongly suspected of having been a spy for the GDR secret service between 1958 and 1981 in Denmark, the FRG and the GDR. The spying activity is also said to have occurred in the military sphere. The authorities in Karlsruhe would give no details on the identity of the accused.

Danish radio said that the journalist was working in Bonn as a correspondent for several Danish media. The Flensburg house of the 51-year-old journalist, member of a German-Danish organization opposed to nuclear arms, has been searched.

BAUM SAYS DKP SPIES ON LEFTIST ORGANIZATIONS

DW061227 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE in German 4 Sep 82 p 5

[Dispatch signed ME: "Baum: The DKP Informs the State Security Service"]

[Text] Frankfurt, 2 September -- As far as Federal Interior Minister Baum is concerned, "corroborated findings of the security authorities" indicate that a multitude of internal records of the German Communist Party [DKP], which is loyal to Moscow, are continuously trnasported to the GDR.

The minister provided this information on 20 August in response to an inquiry submitted in writing in the Bundestag. Deputy Hans-Joachim Jentsch (CDU) wanted to know whether the Federal Government deems justified the complaints by organizations of the new left that their activities are watched by the DKP and that members have been arrested on trips to the GDR on the basis of such information. In his reply, Baum draws attention above all, to the activities of the "DKP arbitration commission, which is responsible for the 'unity and purity' of the party and which gathers and evaluates information about other organizations competing with the DKP -- even applying conspiratorial methods." Besides, ultra-leftist groups in the Federal Republic are subject to direct spying -- not arranged by the DKP -- on behalf of the GDR's 'Ministry of State Security.' Addressing the inquiring party, Baum's reply ends with the passage: "The developments referred to in your inquiry might well be 'proceeds' of this espionage activity."

FOREIGN MINISTER ON NAMIBIAN SETTLEMENT

AB071121 Paris AFP in English 1105 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] Windhoek, Sept 7 (AFP) -- West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said in a message here that latest developments in negotiations on Namibian independence were cause to hope for free and fair elections in the South African ruled country.

"Over the past few months, the Federal Government with their partners in the Western contact group have overcome great stumbling blocks on the road to Namibia's constitutional independence." Mr. Genscher said in a message read by West German Ambassador to South Africa Ekkehard Eickhoff.

The contact group also includes the U.S., Canada, Britain and France.

Mr. Eickhoff was addressing delegates at the annual congress of the Interessengemeinschaft Deutschschprachiger Sudwester, an organisation uniting German-speaking people.

Mr. Genscher's message, quoted by the news agency SAPA, went on: "The agreement over constitutional proposals, which coincides with our own democratic and constitutional principles, gives us hope for a future which be decided by all Namibians in a voluntary manner."

But the Foreign Minister noted that "we know all the difficulties have not been removed. The weapons have not been silenced and the last steps have not been taken."

MEDITERRANEAN SQUADRON SHIPS TO SAIL FOR LEBANON

PM071337 Paris LE MONDE in French 7 Sep 82 p 4

[Unattributed report: "Aircraft Carrier Foch Ready To Pick Up French Intermediary Force in Lebanon"]

[Text] The aircraft carrier Foch, of the Mediterranean Squadron, was placed on alert on the evening of Sunday, 5 September, as was the missile-launching frigate Duquesne. From Toulon, where they were still in port this Monday morning, 6 September, the two French warships are to set sail for Lebanon to pick up the French contingent of the multinational intermediary force which helped in the evacuation of the Palestinians from Beirut.

The ASW corvette Dupleix and the logistical support ship Rance, two of the French ships which took part in transporting the French force between Cyprus and Lebanon, returned to Toulon last weekend. However, the ASW corvette Georges-Leygues, the destroyer D'Estrees, the amphibious vessel Orage and the frigate Premier-Maitre-L'her remained in the eastern Mediterranean basin.

It is generally thought in French military circles that the French contingent might leave Beirut around 10 September.

NEW ZEALAND FOREIGN MINISTER ARRIVES FOR TALKS

NC072026 Paris AFP in English 1957 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] Paris, Sep 7 (AFP) -- New Zealand Foreign Minister Warren Cooper arrived here today from Rome for a 48-hour visit during which he is to have talks centred on the European Common Market and the international situation.

Tomorrow, he is to have talks with French Foreign Trade Minister Michel Jobert, European Affairs Minister Andre Chandernagor and Agriculture Minister Edith Cresson.

The talks will be dominated by French and EEC agriculture policy, notably on New Zealand's main exports, butter and mutton.

Negotiations have been continuing on establishing import quotas for New Zealand butter into Europe for 1983, official sources said here. In 1981, Europe let in 94,000 tons of the commodity and last year 92,000 tons.

After Paris, Mr Cooper will go on to Bonn, Brussels and London.

CONTINUED AID TO CHAD, CENTRAL AFRICAN REPUBLIC

[Unattributed report: "Paris Intends To Pursue Its Aid to Chad and the Central African Republic"]

[Text] On Tuesday, 31 August, the Quai d'Orsay spokesman reaffirmed France's desire to pursue its aid to poor countries like Chad and the Central African Republic and, as far as the former is concerned, to respect the OAU recommendations for its rebuilding. He said that French aid to Chad amounted to Fr63 million for the first 8 months of 1982 and to Fr74 million for the Central African Republic in the same period.

Half of the funds devoted to Chad, he stated, have been sent since Northern Armed Forces leader Hissein Habre came to power in Ndjamena.

The spokesman said that a new agreement for Fr10 million, included in the total, was recently signed by France's ambassador to Ndjamena and that that sum will be devoted to humanitarian assistance, health and food aid. Franco-Chadian cooperation is most evident in the rural section and in reviving the Chadian administration and the functioning of Ndjamena's public services (radio, telecommunications, water and electricity).

With regard to the Central African Republic, the spokesman specified that the rate of aid for 1982 was higher than for 1981 (Fr101 million for the year). He recalled that the French Government said in March that it would continue to give aid to the Central African Government's "worthy" national rebuilding program. Some 1,200 French soldiers are still in the Central African Republic under the terms of a defense agreement between the two countries.

PCF'S MARCHAIS URGES 'ARAFAT TO VISIT FRANCE

PM031011 [Editorial Report] Paris L'HUMANITE in French on 31 August 1982 carries on page 7 the 1,000-word text of a message sent by PCF Secretary General Georges Marchais to PLO Chairman Yasir 'Arafat on 30 August in which he expresses his "emotion and respect for the example of resistance, courage and heroism which the Palestinian fighters have given the world" and expresses the PCF's continuing support for the Palestinian cause.

Marchais says: "For its part, the PCF intends to do everything at both the national and international levels to help further progress along this path."

"In that connection, a visit to France by you would have considerable significance. It would be a major point in our people's solidarity with the Palestinian people and the PLO, a step on the path to a just and lasting settlement of the Near East conflict."

"It is therefore, on behalf of all French Communists, that I confirm the invitation which I sent you. It remains more valid than ever."

"Before leaving west Beirut, you forcefully reaffirmed that the battle goes on for the Palestinian people's just national rights. In that battle you will always find the French Communists at your side with the greatest determination and efficacy."

LE MONDE ON 'BANKRUPTCY' OF POLISH REGIME

[Editorial: "A Bloody Failure"]

[Text] The two people killed (a provisional tally) in Lubin tragically demonstrate that the threats reiterated by the authorities before Tuesday's demonstrations were not merely intended to intimidate the Polish population. Not only did the junta have no hesitation in brutally repelling demonstrators armed only with stones or in rare cases, with Molotov cocktails, it also gave the police permission to open fire on the crowd. The bloodshed, if it does not lead to new demonstrations very soon, completes the gulf between the government and the population of which Msgr Glemp spoke last week. How could a government which has gone to such extremes agree, as the church and trade unionists are asking, to finally take into account its people's aspirations?

Tuesday's demonstrations are additional proof of the Poles' growing refusal to sink into silence and to submit passively to the restoration of the party's dictatorship. The initial reports on the clashes suggest that 40,000-50,000 people took part in them. That is not many in view of the 10 million members which Solidarity had and Poland's 36 million inhabitants. It is impressive however when you realize that the men and women who came out onto the streets did so in a totalitarian country in which martial law has reigned for 9 months.

Their own trade union leaders had warned them that there were likely to be casualties and that they could have few illusions about what the government's reaction would be.

Why did they take this action? The explanations of "romanticism" and a tradition of heroism are not enough.

The fact is that they live day by day amid shortages, lines and growing poverty in the face of the avowed bankruptcy of a regime which for 35 years has claimed to possess the recipe for happiness. Their courage did not serve a minority or even a bare majority of the population, but served an entire population which for 16 months during Solidarity's existence was able to limit its aspirations and demand not a change of regime, but only the right to be heard.

All they received in return for that moderation was a wave of arrests and the crushing of a freedom which had barely been glimpsed. Despite 9 months of martial law [apparent line drop] each watchword, each clandestine pamphlet calling on people to struggle only to attain that "national accord" of which General Jaruzelski is taking advantage of in order the better to destroy it.

What will happen in the future now that blood has been shed and now that, under the police charges, people have been heard to shout for the first time: "Let's separate from the Soviet Union"? Nobody can say as yet, but the wealth of detail with which the Moscow press reported Tuesday's clashes is enough to indicate that -- after a long confrontation which remained peaceful on both sides -- the situation in Warsaw has become very heated. On Sunday, General Jaruzelski admitted, with disarming candor, that the Poles were rejecting normalization. He has just demonstrated that, unless there is a prompt return to reason, all he has left is force.

AT LEAST 10 TOOK PART IN DALLA CHIESA SLAYING

[Text] (ANSA) -- Palermo, September 7 -- Officials investigating Friday night's slaying of General Carlo Alberto Dalla Chiesa and his wife in Palermo said Monday that at least ten people were involved in the mafia-style ambush.

According to eyewitness accounts at the scene of the attack in downtown Palermo, the ambush was carried out by two killers in each of two cars, a BMW and a Fiat 131, driven by another two men, and a Suzuki motorcycle, with a hitman on the pillon seat behind the rider.

After leaving the scene of the ambush the killers set fire to the two cars and got into two waiting cars. With the drivers of these last two cars, the commando comprised at least ten people.

According to General Prosecutor Ugo Viola, Dalla Chiesa's killers belong to mafia clans which have survived the brutal gang warfare which has raged in Sicily for the last several months -- 103 victims in the last six months alone.

The internecine battles between the various mafia families in their Sicilian heartland are being waged over control of the multi-billion dollar heroin market, with an estimated turnover in 1981 of about 5.5 billion dollars.

The Palermo Office of the Treasury Guards issued a denial of press reports that General Dalla Chiesa had been in possession of documents on bank accounts of mafia suspects and that these documents disappeared after his death.

A communique said that Dalla Chiesa did not have these documents in his possession, since [they] are always kept at Treasury Guard offices.

Minister on Anti-Mafia Fight

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, September 7 -- A joint session of the interior and justice subcommittees of the lower house will continue discussion today of anti-mafia legislation, which is expected to be made into law in record time.

Minister of the Interior Virginio Rognoni delivered a report Monday to the commission on the murder of Palermo Prefect General Carlo Alberto Dalla Chiesa and his wife in a mafia-style ambush Friday night.

Outlining the government's strategy in the battle against the mafia, Rognoni said that "police are not enough to combat the mafia. The state, in every one of its components, is needed against the mafia. And the state is not only the central government, but the entire system of institutional powers".

Rognoni went on to say that "the survival of the mafia is a mortification of the state of law", adding that the mafia is a phenomenon of power which can be uprooted only through penetration of its structures, following its national and international ramifications and controlling its money traffic.

Commenting on press criticism that the government did not grant Dalla Chiesa enough powers, Rognoni conceded that it is necessary to distinguish between the post of prefect and the task of coordinating a battle against the mafia.

However, Rognoni added, "this position has been constantly overloaded in certain circles with arbitrary and substantially limited interpretations of Dalla Chiesa's tasks".

Legal 'Gap'

AU070903 Rome ANSA in English 0836 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, September 7 -- A conflict of interest between the Italian state and the Sicilian region may have been triggered by the appointment of Emanuele de Francesco to the newly created overlord's office to corrdinate civil servant administrations and police in the battle against the mafia.

The question was raised Monday by several politicians in the house debate on the statements delivered by Minister of the Interior Virginio Rognoni in the discussion over new anti-mafia legislation and echoed the main topic Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini discussed in a long meeting with the president of the Sicilian region, Mario d'Acquisto.

In a statement to newsmen, D'Acquisto said that he informed Spadolini of "the region's unconditional consensus" over the appointment of the anti-mafia overlord and added that "regional powers have never been and could never be in contrast with the state authorities on an issue which is national and requires a national solution".

D'Acquisto, however, did concede that some doubts could be raised at the practical level over the overlord's powers which are not reflected in the legislation of the autonomous Sicilian region's statute.

The president of the region said that a regulation must be approved enacting an article of the regional statute concerning the powers conferred on the president of the region to coordinate law enforcement.

The regulation is long overdue, more than thirty years to be precise, since the autonomous region's statute was implemented in 1948.

The legislative gap may make De Francesco's job even more difficult.

The New Zealand foreign minister will depart for Paris this evening for talks on the same topic with French authorities.

NATO AUTUMN EXERCISES COMMENCE IN NAPLES

[Text] (ANSA) -- Naples, September 2 -- NATO's "Autumn Forge 82" manoeuvres were inaugurated in Naples today in what Supreme Allied Forces Commander General Bernard Rogers called "the intent to create a more efficient and prepared force in the alliance".

Rogers stressed that the manoeuvres were being inaugurated in Naples for the first time "to stress the value and vitality of this region for Western Europe and for the alliance". The manoeuvres, which involve more than 250 thousand troops in various parts of Europe, are planned "to put our organization in a condition to discourage war".

PCP'S CUNHAL DISCUSSES PARTY OBJECTIVES

LD080256 Lisbon Domestic Service in Portuguese 2230 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] The Central Committee of the Portuguese Communist Party has been meeting over the weekend and today PCP Secretary-General Alvaro Cunhal held a news conference to announce the main decisions reached at the weekend meeting.

As for the forthcoming local elections, the PCP's immediate objectives are to increase the number of votes and mandates.

[Begin Cunhal recording] Our party's main objectives are to maintain and reinforce our popular alliance majority in town and parish councils; to increase the number of town and parish councils we control; and to increase the number of votes and mandates we receive. We believe that the party's reinforcement is essential not only to reinforce local power, not only because the people's interests must be defended by local authorities, but also so that through the reinforcement of local power Portugal's democratic system will be strengthened. [end recording]

Cunhal spoke about the presidential veto of the local government elections bill -- which obviously was not discussed at the Central Committee meeting -- expressing his concurrence, because the PCP viewed the bill as unconstitutional.

In its analysis of the political situation there were no major surprises. The PCP once more denounced what it considers the Democratic Alliance's putschism and continued to call on President Eanes to dismiss the government, dissolve the parliament, appoint a caretaker administration and call early parliamentary elections.

Something new and more harsh was said about the Socialist Party, a party that could not be relied upon, Cunhal said, to uphold democracy. The PCP Central Committee, he announced, had decided to step up the relations with Social Democatic Movement and with those Socialists discontent with the Alliance. However, after the news conference, Cunhal told a member of our news staff that it was still possible to count on the Socialist Party in the framework of democratic parties as long as its leadership changed some of its stances.

[Begin Cunhal recording] We believe that the Socialist Party, particularly if it is able to rectify the dangerous course of allying itself with reactionary forces, even today can be a very valid force in the framework of Portugal's democracy. By pursuing this policy of disaster, of allying itself with reactonary forces, the Socialist Party tends to become a party in disarray, disrepute and possibly with declining influence on national (?life). [end recording]

Asked to comment on the likelihood of a Eanes-sponsored political party being formed, Cunhal said that in his opinion there was a vacant area today which induced objective conditions for the founding of new parties.

AIRCRAFT COMPANY'S CLARIFICATION 'SATISFACTORY'

LD041444 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1300 GMT 4 Sep 82

[Text] The Spanish Government is satisfied with the clarification it has received from the Mcdonnell Douglas Corporation on the possible commissions which it was thought had been given to intermediaries during the negotiations for the purchase of the F-18A Future Attack and Combat Aircraft. As you will recall, the government suspended the purchase operation while clarification was sought on this point.

According to the report sent by the American company, the office of Antonio Garrigues Walker received 3.5 million pesetas and that of Miguel Domenech 2 million pesetas for legal advice. There were, therefore, neither commissions nor intermediaries in the contract for the purchase of the aircraft.

Meanwhile, the Spanish Government will buy 40 (SL1-DLK) missiles from an American multinational for the Spanish Navy, to be deployed on a frigate under construction at the National Bazan Company. The same company is going to build an aircraft carrier similar to the Principe de Asturias for Australia. The contract means a guarantee of work for at least 3 more years for the company.

UCD LEADERS DEBATE POSSIBLE ELECTORAL PACTS

PM071035 Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 1 Sep 82 p 9

[Fernando Jauregui report]

[Excerpt] Madrid -- The Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] leadership yesterday opted for rejection of a preelection coalition with the Popular Alliance, owing basically to party Chairman Landelino Lavilla's firm stance of opposition, according to circles at UCD headquarters in the Calle Arlaban. Nevertheless, the final decision on the UCD's election plans and its possible coalitions with other political parties will not be taken until the next meeting of the National Executive Committee -- the party's top body -- which will meet in Madrid Tuesday, 7 September.

UCD Secretariat sources were stating yesterday evening, at the conclusion of the 3-hour meeting which ended after 2100 hours, that the majority of the National Executive Committee supports in principle party Chairman Lavilla's stance of running alone in the election.

Despite the fact that a substantial section of the UCD Secretariat favored a rapprochement with the Popular Alliance as the sole recourse, since every approach to Adolfo Suarez' Democratic and Social Center [CDS] has failed, Lavilla's stance kept matters in line with the initial plans. That is, the UCD maintains that it will run alone in the coming general election, although it will very probably include members of Antonio Garrigues' Democratic Liberal Party on its lists. According to reliable sources, Lavilla went so far as to threaten to use the "return clause" -- return of the party chairmanship to Calvo-Sotelo -- if the attempts undertaken by some members of the centrist Secretariat to force a coalition with the Popular Alliance continued.

UCD Secretary for Organization Rodolfo Martin Villa and several other members of the centrist leadership were proposing, as the sole solution to avert what they believe could be an electoral catastrophe for the party, joining the Popular Alliance's already proposed coalition with former UCD Christian Democrat Oscar Alzaga's Popular Democratic Party.

Laina, Intermediary for Agreement With Suarez

According to their viewpoints, since a coalition with Suarez' seceded centrists has become impossible, and reports on the province-by-province situation provided by Martin Villa having been analyzed, there was no alternative but a rapprochement with the Popular Alliance.

A coalition with the Suarist CDS became clearly impossible last week following a conversation between Suarez and Director of State Security Francisco Laina, who was sent as a mediator by Roson and Lavilla. According to what EL PAIS was able to learn, Suarez accepted in principle an electoral understanding between the UCD and the CDS, but demanded the immediate departure of Pio Cabanillas, Jose Pedro Perez-Llorca and Rodolfo Martin Villa, among others, while also demanding that Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo retire from active politics. Lavilla regarded these terms as absolutely unacceptable.

GONZALEZ ON NATO, POTENTIAL COALITION ALLIES

PM061215 Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 29 Aug 82 p 15

[Miguel Barroso dispatch]

[Excerpt] Wiesbaden -- Spanish Socialist Workers Party [PSOE] Secretary General Felipe Gonzalez yesterday emphasized his party's pledge to call a referendum on Spain's joining NATO if it wins power after the 28 October general election. Gonzalez -- who is in the FRG city of Wiesbaden supporting the SPD in the Hesse regional election campaign -- specified that "within the context of this referendum my party would advise the Spanish people to give a negative response, although," he explained, "our opposition to Spain's joining NATO should not be confused with opposition to that alliance's very existence." He also stated that he is opposed to a coalition government with the PCE, "because it would not be good for Spain."

Gonzalez refused to specify the PSOE's possible allies if it does not secure an absolute majority, although he categorically discounted the possibility of a coalition government with the Communists, "because it would not be good for Spain." In his opinion, beginning to consider the issue of postelection alliances means assuming that "we will not achieve our aim of securing an absolute majority." Nevertheless, he told this newspaper that "it is possible to establish a gradation of proximities to our proposal of an alternative for change. From that viewpoint, the closest group is Fernandez Ordonez' Democratic Action Party. There is also a declared amenability on the part of the Democratic and Social Center founded by Suarez, which seems to have adopted a center left course."

The PSOE secretary general did not even discount the possibility of an understanding with "Landelino Lavilla and what is left of the Union of the Democratic Center," but he noted that "there is complete incompatibility with Fraga's Popular Alliance and what revolves around him."

JAILED COUPLEADER TEJERO ANNOUNCES CANDIDACY

[Excerpt] Lieutenant Colonel Tejero Molina, in jail in Madrid, has announced his intention to run as a candidate in the general elections scheduled for October. This evening we called him. After asking for the name and identity card number of the director of this newsreel, Tejero Molina agreed to talk to us. The line was not very good so first here is a summary of his statement:

Tejero Molina confirmed that he intends to run for the Spanish Solidarity Party which he defined as an electoral party upholding a Spanish ideology, nothing else. He does not see any contradiction between his decision to run for parliament and his actions on 23 February 1981. He said he has dedicated his life to serving Spain -- with a gun, with words or even his bare teeth.

Here is the recording:

[Begin recording in Spanish] [Question] Lieutenant Colonel Tejero Molina?
[Answer] Yes, go ahead.
[Question] Good evening. This is Commercial Radio from Lisbon. Can you hear me well?
[Answer] So, so.
[Question] Is it true, Lieutenant Colonel Tejero Molina, that you intend to run for parliament?
[Answer] I want to, yes.
[Question] Why Lieutenant Colonel?
[Answer] I want to help Spain in any way I can.
[Question] The name of the party, we understand, is Solidarity. Is this so?
[Answer] Spanish Solidarity.
[Question] Spanish Solidarity. Well, what is the party's program?
[Answer] That is very simple. The program is the unity of the fatherland, order, social coexistence and work for all Spaniards.
[Question] Lieutenant Colonel, can your party be considered a party of the right, of the extreme right? How would you describe it?
[Answer] Well, it is, frankly, an electoral party.
[Question] But is it an ideology that can be described as rightwing or extreme rightwing?
[Answer] It is Spanish, nothing else.
[Question] Fine. Lieutenant Colonel, do you think you will get enough votes to get a seat?
[Answer] If I did not think so, I would not run.
[Question] Who is backing your party?
[Answer] The Spanish people, those who want to.
[Question] Do you not think that your candidacy might affect other parties with a similar ideology?
[Answer] Well, we could all run together.
[Question] Is there any coalition yet in prospect?
[Answer] No, we have not yet brought up the subject.
[Question] But is there a possibility of this? Would you do it?
[Answer] Of course.
[Question] With which parties?
[Answer] Well, any parties that stand by the same basic points that we advocate. All those that are Spanish, who only want the good of Spain.
[Question] Which of the existing parties do you think meet these criteria?
[Answer] Well, quite honestly I would rather not single out any party. Let them do it themselves.
[Question] Quite. One other question I must ask you is whether you do not think it is somewhat a paradox that Lieutenant Colonel Tejero Molina, who on 23 February 1981 entered parliament with a pistol in his hand, is now running in election for this same parliament.
[Answer] I do not think so. My life is dedicated to serving Spain whether with the gun, with the word or with my bare teeth. [words indistinct] [end recording]

GRAPO TERRORISTS 'REORGANIZED,' PLANT BOMB

LD061206 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 0600 GMT 6 Sep 82

[Text] Following the explosion of a bomb yesterday in Francisco Villaespesa Street in Madrid, police sources say that GRAPO (1 October Antifascist Resistance Groups), the terrorist group which was earlier practically broken up, has now reorganized. The bomb was found wrapped in a Republican flag and with an inscription recalling the death of Cerdan Calixto, one of the leaders of the terrorist organization, and announcing the continuation of the armed struggle. Police sources say it is most probable that this incident, since GRAPO has reorganized over the last few months and carried out a number of bank robberies to get money and arms. The same sources also say that is is probable that GRAPO will attempt various violent actions prior to the coming elections.

DIRECT DIAL TELEPHONE LINES TO MOSCOW CUT

[Text] Direct-dial telephone connections from Finland to Moscow were today cut for the second day. Automatic connections are, however, operating to some Moscow telephone numbers, including the embassies and commercial representations. According to a verbal report received by the director of posts and telecommunications from Moscow today, the situation is due to a considerable reorganization in the internal Moscow telephone network. The reorganization may take a long time. Direct-dial telephone calls from the Soviet Union to Finland were cut in July. At the same time the telephone links between Finland and the Soviet Union were reduced by 11 lines. At the moment there is a backlog of calls to the Soviet Union at the Helsinki telephone exchange.

[Text] Sweden has informed the Soviet Union about its serious view of the greatly reduced telephone connections caused by the Soviet side. Sweden notes that it regards the measure as a violation of the spirit of the Helsinki Final Act concerning closer contacts between the countries. When receiving a high-ranking Soviet Foreign Ministry official in Stockholm yesterday, head of the Foreign Political Section Lennart Eckerberg also handed over a list containing the names of five persons who have applied for permission to leave the Soviet Union in order to be reunited with their families in Sweden.

2-Year Disruption Predicted

LD071734 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1600 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] It will take at least 2 years before telecommunications between the Soviet Union and Sweden can function normally again. This message was received by the Swedish Telecommunications Administration from the Soviet Long-Distance Telephone Communications Administration today. All telephone calls must now be booked through a telephonist in Moscow. The Soviet explanation for the disrupted telephone connections is that the telephone network in the Soviet Union is to be repaired and modernized.

FOREIGN MINISTER COLOMBO MEETS WITH PYM

[Text] -- London, September 7 -- Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo arrived in London today for a work visit and immediately met with Foreign Office Secretary Francis Pym.

The two men reviewed current international issues, European Economic Community problems, relations between the EEC and the United States and East-West ties.

The meeting was followed by a work-lunch.

Colombo will be back in Rome this evening.

Details of Visit

LD072224 Rome Domestic Service in Italian 2030 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] Italy and Great Britain have evaluated positively the proposals advanced by Reagan on the Palestinian question. This was stated by the minister of foreign affairs, Emilio Colombo, at the end of his talks at the Foreign Office with his British counterpart, Francis Pym.

The main themes discussed, apart from the Middle East crisis, were relations between the United States and Europe, certain specific problems of the European Economic Community and the situation in Latin America.

With regard to the friction between the United States and Europe caused in particular by the question of the Soviet gas pipeline, Colombo said that Italy and Great Britain are working to achieve a direct meeting at the ministerial level between the countries concerned in order to assess alternatives.

LABOUR LEADER FOOT ON NUCLEAR REDUCTION

[Text] Opposition leader Mr Michael Foot said tonight that a future Labour government would ban American cruise missiles from British soil and scrap the Trident missile project.

"Our own defence policies and priorities in this country should be established on a new, non-nuclear basis" he told a rally of Bristol disarmament campaigners.

"We should abandon the pursuit of a so-called independent nuclear deterrent and we should scrap all the vastly expensive Trident nuclear schemes."

This would enable Britain to find the resources for "adequate conventional defence," he said.

Mr Foot also dismissed claims by NATO Supreme Commander, Europe, Gen Bernard Rogers, that Labour's commitment to bar cruise bases was merely election rhetoric.

"The rejection of cruise missiles is not only an important item in Labour's preelection programme -- it will be carried into effect by us after the election.

"The refusal to accept a new breed of nuclear weapons on our soil is one of the steps which the next Labour government will be ready to take to help lead the world back from the nuclear abyss."

Mr Foot also attacked the recently-leaked Pentagon policy document which offered the prospect of the United States winning a "protracted" nuclear war.

"I hope that everywhere, East and West, in the United States and in the Soviet Union, we shall permit no return to the lunatic calculations about 'winning a nuclear war.'

"There is plenty of lunacy about without contemplating that last, largest lunacy of all."

Britain should move towards worldwide disarmament, starting with the rejection of military developments like the neutron bomb which "lower the nuclear threshold."

MENA INTERVIEWS DOUGLAS HURD ON REAGAN PLAN

NC071033 Cairo MENA in English 0930 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] London, 7 Sep (MENA) -- British minister of state for foreign affairs, Douglas Hurd, has underlined that the building of new settlements in Gaza and the West Bank by the Israelis is "illegal, wrong in moral terms and profoundly unhelpful to the cause of peace."

Hurd said in an interview with the MIDDLE EAST NEWS AGENCY correspondent in London on the eve of his visit to Cairo, that: "The British Government did not think the Israeli prime minister's rejection of American President Reagan's plan was surprising. I think it was inevitable that Mr Begin's government's first reaction should be negative," he stated. "Obviously, the American plan and the change in American policy has reopened a national debate in Israel, and we have made our own position regarding this initiative."

He expressed hope that, after some period of discussion and debate, the Israelis would come to the conclusion that the Reagan plan does offer them a basis for a just settlement.

Hurd said that the United States would sit tight and mobilise support for its initiative, pointing out that he did not expect any early further American move.

On the European stance as regards the American initiative, the British minister expressed hopes that the European ministers, when they meet at Copenhagen at the end of this week, would make the European decision clear, adding that the European stand on the principles [was] laid down in Venice and that they have been trying to influence American thinking, Arab thinking and Israeli thinking since then in accordance with those principles.

Hurd added that he would not expect a separate or contradictory European initiative in the next few weeks.

"Obviously, we have our own private view, and we will try to support the American move" Hurd said.

On the situation in Lebanon Hurd said he believed that "it was very important that the Israelis do pull out of Lebanon. I don't see any chance of Lebanon asserting itself as an independent state or having harmony with its own borders as long as there are Israeli forces there."

He further said that he was not optimistic that the Israelis would pull out quickly but added that "we will use whatever influence we have in that direction."

Hurd underlined that Britain is in close touch with all the parties concerned with the Lebanese problem, adding that he would be discussing this issue in Paris tomorrow and during his visit to Cairo and the Gulf area that would start later this week.

Hurd affirmed that the situation in Lebanon is still dangerous in spite of the fact that the PLO evacuation of Beirut is complete.

The Palestinians should be associated with the peace negotiations Hurd said adding that Britain understands the difficulties that the Palestinians are in.

On the Iraq-Iran war, Hurd said that he thought it is still worrying and that he does not see any mechanism for bringing the war to an end.

He underlined that the two parties find it difficult to agree on a means of ending the war, adding that while the war continues there is always the danger that it might spread. Britain supports efforts exerted to end this war, Hurd said.

On the Egyptian-British relations, Hurd underlined that his country has kept in close touch with Egypt for a long time now, adding that his visit to Egypt that would open on Friday is part of a series of contacts between the two countries.

He added he would discuss with Egyptian officials two main matters, Palestine and Lebanon, which he expected will take up most of their time.

SAUDIS SIGN SECRET COMMUNICATIONS DEAL

[By Robert Hutchinson, PA defence correspondent]

[Text] The Ministry of Defence has signed a 200 million pounds secret deal with Saudi Arabia to extend the Saudi National Guard's military communication system, it was disclosed today.

The package includes satellite grounds stations, radio relays, civilian high frequency radio links, engineering works, maintenance and training, Whitehall sources confirmed.

Details of the deal are sparse, although the authoritative INTERNATIONAL DEFENCE REVIEW says that Marconi Space and Defence Systems demonstrated its Marmoset satellite ground terminal in Saudi Arabia early last year.

The journal predicts that military satellites like Britain's Skynet IV series, made by British Aerospace, could eventually be bought by the Saudis to slot into the system.

The communications network's radio frequency plan, drawn up by the Ministry of Cable and Wireless, specified such a wide operating band that no single British company could supply suitable equipment, so this portion of the order went to Farinon, an American company.

A number of British companies are however involved in the deal codenamed Sangcom which will last two to three years.

Meanwhile, Marconi Radar Systems has won a 20 million pounds order from NATO for four Martello 3-D radars to boost its air defences. Two will be used in Britain and the others in Denmark.

The mobile systems, hailed as one of the most sophisticated in the world, will provide "instant" cover against air attack, filling gaps in the permanent 4 radar network.

The RAF believes Martello is "highly resistant" to enemy jamming and regards it as the keystone of Britain's new air defence radar screen.

Three other Martellos were bought for Britain last March. The first is already operational.

INTERCOMMUNAL TALKS HELD; INTERRUPTION POSSIBLE

NC071922 Nicosia Domestic Television Service in Greek 1730 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] A new session within the framework of the intercommunal talks was held at the Ledra Palace Hotel this afternoon. The discussion on the issue of the regional governments continued. In a statement before the meeting, Mr Mavrommatis, the Greek Cypriot representative at the talks, said that after the completion of the discussion on the issue of the regional governments, possibly today, the discussion on the transitory provisions will begin. Mr Mavrommatis clarified that these provisions are on the time that falls between the achievement of an agreement and its implementation. In answer to a question, Mr Mavrommatis said that at the end of the month there might be a short interruption in the talks because, if the president of the republic goes to New York to address the UN General Assembly, it is very natural to ask the interlocutor to accompany him.

In a statement, Mr Onan, the Turkish Cypriot interlocutor, described the decision to postpone Cyprus' recourse to the United Nations as a very prudent action and as a good step forward. The decision, he added, is constructive and helpful, and I believe will produce better results both in the talks and between the two communities. Mr Onan affirmed the possibility of interrupting the talks for a short time because, as he said, some people, and perhaps Mr Gobbi, will go to New York. Mr Onan expressed the conviction that this round of talks will be completed by the middle of September.

The session began at 1700 and lasted for about 2 and 1/2 hours. A UN statement says that the discussion on the regional governments was completed at today's session. The next meeting will be held on Thursday afternoon.

TURKEY WELCOMES POSTPONEMENT OF RECOURSE TO UN

[Text] Turkey has received as a positive development the Greek Cypriot administration's decision to renounce taking the Cyprus question to the UN General Assembly.

Replying to questions by journalists on the issue, Foreign Ministry Spokesman Ambassador Nazmi Akiman recalled that the intercommunal talks are continuing within the framework drawn up by the UN secretary general based on the Security Council resolutions. Akiman added that Turkey and the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus have long maintained the view that a UN General Assembly intervention in the problem at a time when the intercommunal talks are continuing in a positive manner would be detrimental. Noting that an interference with the goodwill mission of the UN secretary general and taking steps which might damage the process of negotiations which are promising is a grave responsibility, the spokesman added: The fact that the Greek Cypriot administration has renounced making a recourse to the UN General Assembly at this stage, even though for other reasons, shows that it has grasped the essence of the problem.

Mr Mitterrand flew by helicopter to Thessaloniki yesterday where he boarded a special flight for Paris.

DAILY REJECTS OFFICIAL DENIAL OF AIR VIOLATIONS

NC071520 Athens MESIMVRINI in Greek 7 Sep 82 p 1

[Excerpts] Deputy Minister for Press Affairs Maroudhas yesterday attempted to "laconically" deny MESIMVRINI's reliable reports that, even after the agreement on the moratorium, Turkish aircraft continue to violate Greek airspace. Answering a question from a journalist at yesterday's briefing of political editors, the government spokesman confined himself to saying, "no violation, no provocation against Greece."

As has repeatedly been the case, Mr Maroudhas' denials may serve some political expediency but do not render the reality. Air Force Gen Nikolaos Kouris, chief of the Air Force General Staff, sent a message detailing the most recent violation by a Turkish aircraft, which took place at 1449 hours on 3 September at the point 3742N-2705E (one nautical mile from Samos Island). Among other things, Air Force General Kouris reported: "In addition to breaking the international rules of air traffic (it entered the flight information region without a flight plan), the above-mentioned aircraft also violated our national airspace...."

The chief of the Air Force General Staff also pointed out that in another message he sent, he had referred to a "similar type violation" and that "...it is probable that these two violations were made on purpose."

KKE'S FLORAKIS CRITICIZES GOVERNMENT POLICY

[Text] At a press conference today, Kharilaos Florakis, secretary general of the KKE Central Committee, referred to the positions of the party's 11th congress.

Answering a question on the KKE stand toward the government, Florakis stressed that his party is criticizing the government because up to now, through the entire policy it is following, it is not opening the road to true change. Florakis added: However, this does not prevent us from supporting every positive democratic measure adopted by the government.

Florakis went on to point out that the solution for a true change today is a democratic government which would be based on all the forces of change and on the people. He also stressed that the KKE is prepared to contribute to such a prospect by either supporting or participating in such a government.

In answer to what KKE Secretary General Florakis maintained at his press conference, Government Spokesman Dhimitrios Maroudhas made the following statement: With their vote, the people selected the PASOK program of change and gave PASOK a parliamentary majority to implement it. PASOK will implement the program it has outlined to the people. The government has chosen its own strategy and tactics in accomplishing the targets of change.

KKE LEADER RECEIVES VISITING AKEL OFFICIAL

[Text] KKE Central Committee Secretary General Kharilaos Florakis has received and had talks at the Central Committee headquarters with Comrade Yiannis Katsouridhis, member of the Secretariat and Political Bureau of the AKEL Central Committee, who is currently in Athens at the invitation of the KKE. Present at the meeting was Comrade Andonis Ambatielos, member of the KKE Central Committee Political Bureau.

During the meeting there was a briefing on the latest developments of the Cyprus cause and it was noted that there is full identity of views in connection with the recourse of the Cyprus Government to the UN General Assembly for the promotion of a Cyprus solution. Comrade Florakis assured Comrade Katsouridhis that the KKE is watching the Cyprus developments closely and that it will continue to actively support the Cypriot people's struggle for an independent, sovereign, nonaligned and demilitarized Cyprus.

EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT GROUP CONVENES SESSION

NC071448 Athens ATHENS NEWS in English 7 Sep 82 p 4

[Text] The European Parliament's socialist group, currently in Athens, began its sessions yesterday at the Asteria in Vouliagmeni, and concludes them on Friday.

The debates will include the examination of the memorandum on Greece-EEC relations, the prevailing political situation in Greece and various subjects concerning dencentralisation of authority and regional policy.

Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou and various members of the cabinet will address the participants to explain Greece's views on the various subjects.

It should be noted that the participants include European politicans of international repute, such as former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, the secretary general of the Italian Socialist Party, Mr Bettino Craxi, the president of the European Parliament, Mr Peter Dankert and a number of other personalities.

Following the opening of the session yesterday participants attended a dinner given in their honor by the president of Greece's parliament, Mr Ioannis Alevras.

Today the group will discuss subjects which will be included in the agenda of the next plenary session of the European Parliament. These subjects include: The Polish issue, COMECON, and relations with the EEC. At noon the politburo of the socialist group will give a working luncheon in honour of the members of the PASOK Executive Committee.

Tomorrow the Greek prime minister will address the session and explain his party's views on European unity and will also explain in detail the measures taken by the government for the country's reform.

On Thursday the foreign deputies will visit various cooperatives and villages ov Voiotia and Kopais, as well as handicraft units in the region of Attiki.

MUNITIONS COMPANY ACCUSED OF ILLEGALITY

NC031533 Athens AVRIANI in Greek 3 Sep 82 pp 1, 6

[Excerpts] Concrete evidence is in the hands of responsible state officials proving that Pir-Kal [a Greek munitions company] is involved in suspicious arms sales to countries abroad.

At the same time there are reports that the company of the Bodhosakis [Pir-Kal] foundation covers foreign multinational companies in the production of military materiel and appears in foreign countries as the supplier of arms of Greek manufacture.

Meanwhile, it has been learned that an agreement to supply Syria with military materiel from Pir-Kal, worth many millions, has been canceled after the government ascertained that the materiel was being sent to Iran through Syria.

Military circles have stressed that the value of the Syrian order raises doubt about the ability to fill it, as Pir-Kal's production capacity is well known. Specifically, it is being claimed that the production capability of Pir-Kal is much smaller than the order it has received. Consequently, to fulfill its obligations it must obtain from "somewhere else" the quantities needed for the order and this "somewhere else" is abroad.

Of course, this is not the first time it has been revealed that Pir-Kal has supplied juntas and extreme rightist regimes in South America and Africa with military materiel.

KKE charges in the form of interpellations in the Chamber are well known.

He will fly to Izmir, where the annual trade fair is on, before going on to Ankara this week.

'LEGAL ASPECTS' OF SUNKEN VESSEL CONSIDERED

TA071444 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1425 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] Ankara, 7 Sep (AA) -- The Turkish Government is examining the legal aspects of the sinking of a Turkish vessel "Mar Transporter" by Iraqi rockets in the Persian Gulf, Foreign Ministry Spokesman Nazmi Akiman announced Tuesday.

The ministry had confirmed Monday the "Mar Transporter" had been sunk on Saturday, 4 September, by land and helicopter launched rockets fired by Iraqi forces from a distance of 15 to 20 miles as it was approaching in a convoy the Iranian port of Bandar Khomeyni.

Three of the 29-man Turkish crew died in the incident, while the other crew members and Captain Adnan Zor were flown to Tehran aboard a special plane.

TRIAL OF ARMENIAN TERRORIST BEGINS IN ANKARA

TA070959 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 0900 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] The trial of (Levon Ekmekciyan), the Armenian terrorist who launched an armed bomb attack at the Ankara Esenboga Airport on 7 August 1982, has begun. The suspect's identity was determined at the hearing today which was held at the Ankara Martial Law Command 3d Military Court. It was determined that the suspect was born in 1958 and that he has Lebanese citizenship. Later the indictment was read. The indictment said that the suspect arrived in Turkey by air on 27 July 1982 and that his friend, who used forged identity papers under the name of Bejdi Ahmet Haydar, arrived later overland. According to the indictment, the two suspects obtained two machineguns and three handgrenades from unidentified sources and prepared Molotov cocktails. The suspects visited Esenboga Airport two times, once on 4 August and a second time on 5 August, but did not engage in any action. The indictment continues that the suspects later decided to launch their attack on 7 August. Nine persons were killed and 78 injured as a result of the attack launched by the suspects on the afternoon of 7 August.

The indictment demanded that (Ekmekciyan) be sentenced to death for the premeditated murder of more than one person in accordance with Article 450 of the Turkish Penal Code. The suspect's interrogation began after the reading of the indictment.

Terrorist Denounces ASALA

[Text] The trial of Armenian terrorist (Levon Ekmekciyan), who was involved in the Esenboga Airport massacre, continued this afternoon at the Ankara Martial Law 3d Military Court. (Ekmekciyan), who was interrogated in the morning, said he wanted to make a statement in the afternoon to warn his Armenian terrorist friends who were making a similar mistake.

He said: I am revealing my thoughts to enlighten the Armenian nation. I want the Armenians to wake up. I am calling on the organizations and parties which make nations fight each other for no reason at all and which drag the Armenians toward death. The Armenian nation must wake up and see the organizations and parties that drag it toward death. During the 30 days I have been in Turkey, I personally observed that the Turkish nation is the only nation which loves the Armenian nation, and that the issues we have been brainwashed about are lies and errors.

As a member of the Armenian terrorist organization, ASALA [Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia], I am saying that the incidents which occur today are not the consequences of the events of 1915. They are simply games being played by the leaders of certain Armenian organization leaders for their personal and material interests. I hope the Armenian nation wakes up and purges itself of the dogs who dragged youths like me to such mistakes. I would like to especially point out that the things that were taught were unfounded. I am asking the Armenian nation to live with the Turkish nation as brothers. The Armenians can have a bright future if they have good relations with the Turkish nation. I reiterate and swear that I am extremely sincere in my opinions. I am speaking under absolutely no pressure.

Later, (Ekmekciyan) said that he considers himself a murderer must be executed not once, but 10 times. He added that if he were given the death sentence, he would mercilessly fight, until his last day, the organizations and parties that had misled the Armenian nation.

(Ekmekciyan) then said: I would like to say a few words to the Turkish nation. I made a mistake. The Turkish nation, the Turkish community should not make a mistake. The Turks should not be hostile and angry at the Armenians for this partisan movement that will obviously not last long. The Armenian terrorist circle is a small circle. The Armenians and the Turkish nation must do all they can to eliminate this circle.

Replying to a question by the court, (Ekmekciyan) said that he was in Beirut about 3 months ago, and from the conversations among his leaders he had understood that if Israel entered Beirut then the only asylum for the organization would be the Greek Cypriot sector. He explained that he understood that ASALA would settle in the Greek Cypriot sector because of the Turkish Cypriot-Greek Cypriot conflict, and turn the sector into a second Beirut.

Replying to another question, (Ekmekciyan) said that the ASALA leaders considered all the Marxist organizations in the world as natural allies. He named the PLO and the PKK [Kordestan Workers Party] as two of those organizations.

When the court asked him a question about the persons and organizations in Turkey which had helped him, (Ekmekciyan) asked for a closed session. The court agreed. After he made his statement, witnesses were heard. The majority of the witnesses said that they had been taken hostage at the restaurant of the airport, and had therefore only seen the terrorist who was killed. They had difficulty in identifying (Levon Ekmekciyan). Some witnesses recognized him, however.

Receives Death Sentence

[Text] Armenian terrorist (Levon Ekmekciyan), who organized an armed bomb attack at Ankara Esenboga Airport on 7 August 1982, has been sentenced to death. The sentence was pronounced by the Ankara Martial Law Command 3d Military Court in accordance with Article 125 of the Turkish Penal Code, which stipulates that the death sentence is given to persons who engage in activities aiming at separating the whole or part of the lands under the sovereignty of the state from the administration of the state, at establishing an independent state on these lands or at placing these lands under the sovereignty of a foreign state.

During the afternoon session of the trial, the witnesses were heard and the prosecutor made his statement. He demanded the death sentence in accordance with Article 125 of the Turkish Penal Code. (Ekmekciyan) was then asked if he had anything to say. He said he had nothing to say and that he trusted Turkish justice. He added: I came here motivated by a belief. However, after this incident, I understand how ridiculous and wrong that belief was. I express my regrets for the last time and I declare that I will accept the verdict with respect.

After these remarks, the court was recessed until 2200. At 2200 the court announced the verdict sentencing (Ekmekciyan) to death, with the option of appealing the sentence.

FUGITIVE STOCKBROKER ARRESTED IN TUNISIA

[Text] Ankara, 5 Sep (AA) -- A 32-strong NATO delegation, composed of the representatives of nations who are members of the alliance's Military Committee has arrived in Ankara on a good-will mission. The delegation also includes seven officials of the NATO Secretariat.

NATO parliamentarians will be received in Ankara by House Speaker Sadi Irmak, Defense Minister Umit Haluk Bayulken, Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen and Deputy Chief of Staff General Necdet Oztorun.

The delegation will later travel to Erzurum and Istanbul before departing Turkey on September 9.

OUR RADIO ON WEINBERGER PRAISE OF ISRAELI ARMY

TA040950 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0500 GMT 4 Sep 82

[Text] Weinberger has said that the Israeli Army is a model for Washington. U.S. war secretary Weinberger met Israeli war minister Sharon and Prime Minister Begin in Tel Aviv. He then visited Israel's weapons factories. In a news conference on his visit to Israel and on the official talks he held there, Weinberger said that the multifaceted relations of cooperation between his country and Israel were developing further, and that they were in full harmony on the contents of the [word indistinct] policies. Weinberger said: For us, the Israeli Army is a model of what a modern army should be.

The meaning of the U.S. war secretary's remarks about the Israeli Army is very clear. Weinberger described as a modern army the aggressive Israeli Army which has been the source of hot wars, which shed a lot of blood in the Middle East since 1967, which lately committed hair raising murders in Lebanon, killing thousands of Palestinian and Lebanese women and children, and which occupied Arab lands. This, Weinberger said, is a model for them.

With these remarks, Weinberger reveals the intentions and plans of the United States. [Passage indistinct] such an army receives the support and aid of the U.S. administration.

Aggressive Israel is killing Palestinians and Arabs in the Middle East with modern American weapons. Not only does Washington let this happen, it further increases its military aid to aggressive Israel. In fact, the main topic of the talks Weinberger held in Tel Aviv was on equipping the Israeli Army with new and more modern American weapons. Weinberger assured his strking force, the Israeli Zionists, about this issue. By saying they have common interests and full harmony regarding their policies, Weinberger gave the green light to the aggressor for new murders. Thus, he encouraged the aggressive Israeli Army, which he portrayed as a modern army and a model for Washington, to start new hotbeds of war in the Middle East.

TURKISH REACTION TO REAGAN PROPOSALS QUESTIONED

TA070751 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0500 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] Dear Listeners, in a recent chat with journalists Foreign Ministry Spokesman Nazmir Akiman has embellished and praised the so-called new proposals put forward by U.S. President Reagan in connection with the Middle East. According to Akiman these proposals constitute an important step toward securing a lasting peace in the region. Mr Akiman has condescended to say that these proposals have factors that might contribute to formulating a basis and a framework for negotiations to achieve a comprehensive and lasting peace in the Middle East.

Dear Listeners, Akiman's statement points out a dangerous development. As is known, the primary and fundamental necessity for solving the Middle East problem is a lasting solution to the Palestinian problem. It is an accepted fact by the realistic world that this can be achieved through the establishment of a sovereign and independent Palestinian state. Statements made by the Turkish Republic until now had been in this line. At a news conference held on 31 August, Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen stressed that the right of the Palestinians to freely determine their future (?cannot be taken away). Speaking at the Islamic Conference foreign ministers conference in Niamey, the capital of Niger, on 25 August, Turkmen said that the problem cannot be considered solved so long as the Palestinians do not establish their sovereign state. However, the statement made by the Foreign Ministry spokesman is not in this line at all because the so-called new proposals put forward by the U.S. President and broadcast to the world on American television clearly show that the Washington administration will not support the establishment of an independent Palestinian state in the West Bank and Gaza. There is talk of a so-called autonomy for the Palestinians living in these areas under the condition that they be dependent on Jordan.

Even if we cast aside all other aspects of Reagan's so-called peace plan, this aspect alone is sufficient to show that these proposals have nothing to do with a lasting solution to the problem. It is natural to expect that the foreign minister and the junta inform the public on this recent Foreign Ministry statement which might be considered a step backward in Turkey's Middle East policy, and in support of Israel.

Dear Listeners, certain circles, in order to portray this plan as positive, are pointing out that it has been rejected by Israel. Let us now pay attention to what Oktay Eksi has to say on the issue. In his article entitled "Is the Object Play or Peace?" in HURRIYET on 3 September, Eksi says: Israel's rejection does not mean that the issue is closed, because President Reagan did not sit down and draft this plan by himself. On the contrary, it is reported that this plan was announced after the U.S. administration consulted states it considers directly connected with the issue such as Israel, Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Jordan. This means that Menahem Begin and President Reagan had at least memorized their roles backstage before the play was put on. They had even completed the rehearsals, just as in connection with the Israeli occupation of Lebanon and the U.S. opposition to it, when it later became clear that the United States was aware of it beforehand.

CUMHURIYET ON DEALING WITH ARMENIAN TERRORISTS

["Window" column by Iihan Selcuk]

[Excerpts] For the first time Armenian terrorists attacked an army officer and achieved results. This bloody crime provoked immediate reaction at home. The papers gave expression to the nation's feelings with headlines such as "Curse Be Upon Them," "Our Officer's Blood Will Not Be Left on the Ground (But Will Be Avenged,)" "Another Armenian Cowardice," and "Cowardly People."

Every section of our community everywhere discussed this incident all day long. People did not confine their talk to the way Colonel Atilla was assassinated. They kept saying, "something has to be done."

What can be done? What is an effective and convincing prescription? One newspaper reported that "striking teams" were ready to hit back. Even if this could be implemented, it should be done in absolute secrecy. What sense is there in doing it so ostensibly? What is more, are we in a position to extend full protection to all our diplomats abroad? If we have trained elements in this field, why haven't we used them yet?

It seems to me that in this, as in other cases, we are motivated by our feelings. We are carrying our anger in our hands like a handgrenade. The danger of this bomb exploding at home is the most horrifying aspect of this situation. We would thus be helping our foreign enemies in an inadvertent manner. The press and the Turkish Radio and Television Network (TRT) will have to act very cautiously. They must seek solutions which are not based on sentimental publications.

It is high time we realized that Armenian terrorism is based on a wider background or on a stronger foundation than it appears to be. We have to discover the source of this band of criminals and ascertain their true aims. Such realistic approaches cannot be carried out through sentimentalism.

We now know various terror organizations by their reputations and even by their names. The most valid method to be employed now is to determine the nature of the attitude we should adopt toward the states offering these organizations a safe haven. Don't we know that in the recent past the United States roused the entire world for the survival of a single American citizen? Haven't we read in the papers that for the safety of one single Jew captured by the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), Israelis acted like sparrowhawks? Why should we bend our heads submissively before foreign countries which are responsible for protecting our diplomats, military attaches, and other personnel?

CZECHOSLAVAK TRADE DELEGATION -- A Czechoslovak trade delegation has arrived in Turkey to hold contacts on commercial and technical issues. The delegation today met with the administrators of the Turkish Union of Chambers. In a statement before the meeting, Turkish Union of Chambers Administrative Council Chairman Mehmet Yazar said that the volume of trade between Turkey and Czechoslovakia has been decreasing in recent years. He noted that the reasons for this decrease will be investigated and solutions will be sought to develop the volume of trade. In his turn, the head of the Czechoslovak trade delegation (Jaroslav Jachym), said that his delegation came to Turkey in a bid to develop bilateral trade and technical cooperation. SCHMIDT WELCOMES REAGAN MIDEAST INITIATIVE

[Text] Bonn, 8 Sep (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt stressed the Palestinian right to self-determination in the cabinet on Wednesday, and emphasized at the same time that Bonn believes that Israel has an inalienable right to security. Government spokesman Klaus Boelling said after the cabinet meeting that Schmidt described U.S. President Ronald Reagan's new Near East initiative as an "important new initiative" for peace in the Near East.

Reagan's concept, according to which Israel would return occupied areas for true peace, corresponds to the view long held by Bonn that a lasting peace can only be achieved "on the political foundations of a negotiated settlement between both sides." "The Federal Government expressly welcomes the U.S. view that the path to peace in the Near East cannot ignore the Palestinians," Boelling quoted the chancellor. This is also true of the Palestinian people's right to self-determination in the view of the Federal Government and all states in the EC.

SCHMIDT CHALLENGES OPPONENTS IN BUNDESTAG SPEECH

[Text] Bonn, 9 Sep (DPA) -- In his government declaration to the Bundestag, Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt challenged the opposition to introduce a constructive vote of no confidence if it wants to take over the government. The chancellor said that he himself will not introduce such a vote, and he also has no intention of "juggling" with a so-called minority government.

He also challenged opposition leader Helmut Kohl to call for new elections in the event of a government takeover to gain legitimacy from the voters. Turning to the FDP coalition partner, Schmidt added that the venture of changing to a different policy also requires legitimacy through the voter.

Brandt on Coalition Survival

[Excerpt] Bonn, 8 Sep (DPA) -- SPD Chairman Willy Brandt has again expressed doubts about the survival of the Bonn SPD/FDP coalition. However, he pleaded for an attempt to keep it intact by concentrating on specific issues, with an employment policy receiving priority. "I would be in favor of putting the coalition ship on a straight course," he said today. But he was not sure that the coalition would continue.

No Coalition Break

DW080857 Hamburg ARD Television Network in German 1800 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Correspondent Albrecht Reinhardt dispatch]

[Excerpt] Bonn -- When the SPD Bundestag deputies convened for their first faction meeting today, they hoped to gain some idea as to the durability of the coalition. Most Bundestag deputies followed the debate only via radio and television reportage.

Bundestag floorleader Wehner came up with a surprise. He read his colleagues a statement by his FDP counterpart Mischnick. The drift of the statement is that the liberals will fulfill their obligations in the coalition. This lessened the tension, although no one is overrating the gesture by the FDP partner. Mischnick did not, after all, say for how long and under what conditions these obligations would be met.

[Text] Bonn, 8 Sep (DPA) -- Austrian Federal President Kirchschlaeger, who is on a state visit to the FRG, ended his visit to Bonn on Wednesday and has flown on to Bremen. He was bid farewell with military honors by Federal President Carstens. In the evening, the Austrian statesman intends to fly on to Munich.

WISCHNEWSKI REPORTEDLY TO MEET WITH HONECKER

[Text] Bonn, 8 Sep (DPA) -- Bonn government sources reported today that a meeting has evidently been arranged in East Berlin next Monday between the minister of state in the Federal Chancellor's Office, Hans-Juergen Wischnewski, and Erich Honecker, chairman of the GDR Council of State. Wischnewski will be attending the opening of an FRG exhibition in East Berlin. After talks with GDR politicians, he will visit Dresden and Leipzig.

The state of intra-German relations and a possible visit by Honecker to the Federal Republic will be the likely topics of Wischnewski's talk with the SED chief. Bonn government circles do not believe that the meeting will lead to much movement in intra-German relations. At the Leipizig fair, Honecker left it open as to whether he will accept Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's invitation to visit the FRG this year.

AEG DENIES REPORT ON TURBINE SUPPLY TO USSR

[Excerpt] Frankfurt, 8 Sep (DPA) -- The AEG group today denied a report that AEG-Kanis (Essen) will deliver two turbines this month for the Soviet natural gas pipeline which will stretch from western Siberia to Western Europe. An AEG-Telefunken spokesman said in Frankfurt that the executive board has not yet reached a decision on this matter.

MINISTER HOPES PIPELINE VIEWS WILL 'CONVERGE'

LD081756 Hamburg DPA in German 1656 GMT 8 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn/Bremen, 8 Sep (DPA) -- Peter Corterier (SPD), minister of state in the Foreign Ministry, today expressed the hope that views concerning the controversy with the United States on the European-Soviet gas pipeline deal will soon converge.

He told the Carl-Schurz society in Bremen that intensive talks have recently taken place with the Americans. There is agreement with the U.S. Government that East-West trade credits should not be officially subsidized.

He is concerned that the development put into motion by the U.S. sanctions against the European-Soviet deal could harm U.S.-European economic relations. Regarding U.S. fears that the deal will make Europe dependent on the Soviet Union, Corterier said that since the Soviet natural gas will be fed into a European grid, sudden stoppages in deliveries can be absorbed.

"In my view, it is better to consume Soviet gas now instead of using up our reserves. Otherwise, at a later date we may really have to depend on Soviet gas."

OFFICIAL SOURCES ON U.S. PIPELINE REALISM

NC081850 Paris AFP in English 1737 GMT 8 Sep 82

[Excerpts] Paris, Sept 8 (AFP) -- French Government sources here today congratulated the United States for its "realism" in softening its sanctions against a French firm for breaking the U.S. [word indistinct] on supplying equipment for the Soviet gas pipeline to Europe.

Earlier in the day, Washington [word indistinct] to limit its sanctions against the firm, Dresser-France, to equipment and technology relating to the exploration, production, transport and refining of oil.

Dresser-France, [word indistinct] owned affiliate of the U.S. Dresser Industries, last month became the first firm to break the U.S. embargo on the use of American technology in the pipeline project.

The U.S. response was a ban on the transfer of all U.S. technology and equipment to Dresser-France and to the French group Creusot-Loire, which also supplied parts for the compressors.

Later, when it became clear that British, Italian and West German firms were also going to defy the U.S. embargo, Washington modified its sanctions against [word indistinct] in those countries to include only energy technology.

The French Government sources said the United States had taken note of the "great coherence" of Western European countries in their decision to go ahead with pipeline contracts.

The European Economic Community (EEC) in particular had challenged Washington's legal right to make European firms toe its line on the pipeline embargo.

The affair threatened to blow up into a trans-Atlantic storm until Washington began to soften its stand.

But trade unions represented at Dresser-France noted that the change in the U.S. sanctions made little practical difference, since 90 percent of the firm's activities have to do with the oil industry.

They said Dresser-France might still therefore have to close down within two months if it remained cut off from its mother-firm in the United States. And Washington has not yet announced any softening of its sanctions against Creusot-Loire.

PLO CHIEF 'ARAFAT 'MAY' MEET COLOMBO NEXT WEEK

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 8 -- Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasir 'Arafat may well meet with Italian diplomatic chief Emilio Colombo when he attends the session of the Interparliamentary Union scheduled here next week, Christian Democrat veteran and former Italian premier, Giulio Andreotti, told reporters today.

Andreotti will be chairing the session. He refused to emerge from the cocoon of diplomatic language when asked about the Rome government's future attitude to the PLO. Asked if Rome would officially recognise the organization, Andreotti, who has held no government post since he resigned as premier in 1979, said: "Now, let's talk about the conference. 'Arafat is coming to the conference as a very welcome member of this session."

Andreotti also reminded his listeners that the Palestinian National Council of which 'Arafat is a member has always taken part in the work of the Interparliamentary Union.

Another leading Christian Democrat Luigi Granelli, an expert in international affairs, told the reporters that 'Arafat's presence in Rome was a "good step for arriving at recognition of the Palestinian people's political reality."

DALLA CHIESA'S SON ACCUSES DC IN FATHER'S DEATH

AU080908 Rome ANSA in English 0820 GMT 8 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 8 -- The people who ordered the slaying of Palermo's prefect, General Carlo Alberto Dalla Chiesa, killed with his second wife in an ambush in the Sicilian capital Friday, should be sought "in the Sicilian Christian Democrat Party", the general's son charged here today in an explosive newspaper interview.

Interviewed for today's edition of the Rome daily, LA REPUBBLICA, by leading journalist Giorgio Bocca, Nando Dalla Chiesa said his father even appealed to the Christian Democrat Party's leadership in an attempt to reduce the split with the local Christian Democrats.

"As soon as he arrived in Palermo, he understood, he felt that part of the Christian Democrat Party not only was not helping him, but was even against him," the younger Dalla Chiesa said. "I think my father also took steps with the Christian Democrat leadership where he could count on good friends to heal the split, but I do not know if he was successful".

Nando Dalla Chiesa also charged that his father was slain because he stated publicly that the mafia is in fact a reality that mixes "gangsterism with politics". And, in one significant, but disconcerting observation, the dead general's son reported that, on arriving in Palermo, his father discovered that some of the employees in the prefect's office were relations of incriminated mafia figures.

Commenting on the interview later today, Sicily's Christian Democrat Regional President Mario d'Acquisto termed Nando Dalla Chiesa's charges as "an act of intolerable ferocity".

Another leading Sicilian Christian Democrat Vito Ciancimino, whom internationally known author Leonardon Sciascia and many others have accused of connivance with the mafia, said that "if Nando Dalla Chiesa has proofs, he should have spoken to the Public Prosecutor's Office, not a journalist".

Palermo's Mayor Nello Martellucci, a Christian Democrat who has always denied that the mafia is present in the city, blamed the son's accusations on General Dalla Chiesa's death, but also charged him with "extremism".

Former Premier Giulio Andreotti also told reporters that the younger Dalla Chiesa's claims were a "wicked action explicable only by the emotion of the moment".

But union leaders came out behind the general's son, a highly regarded sociologist whose works include one on the mafia. Union sources announced that the three major labor federations are planning a demonstration and congress in Palermo next month to fill in a strategy for the battle against the mafia.

CHAMBER APPROVES NEW ANTI-MAFIA LEGISLATION

[Excerpts] (ANSA) -- Palermo, Sicily, September 8 -- New anti-mafia legislation was approved by the Rome lower house's interior and justice commissions in joint session Tuesday evening by 57 ayes, three nays, and six abstentions.

The 44 clauses are designed to combat all of the various species of organized crime in Italy -- the mafia in Sicily, the camorra in Naples, and the n'drangheta in Calabria, not to mention political terrorism.

The new bill should receive final approval in the Senate on Friday. The two new crimes defined in the wording are mafia association and illegal competition imposed by threats and violence. Both crimes refer to the mafia tactic of eliminating the competition of honest businessmen by threats and intimidation -- or simply by physical liquidation.

Under the bill, and in recognition of Dalla Chiesa's path to the heart of the mafia, investigations into the estate of mafia suspects can be extended to their relations and family and to anyone who has done business with them in the last five years.

Another clause lays down that banks, the post office and public and private credit institutes are obliged to supply the magistrature with any information they request on mafia suspects. Moreover, the estate of mafia suspects may be confiscated and, if a mafia suspect is exiled to another part of the country away from his habitual residence, his goods may be seized if he cannot demonstrate the legitimacy of their provenance.

Other measures against exiled mafia suspects or proven mafia figures deny them the right to obtain any license for commercial activities, construction contacts, or public tenders.

Yet other clauses require special surveillance measures at building sites, which mafia bombs have often destroyed in order to exclude non-mafia construction firms from the field.

As regards sub-contracts for public works, these like full public contracts, will now have to be approved and authorized by the public administration. Other clauses give magistrates investigating the mafia ample powers to bug telephone and telegraph lines and, in a blow against the sewn lips that have long protected the mafia, new measures have been ordered to protect witnesses prepared to testify in trial against the mafia.

PSOE GOVERNMENT WOULD REVISE ACCORDS WITH U.S.

PM071321 Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 1 Sep 82 p 11

[M.B. report]

[Excerpt] Madrid -- In the event of achieving a parliamentary majority following the coming general election, the Spanish Socialist Workers Party (PSOE) will demand the revision of the new agreement on friendship, defense and cooperation signed by the Calvo-Sotelo government and the Reagan administration in those aspects relating to Spain's joining NATO. This agreement has been paralyzed following the dissolution of the general Cortes, since it requires ratification by the two legislative chambers for its entry into force.

Socialist International Relations Chief Elena Flores pointed out in statements to this newspaper that her party's stance on the military agreements with the United States remains unchanged and was already expressed on the occasion of the parliamentary debate on Spain's joining NATO. On that occasion the Socialist spokesmen declared themselves in favor of agreements with the United States "under conditions of equality and with the aim of not changing the balance of forces existing between the two blocs." In Flores' opinion, "what we know of the new agreement makes us assess it critically, since it lowers the agreements' status from treaty to agreement and falls within the context of the Atlanticist option adopted unilaterally by Calvo-Sotelo's cabinet."

"Moreover," the Socialist leader continued, "negative aspects persist, such as lack of control over the mooring of ships on our coasts and lack of guarantees in the control over the transportation of nuclear weapons, although the supervision of air traffic is increased." These reasons, combined with the fact that the agreement negotiated by the Union of the Democratic Center (UCD) government falls within the context of joining NATO, which the PSOE condemns until a national referendum is held, will lead this party, if it secures a parliamentary majority, to request of the U.S. administration the revision of those aspects of the agreement signed with the UCD government not in keeping with the viewpoints upheld by the PSOE.

DEMOCRATIC LIBERALS ON POSSIBLE COALITIONS

PM081139 Barcelona LA VANGUARDIA in Spanish 4 Sep 82 p 7

[Excerpts] Madrid -- The assembly of promoters of the Democratic Liberal Party [PDL], chaired by Garrigues Walker, decided yesterday that the party should run in the election without losing its own identity. Hence there would be no pact with the Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] if it is confined to the inclusion of liberal names on the centrist lists.

At the meeting there were intensive debates on the issue of coalitions. Finally, it was decided that the PDL should run in the election without losing its identity. Full powers are delegated to Antonio Garrigues Walker on condition that any electoral pact must respect the Liberals' identity. At the meeting there were voices in favor of a coalition with the Popular Alliance. Another sector declared itself in favor of a pact with the UCD, and there were even those who pointed out the desirability of running alone in the election.

Garrigues emphasized that he is in favor of securing a coalition of the Democratic and Social Center, the UCD and the Liberals to offer the electorate a genuine center option. "I believe that over the next few days there should be a dialogue among the three parties with the aim of reaching some kind of agreement. I personally do not share Suarez' opinion of running alone." Garrigues stated that the PDL will attempt to run in the 52 constituencies. After asserting that the prospects of an alliance with the UCD are serious and sound, Garrigues stressed that the final decision on the conclusion of alliances or agreements "should not be postponed more than 48 hours."

ROLANDHIS REPLIES TO CRITICS OF UN STANCE

[Text] Foreign Minister Rolandhis stated that the reasons for the postponement of the discussion of Cyprus' recourse to the United Nations are the same that were presented in the joint Athens-Nicosia communique dated 4 September. Rolandhis added that the people who cite the existence of other reasons, in reality dispute the credibility of both the Greek and Cyprus Governments. The foreign minister commented upon the speculative statements which are published in Greek and Cypriot newspapers in connection with the reasons which led to the postponement of the discussion of the Cyprus recrouse until March 1983.

Rolandhis mentioned that the claim that the postponement is allegedly due to the inclusion of this issue in the moratorium between Greece and Turkey is entirely unfounded. Equally unfounded, he said, are claims that the postponement is due to an agreement during the Athens consultations of 3 and 4 September 1982, or to suggestions by one or the other side, or to covert efforts for the cancellation of the recourse, or to reasons other than those mentioned in the joint communique.

It is truly surprising, he said, that the furor over the issue of the recourse is mainly being caused by those circles which have always stressed the need for close cooperation between Athens and Nicosia. This is happening precisely at the time when a joint decision has been made within the framework of sincere cooperation between the two governments.

MORE ARMENIAN TERRORISTS ARRIVE FROM LEBANON

NC090642 Istanbul MILLIYET in Turkish 6 Sep 82 p 11

[Text] Lefkosa [Nicosia] AKAJANS -- It has been reported that 50 more Armenian terrorists, who left Beirut with Palestinian guerrillas destined for Algeria, have come to stay in the Greek Cypriot sector of Cyprus, raising the number of Armenian terrorists in southern Cyprus to 300.

It is reported that this latest group arrived at the Larnaca port on 31 August on board the ship, "Sol Georgios". The Palestinians were flown from here to Algeria, while the 50 Armenian terrorists were clad in Greek National Guard uniforms and taken to an unknown destination.

BAYRAK RADIO ON TURKISH ANARCHISTS IN SOUTH

TA071023 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 0900 GMT 7 Sep 82

[Text] President Rauf Denktas has said that the transformation of the south into a nest of anarchy by the Greek Cypriot administration will create grave consequences. Denktas replied to the Greek Cypriot announcement that there are some 400 anarchists in the south who have escaped from Turkey and who have requested asylum. Denktas said that this issue was as important and vital as the Armenian camps. He added: The granting of political asylum by the Greek Cypriot administration to anarachists who have escaped from Turkey is very closely linked to the security of the Turkish Cypriots. If they transform the south into a nest of anarchy, grave consequences might ensue. The Greek Cypriot administration should stop playing with fire.

PAPANDREOU SPEAKS ON LOCAL, INTERNATIONAL ISSUES

NC081547 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1400 GMT 8 Sep 82

[Text] Greece is in the stage of a live socialist course for change in a way which is peaceful, democratic and without aggavation. This signifies that democracy has ripened in our country. This was stressed by Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou in today's special, important address to the socialist group of the European Parliament, the work of which is being continued in Athens.

In presenting the Greek prime minister to the conferees, the chairman of the socialist group, former Belgian Minister (Ernest Glynn), said that in the eyes of all European democrats and socialists, Andreas Papandreou is the man who fought all the attempts and the conspiracies to undermine democracy in his country. Today, through many difficulties, he leads Greece on the path of success, with the support of the European socialists.

In addressing the socialist group, the prime minister analyzed the strength of the European Community and the characteristics of the Greek economy, such as industrial underdevelopment and low productivity -- the characteristics that define the Greek position as it is outlined in the aide memoire that has been submitted to the EEC. The prime minister specifically said: With good faith and will, we closely examine the possibilities for a special relation when we draw up the repercussions created by the entry of a country like ours into a group of industrially developed countries like the EEC.

In analyzing the present world economic crisis, the prime minister pointed out that it is the result of the failure of capitalism and the existing socialism to positively face the problems that amassed after the building up of Europe at the end of the Second World War. He proposed: Perhaps we must proceed along a third path, the path of democratic socialism with basic institutional changes, in order to return to the path of development. Greece and France are holding experiments toward this path. Prime Minister Papandreou characterized detente, disarmament and peace as the main goal of the present time, and stressed that every political action should contribute to blunting the East-West tension.

In a special reference to the national issue, the prime minister pointed out the occupation by Turkish troops of a great part of the Cyprus territory. With regard to our relations with Turkey, he said that despite the fact that we are going through a period of detente, moratorium, our country remains the only one which is threatened by another NATO country.

In concluding, the prime minister said that our history is such that it makes us sensitive to the struggle of all peoples for their independence. This is why we support the Palestinian people's struggle in establishing their own state so that peace may prevail in the Middle East.

Answers Questions

NC08139 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1700 GMT 8 Sep 82

[Text] After today's address to the socialist group of the European Parliament, Prime Minister Papandreou answered questions by socialist Europarliamentarians and said, among other things, that the time has come for all of us to think about the possibility of a true rapprochment between East and West Europe; that when we refer to North and South relations we must mean not only relations between Europe and Africa but also Northern and Southern Europe; that the issue of nuclear weapons in Greece is a matter exclusively for the Greek Government and that it is not subject to negotiations; and that Greece hopes that its efforts for the denuclearization of the Balkans will succeed and it is working very hard in this direction.

KKE'S FLORAKIS HOLDS PRESS CONFERENCE 7 SEP

[Text] "There will be a change in Greece regardless of whether or not this is favored by some political forces, because this need originates from the very acute problems that await solution." This optimistic and realistic KKE message, which is founded scientifically and completely on the Central Committee positions for the 11th KKE congress, was stressed by Secretary General Comrade Kharilaos Florakis during a press conference yesterday at the King Palace Hotel [in Athens]. Comrade Florakis presented to Greek and foreign press correspondents the basic points of this important document, and particularly stressed the following:

The Communists will do everything they can to rally together the broadest masses of change around the goals of change and to struggle for the realization of these goals. Our ambition, Comrade Florakis added, is that these goals should form the basis for the program of a government of real change, a government which will depend on all the forces of change. Referring particularly to the dialogue prior to the congress, he pointed out the deeply democratic character of the dialogue which is combined with the deliberate encouragement of the broad people's masses during the entire procedure of discussion and the enriching of the positions.

Analyzing the KKE attitude toward the PASOK government and its policy, Comrade Florakis pointed out that his party's criticism does not refer to the tempo or the tactics that are being followed in order to promote change but stems from the conclusion that the government policy does not open the road toward real change. He added: "However, this does not mean that we are heading toward a frontal confrontation with PASOK." Answering questions by newsmen, Florakis stressed the following: We do not say: What is the difference between Andreas [Papandreou] or Averof. We stay away from that kind of thinking because it does not correspond to reality. But the problem is not here. Today some quarters say: You go either with the government or with the rightwing. However, we propose something different. We propose a program of goals for real change. We invite the other democratic forces to come to an agreement with us on a program so that we may all proceed together toward the formation of a democratic government which will be based on all the forces of change.

In order to participate in a government, we must agree on a program. This is the first thing to be done, because nothing can be done without it. And this program must be the minimum and must open the road toward change. On the basis of this, we are prepared to participate in or even support a democratic government. We believe that as a result of the existing problems and the corelation of forces in Greece, no self-sustained government can open the road toward real change. The need for cooperation which we declared during the election campaign is being confirmed today by life.

Answering other questions, the Central Committee secretary general stressed the following: The KKE asks for the revision of the constitution so that the super powers of the president of the republic may be withdrawn and also the articles of the Constitution which provide foreign capital with great privileges, as well as a series of other articles, be abolished. After the Zionists' criminal invasion of Lebanon and the withdrawal of the Palestinian fighters from Beirut, a new situation has emerged. Yasir 'Arafat and others are optimistic. We share this optimism from the view that whether the imperialists want it or not, one day the Palestinian problem will be solved. It may pass through many phases and difficulties, but it is inevitable. The Americans have already begun to acknowledge it; the "solution" they are offering to the Palestinian problem with the known Reagan plan is another thing. If the Greek Government wants to offer its good services or to mediate in the Palestinian issue, this could be directed in only one way according to the KKE view: toward finding a fair solution to the problem on the basis of establishing an independent Palestinian state.

Former governments have used profusely, as we would say, the policy and tactics of discrimination against the KKE. The PASOK government proceeds on the same line with regard to our party. We truly cannot understand why. The previous governments did not benefit from this. The "benefits" they had are well known. Why then should the PASOK government have better benefits, particularly when it declares in all tones change, equality of rights, defense of democratic freedoms and equality of rights and so forth?

MINISTRY STRESSES DETENTE POLICY WITH GREECE

[Text] Ankara 8 Sep (AA) -- Turkey attaches great importance to pursue a policy of detente with Greece, Foreign Ministry spokesman Mr Akiman said today.

Greek Government spokesman yesterday denied Greek press reports that Turkish planes violate Greek airspace in spite of moratorium agreed upon. Akiman, confirming the statement of his Greek counterpart, said Turkish war planes follow the rules of CHICAO and ICAO, and violation of Greek airspace is out of question.

Turkey undoubtedly attaches great importance to pursue a policy of detente with Greece, he added.

TRANSPORTATION PROTOCOL WITH IRAN SIGNED

TA082105 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 8 Sep 82

[Text] The Turkish-Iranian joint transportation committee meeting has ended in Tehran. A protocol on the meeting has been signed.

The protocol was signed by Orhan Buldac, Transportation Ministry deputy under secretary, on behalf of Turkey and by Iranian Deputy Minister of Roads and Transport (Karbasian) on behalf of Iran. The protocol envisages the further development of transportation cooperation between the two countries. According to the protocol, railway transportation between Turkey and Iran will be increased and the fees charged by the two countries' railway corporations will be mutually lowered significantly. Moreover, transit transportation to Iran via Turkey will be increased and 1.5 million tons of cargo will be transported during the coming year. In the protocol it was also agreed that the Gurbulak and Bazargan border checkpoints will be operated on a 24-hour basis and Turkish drivers' be provided security enabling them at the same time to benefit from all facilities.

MINISTRY DECLARES PERSIAN GULF DANGER AREA

[Text] Ankara, 8 Sep (AA) -- Ministry of Public Transport defined Persian Gulf as danger area and warned all shipping firms to take responsibility in sending ships to that area.

Iraq has declared that all ships carrying goods to Iran and bringing oil from this country will be considered as "enemy." The ministry warned that Persian Gulf area, especially Iranian, is within the range of Iraqi war planes and therefore is dangerous.

FRENCHMAN ACCUSED OF BEING ARMENIAN SPY

NC081735 Istanbul GUNAYDIN in Turkish 4 Sep 82 p 4

[Text] A Frenchman spying for the Armenians has been captured in Istanbul. The security forces have also seized important documents and obtained important information. It is reported that the French spy has been detained. This spy, who was captured on 10 August, is named Lucien Reboul, aged 41.

This Frenchman, who is believed to have entered Turkey in the guise of a tourist, has close connections with the Armenians.

It is reported that the security forces have investigated the ties between Reboul and Armenian terrorist organizations and also the possibility of his presence in Turkey being connected with Armenian militant acts.

This Frenchman was found to be in possession of an extremely sophisticated wireless set equipped with a 2.75-meter aerial operating on 120 channels. He was first arrested for breaking the wireless law, but upon further investigation, it was discovered that his father-in-law is an Armenian. It is reported that he will be taken to court in the next few days.

In the meantime, the French press has launched a campaign for this Frenchman's release. The papers say: "The Turks have accused a Frenchman of spying," and maintain that Reboul is an amateur wireless operator.

LABOR CONFEDERATION SCORES DRAFT CONSTITUTION

[Text] Ankara, 8 Sep (AA) -- "We have not lost hope, yet", declared Mr Sevket Yilmaz, leader of Turkish Labour Confederation, opening the conference on the draft constitution in Ankara. In his opening speech Mr Yilmaz said democracy was the rule of majority, and asked whether Turkey would be ruled by the majority or by a handful of business tycoons?

With this draft, if adopted as it is, Turkey will not have a sound democracy, and the future will be dim. We believe the errors will be corrected. Rights and freedoms will be restored during the last stage. "We have not given up hope", he said.

"TURK-IS (confederation) represents free unionism. All we demand is freedom, peace and bread", he said and went on: "What we ask is respect for the rights and freedoms of the workers. And we shall always pursue that they are respected. Unionism means at the same time 'representation." If we are denied these rights, we can take off our ties, put on overalls and tour all 67 provinces for political reasons. "

Mr Kaya Ozdemir, taking the stand after Yilmaz, said that Turkish Employers Union who tried for years to entice political parties to curb the rights of workers but failed, seems now to have persuaded the drifting committee.

He continued: "Freedoms are not limitless. What is important here is the limit of freedoms. In the draft, limitations have become rules and freedoms exceptions."

He drew attention to the fact that all international conventions concerning human rights were undersigned by Turkey. "If the right to strike, right of collective bargaining are denied, no one can talk of free unionism," he said.

COMMANDER ADDRESSES NATO CEREMONY IN IZMIR

TA081718 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 8 Sep 82

[Text] The 30th anniversary of the establishment of NATO's Southeast European Allied Ground Forces Command was marked with ceremonies in Izmir today. In the ceremony, the history of the command was read first. Then NATO Southeast European Allied Ground Forces Commander Gen Sedat Guneral inspected the honor guards.

In a speech at the ceremony Guneral said that Turkey, which is within the command's areas of responsibility, is the only NATO country against a threat directed toward the Middle East and the Mediterranean. He said: No friend or enemy war plan concerning this region can be developed or implemented without taking into account all of Turkey's potential.

Noting that NATO is a defense and not an attack organization, Guneral said that NATO's main philosophy consists of playing a deterrent role against a possible attack through mutual solidarity among its members and, failing that, meeting such an attack with a joint defense. Pointing out that NATO and its elements are formed by the countreis' desire and determination to live freely, General Guneral noted that the cost of this ideal is quite high and added: However, no matter how high this cost, it is not as high as living in bondage. This is why our countries, which have adopted the honorable and free living of their citizens as an ideal, have not hesitated in the past 30 years to pay this price.

Guneral recalled that his command is charged with defending one of the most strategically critical regions in the world and continued: The events in the Middle East have rendered this region more unstable and sensitive than ever. Unlike Central Europe, where a relative balance and stability has been secured, it cannot be claimed that bigger clashes will not erupt in this region at any time.

Guneral noted that no one must doubt that, as in the past, his command will continue to fulfill its duties in the best manner, explaining that certain existing shortcomings must be eliminated in order to fulfill these duties perfectly. He said: The most important of our problems, which are well known by other NATO countries and high NATO commands, is the supply of our forces' weapons and needs. Despite the fact that work is being done to resolve it, this aspect has begun to surpass our regional possibilities. Increased contribution by our allies to our forces is essential for the execution of such a sacred goal as joint defense. I have no doubt that, as in the past, all the relevant parties will continue to display this necessary interest and effort to solve our problems and help us.

Guneral added that as long as the world continues to be endangered by the known threat, NATO will pepetuate its existence as the protector of millions of people who are determined to live freely and that the existence of NATO will provide support for millions of people who aim to live freely.

The ceremony ended with a military parade. Meanwhile, Turkish Air Force planes flew over the NATO headquarters. National security Council member Ground Forces Commander Gen Nurettin Ersin, NATO South European Allied Forces Commander Adm William Crowe, 1st Army Commander Gen Haydar Saltik, 2d Army Commander Gen Mehmet Buyruk, other generals and admirals and high-ranking officers attended the ceremony.

TCP ISSUES STATEMENT ON EVREN'S VOTCP REMARKS

TA081122 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 8 Sep 82

[Turkish Communist Party Central Committee statement of 6 Sep 1982 -- read by announcer]

[Text] Citizens, General Evren addressed the public in Afyon on 29 August. He directly attacked our party. His speech was broadcast on the state radio and television and was published in newspapers. Evren attacked the Turkish Communist Party [TCP]. He tried to defend the junta. Let us look at concrete facts: From the beginning our party stressed the junta's reactionary character. It told our people that a constitution imposed by the junta would be one fitting an oppressive, antidemocratic and military dictatorship.

In his speech, Evren did nothing but confirm these truths. He quoted passages from our broadcasts against the junta's administration. Yes, we are opposed to the domestic and foreign policies of the junta's administration. The junta defends the interests of a handful of monopolists, in utter contradiction of our people's and the wide working masses' interests, our national interests. It obeys the orders of the NATO chiefs and of the United States and pursues hypocritical policies. On one hand it tries to appear as a friend of the Arab peoples and on the other it announced only yesterday through the Foreign Ministry spokesman that it support Reagan's plan, which aims at strengthening U.S. hegemony in the Middle East based on Israel.

The TCP has been waging a struggle for the past 62 years against imperialism, reactionism and exploitation. The TCP is a more national party than any bourgeois party has been or will ever be. If the broad masses share the TCP's views today about the future of the regime and about the junta's constitution, that shows that the TCP defends our people's interests and all national interests and that the junta's constitution is really anti-people and antinational.

The junta is in a panic. Widespread reactions are being heard from the people. The junta has not been able to silence them. Our people have begun to defend their constitutional rights. Even members of the Consultative Assembly, which was appointed by the junta, are opposing the constitution. The tension in the army is growing. How can it not? Pentagon and NATO generals have turned our country into a busy inn from Edirne to Kars. On the other hand, even certain newspapers and foreign radios report that there will be changes in the government and in the National Security Council.

The issue of the constitution has become a mirror reflecting all the conflicts. The junta is trying to divide and frighten the progressive forces using the constitution as a bogeyman. It is frightening the opponents of the constitution by accusing them of following the TCP. This will not help.

The junta dare not tell the people the truth. In fact, Evren could not distort the TCP policies this time because the public knows our party's views about the constitution. He complained that the people constantly listen to the Voice of the Turkish Communist Party and Our Radio.

Evren is trying to portray the widespread resistence movement against the junta's constitution as the result of the influence of foreign forces. This is useless. The resistence is within the country. Furthermore, the progressive politicians, unionists, scientists and artists, of whom our people are proud, have been stripped of their citizenship rights and expelled from the country. These people organize protest activities, the roots of which are also inside the country.

Evren's junta cannot take even one step without the permission of NATO or the IMF. It defends U.S. imperialism. The TCP is opposed to the trampling of our national dignity by the junta.

Our people want labor, bread, peace, freedom, national independence and democratic constitution. First, the doors of the dungeons must be opened. Political parties must be granted freedom. Syndical activities must be free. The Turkish Radio and Television must make its microphone available to everybody. Let us see the junta do all this if it is not afraid of the people.

The TCP calls on all the democratic forces to beware of the junta's game of "divide and conquer" and not to be taken in by it. Let us be one fist in the constitutional referendum. Let us not let the junta's constitution pass. The TCP supports all the forces opposing this constitution and wanting a democratic constitution. The TCP calls on all our citizens to say no to the junta's constitution and to raise their voices for a referendum in democratic conditions.

[signed] TCP Central Committee, 6 September 1982.

ANGOLAN INDUSTRY MINISTER MEETS WITH BALSEMAO

AB081154 Luanda ANGOP in French 1035 GMT 8 Sep 82

[Text] Lisbon, 8 Sep (ANGOP) -- Portuguese Prime Minister Pinto Balsemao last night received at his Lisbon official residence Angolan Industry Minister Bento Ribeiro, who is currently on an official visit to Portugal at the invitation of his Portuguese counterpart, Baiao Horta.

The Angolan minister and his delegation were also received at a lunch yesterday by Portuguese Foreign Minister Basco Luis Caldeira Coelho Futscher Pereira.

Speaking on the purpose of his visit, Bento Ribeiro said that although the economic relations between the two countries have become quite important, there are still political aspects that require consideration.

Meanwhile, Angolan-Portuguese talks on industrial cooperation started late yesterday morning in the Portuguese capital. The two delegations will essentially seek to translate into fact the cooperation agreement signed between the two governments on the occasion of the visit made to Angola last April by the Portuguese head of state.

Among other functions, the Angolan delegation yesterday visited the Institute for Tropical Research in Lisbon and its facilities. The Angolan minister had talks with Frederico da Cunha, chairman of the institute's management board, who informed him that the institute is prepared to continue its cooperation with Angola.

It must be recalled that the institute assisted the Angolan Ministry of Industry in the creation of the Angolan soap factory inaugurated this year in Huambo.

NOTHING FURTHER ON POSSIBLE SUBMARINE SIGHTING

LD060952 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0933 GMT 6 Sep 82

[By Joe Quinn, PA staff reporter]

[Text] No further trace has been found of a possible "intruder" submarine detected on Saturday near Britain's top-secret Clyde submarine base.

The Ministry of Defence said a helicopter search was expected to be called off later today.

The alert was raised when a navy Sea King helicopter form Prestwick, Ayrshire, "in the course of naval operations," made a sonar contact which the ministry is treating as a "possible intruder submarine" -- although it did say the object could be no more than a shoal of fish.

Other Sea Kings from Prestwick and Culdrose in Cornwall joined the hunt, as well as an RAF Nimrod reconnaissance plane.

The object was detected in the inner Clyde estuary -- an area close to both Britain's Polaris base at Faslane and the U.S. Polaris base at the Holy Loch.

The ministry said today: "So far there has been no further contact. It could have been an intruder submarine, and it could have been a shoal of fish. This happens about two or three times a year."

AL-QADHDHAFI, KREISKY TO TALK DURING STOPOVER

AU100915 Vienna Domestic Service in German 0900 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] Libyan revolution leader Al-Qadhdhafi will arrive at the Vienna Schwechat Airport for a stopover in the early afternoon today and will have a talk with Chancellor Kreisky. Al-Qadhdhafi has been in Prague. According to the Libyan diplomatic mission, Al-Qadhdhafi may proceed from here to Bulgaria and Romania. He has also received an invitation from Polish party and Government chief Jaruzelski to pay a friendship visit to Warsaw. It may well be that all the legs of Al-Qadhdhafi's trip are designed to prepare for a visit to Moscow.

U.S. SPOKESMAN DISCUSSES TIGHTER REFUGEE POLICY

[Georg Possanner dispatch: "U.S. Warning to Asylum Country Austria: Refugee Policy Too Liberal"]

[Text] Washington -- The Reagan administration intends to tighten its policy of admitting refugees: it will soon inform Vienna that Austria, should it continue to grant asylum to a growing number of refugees from East Europe, cannot assume that they will be "automatically" taken over by the United States as was done in the case of Poland. In a talk with DIE PRESSE, Eugene Douglas, the U.S. President's coordinator for refugee affairs, called Austria's asylum policy "no longer just liberal, but permissive," as compared with that of Switzerland and Sweden.

"If one has to deal with a growing number of refugees who leave their country because of the failure of the Communist economic system and who for that reason are granted asylum in Austria, Vienna should not in principle assume that we will take over the burden on short notice," says Special Ambassador Eugene Douglas, defining the refugee policy of the U.S. administration. "Poland cannot be regarded as an example, but merely as a special arrangement made for a special case."

In Romania a tough winter lies ahead, as well as in some other East European countries, he said, and quite a few people will now "scrape together their last jewelry so as to get to Italy and Austria via Yugoslavia using bribery." Austria is certainly no police state and has open borders, he added, but its policy as a primary country of asylum is unproblematic only inasmuch as the coordination with those third countries which finally accept the refugees functions smoothly.

"The United States is accepting more refugees than all other countries -- this year the number accepted is 100,000," Douglas says, demonstrating Washington's endeavors. "We have spent $1.8 billion on this. But one thing is clear: The United States is not the ultimate way out, the country which accepts all those who are not wanted by others."

Douglas is not prepared to suggest any concrete proposals as to what Austria should do now; for example, closing its borders or signing an agreement with Yugoslavia providing for the return of refugees. "It is not for me to give any advice to the Austrian Government, let alone criticize it." But Reagan's refugee coordinator leaves no doubt about how he intends to present the problem in the very near future to Congress and the White House.

First: every single case must be examined regarding its worthiness in line with the U.S. regulations for admitting refugees -- economic cases have no chance.

Second: it must be made clear to Austria that although it looks nice to pursue an open door asylum policy, such a policy does not automatically guarantee that refugees can be shoved off on the United States.

Third: Austria should coordinate its policy more closely with the United States, and in the discussion it should be prepared as often as not to hear a frank or even harsh word.

In this context, Douglas mentioned that since October last year, the United States has granted immigration visas to 5,911 Polish refugees from Austria, and expressed the hope that an approximately equal quota will be authorized for the 1983 [as published] fiscal year.

Kreisky: We Will Maintain Our Policy

(Special DIE PRESSE report by "P.M.") Vienna -- On Wednesday, Chancellor Kreisky reacted in a very reserved manner to the U.S. hints. Austria, he said, won recognition all over the world for its asylum policy during the Hungarian and CSSR crises, and this policy has also been maintained in the case of Poland. "And we will maintain our policy," Kreisky said, indirectly conveying the impression that it is the United States that is changing its policy.

DPA REPORTS SCHMIDT'S STATE OF NATION SPEECH

[Excerpts] Bonn, 9 Sep (DPA) -- In an atmosphere of crisis with regard to the Bonn SPD/FDP coalition, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt today reaffirmed to the Bundestag his determination to not relinquish the chancellorship. In his state of the nation speech, Schmidt forcefully supported the continuation of Social Democrat-liberal policies.

Schmidt stated his commitment to a policy of progressive improvements and of compromise with regard to the safeguarding of internatonal and external peace. He said that he has always tried to face up to the link between this attitude toward policy and duty. "At an especially difficult time, I will not shirk this," he said. The SPD and FDP policy for internal and external peace has been successful and promises to continue to be successful. "We have stayed on course in our peace policy and have thus been able to indicate the direction for others, too." The chancellor claimed. "In economic policy we have kept to a course that has brought us further than miracle cures could have. We have not allowed the welfare state to become a shunting yard for our economic problems." Schmidt stressed that on the basis of international comparison, the Federal Republic continues to have one of the highest standards of living, but he also stressed the need for sacrifices in the difficult economic situation, adding that many are prepared to do this. There are increasing signs thatthe Federal Republic is succeeding in overcoming its problems.

On individual political spheres Schmidt said:

Economy: The chancellor attributed the economic difficulties mainly to the effects of the world economic crisis. He said that the country's starting point for the securing of economic and social stability is better than in most other countries. Schmidt strongly opposed a policy of economic sanctions. He said that in the future also, the Federal Republic will steadfastly oppose such developments, obviously alluding to the American embargo policy in connection with the gas pipeline deal with the Soviet Union. He said that Bonn's efforts for good and secure economic relations with the communist countries are also an important part of employment policy. In another part of his speech, he spoke of great agreement among the European allies in the matter of the U.S. embargo.

Unemployment: Schmidt said that unemployment will not be reduced to a tolerable level through a new economic recovery alone. The labor market situation will continue to become more difficult well into the 1980's because those born in years with a high birth rate will be coming into the labor market.

Budget: Schmidt indicated that a further budget deficit is expected. He said that there are strong indications that the economic forecasts for this and the coming year will have to be withdrawn. With reference to the request for reports from economic experts, Schmidt said that the government will not hold back from timely discussion of "supplementary adjustments."

Germany policy: Schmidt again called upon the GDR for a "substantive adjustment" of the minimum money exchange quota for visitors from the West, which it has doubled. He said that this measure has caused the GDR's standing among West Germans to suffer very badly. The minimum that the GDR must do in its own interests is to reduce the money exchange quotas to the old level for pensioners, the socially disadvantaged and young people. Schmidt suggested that the GDR's real motive is to limit contacts between the two parts of the German people. He also criticized obstructions in travel for people who earlier left the GDR legally. "We stress that the hopes of the people in the two German states for more meetings and closeness must not be disappointed." What they have in common and the will for common interests have survived, transcending what is divisive.

Schmidt stressed Bonn's continuing interest in the agreed upon return visit to the Federal Republic by GDR state and party head Erich Honecker. He said that there is no agreement as to when it will take place, however. "If this visit is to be fruitful -- which is what we want -- the political climate of overall relations must be in order."

Disarmament: Schmidt said that the Federal Government shares the longing for disarmament and a more peaceful world. Therefore, security through a contractually agreed upon military balance at a lower level of arms remains a main component of its peace policy. The chancellor "passionately" reaffirmed his appeal to the nuclear superpowers for arms reduction. "You have committed yourselves to nuclear disarmament. Keep this commitment." Schmidt again expressed the conviction that in Geneva the United States and the Soviet Union are negotiating very seriously on nuclear medium-range missiles, because they themselves must also be very concerned.

The chancellor expressed his commitment to the NATO dual decision on these weapons as a condition for the holding of the Geneva negotiations and gave the assurance that the government will continue to do its utmost to ensure that these negotiations achieve results before the end of 1983, which is the date set for the deployment of nuclear missiles in the Federal Republic. He said that the government sees the most effective possibility for this in close coordination with the United States.

Europe: Schmidt said that cooperation in the European Community is not in a good state at present. All the members are placing hope in the Federal Republic's presidency, which begins 1 January, because under the last German presidency the European Monetary System, which has since proved its worth, was created.

According to Schmidt, the CSCE process of detente and cooperation in Europe is threatened. He said that in the spheres of human rights, human contacts and information, there is a danger of retrograde steps, among which he listed the considerable restrictions on telephone traffic with the Soviet Union through Moscow's cancellation of direct dialling. Invoking the CSCE Final Act, Schmidt again urged the Polish Government to lift martial law, release the detainees and resume social dialogue.

In his government statement, the chancellor departed from his prepared text and in a personal statement challenged the opposition to bring in a constructive vote of no confidence.

"I have no intention of resigning," Schmidt stressed in his addition to the prepared text. He indirectly called upon the FDP to make its intentions clear.

Kohl Calls for Resignation

LD091234 Hamburg DPA in German 1002 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Excerpts] Bonn, 9 Sep (DPA) -- Replying directly to Helmut Schmidt's 2 hour speech in the lower house today, CDU/CSU opposition leader Helmut Kohl rejected Schmidt's challenge for the CDU/CSU to introduce a constructive vote of no confidence in the lower house next week. Instead he said that it was time for the chancellor to resign. In a democracy there was nothing wrong with the resignation of a chancellor and a change of government was "the most normal thing in the world," Kohl said. "The people have long ago lost all confidence in your coalition," he shouted.

Kohl suggested waiting for the results of the elections to the state diets in Hesse and Bavaria before continuing calmly with the debate which Schmidt had begun about the possibility of a new Federal Government. The CDU/CSU wanted a "new beginning, a different policy with a new majority in this house," Kohl added.

After speaking impromptu for about half an hour, Kohl returned to his prepared text. In concluding his contribution to the state of the nation report, he highlighted developments in German-American relations as a cause for concern. He said that anyone who called into question or even wanted to destroy friendship with the United States and membership in the Atlantic alliance and the European Community, which was the foundation of German policy, would also be destroying the foundation for a genuine detente policy and a policy of peace in Europe.

BRANDT STRESSES COMMON GROUND IN COALITION

[Excerpt] Bonn, 9 Sep (DPA) — Speaking in the Bundestag [following Helmut Schmidt's state of the nation speech], SPD Chairman Willy Brandt was at pains to stress the common ground in the SPD/FDP coalition, especially in foreign policy. And he urged the Free Democrats to make a clear statement on their attitude toward the government coalition. The SPD stands behind the chancellor without any 'ifs and buts' until such a time as a majority in the Bundestag no longer has confidence in him. The SPD also stands by the mandate entrusted to it by the electorate in 1980 and expects it to be exercised in a clearly businesslike and politically reliable manner and not talked to death. "We ask our FDP colleagues to express themselves equally clearly on this."

In the 13 years it has been in power, the coalition has written an important chapter in German foreign policy which is recognized worldwide, Brandt said. Foreign and security policy remain the fateful questions for the German people in their situation, he said, noting in particular the need for disarmament. "Seen from a historical perspective, this will be the next phase of the joint responsibility of the Social Democrats and the Free Democrats -- not merely to leave it, but to tackle it afresh together, because it has only barely begun and has to be carried forward against so much resistance in the world." The Social Democrat liberal Germany policy, which has led the way "out of the shackles of a sterile position," also still stands more or less at the beginning of a long road. Brandt conceded that with the "sad spectacle" which it has presented since last summer, the coalition has prompted doubts, uncertainty and loss of confidence.

GENSCHER ON ARMS CONTROL TALKS, DETENTE

[Text] Bonn, 9 Sep (DPA) -- Speaking in the lower house today, Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher stressed the need to continue the policy of detente and the hope for successful arms control negotiations between East and West. As the first speaker in the afternoon session on the debate on the chancellor's state of the nation address, Genscher said that the dramatic question which had to be asked today was how a state of no war on the basis of deterrence could become a state of peace through trust.

Genscher stressed that despite events in Afghanistan and Poland, there had been progress in East-West relations. Between the United States and the Soviet Union there were more arms control negotiations than ever before, and the Federal Government had played an important part in bringing them about. Here the Geneva talks on medium-range weapons were of decisive importance because they were aimed at making the deployment of new Western missiles superfluous through a positive outcome of the negotiations. However, this lay not in the hands of the West but in the hands of the Soviet Union, which must give up its already deployed SS-20 missiles.

In this connection, Genscher strongly rebuffed criticism of the United States. He said he did not feel threatened by Western missiles that had still not been deployed, but by Soviet missiles that had already been deployed. This elicited loud applause also from the CDU/CSU parliamentary party. Anti-Americanism loosened the ties "which are linked to our security and freedom."

AUSTRIAN PRESIDENT CONCLUDES VISIT TO FRG

[Excerpt] Munich 9 Sep (DPA) -- Following a 4-day state visit, Austrian President Rudolf Kirchschlaeger has left the Federal Republic. He travelled Thursday night by special train from Munich, which was the last stop of his visit to the FRG. Kirchschlaeger had also visited Bonn, Bremen and Bamberg.

During a festive dinner given at the Munich Residenz, Kirchschlaeger thanked Minister-President Franz Josef Strauss for the friendly reception and the "good will towards our country."

KIRCHSCHLAEGER ON WHY HE DID NOT VISIT BERLIN

AU091145 Vienna Domestic Service in German 1018 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Paul Schulmeister interview with President Rudolf Kirchschlaeger about his impressions during his current visit to the FRG, "this morning" -- recorded, place not given]

[Excerpt] [Question] Mr President, another question: During your visit a lot of official understanding has been displayed on the part of the FRG for the Austrian policy of neutrality, but there was also an official expression of regret by the SPD Bundestag faction before your Bonn press conference, and subsequently also a similar statement by the West Berlin Senate, regarding your decision not to visit West Berlin. Official expressions of regret during an official visit are actually something rather unusual. What do you have to say about this?

[Answer] To date, I have not been informed about any official expression of regret in the contacts I have had here with official FRG representatives. The visit was planned a relatively long time ago, it was jointly prepared, and it was carried out just as it had been planned in the preliminary talks.

[Question] But if you think of the West German press comment, which is at least in part rather unfriendly, is there not after all a certain dissonance, or is it rather merely a tempest in a teapot?

[Answer] I regret this dissonance. My visit was not meant to cause any dissonance, but rather to demonstrate the affinity and friendship between our two states and peoples. I said earlier that I am surprised that there is such a strong reaction precisely when the Austrian president does not go to Berlin, while there is no such reaction when other heads of state do not go to Berlin.

[Question] Could you, in conclusion, tell the Austrian listeners very briefly why you did not go to Berlin?

[Answer] The Austrian listeners know the answer: I have said from the very beginning that, in my attitude here, I should be guided by the attitude taken by other chiefs of state of European countries which are not NATO members, and that is what I have done.

CHEYSSON INTERVIEWED ON RELATIONS WITH LEBANON

NC092032 Beirut Voice of Lebanon in Arabic 1715 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Dispatch by Voice of Lebanon correspondent Fadi Najjar from Paris]

[Text] In a special 70-minute interview by our radio with French Minister for External Affairs Claude Cheysson, he explained his policy and answered Lebanese criticism. We will try to sum up the interview as follows:

1. Regarding the principles France adheres to, Cheysson said: We support the unity of Lebanon within its borders, which we have recognized for more than 60 years. We support the character of Lebanon, its Arab affiliation, the coexistence of its numerous sects and its independence. And we reject any attempt by anyone to [words indistinct] and undermine the sanctity of its borders. We call for the withdrawal of all foreign forces from it.

2. Regarding the Syrian presence, Cheysson said that the Syrian Armed Forces have come to Lebanon to contain the consequences of the civil war. As long as they enjoy Arab support, he added, their presence is legitimate. Today, now that Lebanon has rejected renewing the mandate, their withdrawal must be tackled in a continuous manner with the Israeli Armed Forces. [as heard]

3. Regarding the Israeli invasion, Cheysson said France has (?denounced) the Israeli aggression and calls for the withdrawal of the Israeli Army from Lebanon and [for Israel] to respect its southern borders. France, he added, supports the security settlements and guarantees for Israel on the Lebanese borders within an international framework, which President Mitterrand talked about a few weeks ago. We are ready to participate in these international guarantees and to send our forces, as we did in the Sinai, to be stationed at the Lebanese-Israeli borders if Lebanon asks us to do so He described the Israeli defense minister's threats on staying in Lebanon if it does not sign a peace treaty with Israel as unacceptable and said that Israel should withdraw in accordance with the Security Council resolutions, which in no way indicate that Lebanon is committed to sign a peace treaty with Israel. However, France welcomes any peace agreement between the two countries, as it did before when unilateral peace steps were undertaken.

Regarding the Palestinian presence in Lebanon, Cheysson said: In the initiative we introduced last June, we called for the withdrawal of the Palestinians from Beirut, taking their weapons from them, and keeping the weapons in Lebanon. We believe, however, that the departure of the Palestinians from Beirut to the Arab states in organized, fighting and armed units is not the best solution and we regret that.

We would like to note here that Cheysson is misinterpreting the June initiative in a manner that would contradict its contents, because it never mentioned anything regarding the withdrawal of the Palestinians or taking their weapons from them. It is not accidental that Cheysson would interpret the official text in this manner.

The French minister added: 'Arafat has nothing to do with the presence or the departure of the French unit from Beirut -- this matter is decided on by us and Lebanon. Cheysson added: following the Fes summit we will (?reactivate) the French-Egyptian draft resolution in the Security Council. We are waiting for the results of the summit to put the final touches on it. He described Reagan's plan for peace as one that embodies a tangible development, but it is not sufficient.

Regarding bilateral relations, Cheysson said France is friendly to Lebanon, but not fraternal. He categorically denied that France has sacrificed Lebanon to serve the interests of the Palestinians in the recent crisis. He also refused to admit that the relations between the two countries have deteriorated in past weeks. He mentioned many things Paris has done for Lebanon during Mitterrand's presidency, such as proposals on arming it, granting it loans, increasing the French participation in the UN forces, sending a unit to Beirut which was the vanguard of the international force, shouldering the most difficult tasks and sending observers to supervise the presidential election.

Cheysson added: We wish to strengthen bilateral relations and we will rebuild our destroyed institutions in Beirut, unless Lebanon rejects this or rejects our role, which will be a surprise to us. Many Lebanese nationals took refuge in France during the war. Our culture continues to be an essential element in the culture of Lebanon. We lost an ambassador and a number of our soldiers in Lebanon. Also, we have never closed down our offices. I will be very happy to go to Beirut following the formation of a new cabinet. I believe that Lebanese and French officials will meet many times in the future and that they will discuss in detail how we can participate in rebuilding the state, with all of its institutions, and in helping it at the military and technological levels and in any other domain in which it needs our help.

Cheysson reiterated that President Mitterrand and his government have welcomed the election of Bashir al-Jumayyil as president of the republic within the constitutional framework.

We asked the French minister whether he was apprehensive regarding the U.S. influence in Lebanon. He answered: We are two distinct entities. They are richer than we are, but they are farther away from you than we are. We and Lebanon are Mediterranean countries and we have joint and prosperous projects and we share a historical and geographical link.

PAST IRAN FOREIGN MINISTER SANJABI TAKES REFUGE

[Text] Paris, Sept 9 (AFP) -- Former Iranian Foreign Minister Karim Sanjabi has taken refuge in France, Iranian sources reported here today.

Mr Sanjabi, who served as foreign minister in the first provisional government of the Iranian Islamic Republic, was among the first Iranian political figures opposing the shah to join the camp of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeyni, the republic's creator.

He arrived secretly in France two weeks ago, according to the same sources, after having gone underground in Iran more than a year ago.

The former minister, who leads the national Iranian front opposition grouping, has since his arrival in this country made no contact with other representatives of the opposition gone into exile here, the sources said.

Official French sources have not so far confirmed Mr Sanjabi's presence here.

TOGOLESE PRESIDENT ARRIVES, WILL SEE MITTERRAND

AB091305 Paris AFP in French 1234 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] Paris, 9 Sep (AFP) -- Togolese President Gen Gnassingbe Eyadema arrived at the Orly International Airport early this afternoon for a 1-week private visit to France.

He was welcomed on arrival at the VIP lounge by Jean-Christophe Mitterrand, attache at the Bureau of African Affairs at the presidency.

The Togolese head of state is scheduled to be received in audience by President Francois Mitterrand at the Elysee Palace on Friday.

COLOMBO ON ITALY'S CONSISTENT FOREIGN POLICY

AU090901 Rome ANSA in English 0835 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Viareggio, September 9 -- To overcome what he called "the crisis of peace," the West must give proof of compactness and unity, Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo told a roundtable discussion yesterday organized by his own Christian Democratic Party.

The subject of the discussion was DC action in the field of foreign policy from 1945 up to the present. The roundtable was held as part of the DC friendship festival which this year is being held in Viareggio (Tuscany).

Colombo said that Italy had already made its fundamental choices in favor of the Atlantic alliance and the European Economic Community, and that it was not any new choices which were needed but rather a determination to act along principles inherent in those choices.

The DC leader recalled his own proposals made last February at Georgetown University in the United States for a Euro-American act of friendship that would strengthen democracy and cooperation in developing Third World relations, East-West ties and economic coordination among the Western countries. The minister said that consultations between Europe and the United States must be less episodic and fragmentary than they are at present.

As to the stabilization of East-West ties, Colombo said the dialogue must be developed along a plane of mutual respect between the sides in a condition of absolute parity on a strategic level.

He went on to say that Italy, despite her internal social and economic difficulties is perhaps the most stable of nations. Ever since the postwar period, Italy has made its fundamental choices -- the Atlantic and European ones -- and has stuck to them, he said.

The foreign minister then recalled Italy's actions to combat world hunger, to defend peace and to aid the most impoverished peoples. He continued by saying that the morality that inspires Italy has led it to uphold the aspirations of the Polish people and to feel deeply the cause of the Afghani people.

Continuing his address, Colombo noted Italy's moral support for the Palestinian peoples' cause while maintaining respect for the sovereignty and integrity of the State of Israel. Italy has always backed peoples struggles for independence throughout the world, he went on.

In this framework, Italy's international activity has always sought to promote the evolution of peoples laboring under authoritarian regimes or under the economic domination of a few. Italy has always been on the side of peoples who [are] subjected to strife and violence, as in Salvador, he said.

Others who took part in the roundtable discussion here were former premiers Giulio Andreotti, Arnaldo Forlani and Mariano Rumor.

While the overall internal political situation has become more embroiled, at least Italy's foreign policy has been safeguarded and kept away from the contradictions and polemics that have made the government's actions in other fields so difficult, Forlani told the participants.

DC, PCI REACTION TO DALLA CHIESA'S SON'S CHARGES

AU090855 Rome ANSA in English 0830 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 9 -- Polemics sparked by remarks made by the son of Palermo's slain prefect, General Carlo Alberto Dalla Chiesa, to the effect that those who ordered the faral ambush should be sought in the Sicilian Christian Democrat Party, have spread like wildfire through Italy's political circles.

In an interview published by a Rome daily yesterday, Nando Dalla Chiesa said his father even appealed to the DC leadership in an attempt to get the local Christian Democrats to cooperate with rather than hinder him in his battle against the mafia.

The DC national leadership reacted to the younger Dalla Chiesa's interview with a document labelling "vile, unjust and ungenerous" any attempt to drag in the party as being behind the ordering of the "tragic crime".

The same paper that published the interview with the slain prefect's son, today published a rebuttal from DC National Secretary Ciriaco de Mita who said that if it were true that the mafia had taken over the DC, the situation of democracy, not only in Sicily but in Italy, would be infinitely worse.

The Communist Party, Italy's largest opposition force, tended to make a distinction between national leaders and regional, Sicilian leaders in the Christian Democratic camp. The Sicilian PCI today formally called for the resignation of the regional president and Palermo's mayor, both Christian Democrats. However, national Communist leaders denied having called for the resignation of Interior Minister Virginio Rognoni, also a Christian Democrat.

Authoritative Communist veteran Giorgio Napolitano said that the political question was raised by the behavior of persons and groups within the Sicilian Christian Democracy and the failure of the DC leadership to move against those involved in scandals yet nevertheless left in positions of responsibility.

Achille Occhetto, another Communist leader, synthesized his party's position in an article appearing in RINASCITA. If the DC really wanted to turn over a new leaf, he said, it must have the moral and intellectual courage to help break the infernal knot between the power system and organized crime. Occhetto urged the DC to move in this direction rather than waste time showing itself scandalized by the severe condemnation leveled against by the Communist Party.

It is highly likely that these polemics will lead to a parliamentary debate which has already been asked for by Proletarian Unity deputies in a letter to house speaker, Nilde Jotti.

Son Repeats Accusations

AU092032 Rome ANSA in English 1935 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 9 -- Nando Dalla Chiesa, the son of the general slain in Palermo Friday, today substantially reiterated his previous accusations that certain members of the Sicilian Christian Democratic machine had ordered his father's assassination.

In reference to the furious outcry raised by similar accusations he made in an interview published by a Rome daily yesterday, Nando said he saw in the insults he has received only further proof of the bad conscience of those who sought to minimize the influence of the mafia and paint the powerful underworld organization as nothing more than a handful of gangsters.

"I'm neither a rogue nor a coward and the infinite grief I feel has not blinded me", the general's son said. "I will in no way allow myself to be instrumentalized by the parties and am only trying to figure out who ordered my father's assassination and why", he said.

Nando Dalla Chiesa said he did not accuse the Christian Democratic Party but that he was convinced that the mafia power system that killed his father was, at least in part, interwoven with Sicilian administrative hegemony and political power, and therefore with a part of the Sicilian DC.

He noted that this was also the opinion of many Sicilians who have publicly expressed this conviction and that it was also the belief of the church in Palermo today. He ended by saying that it was also the conviction of all honest Italians and that it was because of this belief and the job he undertook, that his father was assassinated.

PAPAL VISIT TO SPAIN POSTPONED UNTIL NOVEMBER

[Excerpts] (ANSA) -- Vatican City, September 7 -- The visit to Spain by Pope John Paul II, originally set for October 14-22, has been put off until early in November, it was announced here today.

The announcement was made by Vatican spokesman, Father Romeo Panciroli. The switch was made so that the papal visit would not coincide with political campaigning for elections to be held in Spain on October 28.

The pope's Spanish itinerary will include Madrid, Avila (where Saint Teresa was born), Alba de Tormes (where the saint died), Segovia, Zaragoza, Barcelona, Santiago de Compostela, Toledo, Guadalupe (the Marian sanctuary there), Seville, Granada and Valencia.

POPE EXPRESSES CONCERN FOR POLISH INTERNEES

LD082020 Vatican City in Polish to Poland 1815 GMT 8 Sep 82

[Excerpts] Today, the festival of the birth of the mother of God, a powerful storm passed over Rome. Shortly before the general audience,the heavens cleared up and in the freshened and sunny weather the weekly meeting with the holy father took place. As of now, the Wednesday audience will take place at 1700 and the direct relay by Vatican Radio will begin at 1715.

Speaking in Polish in a prayer to our lady of Jasna Gora, the holy father said: [Begin John Paul II recording] Every year, at the beginning of September, we recall the events of World War II which victimized so many on our native soil, and we strive to consider this terrible harvest of death in the spirit of faith, (?for instance through) mystery of your birth, Mary. In this light, the great community of the nation embraces all the compatriots who were caught up in the events of the war years of 1939-45. They live in our hearts.

At the same time, however, in celebrating the festival of your birth, Lady of Jasna Gorna, we express our greatest concern for those who have been torn away from their families by the events of the present state of martial law, who have been torn away from their accustomed life and work. We are concerned for the fate of the internees, whom the public and the church can aid. We are more and more concerned for the fate of those who have been imprisoned and sentenced, and with whom the public and the church have virtually no contact.

We think with the greatest unease of those in prison who resort to hunger strikes. All these brothers and sisters of ours belong to the great community of the nation, as did those 6 million who gave their lives during World War II. The nation has the right and duty to care for them, it has the right to exert itself so that all the rights of man are observed with respect to the prisoners, for are we not adherents of the Christ who said: I was in prison, and did you come to me? We commend unto you, Lady of Jasna Gora, Mother of the imprisoned Christ, all those who are interned and imprisoned because of martial law in our fatherland. [end recording]

L'UNITA: 'CHANGE OF COURSE' NEEDED IN POLAND

[Emanuele Macaluso editorial]

[Text] In a small Polish working-class town, Lubin, two workers were killed by the police, who were trying, with their gunfire, to prevent a workers demonstration on the anniverary of the 31 August 1980 Gdansk accords. Another man died in Gdansk.

Several workers were wounded. Throughout the country, despite the presence of armed state forces and the government's threats, many workers protested and demonstrated.

The killings took place on Tuesday, 31 August, but the government, which controls all the media, denied them, claiming- that no deaths or injuries were caused by gunfire that day. This lie is a sign of weakness and arrogance, and in any case of contempt for national and international public opinion.

When we learned the news yesterday, a disturbing question formed in our hearts and minds. Why did these miners die? Why did they, together with thousands of other workers, defy the government's orders and demonstrate in the streets? This question must be answered, partly because the Soviet news agency yesterday described the demonstrators as "provocateurs collaborating with foreign centers of subversion." It is therefore advisable to speak clearly. These workers died while defending a sacrosanct and inalienable right -- the right to assemble, to meet and to organize, to count for something within society, to negotiate within the factory, to decide together with other social forces on their future as workers and citizens. This is a right that the workers, at different times and in different situations, have always claimed and for which they have fought in every country of the world. A right that has been repeatedly denied and violated throughout such a large part of the capitalist and "Western" world, from Turkey to Chile. A right -- and this is the serious point that we stress once again -- that is denied and violated in countries that invoke socialism.

In Poland this right of the workers to organize themselves freely, after many dramatic and bloody events, was gained in August 1980 by the working class and recognized by the state. This event had major repercussions not only in Poland but throughout the world. We do not now want to go back over all the stages of a beleaguered and difficult evolution, marked partly by errors, of a workers movement organized within the trade union, Solidarity. Nevertheless, the contradictions which, before that movement were exerting more and more intolerable pressures on Polish society did find a democratic, political solution. This solution began a new process whose outcome was difficult to foresee, partly because it was entrusted to a real dialectic -- but in a situation influenced in many respects from outside, by the USSR. In other words, the stance adopted by the latter would assume exceptional weight and importance not only for Poland but for the entire international workers movements.

The Polish events therefore tested the forces in that country that had begun political reforms designed to resolve the tough problems of a socialist society in a state of crisis and the possibility of a different approach to relations among the socialist states, particularly between Poland and the USSR, taking into account the historical aspects characteristic of these relations and also the blocs, which are, after all, a reality, though a process must be started to eliminate them.

Well, instead of coming to grips with these difficulties, the present Polish Government leaders, partly encouraged by the Soviet Government, chose the path of the military coup, of the state of siege, of arrests and courts martial, of internment and the banning of trade union and social organizations. The 29 December 1981 PCI Directorate resolution states that "These measures -- which are incompatible with our democratic and socialist ideals -- cannot resolve the Polish nation's profound crisis." The events of the past few days confirm this assessment and tell us that the Polish working class has not submitted and that the regime installed there is weaker than ever because the contradictions within society are more acute than ever and national feeling, outraged by a foreign conspiracy, is stronger than ever. Whoever still believes that the Polish situation can be approached by continuing along the blind alley taken last December is storing up further and even worse tragedies for the polish people. It would be a serious mistake to believe that the social and political groups opposed to the government consist solely of those who bravely defied the armed forces on Tuesday. The dissidence and opposition are much broader than that. Forces -- perhaps even substantial ones -- which at the church's request did not demonstrate this time could do so next time, and will do so unless a political solution to the crisis is found.

This solution must be sought with initiative, patience, flexibility and gradualism, so that everything can happen without further ruptures or violence. But a turnabout is a pressing necessity. The start of such a solution was indicated in the aforementioned Directorate resolution, which demanded "the immediate restoration of civil and trade freedoms, the release of detainees, the resumption of dialogue and a quest for understanding among the fundamental components of Polish society and life, namely the party, the trade union and the church, enabling them to work freely: Only the Poles, within full independence and autonomy and without any outside influence, can resolve their country's problems."

At this tragic time, marked by the deaths of more workers, we will continue to fight to assert, by force or argument, the right of the Polish workers and people, guaranteed by the national understanding that we mentioned.

Further Commentary

[Text] Almost a year after the 13 December coup the Polish crisis is far from resolved. Indeed, it seems to be becoming more complex, exacerbated and radicalized and could increase the difficulties of the forces which, despite everything, have worked for a "compromise," to prevent further ruptures and to begin a process of unitary recomposition of the nation. This is the significance of yesterday's dramatic events, which showed first and foremost that Solidarity, as an independent and autonomous agent, is still an active force within Polish society. Despite the blows received the trade union exists, demonstrates its ability to mobilize and shows itself to be a rallying point, not merely a symbol. In short, it is an essential reality with which General Jaruzelski's government must come to terms in a manner very different from street clashes.

This is because the 31 August demonstrations show that the interruption of the dialogue, however arduous and complicated it had become in the last months of 1981, did not in the least exercise the danger of conflict. The reason is clear: The 13 December coup -- as we pointed out back in the 30 December 1981 PCI Directorate resolution -- far from resolving the problems that led to the "Gdansk summer" and the recognition of the new and more flexible balance of forces that existed in the country, further complicated them. It suddenly interrupted a renewal process and dealt a heavy blow to the precondition for tackling the crisis: a continuation, within full independence and autonomy, along the path of the democratization of society and the state.

The significance of the 31 August 1980 Gdansk agreements lay precisely in the acknowledgement of this decisive point, this inalienable need for reform. The 13 December coup had an opposite significance, and in the past months the military government, by proposing again the legalization of a Solidarity deprived of its fundamental traits, perhaps deluded itself that the solution based on force had succeeded.

In fact it did not succeed because the regime's credibility could again only be built through the quest for consensus based on a political agreement with the other two components of Polish society -- Solidarity and the church -- both of which, we repeat, were well represented in Poland's political and social life, as confirmed by the events of yesterday and the past week. What will happen now that Solidarity has shown that it exists and the church stands as a major rallying point, as an outright "political force" that carries weight and influence and puts forward its own proposals for resolving the crisis?

How long can the military government continue to ignore them before the serious state in which Poland finds itself creates further, damaging upheavals? And what dimensions might be assumed by the Polish crisis if Solidarity and the sector of society that it represents are left with only the weapon of street clashes and if civil and trade union freedoms are not restored, if detainees are not released and if there is no resumption of dialogue and understanding among the country's three fundamental components? These are the worrying questions raised by yesterday's dramatic events, and which demand a rapid reply.

SUSPECTED TERRORIST SEIZED OUTSIDE ROME PRISON

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 9 -- A woman armed with a handgun was arrested yesterday outside Rome's Rebibbia prison. When police approached her to ask for identification, she pulled the gun out of her handbag and fired into the air.

Taken to the police station she gave her name as Giuseppina de Lucia and said she was from Naples. However, officials believe she had given a false name and that in fact, she was casing the prison for a planned terrorist attack.

The woman parked her car yesterday outside the jail and then began to walk up and down outside the prison walls.

Two guards thought her movements suspicious and went up to her to ask for identification when she pulled out the gun and fired into the air. The guards quickly immobilized her and placed her under arrest.

Around a week ago, several shots were fired on a police patrol car near the same prison.

POLICE ARREST SUSPECTED RED BRIGADES TERRORIST

NC092104 Paris AFP in English 2044 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text Rome, Sept 9 (AFP) -- Rome police have arrested a suspected Red Brigades terrorist who has been on the wanted list for more than a year, authorities said here today.

Marina Sarnelli, 22, was arrested Wednesday in downtown Rome on suspicion of taking part in the killing of a high police offiical, Antonio Ammaturo, and his bodyguard, Pasquale Paola, in Naples last July 15.

Miss Sarnelli is also believed to be a member of the branch of the Red Brigades in Naples. This branch was created after the liberation of U.S. Gen James Dozier last January 28, and is considered the radical wing of the terrorist organization.

POLITICIANS COMMENT ON SHORT-NOTICE ELECTION

PM070935 [Editorial Report] Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 29 August 1982 publishes on pages 11-13 a series of articles by leaders of Spanish political parties on the calling of an early general election in Spain, generally expressing disagreement with the "haste" with which the election has been called.

Union of the Democratic Center [UCD[Chairman Landelino Lavilla describes the dissolution of parliament as "a correct decision, because it is in keeping with the constitutional provisions and the political situation which we are experiencing." Noting the emergence of "new political options," he adds:

"To continue parliamentary activity in September would have been counterproductive in view of the political forces' pre-election dynamic. Only by means of unstable, artificial and short-term pacts, contrary to the profiles of the parties themselves and confusing for the electorate, would it have been possible to continue legislative work under increasingly precarious conditions."

Spanish Socialist Workers Party [PSOE] Secretary General Filipe Gonzalez, after pointing out that the PSOE "has maintained since 1 March 1979 the desirability of the legislative term being completed for the benefit of the institutions' normal functioning," notes that "since last spring, and especially since the Andalusian election, the minimum conditions for the UCD government to complete its term of office have disappeared."

He expresses regret that the calling of an early election means that "the autonomy map is left incomplete," and points out that approval of the budgets for 1983 "had become an insurmountable difficulty in view of the conditions under which the UCD's crisis has developed." In addition, he warns of the danger of attempting to use the pope's impending visit to Spain "for the advantage of any specific electoral option," adding: "Those acting in that way could receive an enormous surprise, because the citizens of this country are politically mature and would reject any manipulation, apart from the disservice which those attempting this would render to the pope and the church."

PCE Secretary General Santiago Carrillo also asks why the election has been called prior to the approval of the outstanding autonomy statutes and of a new electoral law and dwells at length on the issue of the pope's visit, which "at the height of an election campaign becomes transformed into something which could be counterproductive and whose opportuneness creates a division of opinions even among the Christians themselves."

Noting that the Communists' "constructive proposals" for completing the legislative term were not heeded, he concludes: "For our part, we are prepared to appear in October before the voters with a program aimed at creating the advanced democracy envisaged by the preamble to the Constitution, at preventing the economic crisis from being resolved at the workers' expense and at seriously tackling the unemployment problem, the improvement of senior citizens' living conditions, the development of civil freedoms and the affirmation of the principle that national soveriegnty resides in the people."

Popular Alliance Secretary General Jorge Verstrynge Rojas asserts that "the early dissolution is not a good thing, especially when it is necessitated by events whose principal cause lies in the lack of political will of a government and its party to carry out the appropriate resolution of Spain's problems." Criticizing both the UCD's "inconsistency" and the PSOE's influence on government activity, he maintains that the present time poses "the imperative need to impart a new course to the country's life. A real and not spurious change is necessary. We regard the center-left of center-center formulas advocated by Suarez and Calvo-Sotelo in their lackluster terms of office as exhausted."

Democratic and Social Center Chairman Adolfo Suarez criticizes the "haste" with which the decision to dissolve parliament was taken, maintaining that it cannot be attributed to the formation of his party, whose members publicly pledged their unconditional support for the government. He also deplores the effect of the dissolution on the autonomies and the fact that the election campaign coincides with the pope's visit, and, as regards its impact on his party, acknowledges that it "adds to our difficulties, since we have just emerged as an organization." He continues: "However, we have stated repeatedly that our aim is to consolidate a strongly united progressive center party in the medium term and not to win an immediate electoral success -- which, of course, we will also pursue."

POLL SPECULATES ON 28 OCT ELECTION RESULTS

[Text] According to the latest opinion poll commissioned by the government, the Spanish Socialist Workers Party [PSOE] will secure an absolute majority in the election if the Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] and the Popular Alliance run separately on 28 October. If, on the other hand, the latter run together, the PSOE would be five deputies short of an absolute majority.

The poll, to which COVER-LA VANGUARDIA has had access, reflects the following picture: If the Popular Alliance, the UCD and the Democratic and Social Center [CDS] run separately the results will be as follows: The PSOE would secure 180 deputies (an absolute majority) Popular Alliance 80; UCD 35; CDS 15; and PCE 12. The remainder, up to the 350 deputies comprising the Chamber, would be spread out among the nationalist parties.

If the UCD and the Popular Alliance run together, the results -- again according to this poll -- will be PSOE 169; UCE-Popular Alliance 135; CDS 7; PCE 12.

UCD, PDL To Stand Together

LD091636 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1300 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Excerpt] The Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] and the Liberal Democratic Party [PDL] will stand together in the elections and will also cooperate closely in all electoral activities because they are convinced of the need for a renewed and strengthened political center. This firm intention of cooperation between UCD and the PDL will continue after the general elections in the political and parliamentary spheres in the form most appropriate to provide stability and permanence to the centrist option. The manner in which the two parties will stand together at the coming general elections has not yet been decided.

According to Landelino Lavilla [UCD chairman], what they have agreed to so far is not a coalition, nor is it an annulment of either of the two sides. Antonio Garrigues and his party accept the leadership of Landelino Lavilla.

MINISTER CRITICIZES POLAND OVER HOSTAGE ISSUE

NC092122 Paris AFP in English 2025 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] Bern, Sep 9 (AFP) -- The Polish Government endangered innocent lives by unjustly trying to blame the seizure of its embassy (here on) the suspended Polish trade union, Solidarity, Switzerland's justice minister said today.

"I am convinced that Solidarity had nothing to do with the 73-hour occupation that ended without bloodshed today," Justice and Police Minister Kurt Furgler said in an interview with French language Swiss television.

"You have witnessed the reaction of a regime that does not correspond to our philosophy," he said, "and immediately took advantage of the situation, endangering the lives of those who had nothing to do with this operation in Bern."

"I hope with all my heart that the Polish Government will take into account this distinction between terrorists to be punished in Switzerland, and imprisoned persons having nothing to do with the terrorist act," Mr Furgler said.

Father Joseph Bonscensky, a clergyman who at one point served as intermediary between authorities and the gunman, said on television that they had demanded three million Swiss francs (one million dollars) to end their occupation.

Father Bonscensky said the commando leader had told him Solidarity leaders were traitors and should be hanged.

Meanwhile, observers here credited the patience, tenacity reliable intelligence and correct choice of arms with ending the seige without injury or the least concession to the terrorists' demands.

FREQUENCIES FOR GDR RADIO PROVE 'FAVORABLE'

AU091408 Zuerich NEUE ZUERCHER ZEITUNG in German 9 Sep 82 p 42

[Report by "N.R."]

[Text] With the new distribution of medium-wave frequencies in Geneva the GDR has successfully applied for several channels which were cleverly chosen not only from the technical supply point of view but also politically, as has now been shown by a systematic check on frequency utilization. The newly assigned channels are likely to impair, or make completely impossible, the reception of FRG transmitters in large areas of the GDR. Most affected is Sueddeutscher Rundfunk, whose frequency of 576 kilocycles, used by the Muehlacker transmitter, is now also used by the GDR transmitter in Schwerin. Since the Schwerin transmitter operates with a power of 250 kilowatts, the Sueddeutscher Rundfunk broadcasts now cannot be received throughout the GDR.

The GDR radio is operating the Seelow, Bernburg, Karl-Marx-Stadt and Wachenbrunn transmitters at the 1431 kilocycles frequency. This makes it very difficult [in the GDR] to receive the two neighboring channels -- one used by Saarlaendischer Rundfunk, the other by Radio Luxemburg.

However, the reform has also brought a pleasant surprise for GDR radio listeners interested in Western information. In the past the programs of RIAS [Radio in America Sector] could only be received in the direct vicinity of the Berlin or Hof transmitters, since all medium-wave frequencies were jammed. When the new frequency distribution plan went into effect, this jamming was discontinued. Since then, RIAS Berlin can be received interference-free everywhere in the GDR, even on medium-wave. The transmitters that were used as jammers in the past now serve as additional low-power regional transmitters for the Radio GDR 1 program.

SOVIET SHIP DEPARTS WITH TURBINES FOR PIPELINE

LD091450 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1417 GMT 9 Sep 82

[By Auslan Cramb, PA staff reporter]

[Text] A Soviet freighter, loaded with six turbines for the controversial Siberian gas pipeline, left the Clyde today to head for its home port of Leningrad.

The American Government has been waiting for the vessel to sail before slapping sanctions on the Clydebank firm of John Brown Engineering for breaching its anti-Soviet embargo by supplying the turbines.

The 4,000 ton Stakhanovets Yermolenko slipped from the dock at 2:00 pm to begin the seven-and-a-half-day voyage via the English Channel.

The vessel has been at the centre of an international row between Britain and America since it docked at midnight nine days ago.

JBE's managing director, Mr Graham Strachan, has said the company will go ahead with the rest of the order, but any sanctions on the transfer of technology could hinder its ability to do so. Recent reports, however, have suggested that President Reagan's embargo will be less sweeping than previously feared. JBE's shipping manager, Mr Douglas McCall said: "We believe the sanctions will apply the minute she moves from the dock." He added: "The loading has been slightly more difficult than we expected and has taken a few days longer because of crane problems. We are pleased and relieved to see it going and when it returns for the next load, things will go smoother."

He would not comment on the likely effect of any sanctions on the company, but said JBE remained confident it could complete the order. "We wouldn't be in business if we were not confident," said Mr McCall.

Security has been tight at the dock during the loading of the 500 crates, but when the vessel slipped up the Clyde last week there was little to give away the importance of the visit. Its master, Captain Vadim Sinitsin was happy to talk about the "good and healthy" trade between [Britain] and Russia. And said: "I hope I have to come back to pick up the remaining 15 turbines. I am under instructions from my company to load this cargo and I am just carrying out my job. I and my whole crew know about the row between Mr Reagan and Mrs Thatcher. But I also know that Mrs Thatcher has told JBE that they can send the turbines. As far as I am concerned, it is normal trade between my country and yours and I think it is good and healthy."

During Mrs Thatcher's visit to Scotland last week, Mr Strachan said he was pleased by the "excellent" support shown by the government.

Sanctions 'Enrage' Thatcher

LD092315 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2250 GMT 9 Sep 82

[By Chris Moncrieff, PA chief political correspondent]

[Text] Mrs Thatcher is tonight enraged that the United States administration have imposed sanctions on John Brown Engineering Ltd, and three of its subsidiaries for supplying equipment for the Soviet gas pipeline.

The British Government is firmly of the opinion that John Brown, once it had entered into a contract, must be allowed to fulfil it.

Now, Mr John Smith, shadow secretary of trade, has written to Mrs Thatcher describing this latest embargo as "the most serious international trade crisis between Britain and the United States since the Second World War.

A Downing Street spokesman said: "The British Government regrets the U.S. decision and will have to study it before making up its mind what its reaction is going to be.

But it is plain that Mrs Thatcher is displeased with any attempt by the United States administration -- despite her general overall support for its policies -- to interfere with British commercial interests.

The prime minister has already made plain that any contract signed by a British company should be honoured.

The decision prompted immediate and angry reaction from MP's from all sides.

Mr Smith said: "This is the most serious international trade crisis between Britain and the United States since the war.

"The government should make it clear that any United States actions against any British companies are totally unacceptable and will be resisted completely.

"The United States are trying to enforce their own laws outside their own country."

Mr Smith added: "What is most silly about the whole affair is that the pipeline will be built anyway."

"United States grain farmers will not be asked to suffer but British companies are being asked to pay the price inbroken contracts."

Mr John Stokes, Conservative MP for Halesowen and Stourbridge commented: "I was shocked to hear this news. This sort of behaviour by the United States is hardly that of our closest ally."

Firms Told: Ignore Embargo

LD101312 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1158 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Excerpt] The government orders, made under the Protection of Trading Interests Act, forbid the companies from complying with the U.S. ban, and make them liable to heavy fines if they do. Similar orders were issued to four other companies, including John Brown, on August 2.

Announcing the moves, which followed earlier reports today that Mrs Thatcher was furious with the Reagan administration's sanctions, the Department of Trade said in a statement that "the UK Government very much regrets this action by the U.S. Government." It added that the dispute was "damaging trans-Atlantic relations and should be settled as quickly as possible." The department's statement said John Brown Engineering had been complying with British law when it defied the U.S. embargo and supplied its turbines to Russia.

The government would consult other countries whose manufacturers were similarly affected and "will endeavour to persuade the U.S. to rethink." In the meantime, the government was today issuing directions to two further companies "forbidding them to comply with the U.S. embargo."

The government had "no wish to escalate the dispute, but in the absence of a mutually acceptable solution was determined to defend the UK's national interest.

"The latest orders are regarded as being the minimum necessary," the department said.

INTERLOCUTORS DISCUSS TRANSITIONAL PROVISIONS

NC091810 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] Another meeting within the framework of the intercommunal talks was held at the Ledra Palace Hotel this afternoon. Prior to the meeing, interlocutors Mavrommatis and Onan stated that the discussion on the question of the transitional provisions was to begin and that following the conclusion of the discussion of this question the discussion on the territorial aspect would begin.

Prior to the meeting, Mr Gobbi, the UN secretary general's special envoy, stated that he plans to visit New York, but that up to now there is nothing concrete. If his visit materializes, he said, it would be toward the end of September, in which case the current round of talks will be completed. Asked whether he knows if the two interlocutors will also visit New York, Mr Gobbi said that his impression is that Mr Mavrommatis and Mr Onan will also visit the UN headquarters. However, Mr Gobbi said that there will be no conference between him and the two interlocutors in New York. In conclusion he said that at present he does not see the possibility of a high-level meeting on the Cyprus problem in New York. He added: If meetings take place in New York, they will be for the usual consultations.

Asked to say something more on the question of the payment of compensation [to those refugees who will not return to their homes], Turkish Cypriot interlocutor Onan stated that in the case of any constitutional settlement a number of citizens will have to be compensated. He added: As to how this question will be settled and how money will be paid, this is a question to be discussed between the two sides at a later stage. The question of provisions, Mr Onan said, must be included in any constitutional settlement.

Asked what will happen following the conclusion of the study of the evaluation paper, Mr Onan said that it is early for him to say. However, he added, there is much work to be done. For example, he said, Mr Mavrommatis has not been an interlocutor from the beginning and it would be useful to discuss some questions which were not discussed with him. Mr Onan clarified that the discussions will definitely take place in Mr Gobbi's presence.

The Greek Cypriot side's representative at the talks, Mavrommatis, asked to comment on his long meeting with Mr Gobbi today, described it as very interesting and added that it was apparently necessary in view of the fact that there may shortly be a recess in the talks. Asked whether there will be an appraisal of the course of the intercommunal talks in New York among the UN secretary general, President Kiprianou and Turkish Cypriot leader Denktas, Mr Mavrommatis said that there will definitely be an appraisal of the situation.

Mr Mavrommatis expressed the hope that prior to the recess of the talks and the New York consultations, the territorial aspect will be discussed. Asked where the question of the resettlement of Famagusta stands and whether this question is included in the territorial aspect, Mr Mavrommatis stated: We continue to consider the question of Famagusta as a priority, and we are treating it as such.

Finally, requested to say more on the question of compensation payments, Mr Mavrommatis stated that he did not wish to say anything on this question.

'Compensation' Explained

NC100753 Nicosia CYPRUS MAIL in English 10 Sep 82 p 1

[Text] A statement from the government spokesman yesterday explained what is being discussed under the heading "compensation" at the intercommunal talks as part of the "transition provisions".

The socialist EDEK party said that the discussion of "compensation means compensation for refugees and thereby means abandonment of the right of refugees to return to their homes."

But the government spokesman dismissed this theory and explains the essence of the discussion. He said:

As is well known, UN resolutions speak of "voluntary return of refugees." This means that at the appropriate time the need may arise to discuss the setting up of some kind of machinery that would make it possible for those refugees who might decide themselves not to return, to claim compensation. Of course, the question of compensation covers both Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots.

Regardless of this, however, one should have in mind that the term "compensation" does not cover only the cases of those refugees who may not want to go back, but also those who will return but will claim compensation for damage caused to their homes and properties.

Also, compensation may be claimed by civil servants due to changes that will inevitably come about with the new federal structure of the state.

Thus, even if it is assumed that all Greek Cypriot refugees will choose to go back to their homes, the need will still arise for some kind of machinery to deal with all these matters."

PAPAIOANNOU PRAISES POSTPONEMENT OF UN RECOURSE

NC091912 Nicosia Domestic Television Service in Greek 1730 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] Speaking at a meeting of Famagusta and Limassol party cadres, AKEL Secretary General Papaioannou, among others, stated that any recourse to the United Nations is insignificant without inclusion of the demand for the withdrawal of the Turkish occupation troops and all foreign troops from Cypriot territory. He added: A recourse to the United Nations by itself does not provide the solution, but a means for us to promote the solution that we pursue. Mr Papaioannou stated that the decision of the Greek and Cypriot Governments for the recourse to take place in March 1983 reveals a high sense of responsibility and prudence.

In referring to the solution that should be achieved of the Cyprus issue, the AKEL secretary general said the Cypriot people are not prepared to accept anything less than a truly independent, sovereign, territorially integral, federal, nonaligned and demilitarized Cyprus.

GREEK, TURKISH NICOSIA MAYORS EXCHANGE VISITS

TA091951 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1930 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] The Nicosia Turkish and Greek Cypriot mayors have exchanged visits in the Turkish and Greek sectors of the city within the framework of the Nicosia reconstruction plan.

Nicosia Mayor Mustafa Akinci visited the Greek Cypriot sector today. The mayor of the Greek Cypriot sector of Nicosia visited the Turkish Cypriot sector of the city yesterday. During their visits, the mayors were accompanied by the delegations composed of city planners and architects. The mayors were also accompanied by the Cyprus director of the UN development program, his aide, and the project director of the reconstruction plan. Development areas in both sectors of the city, the ancient city walls and historic sites were visited.

BCP OFFICIAL BEGINS VISIT AT AKEL INVITATION

[Text] Mr Dimitur Stanishev, secretary of the Central Committee and chief of the Foreign Policy and International Relations Department of the Bulgarian Communist Party, is paying a short visit to Cyprus at the invitation of the AKEL Central Committee.

Mr Stanishev has already held a briefing meeting with AKEL Secretary General Papaioannou on matters of common interest.

At the airport, Mr Stanishev was welcomed by an AKEL delegation headed by Yiannis Katsouridhis, member of the Central Secretariat and the Political Bureau. Also present were representatives of the Bulgarian Embassy in Cyprus, headed by Ambassador Bocho Bochev.

ASALA STATEMENT ON ANKARA TRIAL OF ARMENIAN

NC100822 Nicosia TA NEA in Greek 9 Sep 82 pp 1, 3

[Text] The Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia [ASALA] charges that the trial of Armenian fighter (Levon Ekmekjian) by Evren's junta was fabricated. Evren's junta the other day sentenced the Armenian fighter to death.

ASALA warns that it will soon give a most serious reply to this parody trial of (Levon Ekmekjian) who is accused of having been involved in the armed attack at Ankara Airport a month ago. The full text of the ASALA statement, which reached our offices yesterday, is as follows:

"To the humanitarian organization, the organizations for the defense of the rights of convicts and to world public opinion: The trial of our fighter (Levon Ekmekjian) was a parody and his so-called 'confession' was made under pressure and torture as can be seen from his appearance.

"It was obvious from his eyes that torture, electroshock and brainwashing had been inflicted on him. This was easily done after his physical weakness caused by the severe wounds he sustained during the 'Erzerum operation' and the seizure of the Ankara International Airport last month.

"We challenge the Turkish Government to permit the medical team of the International Red Cross to examine (Ekmekjian) and ascertain his condition.

"The 'trial' and the so-called 'confession' clearly manifest the filthy nature of Evren's junta. We know our revolutionaries very well and we believe that our fighter would not have made such a statement under normal mental conditions.

"Our reply to this parody trial will be given very soon and it will be extremely serious.

"Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia."

CONSULAR ATTACHE MURDERED IN BULGARIA 9 SEP

TA091653 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Excerpt] The administrative attache in the Turkish Consulate in Burgas, Bora Suelkan, was martyred in an armed attack by an unidentified person today. According to reports reaching the Turkish radio and television news center from various sources, the incident occurred at 1445. Suelkan, who was on his way from the consulate to his house, was shot in front of his home. He was martyred at the scene of the incident. No one has yet claimed responsibility for the attack.

According to a statement issued by the Foreign Ministry, the revolver used by the murderer and six spent cartridges were found near Suelkan's body. Eyewitnesses said that the assailant was a short man wearing a mask. Various persons chased the assailant but could not catch him.

The Bulgarian ambassador to Ankara was invited to the Foreign Ministry following the incident. Ambassador Ercument Yavuzay was briefed on the incident. The Bulgarian ambassador was asked that the assailants be captured as soon as possible and that they receive the punishment they deserve.

Suelkan's martyrdom is the first attack against a Turkish official in the Eastern bloc. The Turkish ambassador to Sofia, Yildirim Keskin, immediately established contact with the Bulgarian Foreign Ministry and asked that the assassin be captured as soon as possible. Bulgarian Foreign Ministry officials said that the necessary directives have been given to high level Burgas officials in a bid to capture the assassin, and that a special security team has been sent from Sofia to Burgas to continue the investigation. The officials added that the necessary measures have been taken to more effectively protect the Turkish representations in Bulgaria. They also expressed their deep grief over the incident.

The Burgas police took security measures in the area following the incident, and launched an extensive operation to apprehend the assailant.

OECD COUNTRIES PLEDGE FURTHER ECONOMIC AID

TA101101 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] Some $500 million of the aid pledged by OECD countries to Turkey has been announced. Within the framework of the urgent aid program started in 1979 by the OECD, for this year the United States pledged aid amounting to $350 million. Italy, which extended a total of $115 million aid last year, announced that this year it will extend a $120 million loan, $100 million of which will be used to pay for its exports and $20 million for the Karakaya dam project. Belgium, in turn, announced that it will extend economic aid worth $7 million to Turkey this year.

Britain, FRG, Japan and France, who have pledged economic aid to Turkey this year, have not yet announced the amount of aid they will extend. The total aid to be extended to Turkey within the framework of the OECD urgent aid program is expected to reach some $1 billion by the end of the year.

ARAB SUMMIT MIDDLE EAST PEACE PLAN WELCOMED

TA101027 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 10 Sep 82

CONSULTATIVE ASSEMBLY ADOPTS ELECTION ARTICLES

TA090932 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 0430 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Excerpts] The Consultative Assembly approved 10 more articles of the draft constitution yesterday and returned five articles to the constitutional committee. The constitutional committee deleted all the articles on the state consultative council from the draft constitution.

Article 76, which was adopted yesterday, stipulates that every Turkish citizen over the age of 21 has the right to vote in elections. Soldiers and NCO's serving in the army, detainees and convicts will not be able to vote in elections.

Article 90 stipulates that the Turkish Grand National Assembly can decide to postpone elections by 1 year if there is a war. The president will also be able to ask the Turkish Grand National Assembly to postpone the elections for the same reason. If an Assembly seat is vacated, a byelection can be held only once in every legislative period and only 30 months after general elections. If 5 percent of the Assembly seats are vacated, byelections will be held within 3 months. Byelections cannot be held 1 year before general elections. The president cannot ask the postponement of elections 1 year before the presidential election.

Article 91 stipulates that elections are held under the general administration and supervision of the judiciary.

Article 96 specifies the situations where membership in the Turkish Grand National Assembly is cancelled. If a deputy who resigns from his party joins another party or joins the government, his membership in the Assembly will be cancelled. A deputy who resigns from his party cannot be nominated by the central organs of any party during the next elections. Those deputies who were found not responsible in connection with their parties which were closed down by the Constitutional Court will continue to be deputies as independents. Those deputies found to be responsible will have their memberships in the Assembly cancelled.

Article 100 is on the Grand National Assembly Chairmanship Council. It stipulates that three elections will be held in one legislative period for the Assembly president, deputy presidents, secretaries and administrative officers. Those elected in the first round will serve a term of 1 year while those elected for the second and third rounds will serve 2 years each.

Security Council Members

TA091526 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1450 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] Ankara, 9 Sep (AA) -- Temporary articles of the draft constitution will be put into writing on Sunday, September 12, well informed sources said today. The sources said, "state consultative council" is deleted from the draft, and the status of the members of "National Security Council" were defined as "consultants to the president."

Members of "the National Security Council" will act as consultants to the president following the referendum on the new constitution, and the consultants will carry on their "official ranks" until the new parliament is elected.

The terms of office for the presidential consultants will be seven years, the same as the president himself.

Radio, TV Administration

TA091604 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1400 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Excerpt] The Consultative Assembly today adopted Article 167 of the draft constitution regulating the establishment and activities of the radio and television administration and news agencies. The article is as follows: The Radio and Television Administration and News Agencies:

Radio and television stations can only be established by the state and their administration is regulated in the form of public juridical personalities. Laws regulate the manner in which their organs are established and their functioning in accordance with the principle of impartiality. All radio and television broadcasting is performed in accordance with the principle of impartiality, taking into consideration the interests of the state and the nation. The selection of news and programs, their presentation and the fulfillment of the duty of helping Turkish culture and education is done in compliance with the requisites of the indivisible unity of the state, the country and the nation, of public order, or public tranquillity, of general morality and the fundamental principles of the republic. The correctness of news is secured. The director general of the radio and television administration and three of the administrative council members are appointed by the president.

The impartiality of news agencies established by the state or receiving financial assistance from the state is a principle.

Freedom of Press

[Excerpt] The Consultative Assembly has adopted Article 28 of the draft constitution in connection with freedom of the press. The article states that the press is free, that it cannot be censored, and that the establishment of a publication house cannot be linked to the condition of obtaining a permit or depositing financial guarantees. The article stipulates that, with the condition that provisions of international agreements remain secret, publication in any language other than the official one depends on permission. The article, which stipulates that the state is to take measures to insure the freedom of the press and of gathering information, also states that provisions in Article 26 on the expression and diffusion of opinions will be implemented in limiting the freedom of the press and news gathering.

The article further says: All those who publish and have published, no matter in what capacity, news and articles which threaten the domestic and external security of the state and the indivisible unity of the state, the country and the nation; and which are of a nature inciting mutiny and revolt, are held responsible in accordance with the laws pertaining to these crimes. In such instances, distribution can be prevented.

No ban may be placed on the publication of news concerning events provided decisions given by a judge are kept secret within limits specified by law for the purpose of carrying out judicial duty in accordance with its goals.

Continuous or noncontinuous publications may be confiscated with a judge's decision if an investigation and prosecution has begun in connection with offenses stipulated by law or -- in cases where preventive action is warranted -- by the order of the authority empowered by law to protect the indivisible unity of the state, the country and the nation, national security, public order and general morality, and to prevent crime. The article stipulates that the pertinent authority which decides on the confiscation should inform the authorized judge of its decision within 24 hours, and that if the decision is not approved by the judge within 48 hours, it is considered invalid.

TCP STATEMENT ON MILITARY REGIME ANNIVERSARY

TA091034 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Turkish Communist Party Central Committee statement of 7 Sep 1982 -- read by announcer]

[Text] What has the junta done to our country in 2 years? The junta administration continues with its heavy oppression of our people. From our workers to our medium-income citizens, some 45 million people, except for a handful of rich men and the monopolies, have lived and are living the most difficult and most bitter 2 years of their history. The reactionary military dictatorship is looming over our country like a nightmare. The junta generals did not fulfill any of the promises they made to the people. They could not solve any of the vital problems facing our country. They led our country to the brink of a precipice.

They said they would prevent terrorism but theirs was a reign of terror. First and foremost they attacked our working class. They tortured the most distinguished sons of our people. They filled up the dungeons. They hanged young men. They crippled thousands of patriots. They released the leaders of terrorism, the Nationalist Action Party [NAP]. They said they would improve the economy. They exacerbated it instead. They worsened the crisis. They reduced the purchasing power of the workers, civil servants and peasants to the level of 20 years ago. They caused hundreds of thousands of citizens to have the little money they had grabbed by the banks, bankers and giant corporations. They accrued such heavy debts that the country cannot repay them in decades. They mortgaged the public economic enterprises and all the public assets to the World Bank. They gave, and are continuing to give, the money they collected from the people by threat of the bayonet to a handful of corporations which cannot keep their own factories and banks going.

They said they would bring democracy. They brought this black punishment constitution. They turned our country into a concentration camp. They are getting ready to maintain this order with a legal sheath with the help of the constitution they want to impose on the people.

They said they were in the footsteps of Ataturk. They betrayed all the positive heritages of Ataturk. They said they wanted friendship with all our neighbors. Instead, they began to obey the U.S. administration even more. They opened our lands to new U.S. forces. They brought our country to the brink of nuclear fire in the interest of Reagan and his ilk. They completely turned our country into a springboard of the U.S. administration and the NATO chiefs against the socialist countries and the Middle East peoples. They are waging campaigns against the Soviet Union which is our friend in time of need.

The junta generals separated our country from all the peoples that defend peace and freedom, from the world progressive public opinion. They came to power with the pretext of the NAP's fascist terror. Now, in order to remain in power, they are trying to make use of the attacks of a handful of reactionary Armenian terrorists attached to imperialism. They are trying to instill fear in the people. They abolished the constitution with brute force. Then they started to try patriotic unionists, politicians, scientists, peace lovers, youths and every progressive force with the pretext that they were going to abolish the constitution. They are afraid of the reactions of our people to the brute force and oppression and to their antipeople policies that trample our national interests. On one hand they are trying to insure the future of their power, and on the other they fight each other for higher positions. They want to impose this reactionary constitution on our people for the future authoritarian civilian regime, in harmony with all the reactionary forces. However, the rising reactions have further increased their fear and panic. They are trying to suppress and frighten our people by stepping up oppression, anti-Sovietism and anticommunism.

Even on the morning of 12 September 1980, the Turkish Communist Party [TCP] said: This junta is not going to solve any of the problems of our people. Our people, the progressive forces, see the realities better than others today. The junta means hunger, unemployment, terror, bloodshed and tears.

We can show the brute force and hypocrisy of the reactionary military dictatorship, of the U.S. imperialism, the collaborationist monopolies, landlords and reactionaryism to wider masses today. There are increasing possibilities to support them in enhancing their struggle for bread, peace and freedom.

The TCP Central Committee wants all the party organizations and Communists both inside and outside the country to work with more dedication, more creatively and more actively, without forgetting the new dangers. The TCP now calls especially on the workers, peasants and all the progressive and patriotic forces, both military and civilian, to unite their forces and strike a heavy blow to the junta in the constitutional referendum. For that purpose, it calls on them to enhance their unity of action from now on. The TCP has supported and and will continue to support every step taken in that direction. The invincible power that will overcome and destroy the junta, and that will lead to success the struggle for independence, peace, democracy and socialism is the people's common struggle and unity.

[signed] TCP Central Committee, 7 September 1982

COURT REJECTS PETITION TO RELEASE ECEVIT EARLY

TA080820 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 8 Sep 82

[Text] A petition concerning Ecevit [former RPP leader], who is in prison because of his views and opinions, has been rejected.

The Ankara Martial Law Command 2d Military Court rejected a petition submitted by Ecevit's lawyers asking the court to deduct his period of detention from his sentence. Ecevit is serving a term of 87 days for having expressed his views and opinions in violation of the junta's resolution No 52. The lawyers said that Ecevit had been detained and taken into custody for his remarks to a Norwegian paper and for his statements to foreign televisions. Both cases still continue. The lawyers said the period of detention and custody should be deducted from Ecevit's sentence and Ecevit should stay in prison only 34 days.

BAYULKEN ON NATO RELATIONS, AIRCRAFT PRODUCTION

NC100713 Istanbul HURRIYET in Turkish 7 Sep 82 pp 3, 11

[Bulent Erandac report]

[Text] Ankara, [HURRIYET] -- National Defense Minister Umit Haluk Bayulken has stated that the necessary aircraft to meet our needs, including F-104s, will be obtained from NATO countries. He added: "Thus our needs in this area will be met."

The following conversation took place between the HURRIYET correspondent and Bayulken:

Question: Would you give us some information on the latest position regarding Turkey-NATO relations? What is the situation on the decisions taken by NATO to strengthen the Turkish Armed Forces?

Answer: As is known, Turkey is a very important and valuable member of NATO. Our cooperation with every member of the alliance, and with Honorable Luns, secretary general of the organization, is continuing in the most productive manner. It is a known fact that NATO wishes to strengthen Turkish Armed Forces within the framework of the strength targets determined by the alliance.

It is also a known fact that unanimous decisions have been taken in this direction. These decisions are included in the communiques issued after the meetings of the NATO Defense Committee and periodic foreign ministers meetings. These decisions envisage military aid to Turkey in view of its economic condition. As is known, the United States and Federal Germany are giving us valuable assistance in this respect. The contributions of our Canadian allies too [sentence unfinished]

In conclusion, I would like to say that with the assistance of the United States and Federal Germany, coupled with our national efforts and contributions, the modernization of our armed forces is developing according to plan in a determined manner.

Question: When will it be known what type of aircraft will be produced by the Turkish aircraft industry? When will the foundations be laid? When at the latest will the Turkish fighter planes be able to fly? How many fighers will be manufactured? At what stage is the work at the Turkish aircraft industry?

Answer: The modernization program, in addition to the production project which I have mentioned above, contains development programs envisaging the maintenance and renewal of the aircraft currently used by our air force in accordance with the fast-developing advanced technology. We are progressing on this path in a satisfactory manner.

Moreover, we are obtaining the necessary suitable aircraft including F-104G fighters from our allies, who have partially completed their modernization programs, in order to replace our planes which have suffered normal depreciation or which are no longer serviceable. Our needs are thus being met.

CAPTURE OF 20 KURDISH SEPARATISTS REPORTED

TA091810 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Summary] The press and public relations office of the 1st Army and the Istanbul, Canakkale, Edirne, Tekirdag, and Kirklareli Martial Law Command has issued a statement saying that the armed robbery of a jewelry shop in Istanbul on 5 August was organized by the illegal Rizgari organization [a separatist Kurdish organization] and that 20 members of the organization have been captured. In searches conducted in the houses of the members, documents in connection with the organization's activities, some stolen gold and three revolvers were found.

BULVAR ACCUSES PLO, ARABS OF INCONSISTENCY

NC090654 Istanbul BULVAR in Turkish 4 Sep 82 p 3

["Politely" column by Hsamettin Celebi]

[Excerpts] If Turkey were only to turn its attention to its own vital interests in any matter concerning the Middle East, there would be an outcry from the Arab countries: "Is that all you care about Muslim brotherhood?"

According to the Arabs, Turkey, whose population is almost entirely composed of Muslims, should consider Muslim brotherhood the only criterion in international relations. Even in matters which could cause very little harm to the Arabs but which could bring great benefits to Turkey, Turkey must behave in this manner. That is, Turkey must not establish any useful relationship and if it has already done so, it must disrupt it, because this is what "Muslim brotherhood dictates."

Again according to the Arabs, Turkey must not trade with Israel. Turkish ships must not call at Israeli ports and Turkish planes must not land at Israeli airports.

Why do we mention all this? Because we wish to stress that the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) militants and leaders are on such intimate terms with the Greek Cypriot and Greek leaders that it looks as if they are acting in this manner out of spite for Turkey, as if the "tyranny" the Palestinians suffered at the hand of Israel was greater than the tyranny the Turkish Cypriots suffered at the hands of the Greek Cypriots, and as if the Turkish Cypriots were not Muslims.

In the face this these events, we cannot help stressing one point quite clearly: It is these Palestinians who trained the Armenian criminals who showered bullets on the diplomats of the Turkish Republic serving in other countries. Again, it is these Palestinians who trained and sent back [to Turkey] the derelicts who cherished an inordinate desire to tear the Turkish state to pieces.

Turkey has long been aware of this situation, but the entire world has now also become familiar with these facts after the Israeli occupation of Lebanon through unrejectable documents.

Our nation feels deeply grieved in the face of all these bitter facts. To be more specific, it does not feel as much concern for the Palestinians as it did 3 months ago.

Just at this juncture, our foreign minister, Honorable Ilter Turkmen, repeatedly stressed at the foreign ministers' conference of the Muslim states that our support for the "cause" of the Palestinians will continue. Oddly enough, Turkmen's speeches were televised in the same program as reports that the Palestinians and the Greek Cypriots were closely embracing each other, that the Armenian terrorist training center had been transferred to the Greek Cypriot sector and that Denktas was making alarming statements.

The Turkish public has therefore regarded Turkmen's speeches as strange and will continue to do so. The Turkish public wants Turkmen now to turn to the entire Arab world and ask: "Is this compatible with Muslim brotherhood?" and to add: "If this state of affairs persists, we shall consider ourselves free to determine our actions."

Muslim brotherhood cannot be one-sided. It is high time the Palestinians realized this.

PAPANDREOU SAYS TURKEY MAKING NUCLEAR BOMB

NC091739 Athens ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 9 Sep 82 pp 1, 13

[Excerpt] In an address to the socialist group of the European Parliament as well as in answers to questions by the Europarliamentarians, Prime Minister Papandreou:

Clarified Greece's position within the EEC and NATO and on the Middle East.

Found the opportunity to present the Greek positions on the Cyprus issue and the Turkish threat in the Aegean.

Separated the issue of the U.S. bases from the existence of nuclear weapons in Greece, which is a matter of government policy and which is not a subject of negotiation.

Stressed that Greece always hopes for and proposes the denuclearization of the Balkans to which Yugoslavia, Romania and Bulgaria also agree. Mr Papandreou said that this is opposed by Turkey only, and he cited foreign press reports according to which Turkey, together with Pakistan, is making a nuclear bomb.

KARAMANLIS SENDS NATIONAL DAY CABLE TO ZHIVKOV

NC091229 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 9 Sep 82

[Text] President Konstandinos Karamanlis has sent a congratulatory cable to Bulgarian President Todor Zhivkov on his country's national day.

Mr Karamanlis states in his cable: On the occasion of the national day of the People's Republic of Bulgaria, please accept my warm congratulations as well as my and the Greek people's best wishes for your personal happiness and the prosperity of the neighborly and friendly Bulgarian people. I am convinced, Mr Karamanlis concludes, that our forthcoming meeting will contribute in developing the friendly bilateral relations for the good of peace and cooperation in the Balkans and in the world.

SECRETARY LUNS URGES GRAIN EMBARGO AGAINST USSR

NC102130 Paris AFP in English 2050 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] Brussels, Sep 10 (AFP) -- North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) Secretary General Joseph Luns today urged a grain embargo against the Soviet Union instead of the current U.S. embargo of the Soviet gas pipeline to Western Europe.

In a semi-private interview with a group of visiting United States journalists, Mr Luns said: "The best way to destablise the USSR is to keep them hungry."

This a reference to the argument that Washington was being hypocritical in expecting Europe to take the brunt in giving up lucrative pipeline contracts while the United States maintain its grain sales to the Soviets.

Mr Luns advocated sanctions against any country violating an embargo of grain sales to Moscow.

When the United States imposed a grain embargo on Moscow following the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, the Soviets had no trouble simply transferring their purchases to other countries such as Argentina.

Referring to the row between Washington and European countries with firms going ahead with pipeline contracts in defiance of the U.S. embargo, Mr Luns said: "I am not saying Europe is blameless."

But the NATO chief took issue with the claim that the Soviet regime could be overthrown by by means of such moves as the U.S. embargo in the use of American technology in the trans-Siberian pipeline.

Mr Luns also disclaimed U.S. reports that French President Francois Mitterrand had broken his word with President Ronald Reagan by ordering French firms to proceed with pipeline contracts.

If President Reagan had discussed the pipeline row with his French counterpart, Mr Luns said, he had done so "so tactfully, nobody noticed it".

AL-QADHDHAFI, KREISKY HOLD BRIEF TALKS

AU102030 Vienna Domestic Television Service in German 2015 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] During a lightning visit this afternoon, Libyan revolution leader Al-Qadhdhafi met with Chancellor Kreisky. The main topic of the 1-hour talk and subsequent press conference was the new Arab peace plan. This same afternoon, Al-Qadhdhafi departed by air for Libya.

Al-Qadhdhafi Criticizes Summit

LD110838 Tripoli Voice of Arab Homeland in Arabic 0115 GMT 12 Sep 82

[Text] The leader of the revolution has stressed that the Fes conference produced nothing, that its resolutions are valueless and that even the Zionists are not satisfied with Fahd's capitulationist plan, which offers them everything.

During a press conference held during his stopover in the Austrian capital yesterday, the leader explained that the Fes conference failed terribly and that the participants in it quarrelled and disagreed among themselves so that a number of participating leaders left without signing a single document. At the press conference, attended by a large number of Western and Arab radio and agency correspondents, the brother leader spoke of the nature of the existing conflict between the Zionists and the Arab nation. He said: The Zionists do not want peace and will only accept the destruction of the Arab nation; this is their target. He stressed the necessity for the Arab nation to confront the Zionist-American death seige; otherwise, it will have to accept annihilation.

The leader explained that the Arab nation's existence is being threatened by the aggressive nature of the Zionists, who have left peace no chance, because fundamentally they are not seeking peace but are working for the annihilation of Arabs from the ocean to the Gulf.

The leader dealt with the crime of dispersing the Palestinian resistance in a number of Arab countries, stressing that accepting this dispersal is considered high treason and that those who accept the Palestinians in their countries are committing this treason. He explained that the dispersal of the Palestinian people means destroying the rights of a people to live on earth and under the sun. He stressed that Palestine is the Palestinians' homeland and that the Zionists came from their original homelands to Palestine as occupiers. He wondered why the world does not accept the return of the Israelis to their original homelands and recognize the right of the Palestinian people to live in their homeland, Palestine, from which they were driven out by the force of arms.

Further Statements

AU101708 Vienna Domestic Service in German 1600 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Brigitte Fuchs report from Vienna's Schwechat Airport on stopover by Libyan leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi on 10 September with recorded portions of Al-Qadhdhafi and Kreisky press conference statements; Al-Qadhdhafi remarks in Arabic with superimposed German translation]

[Excerpt] After talks which lasted more than 1 hour, Colonel al-Qadhdhafi and Chancellor Kreisky answered journalists' questions. Asked about the purpose of his surprising stopover in Vienna, Al-Qadhdhafi said:

[Begin recording] Chancellor Kreisky is our friend, and I wanted to know whether he was well, and thank God, he is well. [end recording]

Al-Qadhdhafi does not think that the summit meeting at the Moroccan city of Fes was a success. He regards this summit as a failure and does not believe that he could be isolated within the Arab world. Regarding Arab-Israeli relations he said:

[Begin recording] Because Israel has not left any cause for peace at all, [as heard] they will always wage wars against the Arabs. The situation has substantially changed. Earlier, the Israelis claimed that they needed peace, but now it is the other way around, because the Arabs need peace vis-a-vis Israel. [end recording]

Al-Qadhdhafi went on to say that he considered the dispersal of Palestinians among many Arab countries a mistake, and that this was why he did not admit any Palestinians to Libya. It would be better to send the Israelis back to the countries where they had come from.

Chancellor Kreisky then said that the attacks against his contacts with Al-Qadhdhafi are not justified: [Begin recording] I consider my relations with Colonel al-Qadhdhafi highly positive. [end recording]

The chancellor did not want to comment on the results of the Fes meeting, but declared that anything that served peace was useful at the moment. However, he added, Israel -- in contrast to the Arabs -- is not willing to negotiate at the moment. In conclusion, Kreisky recalled what he had said on the occasion of Al-Qadhdhafi's last visit to Vienna in March, a statement for which he was internationally attacked at that time: [Begin recording] "I fear that very soon there will be a war in Lebanon. You all know the facts." [end recording]

Kreisky Remarks

[Report on Libyan leader Al-Qadhdhafi and Chancellor Kreisky Vienna Schwechat Airport press conference on 10 September -- with recorded portions; Al-Qadhdhafi remarks in Arabic with superimposed German translation]

[Excerpt] [Begin Al-Qadhdhafi recording] I believe that the conference in Fes has failed -- as well, it is clear that the conference there has failed. [end recording]

Asked about the PLO, he said he had not been asked to accept its fighters and that he regarded any acceptance of the PLO as high treason. In reply to the question whether he was not afraid of finding himself isolated with his policy, Al-Qadhdhafi replied that Fes has not brought any new decision or consensus.

Then Kreisky commented on the Arab peace plan of Fes. [Begin recording] [Words indistinct] there can now be possibilities of negotiations for a peaceful solution. It is true that the Israeli Government rejects such negotiations. On the other hand, it is equally true that on the Arab side at any rate, one regards such negotiations as conceivable. That is the starting position. It goes without saying that I assess this more positively than Colonel al-Qadhdhafi. That is where the differences in our basic political attitudes lie. He is a revolutionary, and I am a politician who favors evolutionary developments. [end recording]

Asked about the meaning of his visit to Veinna, the Libyan politician declared: [Begin recording] Chancellor Kreisky is, well, our friend, and I wanted to know whether he is well, and thank God he is well. [end recoridng]

TELEPHONE SERVICE WITH MOSCOW RESTORED

AU111950 Vienna Domestic Television Service in German 1730 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Excerpts] The telephone communications between Moscow and foreign countries were interrupted yesterday for several hours. The Soviet capital could be reached again today from Vienna via the international telephone exchange. Other Western countries, Sweden and France for example, still have no telephone connections with Moscow. The international exchange in the Soviet capital explained the disruption as a technical breakdown in the Moscow telephone exchange.

According to the Moscow international exchange, telephone communications should return to normal by Monday. The failure of a computer at the Moscow telephone exchange should be repaired by then. The difficulties of the past few days should therefore not occur again.

[Voice of an Austrian telephone supervisor] The latest disruption in service today was between 0730 and 1300 hours. Yesterday we had a long disruption from 1230 to 1930 hours. Yesterday evening we had a shorter disruption of 1 hour at about 2000 hours.

TRUDEAU ANNOUNCES MAJOR CABINET RESHUFFLE

NC101806 Paris AFP in English 1758 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] Ottawa, Sept 10 (AFP) -- Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliot Trudeau today announced a major cabinet reshuffle involving the Foreign, Justice, Finance, and Energy Ministries.

Finance Minister Alan MacEachen became head of the Foreign Ministry, replacing Mark MacGuigan, who takes over the Justice Ministry. Justice Minister Jean Chretien replaces Marc Lalonde as energy minister, and Mr Lalonde assumes Mr MacEachen's post as finance minister.

Mr Trudeau also appointed Jack Austin, previously a junior minister without portolio, minister of state at the newly-created Social Development Ministry.

During his two and a half years as finance minister, Mr MacEachen, 61, came under heavy criticism because of his efforts to curb public spending to control inflation.

Critics assailed the last two Canadian budgets he presented for doing too little to bring down the rising rate of unemployment which is currently running at 12.2 percent, a record high.

Mr MacEachen leaves the Finance Ministry the day after the International Monetary Fund and World Bank governors' meeting in Toronto, which he organized. Informed sources said Mr MacEachen requested to be moved to the Foreign Ministry, which he previously headed from 1974 to 1976.

Mr Lalonde, 61, considered the Trudeau lieutenant who "gets the job done!" takes over the Finance Ministry at a time of economic difficulties for Canada.

As energy minister since 1980, he supervised a controversial policy designed to make Canada self-sufficient in energy. This policy brought Canada into conflict with the United States because of its goal of eliminating foreign involvement from Canadian energy interests.

Mr Chretien, 48, who takes over energy, is another important Trudeau lieutenant. As minister of justice, he was a driving force in Canada's moves to patriate Canada's Constitution which was enshrined in a British act of Parliament. Canada's new Constitution was promulgated last April.

Mr MacGuigan, 51, leaves his first cabinet-level post as foreign minister after a lackluster performance. His previous career as a law professor should prove useful to him in his new job as justice minister.

Mr Austin, who becomes minister of state in the newly-created Social Development Ministry, hails from western Canada, where Prime Minister Trudeau lacks widespread support.

Sources close to the prime minister said a second cabinet reshuffle involving other ministries could take place after by-elections in three constituencies scheduled for October.

The government list is:

TEXT OF SCHMIDT STATE OF NATION ADDRESS

DW090929 Cologne ARD Television Network in German 0700 GMT 9 Sep 82

[State of the nation address delivered by Chancellor Helmut Schmidt to the Bundestag in Bonn -- live]

[Text] Mr President, Ladies and Gentlemen: To begin with, I endorse the friendly birthday wishes [by the Bundestag president] to all colleagues, male and female, who have not been individually named [applause]. Now to the matter at hand.

Since the last report on the state of the nation in April last year, the tensions in East-West relations have intensified. As a result, it has become increasingly difficult to formulate German policy in the shadow of such tensions. The SED and the GDR political leaders are making great efforts to promote their prestige and their political views here in our country and among the West German public. This prestige has suffered a great deal as a consequence of the doubling of the compulsory exchange rates. The Federal Government demands a major correction to this. [applause]

By the way, if we were in the place of the communist propagandists, the minimum which they would have to do in their own interests would be to reduce the amount to the old level, at least for pensioners, the socially underprivileged and young people. [applause] The East Berlin leaders are aware that we want the amount reduced to the old level for everyone. This would not entail any financial loss to the GDR because many more people would travel than do today.

If such a decision has not yet been made over there, then this is probably attributable to the desire to limit areas of contact between the two parts of the German nation. I will not rule out bureaucratic dogmatism in this respect. Both these points also apply to current hindrances to passenger traffic, for instance to those fellow citizens who previously left the GDR legally. Despite these burdens, it was possible last year to maintain inter-German relations and the situation in and around Berlin in a calm state.

The reason for my meeting with General Secretary Honecker was to achieve a better understanding of each other through direct dialogue, and thus jointly face the responsibility for peace. In this connection, the German compatriots in both states expected the governments to maintain and strengthen relations with each other on the basis of concluded treaties and on the Helsinki Final Act. It is the Federal Government's firm belief that such meetings should take place at regular intervals. They should become part of the normal operating procedure of the two German states in dealing with each other. For this reason, the Federal Government continues to be interested in the implementation of the agreed upon return visit by Mr Honecker. There have been no agreements on the date. If this visit, this return visit, is to be effective -- which we desire -- the political climate surrounding overall relations must indeed be in order.

The federal president and I recently congratulated Mr Honecker on his 70th birthday. Seventy years -- this surely is a date on which one takes a look at the past. Mr Honecker comes from the Saarland and probably thinks of it at times -- just as Herbert Wehner or Wolfgang Mischnick think of their Saxon homeland or Rainer Barzel of east Prussia. In this regard, German destinies are similar.

I will not ignore the fact that Mr Honecker lost 10 years of his life in the Brandenburg prison as an opponent of National Socialist rulers. Not many of the generation that had to bear this are still alive. Kurt Schumacher has been dead for some 30 years now.

We insist on the demand that Germans be allowed to talk with Germans. We insist that the hopes of the citizens of both German states for more meetings and closeness must not be disappointed. After all, despite all the elements promoting separation, what we have in common and the will for closeness remain alive.

I visited the Ratzeburg Cathedral during my vacation this summer. Even today, Ratzeburg is part of the diocese of the Land Bishop of Mecklenburg in Schwerin, the same diocese to which Guestrow also belongs. Both cathedrals have their origin in north German gothic clay brick architecture which testifies to the developed unity of German and European culture from Schleswig to the Baltic area. I was deeply moved by this dual experience: first Guestrow in the GDR, and then Ratzeburg on this side of the border, together with conversations with the people in those two churches. Thus, there are millions of Germans on both sides who are deeply moved by the fact that they cannot get together even though they want to be united. [applause]

Because the GDR State Council chairman as well as the FRG chancellor say that war must never again emanate from German soil, there is the requirement that not only do the two heads of government talk with each other, but that all Germans stay in contact with each other as well. [applause] This also applies to peace in Europe and to all citizens of Europe. It applies to the Poles, the Hungarians, the Czechs, just as it applies to Scandinavians, Austrians, Greeks and so forth. Whoever does not wish to talk with his neighbor and refuses to listen to him jeopardizes his own ability to maintain peace with his neighbor. [applause]

This applies much more to Germans with Germans for many other reasons. I underscore the view of colleague Genscher that both German states could and should make essential contributions to the discussion on peace and disarmament, regardless of their affiliation with different alliance systems. Concern about peace, however, is not confined to Germany alone. Fear and concern about the threats to peace are spreading in many countries. The demand for disarmament and the longing for a more peaceful world is finding greater expression everywhere this year. We all share this longing, and for this reason security through a contractually agreed upon military balance on a lower level of armament remains a major element of the Federal Government's peace policy. Weapons alone will not permanently safeguard peace and they cannot even reliably guarantee lasting security. Security is not simply the result of mathematical equations. Peace is based on frankness and confidence, on dialogue, on negotiations. Anyone who wants to be on good terms with others needs treaties. [applause] There will be no security in the long run between East and West without any treaties in general, and treaties on disarmament in particular.

After long opposition and a long debate here in the Bundestag, the Federal Republic ratified and signed the Nonproliferation Treaty. We Germans definitely renounced the possession of nuclear weapons and we will keep to our contractual duty. The Federal Government is thus all the more justified to repeatedly demand in the name of Germany that the nuclear powers eventually fulfill their part of the treaty. [applause]

With inner passion I repeat the appeal which I have twice voiced before the United Nations, an appeal to the nuclear superpowers in which I said: You have committed yourselves in the same treaty regarding nuclear disarmament. Adhere to this commitment! [applause]

For the Federal Republic, as the country against which most of the new Soviet medium-range missiles are aimed, the American-Soviet negotiations in Geneva on medium-range nuclear weapons are of special significance. The Federal Government has contributed both to the realization of this conference and to its negotiating goals. I am convinced that both sides will negotiate seriously in Geneva because they themselves must have great concerns in this regard.

These negotiations have been facilitated by the so-called NATO dual decision, which represents NATO's response to the stationing of Soviet SS-20 missiles. This is the first time that a decision does not build in the automatic reaction of catching up with the other side's increased armament. The crux of this decision lies rather in the proposal to reduce armament on a mutually agreed upon basis. It envisages a 4-year period for achieving such an agreement. The agreement is expected to achieve a balance through disarmament and not through increased armament. [applause]

The Federal Government will continue to strive with all its might for the achievement of results at the Geneva negotiations prior to the end of next year. We consider close coordination with the United States as the most effective element in this respect.

Our insistence on a contractually safeguarded balance means that we also consider unilateral disarmament by our side in the future to be just as destabilizing as a unilateral increase in armament by the other. I add that a contractual renunciation of our own power does not mean we will not resist a foreign power if it violates our human dignity and our human rights. It does not mean this.

We know from Hungary, the CSSR, Afghanistan, Lebanon, the Falklands and southern Africa that states repeatedly use force against other peoples. Thus we realize the actual dangers under which we live and against which we must protect ourselves.

A strong process of discussion has begun among the people's of North America and Europe on NATO's military strategy. People in North America, Europe, both parts of Germany and everywhere -- the people who are engaged for peace -- demand answers to their urgent questions. Viennese Cardinal Koenig described their fears as follows: After total nuclear destruction there will be nobody who can complain or make a new beginning. We are sitting on a powder keg, he said. We are afraid, yet we scoop more powder into the barrel. We speak of security and mean our security. We speak of disarmament and we mean the disarmament of others. However, security is also the security of others, and disarmament is also our own disarmament. [applause]

That from the quotation of Cardinal Koenig whom I have known and very much respected for years. [shouts] I am amazed to hear interpellations when someone speaks of his respect for another person. [applause]

I will add another thought to what Cardinal Koenig has said. Our soldiers will not wage war, but they will show a neighbor, were he to have belligerent thoughts in mind, that we can defend ourselves. Our soldiers will show that a great risk would be run if we were attacked by force, or if they wanted to force their political system on us by force or with threats. In such a case, we can defend ourselves. [applause]

This is the concept of deterrence. Mutual deterrence is nothing new in history. What is new, however, is the enormous destructive capacity of nuclear deterrence weapons. It is also new that the destructive power is enough to destroy the enemy's people more than once. It is new that these weapons can destroy all of humanity.

Together with Dr Kohl, I spoke a few days ago at the Catholic rally [in Duesseldorf]. I asked: Should a Christian threaten the use of nuclear weapons for deterrence purposes although he should know or at least foresee that he could not bear responsibility for the actual firing of these weapons? I added another question: Is it only us, the Christians, who feel oppressed by this dilemma? Doesn't the atheist Soviet general secretary, don't his Politburo colleagues have similar deep doubts?

We Germans, at the border of the two pacts, are forced more than others to deal with these problems. Therefore, I take the discussion on the state of and the development possibilities of Western strategy most seriously. I take seriously what colleague Bahr and others recently said about this, and I also take seriously what colleague Biedenkopf recently said about this in public.

I wish that everyone including the opposition, would consider the statements of Mr Biedenkopf with equal seriousness. I share Biedenkopf's opinion when he says that all people are jointly interested in preserving life on earth and the life of mankind. The nuclear danger has caused the people and their nations to form a partnership for survival. [applause]

I add that the will to survive alone is not enough to guarantee our protection against a military threat. We need agreements on arms reduction, and not only regarding nuclear weapons. Agreed-on security can be achieved only through negotiations. The NATO commander in chief in Europe formulated it recently as follows: In my opinion, the only way to the future of a world we desire is through the negotiating table. We must negotiate on disarmament and arms control, on all kinds of armed forces and all kinds of weapons. This is the only way to stop the arms race on both sides.

General Rogers thus indicated that soldiers are also taking part in fulfilling the task which the pope formulated as follows for the Catholic rally: If the world situation should become increasingly threatening in view of totalitarian ideologies and a frightening arms race, you should try in your respective places to find politically responsible ways to find a peaceful solution of conflicts.

Ladies and gentlemen, our political action for security and peace is based on a sound and functioning Atlantic alliance. We contribute some 500,000 well-trained and well-motivated soldiers to the alliance. We are prepared to more than double this figure if needed for defense. At the same time, soldiers from six friendly nations in the alliance are stationed on our territory. These are facts we might well recall occasionally for some of our allies and the public opinion in their countries. I did this recently in California.

The American commander in chief in Europe knows that on the first day of a conflict, the Europeans would constitute 90 percent of his ground forces and three-quarters of his naval and air forces.

These basic facts are not changed by temporary differences of opinion -- I quote the Bonn NATO summit statement -- in a partnership of equals where nobody rules or is overruled. These differences of opinion change nothing in the basic fact. Decades ago, I think it was 20 years ago, Henry Kissinger published a book on American-European relations under the title of "The Troubled Partnership." This was 20 years ago. His compatriot, Robert Osgood, also wrote a book 20 years ago entitled "The Entangled Alliance."

I cite these two books -- some 20 years ago -- to show that by God, differences of opinion in the alliance are nothing new, but rather something normal. However, they must not become a burden. President Reagan has used a formula in this connection with which I wanted to create the right perspective for a few things on my trip through America. Both of us have spoken of family quarrels, and they can also be settled within the family, as in every family.

I noticed the correctness of this characterization during the intense talks the month before last which I had with an old friend -- new U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz. All problems involving American-European and American-German relations were touched on, naturally, including the problem of the American embargo in connection with the Europe-Soviet natural gas pipeline deal, as well as our relations with our neighbors in the East in general and the GDR in particular.

All these questions demonstrate, by the way, how great the consensus is between the European members of the alliance as well.

In this context, I would like to emphasize the trustful and intensive cooperation in which our relationshp with France and with President Mitterrand excels. [applause] This cooperation is also important in connection with the European Community. The Community is not in good shape at the moment. Many members are placing their bets on the German EC presidency -- we alternate every 6 months -- which will begin on 1 January. You will recall that under the last German presidency the European Currency System was created, which has since proved its worth at a time marked by profound instability on the foreign exchange markets and by rapidly fluctuating exchange rates.

European and Atlantic cooperation is also required for success at the CSCE followup meeting in Madrid scheduled to reopen in early November. This process, as far as the Federal Government is concerned, remains an essential instrument for shaping East-West relations and for attaining further disarmament and security in Europe.

If we were to strike an interim balance of this process today, we would have a positive interim result -- despite disappointments and despite the events in Poland which we are following with profound concern these days again. Contacts between East and West would be weaker without the Helsinki Final Act. The people in Europe have derived tangible benefits from this treaty even if their hopes have not been fulfilled to the degree they expected. Let me cite two examples: Since Helsinki, since 1975, more than 225,000 Germans -- nearly a quarter of a million -- have been allowed to emigrate from Poland to the Federal Republic during this 6-year period. In the 6 years preceding that period, the number was only 68,000. Second, the World Federation of Lutheran Churches has published news about Lutheran communities far away in the East, in Soviet Kazakhstan. According to these reports, these communities, notwithstanding the serious concerns they have, have clearly been experiencing improvements in their situation -- improvements which they expressly attribute to Helsinki.

Yet, the Helsinki process is in jeopardy. Setbacks threaten the sphere of human rights, human contacts and information. This also includes the considerable reduction of long-distance telephone connections for private citizens in the Soviet Union. On the other hand, we can refer to the Final Act which also entitles us to demand from the Polish Government that it lift material law, release those incarcerated and resume the social dialogue. [applause]

Any long term policy expects setbacks. Therefore, only an unyielding insistence on our political objectives, and only patient courage and the trust in the commonsense of all parties involved can give our continent a peaceful future -- our continent and thus the citizens in both German states.

Everyone knows that our peace policy also has a North-South dimension. Many wars in the Third World can hardly be attributed to the East-West conflict but rather to other conflicts and miseries. We Germans comprehend that coping with the economic and social causes of these conflicts must also be part of a comprehensive peace policy.

That is why we have increased our development aid and cooperation with the Third World. That is why we also advocate the renunciation of force on other continents because renunciation of force is after all, a crucial component of the UN Charter's international law. [applause] This is why we not only respect the nonalignment of the Third World states but by our development policy we truly seek to actively promote and ensure this nonalignment because we recognize in nonalignment an important factor of stability for the world and thus a contribution to world peace. [applause]

In all this we take pains not to overrate ourselves. We are not a world power and we do not wish to be. Yet, we contribute our share with perserverance and with all the weight we have gained in the international community of states.

It goes without saying that the political crisis in the world exerts an influence on inter-German relations. It raises barriers to a greater height -- barriers which we had thought could be gradually removed. Nevertheless, it remains true that despite the partition imposed on them, the people in both states have not ceased to feel as one nation. [applause] To be sure, the Germans on both sides understand that they must live for a currently indeterminate period in two mutually independent states with different social systems and with different basic values. As nothing before, the construction of the Berlin Wall spoiled the hopes for an early removal of the partition. However, since that time the realization has grown that it is necessary to work for changes in relations between the two states for the benefit of the citizens and that this can only be done through negotiations and dialogue.

I want to stress here once again, and I wish to expressly state my agreement on this point with Dr Kohl who wrote on 13 August on the occasion of the anniversary of the of the construction of the Wall: If the will for unity remains intact among our people, the Wall and the barbed wire will not last in the long run. [applause]

Social-liberal policy has contributed to this lasting will. The basic treaty was not able to settle the different positions on fundamental issues, yet it makes it possible to solve practical problems. It must be constantly renewed because it makes it possible to work toward reasonable relations between the two German states which will also be of practical benefit to the people. At the same time this inter-German policy is in the interests of European peace. Mr Genscher was right when he said that German policy as a European peace task also means emphasis on the Federal Government's and the GDR Government's special responsibility for the situation in Europe, for stability in Europe and for detente in Europe. At the time, Willy Brandt justly added that both parts of our nation expect their respective states -- and in a certain respect also the leadership of the other state, he said -- to live up to the responsibility which results from the particular interests of this divided nation. [applause]

The Bundestag is aware that this policy meets with the support of our allies. I draw the Bundestag's attention to the Bonn statement of 10 June which said that the continued success of the efforts of the FRG to improve the relations between the two German states is significant for ensuring peace in Europe. This is how all our allies jointly phrased it here in Bonn a few weeks ago.

This was also why we started consultative talks with the GDR on questions concerning arms control and disarmament, and we will continue these talks at the end of this month. Both German states must behave so that their relations will not cause any additional burdens on the East-West relationship. However, they should not stop there. Both states should also utilize their influence in their respective alliances to make peace in Europe more secure. We are certainly aware that both states are affiliated with different alliances and cannot be removed from them. As far as we are concerned, we need the alliance with our American and European friends, and we will continue to cultivate this alliance in the future.

The long-term relations between us and the GDR also naturally depend on internal developments in the GDR and within its state party, the SED. In its external propaganda, the SED represents itself as a monolithic bloc. However, there is movement behind the pretended loyalty to the party line; there are controversies, different assessments of the prospects for the future, doubts about the communist belief in progress and problems among generations cannot be ruled out. There are doves and hawks in the SED leadership, people who want more delimitation and people who wish more cooperation. These internal developments can indeed be influenced by our behavior. I hope that in the SED there are also opponents to the barrier installations along the border which are being continuously perfected and which cause very serious injuries and death. [applause] I hope that there are also some people in the SED who would like to essentially limit and humanize the political administration of justice in the GDR.

The policy of treaties has proved its value for Berlin. In well over 11 years the quadripartite agreement has operated successfully. Particularly for Berlin, the policy of detente and the management of conflicts have had a positive effect. The Federal Republic will not relax its efforts to strengthen Berlin's viability. [applause] It will not relax its efforts to this end even if it is necessary to more effectively use diminishing funds.

Good cooperation exists with the governing mayor of Berlin, Mr Von Weizsaecker. We agree that in vital issues of policy on Germany and on Berlin in the future, harmony between the Federal Government and the Senate is important. This is how we propose to keep things, and this also applies to the special economic anxieties which currently concern Berlin. [applause]

Not only Berlin, not only all of Germany, but all countries are currently in an economic crisis. The causes are, above all, the two oil price explosions in conjunction with world inflation which had progressed very far even before. We coped relatively quickly with the first oil price explosion in 1973-74, but since the second one in 1979, the recession in all states has lasted longer than any other economic development lows of the postwar period. We did not anticipate that it would turn out that way. In any event, what we are dealing with is not a cyclic crisis along the lines of former national economic theory. Rather, all countries must adjust their economic systems to the changed world economic conditions and to the profound transformations of the past few years.

The Federal Republic, our economy, sells nearly 30 percent of its goods and services to foreign countries -- nearly one-third. For this reason we are naturally strongly affected by economic crises in other states. Every second car produced in our country must be sold on the foreign markets. Of 10 machine tools manufactured in Hanover and elsewhere in the FRG, 7 must be sold abroad -- and at a profit, not a loss. Thus our economy feels the effects directly if other countries are forced to restrict their imports because they have run up excessive debts and are no longer able to finance their imports. This applies to countries in Latin America, for instance Mexico, just as it does to the countries of the East bloc. For this reason it is of vital importance to the Federal Republic and to our workers and employees for the international credit markets to continue to function.

I agree with Mr Mischnick who said a few days ago that it is important to insure economic, social and sociological stability in stormy times. As everyone knows, he said, this task has become more difficult than ever for all industrial states through the worldwide phenomena of crisis. [applause]

Meanwhile, our country's starting basis for overcoming these difficulties is better than in most other countries. Throughout the years we have maintained a remarkable lead in stability over foreign countries, and we will do so in the future as well. In the Federal Republic today, consumer prices are only about 5 percent higher than a year ago, while the rate in Belgium is 10 percent, in France more than 13 percent, in Italy more than 15 percent, and so forth.

As far as unemployment is concerned, we are also making a relatively better showing than most other industrial countries, with the exception of Japan. In our country 6.5 percent of all wage earners are unemployed whereas the rate in France is more than 8 percent, in Great Britain 12 percent, in Italy more than 10 percent and in the United States nearly 10 percent. However, it is no great consolation to be relatively better off than other industrial countries. On the contrary, the fact that considerably greater unemployment exists on a worldwide scale has led to an alarming increase of protectionism. Many governments hinder to some degree openly or secretly the import of goods from other countries into their national economies. We do not do that because under present circumstances the receptiveness to international cooperation and mutual regard remains more necessary than ever. It is more seriously endangered than ever in the past decades. [applause]

One of the main reasons for the all-too-low construction and investment activities throughout the world, and thus for the inadequate employment, is an interest rate level which is excessively high for a world recession. This is attributable to rapidly increasing budget deficits -- some of which are still increasing -- of important industrial and developing countries and to their unheard-of balance of payments deficits. These countries range from Poland to Mexico.

The credit demands on international finance markets and world banks are too high. Many central banks counteract this with a restrictive monetary policy. Naturally this does not help overcome the employment crisis. When interest rates dropped in the United States in August, interest rates fell simultaneously in Europe and also in Germany. This indicates the great weight of the world's most important finance market in New York. Hardly any national economy can detach itself from it, and neither can we.

Even if, thanks to our policies, our interest rates in the past few years have always been far below those of the United States and of the world in general, they are nevertheless still much too high for any dynamic investment financing. [applause] The scarce money and the high interest rates check price increases, and that is a good thing. However, they also reduce general demand, and this is undesirable. For all these reasons the world as a whole must act in such a way so that the deficit countries remove the causes of their deficits and so that the surplus countries import. Their demand is needed. They must not contribute to increasing interest rates or maintaining them on a high level.

Meanwhile our balance of payments is sound again. Thus, just as during the time of the locomotive theory, hopes were placed on Germany and Japan early this week at the World Bank and IMF meetings in Toronto. We certainly do have the opportunity to be one of the first economies to climb upward again. However, this is not definite. Moreover, the world political crisis has become a constant threat to international trade and to international capital transfer. Unfortunately, the tendency has grown to wage political conflicts with economic sanctions. This costs jobs. [applause]

The Federal Government will also persistently oppose such developments in the future. Our efforts toward good and safe economic relations within the Western world, with the developing countries, but also with the countries of communist state trade, also form an important part of our employment policy. Of course, the world economic situation also has its effects on the communist countries -- including the GDR. Raw material shortages, energy problems and problems in the balance of payments know no ideological borders.

The GDR has reacted to its difficult balance of payments situation with great export efforts and import curbs. This has consequences on its own production, and in some fields it has already had tangible effects on supplies to the GDR people. In many countries with state trade supplying the citizens with important commodities creates considerable and growing problems, creates queues before shops.

What matters mainly in our country, however, is the issue of employment and then it is the question of whether we are able to produce and distribute more or less material prosperity. But in all this we cannot expect unemployment to diminish to a bearable degree through a new economic upswing alone. The situation on the labor market will be aggravated far into the eighties through the fact that age-classes with high birth rates will enter professional life while age-classes with relatively low birth rates will be on the top of the old-age pyramid and leaving professional life. To overcome unemployment it is indispensable that a larger portion of our gross national product be utilized for investment purposes and that the share of consumption expenditures be reduced accordingly. This, by the way, must also be linked with a fresh initiative for more participation of workers and employees in the productive assets. This is what we are working at. [applause]

The Federal Association of Industries (Bundesverband der Industrie) yesterday proposed what it calls a joint initiative by the Federal Government, the federal lands and communities for a recovery of public finances and for an increase in public investments. This is thought in the right direction. Since 1970, Ladies and Gentlemen, the share of investments in our gross national product, in all that we create and achieve, decreased from 26 percent at the time to less than 22 percent today. In this, public investments of the Federal Government, lands and communities decreased even more than these average figures. During the same period, however, the shares of the overall public and private social performances in the gross national product increased considerably, from 26 percent at the time to 31 percent. It is social expenditures which have contributed substantially to social stability in our society and which have also become an important basis for our economic efficiency. But as a result of the insufficient economic development as a whole we are compelled to limit the dynamic growth of the consumptive blocks of expenditures so that more elbowroom for investments is created, so that new and durable jobs are created and so that as a result the social safety net remains safe.

Hence, the improvement of the material situation of workers and employees and old age pensioners during these past 12 or 13 years is clearly visible. For instance, the collectively agreed upon paid leave for the average workers and employers increased from 22 work days annually at the time to 32 work days in 1981. Thus, for instance, incomes in real terms of those actively employed during this period increased by an average of 30 percent, whereas incomes from old-age pensions in real terms even increased by 43 percent.

The following figures show that this scissor cannot continue to be applied at will: 2 years ago, in 1960, 100 workers and employees had to contribute to the support of 38 old-age pensioners. Today it is more than 60 old-age pensioners and it is being anticipated that in the year 2000 -- and this is only 18 years from now -- 100 active workers and employees, who earn, produce and pay taxes and social insurance dues, will then contribute support for 70 old-age pensioners -- 100 workers and employees.

Thus long-term structural problems become visible for which medium-term solutions must be found, and we are getting prepared for it. Even if the present economic situation of our country, as I said, in an international comparison indicates in almost all fields that we have made very successful headway up to now, adjusting our economic structure, as for instance in the uncoupling of energy consumption from the economic growth, our situation remains very difficult, precisely in the structural respect.

What we need even more for the future is to economize on energy investments. We need long-distance heating. We also need environmental investments. We need water economy providence for the future and what we need most of all is private economy investments in performance and production capacities for modern and new products which other national economies cannot supply. Yet we cannot afford to be cheaper than many other states in the world because of our high wages and our high social achievements -- which are among the highest in the world. Because of them and the high degree of wage costs and wage extra costs, we cannot do that. As a result, we have to be faster and more modern with our products and offer them in a better way than others. This is where our future lies. [applause] Of course, most of the private and public investments cannot be paid in cash. To a large degree they need to be financed by credits. This is so with the cities, industrial enterprises and artisans. This is also so with private families; because he who wants to build a serial house needs a mortgage credit and cannot put it on the table in cash. That is self-evident.

Nevertheless: credit expansions for the purpose of financing operating costs with no security are not a general remedy for either the commune or industry. [applause]

This is why big loans and guaranties for the financing of operating costs with no security are to remain a major exception. The most spectacular example in this respect at present is AEG, whose crisis also has had its effects on thousands and thousands of smaller and medium-size enterprises. Nevertheless, do not consider this case as symptomatic of the German economy. Two other big enterprises of the same branch show that in the case of AEG it was mistakes made over many years by enterprise management as well as a failure of the supervisory board. [strong applause] Some of those working there today have inherited the problems from their predecessors, but the representatives of the banks on the supervisory board have worked there for many years and must take major responsibility. The banks are also very responsible for the future. [applause]

With the allocation of the two guarantees, the Federal Government wants to contribute toward achieving a thorough and lasting recovery of AEG. It also expects the participation of the respective federal lands, as far as factories in their spheres are concerned. [applause] But the precondition is that those primarily concerned must be ready to make sacrifices as well. The federal minister of economics won't allow himself to be dictated to by the banks, by those who share a high degree of responsibility for the antecedent events of the calamities. [strong applause]

We have special problems in the field of steel and -- partly as a result of this -- also in the field of coal. With the passage of the steel program in the summer of last year, the Federal Government has stated its readiness to take flanking measures for the needed restructuring process in this branch under certain conditions fixed in the steel-investment allowance law. It is now up to the enterprises to speedily clarify at long last all questions still open among themselves in connection with their assistance requests (foerderantraegen) so that the Federal Government will actually be in a position on 30 September 1982 to cast a first vote upon the notification of the EC Commission. For after all, it is not us who have wasted time.

As to the Federal Government's coal policy, I would like to say that the principle on the continuation of the energy program remains unchanged: Coal has priority in power generation and the Federal Government will see to it that the electricity industry economy will live up to its commitments to increase purchases of power plant coal according to the agreement on the generation of power (verstromungsvertrag), the so-called agreement of the century. [applause]

I have already said that as a result of its exposed situation, Berlin in particular, is naturally hit by the structural and economic difficulties. This is why the Federal Government along with the Berlin senate make efforts for completing work on the planned changes in the Berlin assistance law as soon as possible so as to correct the structural failures in the Berlin assistance during the past few years. During the fall I will invite, along with the governing mayor of Berlin, leading representatives of the economy and the trade unions for talks in Berlin on this subject, but also in regard to other issues related to Berlin.

Ladies and gentlemen, I cannot see any reasonable alternative to the basic lines of our economic and financial policy. I cannot see it abroad, as for instance where experiments were made with differing guidelines, which failed. We have not been taken in by the false conclusion that problems will solve themselves if only the state limits its activities or (?retreats). [applause] Judged by all experiences abroad, the consequence would be an even higher unemployment rate. But we also did not follow those examples of states that simply wanted to improve their situation by an overall revival of demand, because the consequences were inflationary development in the first place, and more unemployment thereafter. We will continue our middle-of-the-road economic policy for it's been shown that with this policy we have weathered the aftereffects of the world (economic) recession better (than others). Not to mention the countries in the East, which I do not want to cite as an example for comparison.

We know that we cannot solve our national economy's structural problems by a mere inflating of demand. On the other hand, we must prevent the overall demand from shrinking because otherwise a general process of shrinking would be engendered which would snowball. [applause] We were not and are not ready to join in any economic trend or to try out any new theory on our economy and on our jobs. [applause] But step by step we must release more funds in the public budgets' consumptive field and utilize them for investments. We have made the major initial steps with the 1982 budget, with the joint initiative of this spring, the '83' budget and the accompanying bills which will be submitted here tomorrow. And we will abide by all these things, ladies and gentlemen. [applause]

I want to add one thing clearly: Insecurity about the further development of the world economy as well as our current economic prospects are great. There are many things that indicate that the forecasts made previously for this year will have to be lowered along with those for the coming year. This is why the Federal Cabinet yesterday acting upon my proposal, has asked the council of experts to submit a special study on the economic situation until mid-October. [interjection] I beg your pardon? I know what I am saying [commotion, applause] As soon as the study is available, the Federal Government will comment on it, draw conclusions from it, and will not refrain from a discussion in due time on additional adjustments.

Tomorrow the SPD and FDP will jointly submit a package of bills to the Bundestag which will not only clarify our goals, but will also place them in concrete form in the legal-technical respect. The question remains as to what the CDU and the CSU actually propose to do. [prolonged applause] On the one hand, it is their tactic to avoid saying what they actually want and, on the other... [interjection] -- Yes, you want to take over, that I understood, but you yourself do not know yet what you want to do then [commotion, applause] -- and on the other, they use their majority in the Bundesrat to block a socially balanced policy. This is not the way you become qualified to govern Mr Kohl. [prolonged applause]

On the one hand, Mr Geissler, your secretary general, maintains that workers and employees and socially underprivileged people have never been at such a disadvantage as during the past 13 years. [commotion] Now, those who agree with that must tell me why, on the other hand, your Professor Biedenkopf -- our former colleague -- writes just the opposite, namely, that the material conditions of the majority of people have clearly improved during the past 15 years. [applause]

On the one hand, Mr Kohl and Mr Strauss reject the budget as a whole, maintaining that it is unbalanced and not socially directed enough, as you told the German Trade Union Federation. On the other hand, the opposition calls for further cuts in social service laws, meaning those laws which particularly benefit those people with low incomes. [interjections, applause]

You make friendly remarks to all sides, Dr Kohl, but you don't say what you really think. Maybe you don't think at all! [laughter, shouts, applause]

In the face of these interjections, I will quote some evidence. [shouts] There was a television discussion a week ago with Dr Kohl. Several journalists had the opportunity to ask Dr Kohl a number of questions. The first question dealt with the vote of no confidence. Dr Kohl answered: For me and my political friends, a political solution is unacceptable if it is not very clear before such a decision just how matters will continue politically. [laughter, applause]

Well, I can't criticize that answer. I find the following question to be consistent because the next logical question was what the program to counter that of the coalition would be like. Mr Kohl answered: The Social Democrats have suffered losses, the FDP was unable to enter the Hamburg Parliament and a new political force, the Greens, has appeared. That was the answer to the question about the program to counter the coalition's. [laughter]

Regarding the question about the weak points in the budget, you say, Mr Kohl: Well, it all begins with the figures. [laughter] The figures are incorrect and all of us know that we must make a new beginning. To the repeated question by a third or fourth journalist on the same television program -- the transcript from which I am quoting is available to every deputy -- whether this is not the time for the opposition to show precisely where something could be cut and how the budget should look in the view of the opposition -- to this question you avoided giving an answer for a third time.

Please make it finally clear what you really intend to do. I was a bit too sharp a moment ago, I'm sorry. But you must make it clear what you intend to do. [shouts, applause] You recently agreed with the DGB and with Ernst Breit when you said that you, too, were for creating more social justice than the Federal Government was. Please, you must also then say how you want to do this and at whose expense -- at whose expense? Otherwise it will remain an empty promise.

Naturally, when the situation becomes tense in the world, this also increases social tensions in the affected countries. This is so everywhere. In democracies with free trade unions, the workers' representatives will demand their rights. Their strongest means is the strike. In the GDR, however, strikes are forbidden and they are also not allowed in Poland. In countries with a communist system there are no independent trade unions fighting for the interests of those who could be subjected to the greatest pressure.

In our country, however, the free and independent trade unions are exercising their rights. That is fine. At present there is trade union criticism of the economic, financial and social policies of the social-liberal coalition, and I take this criticism seriously. What form does it take? The DGB and the trade unions demand a more equitable distribution of burdens in a critical situation. I certainly will not contradict this. [applause] Second, they simultaneously demand that the state assume massive loans to make investments. In this respect, however, the trade unions and the DGB must listen to counterarguments. I outlined them a while ago.

I will say a word in connection with the third demand -- a tax to assist the labor market [arbeitsmarktabgabe]. The DGB and the trade unions as a whole live up to their responsibility, and I have high regard for this. However, I ask for your understanding that the Federal Government and parliament are responsible for giving priority to the common welfare rather than to the interests of any groups. However, at present we see that almost all those representing special interests -- particularly those representing the interests of the economically strong -- are taking the floor voicing demands and protests. These interests include the Federation of German Industries, the Confederation of German Employers Associations, physicians, farmers and so on. The government and the parties will need strength to resist the pressure of the associations representing special interests, [applause] to resist them in the interests of justice and the common welfare. Not only trade unions and managers of special interest associations are nervous; above all, a large segment of the younger generation is nervous.

For many years it seemed to be an established fact that political life in the Federal Republic concentrated on the CDU, CSU, FDP and SPD. The parties represented in the Bundestag were in a position to absorb and represent all important social movements here. This has changed.

Many people, particularly young people, are looking for alternatives to traditional parties and our political life. Among other things, this is due to the fact that many people feel that the parties represented here in the Bundestag are not quite in a position to react quickly to urgent problems. As a collecting point of such young people looking for orientation, the Greens -- or the Alternatives and Greens -- have developed into a third, fourth or fifth force.

It cannot yet be called a new path. The substance and outline of this movement are very unclear. Some people pursue conservative and socially restrictive ideas, such as making cuts in the social and educational fields; others want to overtake the Social Democrats on the left; and still others dispense communist agitation. One of their elected spokesmen made the malicious assertion last week in one of our land diets that the CDU and some segments of the SPD considered war to be a consequence of their policy, and so on.

In many ways, the Greens can't all be classed together. Regarding the use of force, some adhere to peace and the renunciation of force while nevertheless approving of promoting their own political interests by force in their own country. Regarding constitutional order, they exploit all means of legal procedures, while on the other hand considering illegal actions as legitimate. On the one hand they are trying to enter communal and land parliaments, while on the other considering parliaments to be simply barriers to what is called funamental opposition, or to their concept of basic democracy.

In all these areas a basic fermentation and clarification process must take place. Nobody can really predict the results today. One thing is true, however -- the Greens have raised a number of legitimate questions and they have pointed out urgent problems, although their answers to difficult questions are often too simple. It would be wrong regarding the fermentation and clarification process if a separating line were drawn between them and the voters who elected them. That would be wrong. [applause] There is much longing and youthful idealism in that movement. [applause]

Ladies and Gentlemen, I would like to make a few remarks here for which I do not claim to speak in the name of the Federal Government as a whole. In connection with these remarks on the domestic political situation, I claim the rights granted by the Basic Law to the federal chancellor.

I see that the CDU/CSU is impatiently striving to take over. I repeat: You have not presented an alternative program. Mr Kohl praises conservative economic policy, he praises my colleague Mrs Thatcher and he praises President Reagan, but he rejects their much higher unemployment, inflation and interest rates as well as their tax increases. Mr Strauss rejects everything; he still stands by the total rejection strategy of Sonthofen. The Minister-Presidents Spaeth, Weizsaecker, Albrecht and Stoltenberg of the CDU feel and know that they are partially responsible for the whole thing, but they have not yet predominated. Yesterday the Bundestag faction and the opposition leaders wanted to immediately reject the whole budget. However, in contrast to the opposition in the United States, for example, you don't produce your own economic, social or budget political programs. [applause]

You want to gain government power -- and this is legitimate, by God -- but without plausibly saying for what purpose. Government power and responsibility go together. The word responsibility hangs together with the word respond, respond to questions. [applause]

You must give concrete answers to the questions about your firm intentions. There are obviously also some FDP colleagues hoping for such a shift into an uncertan future. The press has been reporting on it for weeks. These are mostly ambiguous statements. At any rate, we Social Democrats do not strive for a shift. I don't, and I also don't fidget with a so-called minority cabinet. [prolonged applause]

I don't see that a Kohl or Kohl/Strauss government could serve the public welfare of the nation better. I don't see it as regards an environmental protection policy, a legal policy, internal security problems, an education policy, or as regards conscientious objection or so-called examination of conscience. [applause] I don't see it serving public welfare better with regard to the inner liberality of our state as a whole. [applause]

We Social Democrats know that we have a majority in the social-liberal coalition, but we do not have a majority in the Bundestag, let alone the Bundesrat. If another majority should emerge in the Bundestag to pursue another policy, please keep in mind that there is Article 67 of the Basic Law. [applause]

Make us of Article 67 and enter a motion for a constructive vote of no confidence, Dr Kohl. Let us vote on it next week, [shouts, prolonged applause] and if your side is smiling at this, then I must say: Examine for yourself as to whether you have other intentions than those. [interjections] But the citizens in the country are rightly tired of the permanent talk, finesses and rumors [shouts, applause] presented each night on television. The citizens have a right to clarity, Dr Kohl. [shouts, applause] Internal stability and an unequivocal external ability for action [shouts] cannot be renounced in the world's dual crisis.

He who after a constructive no-confidence vote, which you just smiled at, but on which all your hopes are solely based [shouts] -- I will refer to the subject of new elections immediately -- he who after a constructive no-confidence vote becomes or remains chancellor has the right -- if the federal president so desires -- to bring about the disbandment of the Bundestag and new elections in accordance with Article 68 after a confidence vote. At present, I do not need another confidence vote. [laughter, applause] The voters of the Bundestag have given the social-liberal coalition -- and based upon this, the Bundestag has given me -- a four-year mandate. The confidence vote of February, 1982 was in compliance with this mandate. But if you, Dr Kohl, should be elected successor by the Bundestag in a secret ballot, then you actually would have to enforce new elections for the following two reasons: first, because a federal chancellor not only needs Basic Law legality, but also because he needs the historical legitimacy that the voter can give him beyond any veiled preparation for a constructive no-confidence motion. [prolonged applause] And second, because you must tell the people beforehand what you actually want to do differently [applause] from the children's allowances to the supplementary contribution [ergaenzungsabgabe], from the defense budget to the Germany policy and from environmental protection to disarmament. You must tell them across the entire board what you really want to do in a different way. [prolonged applause]

If the voters of the country were to give you a majority on this, we certainly would not be pleased about it, but of course we would have to comply with the voters' decision. [shouts] Nevertheless, it might be that some of your potential partners in a no-confidence vote would like to circumvent new elections for reasons absolutely understandable to me. [interjections] Even those willing to run the risk involved in a change of politics would require legitimacy to do so. [prolonged applause] I respect the conscientious decision of each member of parliament, [shouts] but the greatest yardstick for self-examination must be the respect for the vote of the voters, the democratic sytem's capability to function and the prestige of the political parties. This is what Walter Scheel said 10 years ago today from this rostrum. [prolonged applause] And he added: Who actually has ever prevented a representative of the people from following his conscience and returning his mandate to the hands of the voters? Let us beware striving for big words if stalwart things are at stake. [applause] That from the quotations. I say that neither Social Democrats nor Free Democrats can run away when times are difficult. One cannot do this. [prolonged applause]

Over more than 8 years now, I have not made use of the competent guidelines according to Article 65 of the basic law. Rather, I always considered it my duty to take great efforts to achieving reasonable, practical and useful compromises equally acceptable to both sides. As far as that goes, the policy guidelines were always mapped out jointly, but as soon as they are established Article 65 of the Basic Law is applied to them by the federal chancellor. One can only escape from this by leaving the Federal Government, and the federal chancellor knows that traveling people must not be stopped. [prolonged applause, commotion]

So far we have jointly guided our country much better than many others through the world's political and economic crises. We can do this jointly in the future as well. [prolonged applause] In this connection, no coalition partner was ever overruled by the majority [majorizier], and this will not be any different in the future either. [applause] The fact that mistakes can be made in governing and that one can even burden oneself with guilt -- this I know quite well. In this regard, I remember nothing more distinctly from the past 13 years of the social-liberal coalition than the time -- almost 5 years ago exactly -- of the kidnapping of Dr Schleyer and the hijacking of the Landshut airliner. That was a time of long and trying weeks when decisions had to be made daily and when there were uncertainties in assessing values, methods of action and responsibility. I am still grateful today that all four Bundestag parties shared this burden for several weeks together. However, in less tragic and dramatic situations, a government must also always demand something of others. Democracy means sacrifices and concessions, Hans Heigert recently wrote. He is right, but there are certainly limits to what can be expected -- for the Social Democratis and me as well. [prolonged applause]

First, a basically deflationary fiscal policy cannot be expected of us [applause] because this would only drive everyone even deeper into recession at home as well as internationally. We must and want to explore all possibilities in the area of the public budgets so that interest rates can further decrease. However, we do not want to economize to the point where overall demand, the national economy and the social network are destroyed. [applause] This does not create jobs, this leads to a reduction in jobs. Second, the acceptance of built-in unemployment cannot be expected from Social Democrats. [applause] To the extent the economic indicators of the world or Germany continue to worsen in the fall -- and this unfortunately must be expected -- we will have to consider and to decide on additional steps. This applies to the Federal Government, to communities, cities and also to the federal laender.

Third, additional credits can be utilized only to a limited degree. In the first place, additional expenditures for restructuring public budgets would be required. Also, noticeably higher Bundesbank earnings will be available in 1983 than estimated at present as a result of the worldwide high interest rates. [commotion]

Fourth -- it has been the law for 25 years now. You have so far not submitted a motion providing for a change in this law. [applause] -- Fourth, in all this, social justice must be ensured. We have 22 million workers and 12 million old-age pensioners. Through their small sacrifices, they will release many more funds as a whole than the 1.5 million private families with an income of more than DM10,000 per month. Among the latter is a large number of independent and free-lance workers, high-ranking employees, managers with high earnings and so forth. We feel they should make much higher individual sacrifices than the old-age pensioners, who in the future will gradually have to pay half of their health insurance contributions. [applause]

Dr Kohl, whoever rejects the income tax splitting advantage of married couples being limited to DM10,000 a year as being antifamily -- that is, that married couples with an annual income of more than DM100,000 will enjoy a DM10,000 tax advantage and no longer DM15,000 -- whoever rejects this is really only serving the financial interests of the higher-level income groups and is merely camouflaging this fact with the constitutional principle on the protection of the family. [prolonged applause]

In this respect, I share to a great extent the view of our colleague Mrs Matthaeus-Maier [interjections] -- Well, she has expressed herself very clearly, and by the way, the protection of the family does not start with those with a DM100,000 annual income, but with the family of a person who is unemployed through no fault of his own and who has neither DM10,000 nor DM15,000. [prolonged applause]

Dr Kohl, precisely in connection with the chancellorship you are hoping for, I call on the opposition to unequivocally lay its cards on the table in this respect. [applause, interjection]

Fifth, under the precondition of social harmony and balance, the Social Democrats are prepared to consider long-term changes in the social network as a result of the changed overall social and economic structures. However, whoever thinks that besides the bills to be submitted tomorrow, further stops to possibilities for abuses in the social security network need to be created, should make concrete proposals for legislation. Whoever thinks this must also be ready to take additional steps to abolish still existing possibilities for abuse, for instance, in some free-lance professions, in income tax legislation in general, in agricultural tax legislation, in social legislation and so forth. [applause]

He cannot demand additional cuts in social benefits as long as he rejects additional burdens for those with higher incomes [applause] In this respect the trade unions have proposed the introduction of a general labor market contribution. The Federal Government considers this to be at the very least dubious with regard to constitutional law. The special levy envisaged by the Basic Law, however, was successfully implemented in a similar form in 1968-74 with regard to income tax, and 1976 with regard to corporation tax. At that time it did not hinder the 1969-70 boom achieved by colleagues Schiller and Strauss. On the contrary, it contributed to the financing of increased state investments and increased employment. I have read with interest the recent proposals in this regard by colleague Hoelscher.

I repeat to the house the support I have voiced several times for a temporary special levy at the expense of those people who are financially better off and who are subject to income tax. Mark my words, I am saying this in case general steps become necessary to solve the budget and employment problems. Naturally this and any additional steps would have to be discussed carefully.

However, you, Dr Kohl, should tell us clearly whether you reject the special levy permanently, or whether you want to keep it in reserve in case you become chancellor. [applause]

I'm not glued to my chair after 13 years of government work. However, I am against colleague Kohl becoming chancellor because I don't want to entrust our country to another majority which so far has not outlined anything with regard to foreign, security, finance, economic and social policy. [applause]

Some of you will certainly have read the editorial in London's Conservative THE DAILY TELEGRAPH, which predicted that if Mr Kohl became chancellor, he would practically follow very similar policies as the social-liberal coalition, handling them, however, with less experience. [laughter]

Those who want a change anyway should say so frankly and honestly. [applause] However, the voters for the Bundestag shouldn't be ignored. I don't have wrong parallels in mind in this connection, such as 1930 or 1932. Somebody recently compared me with Von Papen, the chancellor of the Reich, and later Hitler's vice chancellor, and this was in doubly bad taste. Nobody can mention me in connection with Hitler's stirrup holder, nor is it permitted -- although unsaid -- to associate my possible successor, Dr Kohl, with Hitler. [shouts, applause] I share your indignation, and with this remark I have spoken for the whole house here. [applause, shouts]

I fear that you didn't hear me correctly. The interjections must be the result of some misunderstanding. I have defended Dr Kohl as well as myself against such outrageous parallels. [shouts]

We Social Democrats recently commemorated Kurt Schumacher, who died 30 years ago. His example shows to everyone that you can't run away from your responsibility. I don't intend to resign and I'm saying this to all who have written concerned letters to me lately, including people from other parties. [applause]

If a historical epoch in the development of our state is to be broken off, please do this with clear view and a clear decision regarding those who want to achieve it -- and with a justification that will be worthy regarding the history of our state. Don't do it with irrelevant, artful arguments. [applause]

I am convinced that it is not necessary at all to break anything off. On the contrary, I noticed at the last cabinet session how we reached agreement without great effort in several significant fields. This applies particularly to the many environmental protection measures. This was possible because there is a stock of basic agreement [applause] -- agreement in many fields. I'm optimistic that we can solve the current problems together in a great common effort.

Next year the SPD will look back over a history of 120 years. We are proud of the contributions our party has made during four generations to the development of freedom and justice in Germany. We are also proud of the current social-liberal coalition and the internal change it has brought about in our country. [applause] We are equally proud of the respect we have achieved together with the FDP -- respect the Federal Republic enjoys today in Europe and the world. [applause]

We are proud to be a factor for peace recognized by East and West. It must remain this way. [applause] We are proud to have strengthened social peace in this country in a way which is very rare in the industrial world, and which is absolutely impossible in the communist world. [applause]

Many people, myself included, are simultaneously members of a party and of a trade union. The trade unions have made a decisive contribution not only to reconstruction work after the war, but also the development of internal peace and justice, and to freedom internally and externally. We are also proud of this. We will not permit anyone to drive a wedge between the trade union movement and social democracy in Germany which stem historically from the same root and which will stand together in the future as well. [applause] This applies to the current difficult times as well as to tomorrow.

DGB Chairman Ernst Breit said the day before yesterday at a trade union rally that the trade unions not only want to have a say in codetermination, they also want to share responsibility. Such an offer is not natural in economically difficult times -- times which are difficult for each enterprise. He said that trade unions will not sneak off when it comes to overcoming the consequences of the economic crisis -- he referred in this connection particularly to plants and enterprises -- and I know that all this comes from the inner conviction of the people he represents. [applause] I trust the German trade unions' desire to assume responsibility. They have demonstrated this before and they will do it again.

I wanted to say all this in my capacity as the federal chancellor. I will now return to the thoughts I have outlined in the name of the Federal Government.

We Germans have more neighbors than any other nation in Europe or the world. Basically, our geopolitical location in the center of this small continent makes it more difficult for the German people than almost any other people to live peacefully with all their neighbors.

Particularly in the last 100 years, the Germans have broken out of the center of Europe, waging wars against their neighbors. The most terrible example was Hitler's war which brought devastation to France and Poland as well as deep into Russia, Finland, Italy, north Africa and elsewhere.

However, the neighbors of Germany have also repeatedly invaded our country over the centuries. If you view geography and history, you will see that a lack of peace has been the fate of the Germans for centuries. The Federal Republic has made an end to this history, it does not want to erase it -- it cannot do that -- but it has started something new. Konrad Adenauer made a beginning with the treaties with the West. France, the so-called archenemy, has become a friend and a close alliance partner. It offered us a conciliatory hand just as our other neighbors in the West, North and South did.

With its treaties and reconciliation policies with regard to eastern neighbors the social-liberal coalition built the second pillar, the necessary supplementary action for gaining peaceful neighbors on all sides. In the meantime, all Germans understand that it is our task to preserve peace with all our neighbors. We have drawn the appropriate consequences in the meantime.

I'm very proud or rather, grateful that this basic orientation has gained ground in the souls of our people. The hundreds of thousands of packages which are being sent every month to Poland out of personal and private initiative demonstrate that despite the misery of having been expelled from Silesia, eastern Prussia, Pomerania and western Prussia, we have nevertheless realized that only reconciliation, only a policy of being a good neighbor, a policy that considers even an adversary to be a fellow man, will serve peace. The Poles have noted that this policy is not only pursued by the ruling people in Bonn, but that it is backed by the great German people as a whole. [applause]

We expect our partners in the alliance, our friends in the West, to understand how important peace and good neighborliness with all our neighbors is for us in view of our entire history. German domestic and foreign peace policy must be able to subsist with a view to the historic experience of our people. That is a difficult task. Honest preparedness for peace alone is not enough. You must act, negotiate and conclude treaties, particularly between both German states.

We can pursue this policy of peaceful action and of demonstrating the will for peace -- we here in Bonn -- more easily because we have built the German state which is morally, democratically and also economically the stronger of the two by far. We are more consolidated in many ways than the GDR. We therefore have the strength to endure many things without stopping to strengthen and establish new ties. We are serious about the preamble of the Basic Law. But we will do justice to the contents of the preamble only if we don't let the political and humane prerequisites of the cohesion of the German nation deteriorate, even if many on the other side want to dissolve this cohesion wantonly. Without consistently seeking a compromise for the sake of peace, the preamble of the Basic Law cannot be implemented. [applause]

Our policy is aimed at gradual improvements, at possible changes with a view to the desired aim. It pertains to German-German policy. It pertains to peace policy between the West and the East as well as the North and the South. It also pertains to the policy of inner peace.

Such a policy consists of many mutual small steps, of a chain of compromises. I know that this causes suspicion that I am trying to somehow get ahead without principles, as some people say. I know this. The prophets of alleged great solutions which would immediately eliminate all problems are gaining followers. What we are doing is considered pragmatic, which is viewed as an abusive word.

This contempt comes from misunderstanding. Political action is not merely the result of morale, ethics, or theology. Pragmatic political action is the sensible use of means with a view to a morally justified aim. The means cannot be immoral either.

It means that political pragmatism does not forget the aim in daily routine work. And as regards the aim and all the talking about it, this policy does not forget either to implement what is possible every day. [applause]

I often think that policy as a whole must be the application of established moral principles in very changing situations. Therefore there cannot be practical, pragmatic action without duty, without ties to moral principles and basic values. At the same time this action permits preserving peace in a society and between states because of the desired compromise. This action also corresponds to the character of a democracy because it is based on so many values.

It creates peace because in a compromise it considers and even seeks the advantage of the other party. [applause] This is the opposite of opportunism. An opportunist is somebody who deceives others with regard to the necessities, difficulties or consequences of a compromise.

I have always tried to cope with my duty, with the tie between policy and duty, and I will not evade it, particularly not in difficult times.

Our policy of inner and outer peace promises to be continuously successful. Those denying this are being taken in by a modern trend which was described as follows by the American journalist and German expert John Vinocur. I quote: A bit of hatred of foreigners, a bit of romanticism, a bit of having the feeling of being a victim and fat slices of moralism and pessimism -- that is West Germany in 1982. End of quotation.

Doubtlessly we have to face hard times and some people have reason to complain. Unemployment is more than just the loss of income. A young person without a job as apprentice or a place as trainee has, by God, the right to criticize.

But how about those who follow a pessimistic mood without having a personal reason? A conservative writer of DIE ZEIT, Dieter Stolze, recently described it as persons who begin to stagger before really feeling dizzy.

We Germans in the Federal Republic should not be outdone by our GDR compatriots with regard to the ability to endure sorrows while preserving our spiritual strength. [applause]

We have kept to our peace policy course and we have helped others to orientate. We have kept to our economic policy course, which has gotten us further than some of the miraculous cures in the world. We did not let the social state become the shunting station of economic problems.

The quick decrease of the foreign trade deficit, the decreased price increase and the moderate wage agreements of this year have increased the chances for interest rate cuts and new investments. The measures taken this year to improve the employment situation will also show their effect. Every foreigner will tell us that we have kept to a good economic course.

Our living standard is still one of the highest. The Germans are still world champions in traveling to foreign countries. And most people are still content with their personal economic situation without demanding much more. Many are quite willing to make sacrifices, and these sacrifices are necessary.

I am betting on this preparedness to sacrifice as well as on the alert heart and clear brain which is still stronger than pessimism and self-pity among our compatriots.

The British journalist Jonathan Carr, who is still among us here in Bonn -- he has not yet left -- has recently written in THE FINANCIAL TIMES: Once the current crisis is over, we hope to hear less about the German miracle and German tragedies and more about a medium-sized country which is mastering all its problems quite well under similarly difficult circumstances as we British.

Ladies and gentlemen, more signs are indicating that this will be achieved. In order to master our problems we need somewhat more confidence in our own strength and somewhat more courage at present. I would then have no fears about the future of this country -- or the future of the nation. [long applause]

POSITIVE ASSESSMENT OF FES SUMMIT RESOLUTION

LD101346 Hamburg DPA in German 1050 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn, 10 Sep (DPA) -- The Federal Government today gave a positive assessment of the Middle East statement issued by the Arab summit in Fes. Government spokesman Klaus Boelling in Bonn today stressed the significance of the fact that the Arab states desire to participate in a process of negotiation in the future aimed at a peaceful settlement of the Middle East conflict.

Boelling said that the plan contained "a number of quite positive proposals" which Bonn will now examine together with the EEC Governments. He said that the summit conference has obviously taken over to a great extent the eight-point plan of King Fahd of Saudi Arabia. Boelling also said that following the settlement of the Lebanon crisis, every opportunity for bringing about a comprehensive and lasting Middle East peace must be used.

BRANDT PESSIMISTIC TOWARDS SPD-FDP COALITION

LD122300 Hamburg DPA in German 0913 GMT 12 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Frankfurt, 12 Sep (DPA) -- SPD Chairman Willy Brandt does not view the future of the SPD-FDP coalition in Bonn with optimism. In a Hesse radio program today, he said that his party still considers that it has a mandate until 1984. But he fears "that the train is slowly moving off in the other direction." Asked whether this means a break and the end of a phase of history, he replied: "That is indeed how I see it."

He thinks the second half of October will be the "crucial period." "I am sceptical about a possible consolidation of the present coalition in Bonn." There are clear differences of interest between the SPD and FDP because the parties feel committed to different groups. But an attempt must be made to find a common ground.

Brandt said that the conservative prescriptions for the economy have failed in the United States and in Britain. So it makes no sense if the CDU now wants to apply them in the Federal Republic. In this connection he supports the call by Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt for a surcharge on higher incomes. His party agrees with the trade unions in as much as all austerity measures must be based on social justice.

Brandt blamed some of the SPD's electoral losses on the FDP, the SPD's coalition partner.

CP'S MUHRI TALKS WITH DKP CHAIRMAN MIES

AU101340 Veinna VOLKSSTIMME in German 10 Sep 82 p 1

[Text] Duesseldorf -- At the invitation of the DKP party Executive Committee, Austrian Communist Party Chairman Franz Muhri and Politburo member Ernst Wimmer have arrived in Duesseldorf. At the DKP headquarters in Duesseldorf they were cordially welcomed by DKP Chairman Herbert Mies for a talk on issues of mutual interest. On the DKP's side, this talk was also attended by Karl Heinz Schroeder, member of the DKP Presidium and of the DKP Secretariat, and Dirk Krueger, head of the International Relations Department.

Communique Issued

[Excerpt] Duesseldorf, 11 Sep (ADN) -- The German Communist Party [DKP] and the Austrian CP, at the end of an exchange of views headed by the party chairmen, Herbert Mies and Franz Muhri, have decided to fight the further acceleration of the arms race more strongly. In a joint communique published in Duesseldorf, it is stressed: "The prime objective is to prevent the realization of the NATO decision concerning the deployment of new U.S. medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe."

COMMENTS ON IRANIAN DECISION ON GOETHE INSTITUTE

LD101348 Hamburg DPA in German 1115 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Bonn, 10 Sep (DPA) -- The Federal Government today regretted the announcement by the Islamic Republic of Iran that within the next 2 months it will take over the responsibility and running of the Goethe Institute in Tehran. A Foreign Ministry spokesman said that this will mean a "reduction" in relations between the two countries in the important cultural sphere.

It was also pointed out in Bonn that high-level contacts exist between the two countries and that the Iranian side has not announced any "immediate implementation" of the plan.

GENSCHER URGES IMPROVED RELATIONS WITH GDR

LD121244 Hamburg DPA in German 1008 GMT 12 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn, 12 Sep (DPA) -- FDP Chairman and Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher has underlined the need for expanding and improving relations between the Federal Republic and the GDR. In connection with the visit by Hans-Juergen Wischnewski, minister of state at the Federal Chancellor's Office, to East Berlin, Genscher said on Sunday that such procedure is in the interest of the peoples of the two parts of Germany and also constitutes European peace policy.

According to Genscher, the importance of intra-German relations to East-West relations and the situation in Europe cannot be overly emphasized. The latest statements by SED General Secretary Erich Honecker, according to which relations with the Federal Republic must be developed on the basis of the Lake Werbellin talks, had been carefully noted by the FDP. The quality of relations would now have to be improved through concrete agreements which benefitted the individual. Problems concerning the compulsory exchange levy would have to be settled satisfactorily.

MUBARAK-MITTERRAND TALKS TO CENTER ON MIDEAST

NC101333 Cairo MENA in English 1035 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] Paris, Sept 10 (MENA) -- Talks between Egyptian President Husni Mubarak and President Francois Mitterrand, due to open here tomorrow, will focus on two major points, namely the Middle East problem and bilateral relations, MENA learned.

As regards the first point, it will be discussed in the light of the outcome of the Fes summit, the Egyptian-French draft set before the Security Council, President Mubarak's talks in Belgrade and Bucharest, France's contacts within the EEC and the recent proposals made by U.S. President Ronald Reagan.

MENA also learned that the Franco-Egyptian move will be based on a set of principles including the Palestinians' right to self-determination, mutual recognition, the right of the region's states to live in peace and the need to let the Palestine Liberation Organization participate in any negotiations to achieve a solution of the problem.

Regarding bilateral relations, the agency learned that there is a number of projects currently under consideration in the light of the outcome of talks held by Egyptian Minister of Industry Fu'ad Abu Zaghlah, currently visiting here, with Minister of Scientific Research and Industry Jean Pierre Stephan.

The Egyptian minister will report to President Mubarak tomorrow on the results of his talks.

Mubarak Praises Reagan Plan

[Text] On leaving the Elysee, President Mubarak said that President Reagan's initiative on the Middle East must be encouraged. The Egyptian head of state, who had just had talks for 1 1/2 hours with Francois Mitterrand, thinks that the objectives of the resolution of the Fes Arab summit are very good, but that it lacks any means of implementing these objectives.

Asked about a possible revival of the French-Egyptian initiative on the Middle East, Husni Mubarak replied: I think that at present it is better to support the iniatiative of the American President.

CHEYSSON DISCUSSES EGYPTIAN-FRENCH PEACE PLAN

NC111608 Cairo MENA in English 1550 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] Paris, Sep 11 (MENA) -- Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson asserted that the Egyptian-French draft plan for settling the Middle East cause has received great attention by some Arab countries, particularly as it completes President Reagan's peace plan in asserting the right of the Palestinians for self-determination.

Following his meeting with Egyptian Deputy Premier and Foreign Minister Kamal Hasan 'Ali, Cheysson said the Egyptian-French draft occupies a special place. In the language of artillery, the U.S. initiative is launched at a short distance, the Fes summit is launched at a long distance, while the Egyptian-French draft comes in the middle.

PRESIDENT ON USSR'S USE OF DETAINEES ON PIPELINE

[Unattributed report: "If the Facts Were Confirmed, French Government Would Protest Such Iniquities"]

[Text] [Force Ouvriere Secretary General] Andre Bergeron had approached the president of the republic on the subject of the conditions under which the Siberian gas pipeline is being constructed [Footnote: the International Sakharov Committee had revealed that tens of thousands of detainees -- including political prisoners -- were being, or had been employed on the gas pipeline construction sites in very harsh conditions]. Mr Francois Mitterrand has just replied to the Force Ouvriere secretary general. The main points of that reply are as follows: "You know that I regard respect for human rights as imperative, and I have tried to ensure that it is constantly taken into account in the government's action. Contacts hitherto established on various occasions with the Soviet authorities have been used to make known our positions on the subject and to raise individual cases. That action will be continued.

"As regards the revelations to which you refer, they deserve to be examined very thoroughly and that is why I have requested more detailed information. If the alleged facts were to be confirmed, it goes without saying that they would be duly taken into consideration and that the French Government would protest such iniquities."

MINISTER CITED ON ABUSE OF ASYLUM PRIVILEGE

PM091101 Paris LE MONDE in French 4 Sep 82 pp 1, 10

[Interview with French Interior Minister Gaston Defferre by Edwy Plenet in Paris 3 September]

[Excerpt] [Question] The interior ministers of five European countries, including France, met in Bonn Thursday. Of what use is such a meeting?

[Answer] First, to compare experiences. Each minister recalls what has happened in his country between meetings and draws conclusions from it. We also discussed the situation created by the war in Lebanon and its consequences. I will not say any more about that.

[Question] Do you confirm the Abu Nidal trail which you mentioned after the Rue des Rosiers attack?

[Answer] I did not mention the name Abu Nidal. I said that some of the weapons used in the Rue des Rosiers were the same as those used in an attack on the Vienna synagogue and in the attack on the Israeli ambassador in London. It happens that the Abu Nidal group was involved in both cases....

[Question] Has there been any factor to confirm that feeling since then?

[Answer] There has been nothing to confirm or refute it.

[Question] On 10 August you expressed the wish that France review its asylum policy. What does that mean in practical terms?

[Answer] I expressed my ideas in a very brief way. The right of asylum as such is not in doubt. France remains faithful to it. What we must avoid is its being enjoyed by people who are not entitled to it.

At present, I note that a number of foreigners are not leaving their countries because of their political activity, but rather are coming to seek work in France and asking for asylum in order to receive identity papers and be able to enjoy social security coverage immediately. That is a fraudulent use of the right of asylum.

The second question raised is whether those who enjoy asylum can be involved in activities which are likely to endanger the lives of French nationals in other countries and on the national territory. What I said is that the "exercise" of the right of asylum must be specified.

PEREZ DE CUELLAR SAYS BREZHNEV 'EXTREMELY ALERT'

NC121854 Paris AFP in English 1846 GMT 12 Sep 82

[Text] Paris, Sept. 11 (AFP) -- United Nations Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar arrived here today from Moscow for two days of talks with French leaders which are expected to focus on the Middle East.

Mr Perez de Cuellar will breakfast tomorrow with Premier Pierre Mauroy and then meet President Francois Mitterrand for a private talk followed by lunch.

He said he would review the "problems faced by the UN" and added that the Middle East "will be one of the subjects broached."

He described his meeting last Thursday with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev as "cordial and frank" and said the Soviet leader was in fine form. "He was very bright and active, and extremely alert."

Mr Perez de Cuellar said he was particularly interested in French views on the Middle East, since Paris was involved in Lebanon in both the United Nations interim force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) and in the multinational buffer force.

Commenting on his call last week for an urgent Security Council meeting, he said it was too early to expect a response from international leaders.

But the "Soviets were extremely interested," he said.

Asked about the resolution adopted by last week's Arab summit in Fes, he said he felt personally that the Security Council should play a more active role in the Middle East but refused to comment on the Arab resolution.

MULTINATIONAL BUFFER FORCE TO LEAVE BY 14 SEP

NC102139 Paris AFP in English 2057 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] Paris, Sept 10 (AFP) -- The entire multinational force in Lebanon will have left Lebanon by September 14, official sources at the French External Relations Ministry said today.

Ministry officials declined to comment on a report from Beirut that Foreign Minister Fu'ad Butrus had said the French group would leave Lebanon on September 21, and not next week as had been expected.

The 850 Legionnaries and parachutists arrived on August 21. They were later joined by units from Italy and the United States to oversee the withdrawal of Palestinian combatants from west Beirut.

U.S. and Italian troops were scheduled to depart tomorrow.

In collaboration with the Lebanese Army, the French soldiers also removed mines from raods linking east and west Beirut.

SPADOLINI OPENS TRADE FAIR, VIEWS ECONOMY

AU101444 Rome ANSA in English 1540 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Bari, September 10 -- The Italian economic crisis was the theme of a keynote speech given here today by Premier Giovanni Spadolini as he inaugurated the Levante trade fair. The head of government said that the world economic crisis had worsened Italy's problems, having taken a toll on the country's structural weaknesses.

The government is about to launch its own packet of measures to remedy Italy's economic ills. As to work contract renewals and the cost of labor, Spadolini said the chief stumbling block was the present wage indexation system. The premier said his administration would play an active role in easing negotiations between labor and management on these delicate matters.

Zeroing in on the problem of underdevelopment in the south, Spadolini stressed the connection between economic recovery there and the success of the government's anti-inflation battle. He confirmed the need for extraordinary interventions in the south and the choice of industrialization at the basis of development plans for the Mezzogiorno.

The premier stressed the need for a convergence of all political forces to see to it that economic recovery was matched by institutional reforms.

As to the anti-mafia fight, he confirmed the fact that his government plans an all-out effort to stamp out organized crime, but warned that it was unfair to criminalize entire parties.

This was a reference to polemics sparked by the son of slain General Carlo Alberto Dalla Chiesa to the effect that those who ordered his father's assassination were to be sought in Sicilian Christian Democratic ranks.

The Levante fair, the most important trade exhibit in Italy's south, is now in its 46th year. This year 9,000 companies from 50 nations are taking part.

The fair is an important trade center for countries that face on the Mediterranean and a key trade link between Europe and the Arab world.

PARLIAMENT APPROVES TOUGH NEW ANTI-MAFIA BILL

AU111940 Rome ANSA in English 1905 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 11 -- The Italian Parliament definitely approved a new anti-mafia bill today which for the first time makes membership in a mafia clan a crime.

The Senate constitutional affairs and justice committees passed the legislation today. The bill passed the house last Tuesday. The 35 articles of the bill will go into effect in fifteen days.

The new legislation gives investigators unprecedented powers to explore mafia sources of wealth and influence. Another new punishable offence is illegal competition imposed by threats and violence, referring to the mafia's tactic of eliminating the competition of honest businessmen by intimidation or simply physical liquidation.

Other clauses widen police powers to investigate mafia suspects' estates, which can be confiscated if the legitimacy of their provenance cannot be demonstrated.

The new legislation is not limited to the mafia phenomenon alone, but covers all organized crime, including the Neapolitan Camorra and the Calabrian N'drangheta.

The law also creates a parliamentary watchdog commission of twenty deputies and 20 senators to supervise application of its articles. The legislation was approved with the votes of all the parties except the MSI neofascists and Radical Party.

Pertini on 'Mafia Plague'

AU111955 Rome ANSA in English 1930 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Venice, September 11 -- Italian President Sandro Pertini said today that "we will resolve the problem of the mafia." Speaking with reporters during a private visit to Venice, the president commented on the controversy triggered by the murder of General Carlo Alberto Dalla Chiessa and his son's charges that the masterminds of the ambush are to be sought in the ranks of the Sicilian Christian Democrat Party.

Pertini said that "everyone cannot be lumped together. I know the Sicilian people -- honest, proud and the result of a long development of the civilizations that have inhabited the island." The president went on to say that "the mafia plague exists, but one must not implicate the entire Italian people in it.

"We have also had terrorism, which tried to exploit Italians' malcontent over low wages, housing shortages and unemployment. But (terrorists) were confronted with a united front of the people. Now terrorists ally themselves with the mafia. We will overcome this too," the president concluded.

DC LEADER SEES NEED FOR PCI 'CONTRIBUTION'

PM081543 Rome L'ESPRESSO in Italian 5 Sep 82 pp 18-19

[DC Directorate member Giovanni Galloni interview granted to Fabrizio Coisson; date and place not specified]

[Excerpt] Question: With regard to the PCI's role, can the dialogue begun during the government crisis continue?

Answer: The dialogue is continuing in connection with the issue of institutional reforms, which is an important point for the new government. Obviously it does not exclude the PCI. Pertini himself has declared that it is not a topic restricted to the majority.

Question: Pertini has mentioned constitutional changes....

Answer: Obviously the PCI must contribute in this field: Constitutional changes require a qualified parliamentary majority, which is impossible without the Communists. But even in connection with other institutional changes, modifications to the rules of the game (which do not affect the Constitution itself, however), the Communists cannot be excluded. The PCI was correct when it said in this connection: Remember that the institutions belong not to the majority, but to everyone. Within the institutions the majority acquires only a temporary right of administration. These are the fundamentals of democracy. Nevertheless some people forget it.

Question: Who? When?

Answer: For instance, those who say: This ministry is Socialist or Social Democratic or Christian Democratic. The ministries are of the state, whoever happens to be in charge of them at a particular time. Is this merely a verbal habit? Unfortunately serious political abuses derive from this "verbal habit." And the opposition has every reason to criticize them.

Question: Could the PCI's contribution be decisive in other matters, apart from the institutional field?

Answer: This has already happened: We have had support or abstentions on important legislation -- for instance on the law on the arrest of tax evaders. Of course when there is PCI support or abstention the problem of rebel voting disappears. Indeed, it is the most certain way of resolving it.

Question: Does that mean that the PCI's contribution must be sought?

Answer: It certainly must be sought -- and not just to gain approval of certain laws. Indeed, it is not enough just to pass these laws: They must be implemented, seeking the country's maximum consensus. The broader the consensus in Parliament, the more efficient the implementation of the law.

Question: in conclusion, it seems that the most evident political outcome of this government crisis has been that the DC has shown Craxi that the PSI is not indispensable.

Answer: The PSI remains indispensable for this majority. But the PSI has learned from the government crisis that the privileged position that it enjoys is not without limits: not everything that the PSI wants has to be done. In other words, Craxi's party cannot consider imposing its will over everyone else's.

VATICAN CONFIRMS POPE'S WILLING TO MEET 'ARAFAT

AU111550 Rome ANSA in English 1530 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) -- Vatican City, September 11 -- The head of the Vatican Press Office, Father Romeo Panciroli told newsmen today that Pope John Paul II was quite willing to meet with Palestinian Liberation Organization Chairman Yasir 'Arafat when he comes to Rome next week for the annual meeting of the Interparliamentary Union.

The press chief noted that the pontiff had recently spoken out on behalf of Palestinian rights and sympathized with the sufferings of the Palestinian people.

Panciroli mentioned no date for an eventual encounter between 'Arafat and John Paul II, however.

The PLO leader is slated to arrive in Rome on Wednesday in time for the second of seven plenary sessions of the Interparliamentary Union which opens its annual conference Tuesday and continues for ten days. 'Arafat will be able to brief the more than one thousand participants on the results of the Arab summit in Fez and prospects for peace in the Middle East.

It is believed that he himself requested the papal audience. While the Holy See does not have diplomatic relations with the PLO, high-ranking officials of the Vatican have met recently with PLO officials, but not with 'Arafat himself.

BANK OF ITALY TO INSPECT BANCO DI NAPOLI

AU111615 Rome ANSA in English 0830 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 11 -- Italy's central bank, the Bank of Italy, announced Friday that it is about to carry out an inspection of the Banco di Napoli.

The inspection comes in the wake of demands by Internal Auditor Sterto Sanseverino for the resignation of four members of the bank's board of directors.

According to Sanseverino, the four members have violated banking legislation which bans members from having client relations with the bank without unanimous approval of the board.

ITALIAN PRIME MINISTER ARRIVES FOR 3-DAY VISIT

LD102242 Lisbon in Portuguese to Europe 1900 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] The prime minister of Italy arrived in Lisbon today on an official 3-day visit to our country. Speaking on arrival at Lisbon Airport, Giovanni Spadolini stated that Italy continues to support Portugal's bid for EEC membership. Prime Minister Pinto Balsemao, for his part, expressed the satisfaction of his government and of the Portuguese people at this -- the first ever -- visit to Lisbon by an Italian head of government.

News Conference

LD112332 Lisbon in Portuguese to Europe 1900 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] The Italian Government has placed a palace in Rome at Portugal's disposal for the installation of a cultural department that will work for the dissemination of the Portuguese language in Italy. This piece of news was announced today by Portuguese Prime Minister Pinto Balsemao at a news conference included in the program of his Italian counterpart Giovanni Spadolini's visit to Lisbon.

Spadolini reiterated Italy's commitment to a rapid conclusion of the negotiations on Portugal's entry into the EEC and to the acceleration of the reorganisation of common policies to render them more adequate to meet the demands of an enlarged EEC. He took the view that 1 January 1984 should be the date for Portugal's accession to full EEC membership.

The Portuguese prime minister said that our bid to join the EEC had a double goal: political, on the one hand, for the consolidation of democracy in Portugal; and structural, on the other, aimed at profound changes in our economic and social infrastructure.

At the news conference both heads of government reiterated their commitment to contributing to the strengthening of stability in the Middle East and to steadfastly seek an overall negotiated solution to the Israeli-Arab dispute. Both Portugal and Italy have welcomed with great interest President Reagan's initiative for resolving the Palestinian problem as well as the signs of openness and moderation that have emerged from the Arab summit in Fes.

Also raised was the contentious issue between Europe and the United States of the Siberia-West Europe gas pipeline, and the situation in the Horn of Africa and southern Africa. With regard to southern Africa, the Italian prime minister stated that both his country and Portugal have an interest in contributing to a peaceful, negotiated solution to its crisis within the context of respect for the principles of the UN and OAU charters and freedom from outside interference.

Commenting on the rapprochement between Portugal and its former African colonies from the European standpoint, Spadolini said that Italy is gratified at such a turn of events, which will give a new complexion to Portugal's role within the Western alliance.

Spadolini described the withdrawal of the Cuban forces stationed in Angola and Mozambique as a contextual condition for the independence of Namibia and for the commencement of a process that will enable the countries involved to operate in a state of true independence.

Before returning for home tomorrow the Italian prime minister will have a meeting with President Ramalho Eanes, with whom he will also discuss Portugal's entry into the EEC, and the situation in Africa and the Middle East.

Spadolini has invited his Portuguese counterpart to pay a visit to Rome.

Dinner Speeches

LD110350 Lisbon Domestic Service in Portuguese 0001 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] Yesterday Prime Minister Pinto Balsemao urged the Italian Government to an even greater commitment to supporting Portugal's bid of EEC membership.

Speaking in Sintra Palace at a dinner in honor of Italian Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini, who began a visit to Portugal yesterday, Balsemao pointed out that, following a period dominated by technical negotiations, we have reached the point when the determining factor will be the political will to reach an agreement on Portugal's entry into the EEC. We think we should remind our friends of the concrete expression of this will, so as to prevent delays to something that delays alone cannot resolve, the head of the Portuguese Government stated.

In his speech, Spadolini said that Italy had always devoted interest and concern to the enlargement of the EEC to include Portugal and Spain and has always sought to contribute to a speedy and positive conclusion to the membership negotiations. He said that he was not unaware of the difficulties still to be surmounted so that the enlargement of the EEC may result in its growing stronger, but added that the risk of unacceptable delay should be avoided.

On the Middle East question Spadolini said that he had welcomed with the greatest satisfaction the peace initiative put forward by Ronald Reagan and that he has noted with the greatest interest the signs of openness and moderation that have emerged from the Arab summit in Fes.

Meets Political Leaders

LD121552 Lisbon Domestic Service in Portuguese 1200 GMT 12 Sep 82

[Excerpts] The Italian head of government's official visit to Portugal is coming to an end. Here is Cesario Leitao:

Giovanni Spadolini, who received PCP Secretary General Alvaro Cunhal this morning, began a visit to the city of Lisbon at about 1030 after which he will return to the Italian Embassy. Later today, and before his departure for Italy, Spadolini will be received in Belem Palace by President of the Republic General Ramalho Eanes.

During his visit, which aims at Italian solidarity with Portugal, Spadolini received delegates of the political parties represented in parliament starting with Nascimento Rodrigues [of the Social Democratic Party], who discussed with him the problems involved in Portugal's bid to join the EEC.

[Begin Rodrigues recording] In this connection the position of Prime Minister Spadolini and his government has, as it publicly known, been one of firm support for Portugal's integration in the EC, and this position has now once again been reaffirmed to me at party level as this meeting was of a political nature. We have therefore noted Mr Spadolini's stand on the matter with great satisfaction. [end recording]

Concerning his party delegation's meeting with the Italian prime minister, Communist Party Secretary General Alvaro Cunhal said:

[Begin Cunhal recording] With regard to this visit it is a well known fact that we advocate the development of relations of friendship and cooperation between Portugal and all other countries of the world. We can therefore only be gratified when a step is taken toward strengthening and widening economic, cultural, political or diplomatic relations between Portugal and other countries [words indistinct] those which, like Italy, are so close to us both culturally and historically.

Concerning the meeting I have just had, it was a very interesting and open talk during which we had the opportunity to touch upon problems concerning the two countries and cooperation between the two countries, as well as problems pertaining to the international situation. I think it was a quite (?useful) talk. [end recording]

Concludes Visit

AU130836 Rome ANSA in English 0805 GMT 13 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Lisbon, September 13 -- Italian Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini wound up a three-day visit to Portugal Sunday with a meeting with President Antonio Ramalho Eanes.

Earlier, Spadolini had had two rounds of talks with his Portuguese counterpart Francisco Pinto Balsemao and with representatives of the country's five political parties.

Portugal "is an extremely lively country, a work at achieving a political objective it has pursued for years -- membership in the European Economic Community," Spadolini said Sunday.

The Italian premier, the first to visit Portugal, assured Pinto Balsemao of Italy's support of the Portugal's entry in the EEC on the scheduled date of January 1984 and thereby help Portugal enter mainstream Europe.

The only party opposed to Portugal's entry in the Community is the Portuguese Communist Party, Secretary Alvaro Cunhal told Spadolini.

The Italian prime minister said that "the economic price Portugal will have to pay for entry should not be used as a pretext to postpone Portuguese and Spanish membership in the community."

BRIEFS

TRADE AGREEMENT WITH ZIMBABWE -- A trade agreement was signed today between Portugal and Zimbabwe to supplement the economic and technical cooperation agreement last July by Prime Minister Pinto Balsemao. In the terms of the new agreement priority is given to the exporting to Zimbabwe of Portuguese tomato paste, table wines, port and madeira wines, clothes, pharmaceutical products, newsprint and paper pulp, tools and metal products. The agreement also provides for Zimbabwe importing machinery for agriculture and the textile, mining and footwear industries from Portugal. At present Portugal imports sugar, tobacco and asbestos, among other products, from Zimbabwe. [Text] [Lisbon Domestic Service in Portuguese 2200 GMT 10 Sep 82 LD]

AMBASSADOR TO SRI LANKA -- Antonio Meneses Cordeiro has been appointed as Portugal's ambassador to Sri Lanka. An Oporto-born law graduate, Meneses Cordeiro has already served as a diplomat in Pakistan, France, Venezuela, Brazil, Bulgaria, Algeria and India. MINISTER REAFFIRMS COMMITMENT TO F-18 DEAL

PM101323 Madrid ABC in Spanish 8 Sep 82 p 25

[Maria Jose Mendez report]

[Excerpt] Madrid -- The Spanish Aeronautical Company S.A., the Fiscal and Financial Consultancy S.A. -- a firm to which Miguel Domenech belongs -- and Antonio Garrigues' lawyer's office are the three firms which received payments from the U.S. McDonnell Douglas Corporation, manufacturer of the F-18 aircraft which is to be purchased by the Spanish Government for the air force.

Defense Minister Alberto Oliart yesterday held a press conference for domestic and foreign news media to make clear everything concerning the Future Combat and Attack Aircraft [FACA] program and to comment on reports published over the last few months about commissions scandals, pressures and influences which might have existed to sway the government's decision, made official at the 23 July cabinet meeting, in favor of the purchase of 84 F-18A aircraft.

Alberto Oliart wished to make it very clear that the FACA program has not been interrupted. He stated categorically that "the purchase of the aircraft is going ahead."

Air Force Chief of Staff Lieutenant General Garcia-Conde answered a question about the prospect of the FACA program continuing after the election has been held, to which he replied that "the air force believes that national defense matters are above the parties."

U.S. Government Advice

Referring to alleged U.S. Government pressure to purchase the F-18A, Lieutenant General Garcia-Conde categorically denied this report, acknowledging that advice had come from the U.S. defense secretary, but in favor of the F-16C.

The air force chief of staff did not specify what kind of advice had been received, but asserted that "it did not convince us."

FRAGA ON HOPES FOR 'LIBERAL-CONSERVATIVE' BLOC

PM081549 Barcelona LA VANGUARDIA in Spanish 4 Sep 82 p 8

[Interview with Popular Alliance Chairman Manuel Fraga Iribarne by Amalia S. Sampedro -- date and place not given]

[Excerpt] [Question] Do you believe that a coalition between your party and the Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] will finally come about?

[Answer] I will refer to the communique which the Popular Alliance released on Monday. There have been no official contacts recently because our stance is already known sufficiently. But all the signs indicate that [UCD Chairman] Lavilla is not in favor of this idea, although the natural majority will be formed anyway, from above or below. And of course it will not remain unformed because of the Alliance, because we will make every kind of effort.

[Question] Is it true that Prime Minister Calvo-Sotelo is now in favor of a coalition?

[Answer] Apparently so, but he was not in favor of dialogue when he had his premiership combined with the party chairmanship. He refused in Galicia and in Andalusia and, if Lavilla handed his post back to him now, I believe that it would be difficult to form this coalition, which -- I will not deny, either -- has aroused suspicions within the Popular Alliance.

But it is quaint that among the messages sent out by a disintegrating UCD there have been incredible demands to subject the coalition to conditions; demands which could have been accepted a year ago, but not now because of its precarious circumstances.

[Question] Why do you believe that Landelino Lavilla does not want this coalition?

[Answer] I believe that Lavilla is a thoughful and tenacious man, but he has not yet digested Suarez' departure and is obsessed by this issue, because he believes that Suarez has stolen the center area from him.

Suarez Will Be Judged by the People

[Question] Do you believe that Adolfo Suarez will have the good luck which some people expect?

[Answer] I sincerely do not. As is well known, Suarez and I have very few points of agreement, but I believe that the people will judge him by his conduct and by what he left behind: 2 million unemployed and a large number of victims of terrorism, among other things. He is also a man who has changed his party on at least three occasions, on one of them cheating the UCD and other people.

[Question] Could the UCD-Popular Alliance coalition which has now been resolved in the Basque Country extend to other regions or provinces?

[Answer] The Basque Country is an exceptional case, because the people who are in danger belong mostly to these two parties (there has never been a casualty belonging to Herri Batasuna or the Basque Nationalist Party), and perhaps this exception with all its nuances should be explained. On the part of the UCD the leading role in the agreement was played personally and very nobly, certainly, by Marcelino Oreja, with whom I held the final conversation just yesterday evening. Now there could be some difficulties stemming from this agreement, because in other areas people in the UCD are beginning to say: Why some yes and others no? And the fact is that, as the English saying goes: "What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander."

PDP's Contribution

[Question] What does Oscar Alzaga's Popular Democratic Party [PDP] contribute to the Popular Alliance?

[Answer] We are working for the setting up of a great liberal-conservative party, like the British party, and we accept all those political forces which can contribute to it. This is our final destination, although we are aware that that the transition from a miltiparty situation to a two-way situation will not be immediate. When accepting support we don't ask for anything. Rather than asking for credentials, we ask for a certificate of an honest course. As regards the PDP's contribution, there are outstanding personalities in that party; among them I feel deep respect for Oscar Alzaga. Moreover, it is a party which centers on Christian humanism and a model of society compatible with ours, and all this will help define that great center-right force. It must be borne in mind that it was not an easy move for them to leave the UCD.

Transportation minister	Arne Melchior (Center Democrat)
Education minister	Bertel Haarder (Liberal)

Economic Policy Outlined

NC101710 Paris AFP in English 1630 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] Copenhagen, Sept 10 (AFP) -- Denmark's new non-Socialist coalition government outlined an economic course aimed at restoring business confidence at home and boosting the country's competitiveness abroad only hours after taking office today.

Like the retired Social Democratic administration, Prime Minister Poul Schluter's government will seek to trim at least 10,000 million kroner (1,150 million dollars) off next year's state budget deficit of 74,000 million kroner (8,700 million dollars) in order to right the huge imbalance in the national economy.

This goal is to be achieved, in part, through pending cuts in social welfare along a broad front. In return for wage restraints, employees will be offered as yet unspecified tax reductions and a voluntary profit sharing plan with private firms.

Industry is to receive tax relief as an incentive to step up production and increase employment instead of the present scheme of state subsidies.

The new Conservative prime minister reiterated his government's declaration of yesterday that Denmark has no plans to devalue its currency. "Confidence in the value of the krone both at home and abroad is a good start for a new economic policy," Mr Schluter said.

Although the new government [words indistinct] extra tax hikes, it will carry out tax increases on specific products and consumer goods planned by the former government, but not yet in force. The government does, however, foresee the possibility of introducing a wage and price freeze during the autumn.

Denmark's new foreign minister, Uffe Ellemann-Jensen, stressed that the nation's foreign policy will continue to be based on its membership of the United Nations, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the European Economic Community and the Nordic Council.

The government will present its economic policy in detail in a throne speech to be held in Parliament on October 5, the prime minister said.

STRAY MEETS WITH COLOMBO; U.S. TIES DISCUSSED

AU102025 Rome ANSA in English 1940 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Oslo, September 10 -- Norwegian Foreign Minister Svenn Stray today assured his Italian counterpart Emilio Colombo that Norway is not now in a position to replace the Soviet Union in supplying Western Europe with natural gas.

Colombo, who arrived in Norway Thursday for a brief visit, met for a long discussion today with Stray who reiterated that even the United States has finally realized that Norway cannot supply West Europe's gas needs.

Norwegian officials made it clear that they agreed with the position held by Western Europe against U.S. sanctions against the Siberian gas pipeline. "It is exaggerated to think that Europe will become excessively dependent economically on the Soviet Union with the pipeline and that the economic advantages the Soviets will gain from it will endanger the West's security", Stray said.

But both the foreign minister and Prime Minister Kaare Willoch did not hide from Colombo their concern for the rift that has developed in U.S.-European relations and encouraged the Italian Government to continue in its efforts to promote talks between the interested parties to resolve the (?contracts).

Both Colombo and Stray rejected the term "split" in U.S.-European relations, opting for "diversity of opinions which do not alter the general political line of the Atlantic alliance". Stray said that he believes the Soviets are watching developments in the controversy before taking any concrete position at the Geneva disarmament talks. The Norwegian official stressed that it is in the West's interests to lay to rest any doubts about its ability to care for its security.

Colombo echoed Stray, adding that the best way to do this is through unity and firmness in the commitments made to restore [the] nuclear balance. Colombo is expected to return to Rome today.

TWO MORE UK COMPANIES TO IGNORE EMBARGO

LD101156 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1123 GMT 10 Sep 82

[By Steve Levinson, PA economics correspondent]

[Text] The row between the U.S. and Britain over America's embargo on equipment for the Soviet gas pipeline escalated today as the government ordered two more companies to ignore the U.S. ban.

The move came only hours after the Americans announced sanctions against John Brown Engineering of Scotland for supplying six gas turbines to the Russians.

The two companies named by the Department of Trade today are the Walter Kidde Company, and the Andrew Corporation. Both are British subsidiaries of U.S. concerns.

The former, based in Northolt, Middlesex, has a 9,500,000 pounds contract to provide firefighting equipment for the pipeline, and the latter, based in Lochgelly, Fire, a 1 million pound contract for communications equipment.

The size of the orders is not nearly as large as John Brown's 104 million pound deal, but the new government directions will be seen as a sharp rebuff for the U.S. and its sanctions against John Brown.

John Brown Continues Orders

LD101320 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1315 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Quotation marks as received]

[Excerpt] John Brown said today it would go ahead with further turbine orders for the Russian pipeline despite the American sanctions.

The firm said a denial order had been received from the U.S. Government, but would not say what action it was taking as a result. A statement, issued by the parent company in London, said: "John Brown confirmed today that its gas turbine subsidiary, John Brown Engineering Limited of Clydebank had received the expected denial order from the U.S. Government which flowed from its having shipped six gas turbines to the Soviet Union recently.

The terms of the denial order are much as expected and are being studied. Appropriate action is being taken.

The company's stance on all its existing and future gas turbines contracts remains unaltered and as set out in recent statements by the chairman."

A spokesman said the company was unlikely to make any further public comment on the row for "some weeks."

The sanctions came yesterday soon after a 4,000 ton Soviet freighter slipped out of the Clyde with six of a 21-turbine order.

The turbines are considered vital not only for the 2,000-mile pipeline which will link Siberia with Western Europe, but also for job prospects on the Clyde where JBE employs 1,700 workers.

It is believed the sanctions will hinder the company's order for the other 15 turbines because part of the equipment used in their construction depends on U.S. technology.

The sanction announcement coincided yesterday with the government statement that the planned Trident nuclear missile service base, due to be built on the Clyde, was to be scrapped in favour of the U.S. Navy base at King's Bay, Georgia, where the Tridents will be serviced instead.

PYM STRESSES IMPORTANCE OF EUROPE-U.S. LINKS

LD101224 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1210 GMT 10 Sep 82

[By Geoff Mean, PA staff reporter in Copenhagen]

[Excerpts] Foreign Secretary Francis Pym tonight challenged Russia to restore faith in shaky East-West relations.

He proposed a four-point plan to Soviet leaders which, he said, would help regain Western confidence in their intentions. Mr Pym said that confidence had been seriously undermined since the days of the first SALT talks. The treatment of dissidents, the invasion of Afghanistan, the pressure on Poland and mounting evidence of the Soviets' military build-up had all increased Western doubts.

But, he said, there were steps that could be taken by Soviet leaders, without risking security, which would help win back confidence.

The foreign secretary, speaking at a meeting of the Anglo-Danish Society in Copenhagen, then outlined his challenge.

"I should like to see them accept the need for a negotiated settlement in Afghanistan and adapt their policies accordingly," he said.

He also wanted the Soviets to recognise that a degree of relaxation and diversity in Eastern Europe "is much more likely in the long run to contribute positively to the security of the Soviet Union than the present harsh policies of repression."

He said, if they did likewise at home it could help them, adding "repression intended to protect the Soviet people from contact with the outside world may in the long run provoke more opposition than it can contain."

Mr Pym said that stifling initiative and talent represented a serious obstacle to the economic and social development of the country.

He added that the Russians should take the small steps necessary in the disarmament field to start building up confidence in practical ways.

Mr Pym went on: "The ideas are there. If the Soviet leaders were to pick them up -- even if they move cautiously at first -- they would do much to restore the international reputation of the Soviet Union." He added that the Soviets would have an immediate and positive impact on relations between East and West.

In his wide-ranging speech, Mr Pym warned against complacency in the NATO alliance, reaffirmed Britain's commitment to the Common Market, and urged concerted European action to fight unemployment and stagnant economies.

He itemised Europe's main responsibilities as guaranteeing security, developing the full potential of the EEC, and promoting peace, prosperity and respect for human rights in the wider world.

He said NATO's success should not be taken for granted, and warned that the next 30 years could be harder than the last.

The link between Europe and North America would continue to be vital, he said, and expressed the hope that U.S. political leaders would play their part in explaining to the American people the importance for them of the transatlantic partnership.

"Anti-European feelings do exist in America just as Anti-American feelings exist in Western Europe. There is a danger here which we must guard against in a positive say," he said.

Mr Pym streesed the importance of maintaining appropriate defence spending, despite the temptation to devote more money to improve health, education and other services.

"Nothing is more expensive in the long run than to fall below the necessary level of defence. Peace cannot be had on the cheap. It has to be worked for and paid for," he said.

But resources are limited, he said, and it would be foolish to assume that the sensible objective of a more cost-effective defence between the NATO countries was beyond the alliance.

"If by reducing duplication or rationalising weapons systems we can secure either necessary improvements in our defence or release resources for other purposes, it would be mad not to do so," said Mr Pym.

On the question of nuclear weapons, Mr Pym stressed the need for NATO to strengthen its conventional forces.

"If our conventional forces could be made strong enough to hold off a Warsaw Pact attack without nuclear support, then the danger of nuclear war -- and, indeed, any war -- would be greatly diminished," he said.

Mr Pym went on: "The prospect may strike you as appealing, the bill would probably strike you as appalling. But the question is a serious one. Are people ready to pay an increased price in order to deal effectively with the threat of nuclear war?"

FOREIGN MINISTER REACTS TO TURKISH THREATS

NC111152 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1030 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] Foreign Minister Rolandhis today held separate meetings in Nicosia with the ambassadors of the permanent member countries of the UN Security Council. He stressed that the Turkish allegations of there being armed Armenians, an armed Armenian organization [in Cyprus] or areas for training Armenians are completely unfounded. Mr Rolandhis stressed to the ambassadors that these Turkish allegations are part of the Turkish propaganda campaign which skillfully and deceitfully aims at misleading world public opinion in an attempt to prepare the ground for possible future Turkish actions against the Republic of Cyprus.

The foreign minister told the ambassadors that the Cyprus Government has informed the United Nations that it is prepared to render every facility for investigations at any place in the free areas to establish the groundlessness of the Turkish allegations.

At the same time, Mr Rolandhis has instructed the Cypriot ambassadors in the capitals of the permanent member countries of the UN Security Council as well as the Cypriot permanent delegate at the United Nations to proceed with similar activities.

The foreign minister also held a meeting today on the same subject with the UN secretary general's special representative in Cyprus, Mr Gobbi.

Government Concerned

NC110804 Nicosia O AGON in Greek 11 Sep 82 p 1

[Excerpts] The government is giving serious thought to the recent Turkish threats in connection with the presence of Armenians in areas under state control, and is trying to diagnose the Turkish targets and aims.

The Turkish threats were discussed at two meetings held recently with the participation of top members of the security services.

Interior Minister Veniamin has informed the United Nations that the government is prepared to render every facility and area available to establish that there are no Armenian camps or an armed Armenian movement in Cyprus.

Following the recent Turkish allegations that the Melkonian Institute constitutes the center of armed Armenians, a Turkish journalist has been granted permission by the government, at his own request, to visit the institute today.

The government has informed all the governments that it is prepared to avail every facility to their members in investigating the unfounded Turkish allegations.

Nevertheless, the Turkish Cypriot press continues its lies about the alleged presence of Armenian organizations in Cyprus. In this connection, the newspaper BOZKURT alleges that "the center of the Armenian organization ASALA is in southern Cyprus."

The newspaper draws this conclusion from the fact that the statement of the Armenian Secret Army was distributed to the Greek Cypriot press immediately after the Ankara military tribunal convicted (Ekmejian).

PAPAIOANNOU WARNS AGAINST NEW U.S. PLOT

NC101037 Nicosia KHARAVYI in Greek 10 Sep 82 p 1, 3

["Text" of speech by AKEL Secretary General Ezekias Papaioannou made at 8 and 9 September gatherings of the Famagusta and Limassol district cadres]

[Excerpts] Never before has mankind found itself so close to the brink of a thermonuclear holocaust as it is today. This is due to the inflammatory, warmongering policy of the U.S. Pentagon imperialists and all those who support their policy.

With their refusal to accept freezing the thermonuclear arsenal, control of strategic nuclear arms, gradual and complete disarmament as well as their failure to respond to the Soviet Union's statement that it will not use nuclear weapons first, the U.S. imperialists are embarking on the nuclear arms race heedless of the disastrous consequences that this inflammatory and aggressive policy will inevitably have for all of mankind.

In the Middle East, the U.S. imperialists have committed, together with their stooges, the Israeli Zionists, the gravest crime since World War II -- the genocide of the Palestinian and Lebanese patriots. The Israeli Zionists could never have committed this abhorrent crime had they not had the moral and material assistance of the U.S. imperialists.

The Israeli Zionists organized the barbarous aggression against Lebanon in complete understanding and cooperation with the hawks of the U.S. Pentagon.

The Palestinian, and more generally the Middle East, problem cannot be solved with the genocide of the Palestinians, through any other kind of warlike adventures, or with agreements of the Camp David type. The problem can only be solved on the basis of the principles of the UN Charter and the relevant UN resolutions. The problem can only be solved peacefully and democratically at an international conference table with full respect for human rights and the principles of the people's freedom and independence. Pax Americana [printed in English] does not exist nor can it exist. There is only pax universalis [printed in English] and it is indivisible.

Concerning Cyprus, the events in Lebanon and the Middle East create additional and direct dangers because of the British sovereign bases, the U.S. spy stations and the Turkish occupation troops. The fact that there are also nuclear weapons at the British sovereign bases alone constitutes a danger of total destruction for our people.

Besides, it is not incidental at all that "Armenian terrorists" have been "discovered in free Cyprus by the Turkish chauvinists. This is very similar to the argument of the Israeli Zionists before they invaded Lebanon and embarked on the genocide of the Palestinian and Lebanese patriots. Could it be that the hawks of the U.S. Pentagon have come to the conclusion that after Lebanon it is the Cyprus' turn. This is so, because there are no "Armenian terrorists" nor would the Cyprus Government accept them, as was made clear officially.

If the U.S. imperialists, who are responsible for both the treacherous junta-fascist coup d'etat and the Turkish invasion in Cyprus, think that they can solve the Cyprus problem through the total occupation of Cyprus by Turkey, they would be adding another abhorrent crime onto their shoulders and would create a new hotbed of war and international tension. The numerically small, but spiritually big and indomitable Cyprus people -- who are struggling to drive the Turkish occupation troops and, generally, all the foreign troops out of their territory and complete their independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity — will resolutely resist with any means at their disposal any new occupation plans; they have no other choice.

The Cypriot people, who have paid and are still paying a high price for the treachery of the junta-fascist coup that opened the doors to the Turkish Attila, will never accept anything less than a truly independent, sovereign, territorially integral, federal, nonaligned and demilitraized Cyprus. They cannot accept either confederation or any form of partition.

We will solve both aspects [internal and external] of the Cyprus issue within the UN framework and on the basis of the UN resolutions. We resolutely reject any other framework.

KIPRIANOU INAUGURATES NEW VILLAGE, MAKES SPEECH

NC121109 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1030 GMT 12 Sep 82

[Text] President Kiprianou has declared that the present leadership of the country will never sell out the Cypriot people's rights nor will it accept partitionist solutions, the faits accomplis or the results of the crime against our country. He stressed: We will resolutely continue the struggle and -- with the alignment of the Greek Government, the political world of Greece and the entire Greek people, who constitute the primary mainstay of our struggle -- we will reach the goal.

The president was speaking yesterday evening at the inauguration ceremony of the new village, Kividhes [Limassol district]. President Kiprianou also stressed: We have a duty to pass on to coming generations a Cyprus that will be completely independent and free, in which conditions of peace prevail and without foreign interventions or occupation troops; a Cyprus that will be sovereign, territorially integral, nonaligned, demilitarized and with the right of refugees to return to their ancestral homes.

President Kiprianou added: Any solution of the Cyprus problem is inconceivable without the withdrawal of the occupation troops. We will not allow a change in our country's demographic character, he said. Mr Kiprianou also stressed that, along with the struggle for an end to occupation and restoration of our rights, it is imperative that we strengthen the socioeconomic substructure so that we may effectively confront any new difficulties. He also gave the assurance that the government, through appropriate planning, will gradually resolve the problems facing the farmers and all other classes of people.

President Kiprianou also said that another significant target of the government is to safeguard democracy and he stressed that the government is determined to protect it as the pupil of the eye and combat any attempt to cause anomaly or undermine democracy.

Upon his arrival at Kividhes the president was accorded a warm welcome by the residents of the village and people in the area. The president was addressed by the Kividhes community head, who thanked him for the strong interest he is showing in resolving the community's problems and declared the community's support for Mr Kiprianou's efforts toward finding a just solution to the Cyprus problem.

After the inauguration ceremony President Kiprianou chaired a meeting which discussed the community's problems and he outlined solutions to many of the problems.

PAPANDREOU PREVIEWS 5-YEAR ECONOMIC PLAN

NC121830 Athens KIRIAKATIKI ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 12 Sep 82 p 8

[Speech by Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou at luncheon given in his honor at the International Fair in Thessaloniki on 11 Sep]

[Excerpts] The Greek economy has been in a new, difficult stage since 1979, a stage characterized by economic recession, high inflation, significant deficits in the balance of payments and problems of unemployment.

The obvious problems we are facing today are not due merely to short-term, coincidental situations of the Greek economy nor are they a reflection of the deep crisis typical of the international economy. On the contrary, they constitute an expression of the structural weakness of our development. Three general characteristics are obvious in our economy's development in the last decade:

First, the greatest portion -- about three-fourths -- of our national income was based on the services sector and not on industry, agriculture and the mining sector.

Second, the lack of rudimentary planning and priorities in our industry has led to an economic disorientation which corresponds to a "previous stage" in chronological development. What essentially happened was that we were advancing in the industrial sector looking backwards.

It is important to stress that the industrial capital that was amassed and the investments that were made in the 1970's focused on traditional branches and on sectors of declining significance in the international economy. Furthermore, many of the investments merely aimed at profit and not at new productive orientations. Thus, our productive base currently appears especially shallow, with very little vertical integration and technological base and also without essential qualitative diversification and dynamism.

In addition, by lagging productively our country has been downgraded in the international apportionment of labor. This means that not only other industrially advanced countries but also Third World countries are displacing our products and services in the international marketplace. Our exports focus on branches of declining significance which other countries discourage. Finally, the selection of nondynamic and technologically unadvanced branches has led to the deterioration of trade terms for our foreign transactions. As a result, Greeks are compelled to endure greater sacrifices to import the goods they need.

The third basic characteristic of our development experience is that the public and private sectors have shown a special lack of sensitivity and adjustment to the substantive changes brought about by rapid technological progress.

The new development strategy presupposes the correct listing of resources and priorities.

Within the framework of the 5-year plan for 1983-1987 we have selected the strategic sectors of the economy, we have introduced institutions for democratic dialogue and we have linked the public sector with private initiative. However, we must pass to new forms and relations of production. Municipal and communal enterprises, cooperatives, agents with a public base -- in short, the sector of public participation -- will play a decisive role in regional development. This sector can cover activities which private initiatives or the state machine are unable to serve.

We consider industry to be a branch of strategic significance because it decisively influences the development of all other branches of the economy.

For this reason we intend to increase the specific weight of industry. However, this increase will not be at the expense of the primary or tertiary sectors.

The role of the new industrial policy is to locate those branches that are viable and competitive on the international level, utilizing our comparative advantages. It is indicative that I mention the branches of high technology, microelectronics and biotechnology. At the same time, the new industrial policy should aim at the vertical integration of the productive procedure such as the local processing of our raw materials.

Thus the model of our production will come nearer to the model of local consumption and international demand.

The goal for agricultural economy is an increase in production and productivity. This will be achieved through the introduction of new technology and new institutions such as the agricultural-industrial cooperatives. Our basic aim is to promote animal husbandry and restructure plant cultivation. At the same time, we shall strengthen the processing and trade of our agricultural produce by cooperatives near the places of production.

The tertiary sector is already rather inflated. However, despite its extent, it is significantly lacking in the quality of the services it provides. Consequently, it needs to be restructured and purified. The presence of middlemen and profiteers must be restricted.

It is also time to exploit our international relations and geographic advantages. Greece is a link between Europe and the Arab world. In the future it could be the link between Europe and Africa.

We are living in a period when economic relations are increasingly determined by foreign policy. The current, genuine multidimensional foreign policy we are following is the only one that can economically utilize Greece's enviable strategic position. A comparison of the current situation with our long-term visions gives the measure of the effort that is needed in order to bridge today with tomorrow.

We are fashioning institutions and clear-cut measures that do not leave room for misinterpretation of the game rules, so that everyone will know their role and the framework within which they may move.

Being aware of the criticality of the circumstances, preposterous demands and endless discussions are not justified. We must start. Should improvements and corrective measures be needed, we shall deal with them in good faith during the course. We need action, pursuit of initiatives for investment and efforts to increase productivity.

The first step is to chart a new economic, and especially an industrial, policy, a policy that utilizes the country's potential and our comparative advantages.

The guidelines of our industrial policy are contained in the 5-year plan for social and economic development, which the government is formulating. This program, which is emerging from democratic procedures, covers the desirable apportionment of resources among the economic sectors and the geographic areas.

Another area in which the government is responsible is the preparation of the human element, which is a basic condition for success. The needs of the public and private sectors in specialized human potentials and the demands of contemporary technology are constantly increasing.

In order to deal with these needs, our educational system must be modernized. This procedure has already started, with the reform of secondary education and the principles which guide the laws for institutes of higher education. At the same time, the government is encouraging the repatriation of Greeks living abroad so that they, too, can help in our effort.

It is well known that sensitive sectors like the military industry and medicines should be under state control.

However, modern technology demands investments of great size with significant entrepreneurial risk and long-term perspectives which the private sector finds difficult to undertake, especially in countries like ours.

Consequently, the state itself must undertake investment initiatives from within specialized agents for development so that we can break the ring of technological underdevelopment.

Because of developments in the international economy, where an increasingly greater segment of transactions are being made on an inter ıte basis, the economic presence of the state is indispensable, especially when the transfer of technology and specialized capital equipment is being sought.

Thus, significant possibilities are opening up for the establishment of joint enterprises that will wed foreign technology with local raw materials, Greece's geographical position and its friendly relations with foreign countries.

An important duty of the state is also the creation of those institutions which will allow the harmonious coexistence and cooperation of the public and private sectors for the common purpose of promoting national interests and the people's needs. At the same time, social control over significant economic decisions should be guaranteed.

With regard to the traditional private sector, we seek that its operations will promote both general national interests and choices.

For this reason, the government of PASOK will proceed with the establishment of the necessary mechanism that will guarantee that the enterprises in the economy's strategic branches will operate within a framework that will be consistent with the state's development goals.

Such forms are: A) Supervisory Boards: As I have mentioned in the past, these boards deal with the basic decisions of enterprises in the strategic branches of the economy, while the daily administration is carried out by the management. It is thus assured that the significant decisions of the branches and enterprises with social significance fall within and are attuned to the aims of the 5-year plan and the economic development policy.

B) Planning Agreements: These agreements, which will be governed by a spirit of dialogue and consent by the contracting parties, are an additional means for democratic development in the manner of managing the economy.

The incentives that are given to enterprises constitute a concession by society to these enterprises. It is natural, therefore, that they undertake obligations that will promote the social interest. Thus, incentives will be attached in a systematic and clear-cut way to enterprises which by their size influence economic variables of more general significance by having these enterprises undertake certain obligations. These obligations will promote the aims and the choices of the general economic policy as these have been determined in the 5-year plan for economic and social development.

The areas which the planning agreements can cover are: the implementation of some specific productive or export program; increasing employment; adopting new technology; improving productivity; restraining prices; and undertaking investment initiatives linked with state supplies.

This system, which has already been implemented in several European countries, is one step ahead of nominal planning without reaching the boundaries of compulsion. It guarantees significant possibilities for effectuating benefits for society from planning at the level of sensitive enterprises while at the same time broadening the economic basis of our democratic institutions.

By simplifying bureaucratic procedures, private businessmen will be considerably freed from the present delays and expenses.

The small- and medium-sized businesses, which enjoy full state support in the area of credits and technical and organizational matters, play an important role in the effort for the reconstruction of our industrial foundation.

Modern technology allows the parallel coexistence of major and smaller units. Thus, the role of the small- and medium-sized businesses will be to supplement the new and technologically developed branches, which will allow our country to also enjoy the benefits of the new scientific-technical revolution that is taking place in our time.

During the past 11 months, the working people have noted that the country is at last being governed by a government that wants to promote and knows how to promote their interests and a government that has hastened to meet the working people's demand for a new progressive labor law. Along with this, at the beginning of the year the unacceptably low levels of some salaries, wages and pensions were increased.

The message to the working people is crystal clear: We ask for vigilance, patience and self-restraint. We, on our part, furnish the guarantee that, through the institutions which we are shaping, the results of economic progress will be distributed in a socially fair way that will reward the working people's efforts.

For the government of change, the question of economic development is not looked at solely from the quantitative point of view; it is a matter of quality, and finally, a political matter. It is a condition for national survival. The advancement of national independence and the defense of the people's sovereignty must be based on strong economic foundations.

Thus, a crusade on a national scale is needed: There should be a mobilization and rallying together of all the nation's productive forces.

We have a continuous dialogue with the people. We present and explain to them the difficult problems and the options we face, and we seek their support of our struggle.

The government could have followed the easy road of demagogy and could have made unfeasible promises. But for us there is only one road -- the road of sincerity.

Democratic planning is the means for the preparation of the 5-year plan. We do not arbitrarily talk about a list of wishes. We aim at the broadest possible popular consent in order to secure popular support of the measures which must be taken.

The people decide and the government implements.

For us, this is the essential part of planning: The people should take their fate in their own hands. Therefore, planning is the main part of the broader political procedure which will finally lead to social liberation.

The ideas that I have put before you constitute the axes of the 5-year plan, which will be announced by the end of the year; the investment activities, which the government is directly promoting; and the concrete economic measures for the rest of 1982 and for 1983.

EVREN TOURS DISTRICTS ON TAKEOVER ANNIVERSARY

TA121543 Ankara ANATOLIA in Turkish 1440 GMT 12 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Ankara, 12 Sep (AA) -- Head of State Kenan Evren today addressed the public in the Republic Square Park of Beypazari, where he went to conduct a tour.

The Anniversary of a Happy Event

In his speech, explaining the events that led to 12 September, Evren said: "We had the good luck to come to your district on the anniversary of a happy event, the 12 September operation. We had the opportunity to personally learn about your problems and grievances. Efforts will be made to solve these problems in accordance with their order of priority.

"I wish it were possible to tour all the districts and villages of Turkey and not only the ones in Ankara. It would then be possible to listen and learn about problems. In fact, in light of this principle, our administration has been trying, from the first day, to tour the various regions of our beautiful country.

"It is difficult to assess problems without mixing with the citizens. As it is, there are people who sit in Istanbul and Ankara and pass judgements by issuing statements or writing. My advice to them is to tour every inch of Turkey first, and then write or say whatever they will."

Evren, National Security Council members Ground Forces Commander Gen Nurettin Ersin, Air Force Commander Gen Tahsin Sahinkaya, Navy Commander Adm Nejat Tumer and Gendarmerie General Commander Gen Sedat Celasun, as well as Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu and Energy and Natural Resources Minister Fahir Ilkel then conducted inspection tours at the Cayirhan thermal power station, the Turkish Coal Works, Central Anatolia lignite works and the Softa installations. Evren and those accompanying him were briefed by Turkish Coal Works Director General Hasan Mumcu during their tour.

[Text] Nallihan, 12 Sep (AA) -- Head of State Gen Kenan Evren said the 12 September takeover had succeeded not only through the efforts of the commanders, but with the backing of a united public. General Evren was talking to citizens of the town of Cavirhan in Ankara province after touring the thermal power station and lignite mines nearby Sunday.

Referring to the date, 12 September, which marks the second anniversary of the commanders' takeover, General Evren noted he and the other members of the National Security Council had chosen not to hold formal celebrations, but to spend the day among the people. Certain other annual celebrations had also been discontinued by decision of the council, he added.

ULUSU COMMENTS ON ECONOMIC POLICY, TERRORISM

[Excerpts] Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu has said that this year's rate of inflation is expected to remain below 30 percent. Ulusu has also announced that his government does not intend to deviate from its current economic program. Ulusu addressed the Turkish Union of Chambers congress in Ankara today. In his statement, Ulusu said that world economies have been experiencing hard times for some time and that high inflation rates, budgetary deficits, production declines and unemployment have afflicted all countries.

Pointing out that as a developing country, Turkey has problems stemming from past policies and world conditions, Ulusu noted: For the past 2 years, our administration has been pursuing a substantial policy necessitating serious sacrifices by our country in a bid to solve these interdependent problems whose solutions require different lengths of time, and it will continue to do so.

Ulusu noted that Turkey's most important problem consists of the balance of foreign currency and that defense, foreign policy and development are vitally linked to this problem. He continued: It is impossible to conceive of overcoming this problem by restricting imports and thus paralyzing the economy. This is why we have aimed to reactivate economic development as well as to ensure that the foreign trade balance ceases to be a restricting factor by directing our production capacity in a way that eliminates the chronic foreign currency bottleneck. I am pleased to announce that, despite adverse world conditions, we have covered great distances in both areas. We estimate that the 4.4 percent increase in the national income planned for 1982 will be realized and we intend to achieve a growth rate of nearly 5 percent for 1983.

Ulusu explained that during the last year, despite the 1 percent decrease registered in the exports of developed countries and the mere 3 percent increase in the exports of underdeveloped countries, Turkey was able to increase its exports by over 60 percent. Noting that this year too, world exports have continued to regress, Turkey has attained an increase of nearly 30 percent in its exports.

The prime minister stated that it is impossible to renounce the goal of fighting inflation and the efforts for developments and that this struggle is being pursued in a bid to reactivate the economy in a healthy manner, he said: The rate of inflation, which exceeded 100 percent, was reduced to some 36 percent during 1981. During the first 7 months of 1982, the wholesale price index rose by 14.2 percent. We estimate that by the end of this year the rise in prices will reach the level envisaged at the beginning and remain below 30 percent. Our efforts to bring the rate of inflation down further will continue in 1982 as well. Relaxing our struggle against inflation would be tantamount to destroying our accomplishments, wasting the sacrifices we made as a nation and doing an injustice to our citizens who have so far exerted efforts in this direction.

Ulusu declared that Turkey does not intend to renounce its goal of increasing its foreign currency income and curbing inflation or to deviate from the current economic program. Explaining that a continuous and sound economic growth is impossible without increasing productive investments and productivity, the prime minster said that in order to achieve this his government is implementing a general price policy, a foreign trade policy that is gradually becoming liberalized and a more careful public spending policy.

Ulusu said that his government is encouraging the private sector by eliminating ambiguities based on inflation, eliminating basic infrastructure deficiencies, providing incentives for priority sectors and meeting the foreign currency need. Noting that certain difficulties are encountered in the implementation of the economic program, Ulusu said: Solutions will be sought to these difficulties within the framework of the economic stability program by preserving consistency, and new arrangements will be effected on condition that general criteria are complied with and sound resources are found. However, let me note immediately that a change that will cancel the program must not be expected.

In his statement, Ulusu also referred to the attacks directed at Turkish diplomats and representatives by Armenian terrorists. He said: Armenian terrorists, who brought their despicable actions onto Turkish soil through the Esenboga attack, have now attacked our diplomat in an Eastern European country for the first time. The rage and [word indistinct] that we feel as a nation is limitless. Terrorism can be stopped only if all countries cooperate. However, we witness with grief and regret that Turkey's insistent international appeals on this matter have not yielded an effective result. Let no one doubt that Armenian terrorists, who believe they will subdue the Turkish nation through their abhorrent murders, will sooner or later drown in their bloody actions.

SPOKESMAN DENIES MANUFACTURING OF NUCLEAR ARMS

TA101634 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1545 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] Ankara, Sep 10 (AA) -- Turkey is not interested in manufacturing nuclear weapons and there is no question of her cooperating with other countries for this purpose. The statement was made by Foreign Ministry Spokesman Nazmi Akiman in response to allegations made by Greek Premier Andreas Papandreou at the European Parliament socialist group meeting recently, where Papandreou claimed Turkey was cooperating with Pakistan to manufacture an atom bomb.

Akiman also criticized the Greek premier's allegation that Turkey was a block in denuclearization of weapons in the Balkans, noting Turkey was a signatory to the 1968 agreement on nonproliferation of nuclear weapons, accepting the control mechanism set up under the accord. If Greece believes it would enhance its own security, Akiman said, she is free to set up a nonnuclear zone in cooperation with any country of her choice.

FINANCE MINISTER NOTES RISE IN CREDITWORTHINESS

TA121550 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1520 GMT 12 Sep 82

[Text] Istanbul, Sep 12 (AA) -- Turkish Finance Minister Adnan Baser Kafaoglu said Turkey's creditworthiness had risen well and above the levels in recent years, and Turkey had all the external resources to follow her current economic program. Kafaoglu made the comment at Istanbul's Yesilkoy Airport upon his return from the IMF and World Bank annual meetings held in Toronto.

Kafaoglu told reporters he had explained Turkey's insistence on basically maintaining her economic program at the meeting and in individual interviews with IMF, IFC [International Finance Corporation], World Bank officials and with finance ministers of the United States, Kuwait and several European countries.

ASSEMBLY ADOPTS ARTICLE ON APPEALS TO COURT

TA111256 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1505 GMT 11 Sep 82

[Text] Ankara, 11 Sep (AA) -- The Consultative Assembly Saturday adopted Article 184 of the draft constitution on appeals to the Constitutional Court on charges of unconstitutionality for legislation, decrees or regulations. The right to appeal to the high court against such legislation is given only to the president of the republic, the leader of the opposition, and one-fifth of the full membership of the Grand National Assembly.

Article on Electing President

[Text] Ankara, 11 Sep (AA) -- If the new draft constitution is adopted, failure of the National Assembly to muster the majority to elect a president of the republic after four rounds of voting will automatically lead to new general elections. Draft Article 111 on the election of the president approved by the Consultative Assembly requires a two-thirds majority of votes for the presidential candidate to be elected on the first two rounds, and a simple majority on the third and fourth rounds. The whole process of electing the president should take no more than 20 days.

Two other articles redrafted by the committee will be voted on by the plenary session of the Consultative Assembly next week. They are: draft Article 106 which allows for a parliamentary investigation on a cabinet member if one-tenth of the membership sign the relevant motion, and Article 109 requiring the president to promulgate laws passed by the National Assembly within 10 days unless he vetoes them. If the National Assembly votes in favor of the same text a second time, the president must promulgate it.

KREISKY HAILS REAGAN'S LATEST MIDEAST PLAN

AU141156 Vienna Domestic Service in German 1031 GMT 14 Sep 82

[Erich Eichinger report on Chancellor Kreisky's press conference following this morning's cabinet session -- with recorded portions]

[Excerpts] PLO chief 'Arafat will not come to Austria for the time being -- this has now been confirmed by Chancellor Kreisky after the cabinet meeting. Domestic policy commitments made it impossible for him to spare as much as half an hour, he said, adding that the visit is not urgent. In an unresolved Middle East problem lies a genuine danger of war, but he, Kreisky, has no intention of acting as mediator, he said and added, commenting on the situation in general: [Begin recording] I believe that the entire Arab world is now in a process of reorientation, touched off and caused by the certainly very momentous statements of the U.S. President on this issue. I have looked at the information which President Carter sent me immediately after Camp David and compared it with what President Reagan has said and primarily what Secretary of State Shultz has communicated to me to clarify these statements. What President Reagan proposes goes very far beyond what President Carter said in the past on the basis of Camp David.

You know all about the very reserved attitude I adopted after Camp David because I was of the opinion that the key problem of the Middle East issue -- the Palestinian problem -- was discussed, so to speak, merely on the periphery in Camp David, and that no substantial proposals were made to solve it. Now President Reagan -- as emerges from the information supplied by Secretary of State Shultz -- has placed this problem in the center. Thus, we have a new situation, which in my opinion is really of decisive importance for the future. It will take a while... [Kreisky interrupts himself] and in this situation the Arab states must seek a reorientation if they want to utilize the opportunities that are now offering themselves. I do not bother to talk about the Israeli Government because it is probably not ready for a reorientation -- here it will be necessary to wait for political changes within Israel. [end recording]

[Excerpt] By winning 3 seats the Labor Party has emerged from the Second Chamber elections as the largest party. The PvdA [Labor Party] attained 47 seats. The CDA [Christian Democratic Appeal] lost 3 seats and totaled 45. The big winner is the VVD [People's Party for Freedom and Democracy] which added 10 seats and ended up with 36. D'66 [Democrats '66] lost more than half of its supporters and dropped from 17 to 6 seats.

Together the CDA and VVD obtained 81 seats, as opposed to the 74 they have at present and thus have a majority of 6 seats in the Second Chamber.

SCHMIDT, BRANDT REJECT LAMBSDORFF PROPOSALS

LD141830 Hamburg DPA in German 1604 GMT 14 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Bonn, 14 Sep (DPA) -- The SPD leadership today drastically stepped up its attacks on the FDP Minister of Economic Affairs, Count Otto Lambsdorff, over his economic, financial and social policy plan and indirectly suggested that the minister should resign. Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt said that Lambsdorff's paper showed a lack of analytical ability astonishing in a Federal Minister for Economic affairs. Addressing the SPD parliamentary group, Schmidt and SPD Chairman Willy Brandt rejected Lambsdorff's proposals as unsuitable to fight unemployment and rejected them as a basis for negotiations on a SPD-FDP joint government policy. The SPD leaders had strongly rejected Lambsdorff's proposals in an earlier heated coalition talk with the FDP.

But FDP leadership circles stated today that the FDP representatives in the coalition had noted with satisfaction the federal chancellor's appraisal of Lambsdorff's paper. According to them, Schmidt said that this paper distinguished between points one could agree with, points one could discuss, and points to be rejected.

In interviews, Lambsdorff said that he thought that his paper could, in principle, be implemented with the CDU/CSU. Regarding conjectures about his possible resignation, he said that it was more likely that together with his closer friends, he would make a serious attempt to implement his ideas. Before the meeting of the FDP parliamentary group today, he said that he had been prepared for the heated discussion on his economic paper. Asked whether he had been surprised by the scale of the criticism, he replied: "I was not born yesterday, or at any rate, not as some people believe, the day before yesterday."

Federal Chancellor Schmidt called Lambsdorff's plan half-baked. He said that Lambsdorff was blatantly contradicting the joint economic, financial and social policy of the ruling coalition, and that the SPD did not support the economics minster's proposals in their entirety and they were no basis for negotiations. Schmidt conceded that some of Lambsdorff's ideas made sense and were in line with SPD thinking. Other points in his paper needed discussion and were worth discussing. Other, unacceptable aims proposed by Lambsdorff disregarded the social climate and were provocative to workers and the socially weak.

At the SPD parliamentary group meeting, Brandt for the first time openly raised the question of whether Lambsdorff could remain in the Federal Cabinet. Brandt found it strange that the minister was not asking himself how he could remain in the government when he evidently no longer agreed with the basis of the policy approved by the SPD and FDP in 1980. Brandt accused Lambsdorff of being clearly bent on paralyzing the coalition. Brandt expressed deep concern that the FDP leader Hans-Kietrich Genscher as foreign minister so restricted his presentation of Bonn's foreign policy, that the CSU parliamentary group leader, Friedrich Zimmermann, noted almost complete agreement.

Schmidt said that Lambsdorff's proposals did not meet the necessity of fighting unemployment. The economic analysis in Lambsdorff's paper was incomplete, very one-sided and disappointing, the chancellor said. He continued that it took no account of the Federal Republic's international and external environment. He noted that Lambsdorff had now presented his divergent plan, although since 1977 Lambsdorff had supported all government decisions and submitted the economic data for them.

Schmidt and Brandt called on the SPD to be united and to campaign aggressively for Social Democratic ideas. Schmidt said the SPD had no reason to lapse into "resignation" and must be careful not to surrender the initiative. "I want a combative attitude," he pleaded. Brandt called on the SPD to support Schmidt's leadership and not be fainthearted.

The SPD parliamentary group, in a resolution, expressed unanimous support for Schmidt and Brandt and welcomed the statement made by the SPD Executive on Monday. In that statement, the SPD Executive called for a surcharge on higher incomes, which the FDP rejects, financing for additional measures to fight unemployment and asked the FDP to state clearly whether -- on the basis of the Lambsdorff plan -- it wanted to renege on the 1980 joint policy statement.

Lambsdorff Interview

DW140937 Mainz ZDF Television Network in German 1700 GMT 13 Sep 82

[Interview with Minister of Economics Otto Graf Lambsdorff by reporter Fides Krause-Brewer; date and place not given -- videotaped]

[Excerpts] [Question] The document (containing the suggested expenditure cuts] is probably not something the current coalition can support. Is it rather a declaration of war?

[Answer] No, it is not a declaration of war. It is not aimed at finding consideration among this or any other coalition. As I see it, it is a presentation of facts and suggestions for solutions based on factual requirements.

[Question] Do you believe you will find full agreement in your own party regarding your proposals?

[Answer] No, I'm quite certain that I won't achieve full agreement on all points. However, today's statement by the FDP Presidium satisfies me a great deal. We will discuss this document frankly and constructively, as should occur in a liberal party, and this is what I want.

[Question] Is it conceivable for this document to become the basis of coalition negotiations with the CDU?

[Answer] That is not my intention and I never considered it.

[Question] Would you be able to compromise if this document were submitted?

[Answer] I don't think it should be the basis of negotiations on such matters now. It is the conception of future economic policy, going far beyond the actual field of economic policy, with my main object being to act against increasing unemployment. I consider the fact that 2 million people who want to work are unemployed to be the worst kind of social imbalance. It cannot go on like this. I believe that the only answer is private and public investments. I want to be able to offer to everyone who is involved in economic life as many long-term basic conditions as possible. I want to provide reliable data so as to touch off these investments.

DPA REPORTS ON GDR DEBT REPAYMENT, ECONOMY

[Excerpts] Berlin, 13 Sep (DPA) -- The GDR leadership's export drive is depriving many industrial sectors of the opportunities of modernization. It is not only neglected sectors that are threatened with decline; even such key industries as engineering and electronics are receiving fewer investment funds. There is a marked disequilibrium in the GDR's planned economy despite its desire for balanced growth.

The GDR Planning Commission relies on a growing export surplus in order to reduce the GDR's indebtedness to the East and West. In view of the declining growth in the first half of this year, this objective is likely to be achieved only by cutting down on imports. The concentration of fewer investments on a few selected growth sectors will not facilitate the modernization of the overall economy, the productivity of which is too low.

So far, East Berlin has been a reliable international debtor. However, in view of the changed political scene, the GDR cannot expect increased Western credits. In the view of the West German Institute for Economic Research (DIW), the GDR's conduct provides no economic arguments against the granting of followup credits.

The GDR planning commission has reversed the longstanding trend of rising debts to capitalist industrial states. Since 1977 the GDR's net debts had risen steadily from $5.3 billion to a record $9.6 billion by the end of last year. By the end of June it had fallen to $9.1 billion.

The GDR at the same time reduced its interest burden. In 1981 it still had to pay $1.3 billion in interest, almost a quarter of the value of its exports to the West. This year its interest payments will be $300 million less. One of the adverse factors is that the GDR must spend its surplus earnings in the Federal Republic because of the special clearing terms in intra-German trade. So only the foreign currency earned from exports to other Western states is available to pay off its international debts.

In view of this two-tier GDR-Western trade and the fact that 40 percent of the credits are run for less than 1 year, a rescheduling of debt repayments is a prime concern for East Berlin. But after the shock caused by the payments difficulties of various East bloc countries, the banks have been taking a harder attitude towards the GDR. In intra-German trade, companies have great difficulty assigning their claims on GDR firms to the banks.

In the GDR, the worldwide economic crisis, equally affecting East and West, is making special demands on the internal legitimation of the socialist system, the "correct ideological fighting position." Planning chief Gerhard Schuerer, who probably knows best the limits in controlling an economy which depends on flexibility and performance motivation, continues to aim for better statistics and an improved evaluation of economic data on a higher level. This line governs the 1983 plan debate. The authorities are asking for "verifiable commitments" instead of declarations of intent for enterprise competition programs.

In its trade with the East, the GDR can naturally rely only on the Soviet Union. Owing to the uncertainty about the longterm reliability of Poland, across whose territory the GDR and Soviet transport routes lie, the island of Ruegen is being built up as a major transhipment port. Starting in 1986, 6 railway ferries, each of which can carry 100 freight cars, will provide the German-Soviet link.

In the West, the Federal Republic is about to regain its major importance for the GDR economy, which was slightly reduced in the 1970's after East Berlin had secured international recognition, because the GDR's hard currency shortage is limiting its trade with other countries.

BRIEFS

DECLINING PRC TRADE -- Berlin, 13 September 1982 -- FRG-PRC trade is declining compared with earlier years. In the first 7 months of 1982, imports from the PRC amounted to DM1.01 billion while exports to the PRC totaled DM1.04 billion. Last year's imports for the same period totaled DM997 million and exports DM1.49 billion. [Duesseldorf HANDELSBLATT in German 14 Sep 82 p 12 DW]

PREMIER MAUROY COMMENTS ON ECONOMIC OBJECTIVES

PM140955 Paris LE MONDE in French 7 Sep 82 p 44

[Unattributed report on interview with French Premier Pierre Mauroy by Europe 1 Press Club in Lille on 5 September: "18 Months To Attain the Objectives of the 7-Year Term"]

[Excerpt] The premier turned to the new economic policy with a reminder.

"I met with journalists and I told them that the French people had tended to take us for magicians which we are not. We have not come to play at magicians but to herald new times, to pursue a different policy from that of the right, to launch major reforms, to have a different development model amid a grave international crisis with two handicaps which are equally serious: that of unemployment and that of inflation. A 14-percent inflation rate is not negligible; if Mr Barre had left us with a 7 or 8 percent inflation rate things would have been much easier." He added. "You spoke of a pause. But there is no question of pausing. The word is ambigious. That would mean that we are suddenly stopping our policy, that we no longer have an objective. When we took office in May 1981, with what we had told the country, in an environment which was not exactly the same as it is now, at a time when we had not experienced developments like the ones concerning the U.S. currency and the desire of governments, even Western governments, to resort to wild deflation, as they have done during 1982, would you have wanted us to tell this country that, after all, we had simply come to correct the right's mistake? We are going to correct those mistakes but we did not take office simply for that, we also took office to assert our policy. Of course, for 18 months we need to improve the situation, we need stringent management, we need to contain unemployment and combat inflation. A 14-percent inflation rate is much too high.

"That is why every effort will be made to rid ourselves of this excessive inflation and consequently to bring ourselves back to a level at which we can achieve our objectives. I think that we are logical, we have a policy and we have implemented it. We have encountered difficulties. We did not create them. We inherited them from our predecessors.

"We have a policy of improvement, a policy of mastering important balances precisely to be able to rid ourselves of these evils. After that we will come to the fulfillment phase in which we can achieve the objectives of the 7-year term."

Mr Mauroy then turned to monetary problems and reaffirmed the government's desire to remain within the European Monetary System, and stated: "I think that this currency is stable."

Overcoming the Freeze

The premier then discussed overcoming the freeze and especially the price freeze. He defined three general principles.

"The first principle is that we are going to negotiate with the representatives of the different branches concerned in September and October. The timetable for emerging from the freeze which will draw up sector by sector will take account of economic priorities, of course, and seasonal factors and the behavior of enterprises before and during the freeze.

"The second principle is that on 1 November we will move from a price freeze to price control. The freeze ends on 1 November. That control will be exercised within the framework of agreements covering the different sectors, and for professions or branches which do not sign the agreement, the statutory price control with which you are acquainted will be maintained.

"The third principle is that these negotiations will make it possible to define general price objectives for the end of 1982 and all or part of 1983. Of course, these price objectives will be varied according to a number of criteria, especially productivity -- that goes without saying -- or the position of some sectors as regards foreign competition.

CHEYSSON INTERVIEW ON FES SUMMIT, REAGAN PLAN

[Interview with French Minister of External Relations Claude Cheysson on Europe One on 13 September -- place not given]

[Excerpts] [Question] What is the French position after Fes? I would also like to know whether the Mubarak-Mitterrand plan -- unless you call it otherwise -- is better than the Reagan plan, or is it a combination of the two or three plans? And then I would also like to ask you the following question: Is 'Arafat going to be received in Paris and if so, by whom? Can you tell us publicly your official opinion about Fes?

[Answer] The other day in Athens, the president of the republic said that we were happy about anything that went the right way, that is, anything that confirmed the principles which are dear to us and which we have been confirming for a long time now.

Fes undoubtedly represents progress by the Arabs in that direction. Why? Here we have all the Arab countries speaking with one voice, with the exception of Libya and Egypt, and we know that Egypt is very close to the Fes position. This has not happened for a very long time, and they are all speaking in positive terms. It was not a summit of refusal but one which proposed concrete solutions. To be sure, these were only objectives. These objectives strangly resemble those that Prince Fahd announced almost 1 year ago. He was then the crown prince. And you know what the reaction of the president of the republic was at that time. With some minor reservations, we believe that it was an important event because there is the possibility of opening negotiations. That is our reaction.... It is very interesting to note that this Fes summit was placed immediately after President Reagan's speech, that is, it was placed at the highest level as far as the Americans and the Arabs are concerned. Both sides are looking for a peace process and are considering the problem a political one.

[Question] Mr Cheysson, you have successfully answered two questions since my second question concerns the Mubarak-Mitterrand plan and its relationship to the Reagan plan. All the same, I would like you to tell me your own opinion and make a comparison between what I would call two recognitions. You have said that the Fes summit proposed concrete solutions. When As-Sadat recognized Israel, it was very concrete. It was a very explicit recognition. He said: "I am going to Jerusalem and Tel Aviv to see Begin" and he went. When 'Arafat says something or signs a document in which there is a point seven which provides for guarantees by the UN Security Council, everybody shouts: "This is an implicit recognition!" What do you think about the two forms of recognition? The very direct one and the one that dares not call its name.

[Answer] I do not hesitate to say that the recognition as envisaged by Fes surprises me: It is necessary to say 242. That is the number of the resolution which very clearly mentions the state of Israel. It is necessary to say mutual recognition. I am referring to the French-Egyptian proposal. Similarly, it is necessary that the Americans should finally agree that self-determination is a sacred principle and that there is no reason why this principle should not apply to the Palestinians just as it is being applied to the Namibians, the Afghans and the Kampucheans.

[Question] This is one answer. I would like you to expand it a bit. Do you not have the impression at the Quai d'Orsay and in Paris that it is the Pax Americana which is about to win and that it is the Reagan plan which now has the most supporters? Even the members of the Israeli Labor Party prefer it to other plans.

[Answer] I would like to say first of all that we were the first to express this idea which we now find in the Reagan plan. The president of the republic recalled this the other day, but this is not the most important thing. The important thing is to move towards peace. The American plan now constitutes the least common denominator. It is also too little in our opinion. But this least common denominator should be accepted by all if the prospect of going further still exists. As far as the Arabs are concerned, the weakness of the American plan lies in the fact that it does not say how far the self-determination of the former occupied territories can lead.

[Question] The last question, and many people are listening to you, there are passionate people in both camps: Those who believe that 'Arafat should be received in Paris and those who, as you know, would not tolerate him and will never tolerate him. My question is therefore clear: Will 'Arafat come here? If so, who will receive him? You or Francois Mitterrand? The pope is going to receive him.

[Answer] The president of the republic said many months ago that if 'Arafat comes to Paris he would be received as other PLO representatives have been received.

[Question] Are you not afraid of the reactions of the Jewish community following what you have just said? There are 700,000 Jews and we can say that some of them will find it difficult to understand.

[Answer] I did not say that 'Arafat will be received tomorrow. I have said what the president of the republic has already affirmed. He will be received when the time comes. Moreover, it would be difficult for me to understand these reactions if the president one day decides to receive 'Arafat. If 'Arafat comes here, this would prove that there has been progress toward peace.

NO AGREEMENT WITH INDIA ON URANIUM SUPPLIES

PM141549 Paris LE MONDE in French 10 Sep 82 p 24

[Patrick Frances dispatch: "Paris and New Delhi Note Their Failure To Agree"]

[Text] New Delhi -- The 3 days of talks between a French delegation headed by Mr Jacques Andreani, director of political affairs at the Quai d'Orsay, and the Indian negotiators headed by Atomic Energy Commission Chairman Sethna, which had been interpreted as reflecting the desire of Paris and Delhi to find a basis for agreement on the possible supply of French enriched uranium to the Tarapur nuclear power station near Bombay, ended on 8 September without the two parties succeeding in reaching an agreement. The discussions, which were held in a "very cordial" atmosphere, enabled the two delegations "to examine various aspects of the question" and "to clarify their respective positions." "The two sides will remain in contact," the Indian spokesman concluded.

The local press, which is stressing the firm Indian line, expresses its pessimism this Thursday, 9 September, about the continuation of the negotiations, offering the view that the failure shows the existence of apparently irreconcilable positions. According to THE TIMES OF INDIA, India is now preparing to reconsider the whole question. On the French side, however, people refused to dramatize an affair in which misunderstandings and sensitivity seem to play a major role.

Indeed, it was felt that discussions had certainly made possible a necessary clarification in that "there was a lack of understanding due to a lack of discussion." It is therefore "mission accomplished" for a delegation whose mandate was not to reach an agreement but to clarify some points and, above all, to remedy what may have seemed to be an inaccurate interpretation of the French positions. However, it was a disappointing mission in that there was recognition of failure to define the bases for a possible agreement and logical minds were visibly surprised by what had -- with the local press' aid -- assumed the scale of a controversy deemed to be exaggerated or even artificial.

Thus, it was strongly denied that France had effected an "about-face" and given in to outside pressures, stressing that an agreement in principle never prejudges the methods. "It is also necessary to remember," an informed observer pointed out, "the difficulties which can be involved in entering into an agreement concluded by others, especially when the substitution is made with some haste."

The French delegation, which was convinced that the proposals it was putting forward were perfectly compatible with the policy spelled out by the Indian leaders, could only try to convince its interlocutors that its demands were merely the reflection of principles laid down by French nuclear policy and that it was bound to insist on a minimum of guarantees.

Judging from the Indian spokesman's statements, it was not to succeed. Indeed, at the end of the talks it seemed that the remaining disagreement between Paris and Delhi related not to additional guarantees or to the right to check on the fuel supplied, but on India's acceptance of monitoring over the whole life of the materials supplied. In other words, on the precise scope of the existing agreements. That difference of opinion had already arisen between the United States and India, the latter having always considered that it would gain complete freedom when the contract expired in 1993.

Thus, the discussions ended with disagreement, not failure. "Each side will now consider the matter and we will have many opportunities for further meetings," the French side concluded. Noting that since Paris was not the client, it could not move any faster than the Indians wished.

That leaves Indian public opinion, stirred up by a press in which some newspapers are calling on the government to adopt an uncompromising line. It leaves the scientific "lobby," which apparently sees the failure of the Washington compromise as an opportunity to put an end to the Indian-U.S. agreement once and for all. Finally it leaves an opposition, one of whose representatives recently told us that accepting the French proposals would amount purely and simply to signing "the death sentence for India's nuclear independence."

TOGOLESE PRESIDENT MEETS WITH MITTERRAND

AB111224 Lome Domestic Service in French 1900 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] Gen Gnassingbe Eyadema, the founding chairman of the Togolese People's Rally and president of the republic, was on the second day of his private visit to France today. This morning he held talks at the Elysees with French President Francois Mitterrand. The talks between the two statesmen centered on bilateral cooperation between our country and France.

President Mitterrand and Eyadema also discussed the current situation of the OAU which is faced with a crisis following the admission of the Saharan Democratic African Republic [SDAR]. Our special envoy (Olade Diretapu) reports this from Paris: Gen Gnassingbe Eyadema attaches special importance to human contacts because of their invaluable contribution to human knowledge. Thus, true to himself and to his principles, the man of 13 January held long talks this morning with French President Francois Mitterrand, who received him in the Elysees. The talks, which lasted about 1 hour, naturally concerned issues relating to bilateral cooperation between our two countries. The two heads of state also discussed the Chadian problem as well as the current situation of the OAU, which has been faced with a crisis since the admission of the SDAR.

In an interview at the end of his audience at the Elysees Palace, this is what President Eyadema told French journalists:

[Begin recording] [Eyadema] Concerning the Chadian problem, you know that about a year ago we had to (?conclude) and discuss this problem. At that time, the OAU decided to give its assistance to Mr Goukouni, who was made president within the framework of the Lagos accord. But it happened that some months later, Hissein Habre, by force of arms, entered Ndjamena. You know that leaders exist because of the people. Without the people, the essence of their existence would not be justified. Since the time of his entry, a lot of Chadian refugees in Cameroon, Nigeria, Sudan and from almost alldirections continue to return to Chad. And we think, therefore, that we should help Hissein Habre to restore peace. Already he has stretched out the hand of reconciliation to all the factions. We therefore can, the OAU can, contribute to achieving peace in Chad, because these people have suffered too much. We must help them.

[Question] Mr President, did you also discuss the situation of the OAU?

[Answer] Of course, we discussed the OAU problem, because the OAU is currently going through a crisis, but we have the habit of saying: There is no problem without a solution. But there is not going to be one just now. We are conscious of this. The heads of state of the organization know that the OAU must survive. Therefore, we are busy doing all in our power to prevent the disintegration of this organization, which will soon celebrate 20 years of existence.

[Question] Will there be any extraordinary summit by the end of the year?

[Answer] Proposals are being made from all sides so that an extraordinary summit can be held to discuss the issue of SDAR admission. Togo made a suggestion that the admission of the SDAR be suspended to permit the discussion of this issue before a decision. If the extraordinary meeting is held, Togo will be present in order to do everything in our power to prevent the disintegration of this organization. It is easy to destroy, but it is not quite so easy to reconstruct.

[Question] Mr President, what was President Mitterrand's reaction to this problem? What was his viewpoint?

[Answer] President Mitterrand's viewpoint is that he desires the survival of the OAU because this is the only organization which makes it possible for Africans to discuss their problems and make achievements.

[Question] Mr President, the French president will visit Africa in January. Did you mention this in your talk? What can Africa expect from such an offiical visit?

[Answer] Togo has invited the president. You know that Togo's doors remain open to President Mitterrand.

[Question] Could you evaluate your program of self-sufficiency of food production?

[Answer] It is a success. Now, if you personally want to come to Togo to assess this, you will realize that the people are very satisfied with the success of the program.

LE MONDE SEES 'EVOLUTION' IN ISRAELI STANCE

[Editorial: "A Decisive Step"]

[Text] Has the Israeli Army's bloody thrust in Lebanon finally forced open the door to peace? By ensuring the victory of the "moderates" at the Fes summit, by allowing the PLO, basking in the glory of its resistance in Beirut to accept the essence of the "Fahd plan" which its most hardline elements forced it to reject just a few months ago, Mr Begin has placed himself in the strange position of having to suffer for his own victory. Aside from Colonel al-Qadhdhafi, who is absent from Fes and who, showing complete alignment with his hosts' positions, is displaying his disappointment in Prague and Warsaw at the fact that the fedayeen did not "commit suicide," as he was so obligingly advising them to do. All the Arabs heads of state have deserted the "rejection front." They intend to leave the Israeli Government chief alone on that front.

However guarded their language, they definitely took the step in Fes, without which any settlement remained an illusion. Neither the Palestinians, still reeling under the blow they have received, nor the Syrians, who are under enemy fire in Lebanon's Al'Biqa', opposed the now historic "point seven" of a document which expresses the desire for guarantees of peace for "all states" in the region and thus removes the old anathema against "the Zionist entity." It removes all the gloomy rhetoric with the dream of indefinitely ignoring -- or destroying -- the Jewish state.

Of course, positions -- especially on a possible Palestinian state -- are still very far apart, but it was vital to remove that obstacle so that diplomacy could come into its own again and Camp David might not remain a partial and futureless peace. It places Mr Begin in an unfortunate position by depriving him of "terrorists" and other inflexible adversaries to justify his own extremism. The fact that the Arabs said "done!" to the U.S. President and the triumph of the moderates, the U.S. Jewish community's welcome of the "Reagan plan" and the positive elements which the Israeli Labor Party opposition sees in it are starting a general negotiation process which has long been earnestly desired and which Mr Mitterrand in Paris will particularly welcome, since he described the "Fahd plan" as the most important element in the past few years.

Nobody really expects Mr Begin to change his positions. He will invoke, with references, the Arab ambiguities and "double talk." He will easily find justification for his rejection in the warlike statements of several members of the PLO leadership, in which extremists and moderates have always existed side by side.

Nonetheless, the very atmosphere of the interminable Israel-Arab confrontation has been altered for the first time. The partial Camp David peace is no longer challenged and the Egyptians look less like defendants than trailblazers. The Israeli prime minister -- even if he intends to hold an early election -- will have more difficulty in making his people share the warlike intransigence which befits besieged people doomed to death or glory. He will not be able to convince his American allies and friends that his policy is always the best and that "you always hurt the one you love" [qui aime bien bafoue bien]. If the evolution which has been started is taken into account in Israel, it is from the tragedy inflicted on Lebanon that the Jewish people will have drawn a promise of peace.

PERTINI VOICES SUPPORT FOR PALESTINIAN HOMELAND

[Excerpts] (ANSA) -- Rome, September 14 -- Parliamentary representatives from about one hundred countries gathered in Rome today to open the sixty-ninth Interparliamentary Union annual conference. The meeting was inaugurated by Italian President Sandro Pertini who focused on what promises to be the key topic of the conference -- the Middle East crisis.

Pertini said, "Israel obtained a land and a homeland after a bitter exodus and cruel persecutions. The Palestinian people will also have a homeland...."

The president went on to say that "Palestinians are subjected to the same said sad exodus to which the people of Israel were subjected centuries ago. Like the Jews of that time, the Palestinians must leave the land of their fathers and wander through the world. May our solidarity accompany them."

Anticipation is running high for tomorrow's arrival of Yasir 'Arafat who has the status of observer as chairman of the Palestinian Liberation Organization and will deliver a speech. Representatives of the Israeli parliament have already announced they will do everything they can to prevent 'Arafat from speaking from the podium.

DC'S DE MITA ON PSI, INSTITUTIONAL REFORM

PM131551 Rome LA REPUBBLICA in Italian 9 Sep 82 pp 2-3

[DC Secretary Ciriaco de Mita interview with Eugenio Scalfari; date and place unspecified]

[Excerpts] [Question] Is it true that you represent the DC response to the Socialists' initiative?

[Answer] No, that is a fabrication. We have greater aims and ambitions: to try to resolve the country's problems, which are serious and grave. This is the responsibility not of individuals but of a ruling class, a cultural and political force, a system of social alliances. I have a precise and, I confess, somewaht worrisome feeling that we have all lost the capacity to make political proposals. Hence the country's lack of direction and the fragility of the institutions. There is the impression of a struggle to maintain or gain power, without any explanation of what will be done afterward, what use will be made of that power. So political life is in decline and the necessary management of interests threatens to become speculation.

[Question] Nevertheless, the first effect of your intentions has been increased hostilities with the PSI. This seems undeniable.

[Answer] Yes, it is true. But it was not I who wanted it so, and I still do not.

[Question] There has been talk of a conspiracy....

[Answer] Sometimes the Socialists display a complex: Everybody is against them -- the other parties, the press, the economic forces, the right, the left -- everyone against the Socialists. There are two possibilities: Either it is untrue and we are dealing with an illusion due to excessive protagonism, or the supposed victims of so much hatred are doing something to prompt hostile reactions. Personally, I am mistrustful of the symptoms of a persecution complex. Woe betide anyone who submits to them. What should we Christian Democrats say? Were we not for many years the favorite -- indeed, the sole -- scapegoat for all the country's ills? The bad governors, the corruptors, the reactionaries, the clericals, the allies of the hoods, the "Americans" and 100 other things?

The principal target for the armed attack of terrorism and the political attacks of non-Christian Democrats, Fascists, Socialists, Communists, Radicals -- everyone, in fact? But we have always tried to reason, to draw distinctions, to avoid allowing ourselves to be overtaken by a persecution complex.

[Question] But you were in power and exercised power. And how!

[Answer] It is true, but that very fact demonstrates our tolerance and reasonableness and in all cases our profound adherence to democratic principles.

[Question] Have you always exercised power well?

[Answer] Not always.

[Question] Have you committed errors? Do you have any sins to repent?

[Answer] Errors, certainly. Sins, a few. We certainly need to improve ourselves. We are trying to do so. Is it apparent?

[Question] Moro told me that the DC's essential task in the seventies was to make possible an alternation in government leadership. It was for this very reason he believed that, following a national unity majority including the PCI, the next step should have been the PCI's entry into the government. The PCI would thus have completed its process of ideological and political revision and would have acquired full legitimacy, and the conditions for alternation would have been established.

[Answer] You see, then? A leader as eminent as Moro already had in mind the need to make possible alternation in the government leadership. We are not as attached to power as many people believe. In any case, we have lost much power in recent years....

[Question] Do you regret it?

[Answer] I am the head not of a charitable institution but of a political party. However, to speak very frankly, I am not very sorry. We have lost power but we are acquiring a capacity for analysis and reflection and -- even more importantly for a political party -- for political representation.

[Question] Is the Doroteo current dead in the DC?

[Answer] In the sense in which the term is used, I would say that, if it still exists, it is marginal. The DC has changed, and there is no turning back.

[Question] What about in the country?

[Answer] In the country there is indeed a crisis, a malaise affecting the institutions and public administration, and it is reflected in the political forces. The greatest self-criticism that we Christian Democrats must make lies precisely here -- in the fact that we have led and administered a major development in our country, but in so doing have gradually neglected our connection with the ideological values of our Christian inspiration. There was an extraordinary growth, but also an ideological impoverishment. And this applies to some extent to the other political forces too. It is this that has led to the difficulty of understanding and interpreting the very transformations caused and society's new demands.

[Question] Does this apply to the PSI too?

[Answer] You wrote a few days ago that the Socialist Party has the support, or at least the attention, of all the groups bidding for power. I believe this is so.

[Question] Does it worry you?

[Answer] Emergent interests must be represented and the value of efficiency must be carried forward, but not in an exclusive way. Otherwise, the risk of a "policy of confrontation" ["politique d'abord"] could emerge that in itself is certainly not an element of stabilization with respect to the democratic equilibrium. I am not saying that the PSI is an assault party -- indeed, I am convinced of the opposite -- but sometimes, as during the latest government crisis, dangerous temptations and attitudes emerge.

[Question] So you will be pushing the subject of institutional reform yourself?

[Answer] It is a subject that, as you have kindly pointed out, I have been pushing since 1967.

[Question] Do you have any precise ideas on the subject? You see, many people are now talking about a reform, or even a great reform, but when it comes to specifics, very little seems to be emerging. If you have any precise ideas in this regard, I would ask you to go beyong generalities.

[Answer] First, however, you must permit me to make a preliminary point. The reform of the institutions is not a matter of constitutional engineering. You do not wake up some morning with the fine idea of reforming the institutions. The issue arises when social and political relations have changed. A Marxist would say: when the structure has changed and the superstructure needs to be adapted to it. I say, more simply: when the democratic system is confronted with a difficulty, an obstacle that cannot be surmounted with the existing kind of institutions.

[Question] What is the obstacle?

[Answer] Moro said it, and he was not the only one to do so. The obstacle is that we are living in a blocked democracy, without the possibility of an alternative, of a change in the ruling class. Everything stems from that. When the inefficiency of the system is proclaimed, a problem is being indicated without reference to the cause. Would it suffice to replace politicians with technocrats? That is not the solution: It would be a false remedy. When a ruling class is immovable, there is a risk of its sitting back because it has no challenges to which to respond, no judgments to which it is subject. More or less the same applies in the case of cronyism. The problem is not an abstract one of efficiency so much as one of guaranteeing the administration's impartiality, which can be ensured more easily when there is a possibility of alternation.

[Question] But who is to blame for the fact that democracy is blocked?

[Answer] It is not a question of blame. If we started arguing about blame, we would never end. If you like, everyone is to blame, particularly the communists, who for decades remained tied to an ideological and political frame of reference that excluded them from the system. We too are to blame for having made this communist "diversity" a reason for immobility. But things have changed now.

[Question] How?

[Answer] As far as we are concerned, we have long been persuaded of the need to create the conditions for a real democratic alternative.

[Question] What about the PCI?

[Answer] I believe it has fewer ties and less sectarianism than before, but I do not agree with its program and consider it impossible for the DC to govern with the PCI. This does not imply discrimination against the PCI, as the communists claim. It can take our place in government, if that is what the voters want, though the communists do not now seem to be on the crest of a wave: in fact... In any case, they are competing like the rest of us. Of course we Christian Democrats will not base our election campaigns on arguments and polemics valid 30 years ago, but which now seem obsolete.

[Question] That is just as well, Mr de Mita....

[Answer] But at that time there was some truth in it. Be that as it may, it belongs to the past. Now the country bases its decisions on other values: specific objectives, reliability and the blueprint for society. The one proposed by the PCI still smacks too much of the bureaucratic barracks. Anyway, it is the voters who must decide.

[Question] Toward what objective is the reform proposed by Craxi moving?

[Answer] Frankly, I cannot answer. The Socialists have hitherto explained very little of what they have in mind. They have stated a need, and this is shared. They have gone no further than that except for some vague hints. Be that as it may, I have the impression that there is a presidentialist tendency in them.

[Question] Do you hold a different stance?

[Answer] I believe I have already explained this. I believe that we should aim to build -- and to involve all the constitutional forces in building -- institutional mechanisms designed to enable us to surmount the block in democracy, to make alternation possible and thus to ensure the maximum protection of our extensive freedoms, the impartiality of the public administration and efficient management.

[Question] Let us look at specifics, starting with secret voting [in parliament], which the new Spadolini government has undertaken to restrict. I believe that the DC agrees, since it has ratified the government program. How does the restriction of secret voting fit into your view of institutional reform?

[Answer] The government agreement among the five parties envisages a reform of the parliamentary rules whereby the government can request an open vote on measures that it considers of particular importance to the implementation of its program. In practice, this amounts to the present "technical vote of confidence" expressed in another form. I hope that such a reform will take place as soon as possible, since I consider it beneficial to the lucidity and promptness of work in parliament. But, as you see, we are dealing here with minor issues. These are not the real problems. When calls are issued for open voting and there are outcries against rebel voters, what it being said, what is being admitted, if not that the executive is failing to express political strength, failing to control interests by political means and thus suffering their devastating impact? Of course, we can impose open votes, but we must also protect deputies' freedom and their direct and personal responsibility to the voters. Otherwise, we might as well abolish preferential votes and just vote for party symbols. If the personal bond between electors and electees is to be maintained, if deputies' individuality is still to have any importance -- and we believe it has a great deal -- then the demand for open voting should be accompanied by a ban on parliamentary groups' taking disciplinary measures against members who openly vote against the party line. It is a complex and difficult issue, but I believe that we must tackle it. Be that as it may, I repeat: The stability of the government will not be strengthened by introducing open voting.

[Question] How, then?

[Answer] There are various ways: the first is presidentialism -- a government of the president of the republic monitored by parliament. This method leads directly to the election of the head of state by the voters. I am not saying that this is an option to be rejected in horror, but I believe it would be a forced simplification of our political complexity. Another way would be to have the prime minister elected directly by parliament at the start of the legislative term.

[Question] This proposal, too, is a radical change.

[Answer] Yes, it is a change, but still within the scope of our constitutional principles. Indeed, even now the government fully assumed power only after it won parliament's vote of confidence. I believe it would be a step forward that would strengthen the government's stability to have it directly elected by parliament.

[Question] This is actually what happens in Britain and Germany because the head of government is simply the parliamentary leader of the party or coalition that wins the most votes in the elections.

[Answer] Yes.

[Question] Perhaps this could be achieved sooner by modifying the electoral system in the direction of a majority system. We would have government stability without having to invent any complex contrivances.

[Answer] I believe that support must still be gathered with the proportional system. The government's stability can be guaranteed in various ways. I have already indicated the possibility of its being elected by parliament for the duration of the entire legislative term (4-5 years). Another possibility is for the parties to form alliances before elections. This would mean in practice voting for a particular bloc; pluralism would be maintained and stability would also be acquired. The majority system could be the natural outcome of such a process. When I talk about a majority system, I always have in mind counterposed groups of parties.

[Question] The communists will never accept it. You began by saying that institutional reform must aim to make alternation possible....

[Answer] I confirm it. But I also believe that to aim at alternation while at the same time defending the present proportional electoral system is contradictory. I have the impression, however, that the communists are beginning to realize it. For instance, I know that they would be in favor of raising the threshold on the size of municipalities in which the majority system applies. At present, this system applies to municipalities with up to 5,000 inhabitants. It could be increased to at least 30,000 inhabitants.

[Question] Would you be in favor of direct election of mayors by the voters?

[Answer] No, I am in favor of an extension of the majority system in municipalities to a larger number of inhabitants.

[Question] I see a majority system, and a two-party system.

[Answer] Not a two-party system. I confirm that I consider it neither possible nor desirable in Italy. What we do need are two groups. The PCI is opposed to the majority system because it wants to retain what is called its "diversity" with respect to the other parties. As long as it remains, or claims to be "different," the PCI will have no chance of gaining a majority, even a relative one. The famous "overtaking" will not happen because the majority of voters will not entrust their fate to people who describe themselves as "different" at the outset. Therefore, the PCI still defends the proportional system, which guarantees its diversity and its regular representation. But if the PCI really wants an alternative, its supposed "diversity" will have to be discarded.

[Question] Let us continue. Would you retain the bicameral system?

[Answer] Here, too, I will state my personal opinion on what are very complex issues. I would keep both houses, but I would seriously examine the possibility of a distinction between their constitutional functions.

[Question] Do you have in mind a U.S.-style senate?

[Answer] The two countries' constitutions are very different, but I am indeed thinking of something of that kind. Note that though people usually believe that a strong government must be subject to few controls, precisely the contrary is true: the stronger the government, the more penetrating the supervision must be.

[Question] If I were to draw final conclusions from your argument, I would say that in the framework that you are outlining, members of government could not be members of parliament.

[Answer] That is indeed what I believe. There should be complete incompatibility between membership of the government and membership of parliament. There is a different role for the two posts. Moreover, in the present system a member of parliament who is not appointed under secretary at least once appears to be a failure. What sense is there in that? The parliamentarian must strengthen his own function of representing the people, specializing in the formulation of legislation and supervision of the executive; the member of government, on the other hand, must be able to manage a complex administration. It must be one or the other.

[Question] I will ask you the same question as before: Do you believe that your ideas on institutional reform coincide with Craxi's?

[Answer] I have already told you: I do not know. I do not know what aim the Socialists intend to pursue with the reform. They have not yet said what it is. What they have said is that, as things stand, they do not believe they can ally with the Communist Party and therefore want to govern with us. They have said something else too: that when the time is ripe they will set their sights on the alternative, on alternation in the government administration. I consider this a responsible and consistent plan. If they, too, are aiming to create the conditions for alternation, their blueprint for institutional reform cannot be too different from ours.

PCI'S INGRAO REJECTS CONSTITUTIONAL PROPOSALS

PM141529 Rome LA REPUBBLICA in Italian 11 Sep 82 p 7

[Franco Recanatesi report on PCI Directorate member Pietro Ingrao's 10 September press conference in Tirrenia: "No to Grand Reform"]

[Excerpt] Tirrenia, 10 Sep -- "You ask me what the PCI's position is on the grand reform. I ask you: What does Craxi, author of the proposal, mean by grand reform? I ask you this because frankly I do not know the answer." This is what Pietro Ingrao told the journalists who put questions to him at the L'UNITA festival. "The PCI does not express prejudiced opposition to anything, but what are we talking about if there is no platform and no specific proposals?"

[Question] What do you propose?

[Answer] In our opinion, the main aim should be to change the power systems. I am referring to the relationship between the ruling parties and the public authorities. And in this connection, I would ask [DC Secretary] de Mita and [PSI Secretary] Comrade Craxi, but also [Prime Minister] Spadolini: Do you consider it permissible for party secretaries to appoint ministers? For the parties of the majority to share out public posts? For the Industrial Reconstruction Institute to go to the DC, the National Hydrocarbons Agency to the PSI and the Manufacturing Industry Holding and Finance Company to the Italian Social Democratic Party? Who says so? Moreover, there must be a change of fiscal policy. Are the DC and PSI willing to tackle a thorough reform in this field? Next, observance of the constitution. Is it not a blatant violation to renew expired decrees? In short, as far as we are concerned, there are three essential points of institutional reform: a different way of forming the government, an end to partyism and a monocameral system.

[Question] Let us start with the formation of the government. De Mita proposed in yesterday's interview with LA REPUBBLICA that the government choose its ministers from outside parliament.

[Answer] I am not opposed to including in the government forces other than those represented by the parties. I am less convinced by the drastic nature of the exclusion. It implies the following aim: the government decides; parliament supervises and makes the laws. It is a way of skirting the real problem, which is, I repeat, to end partyism and the excessive power of the party secretariats. I am convinced that in order to govern, legislate and establish a real dialogue, it is necessary to merge the various experiences -- a government composed of both parliamentarians and nonparliamentarians.

[Question] Explain to us how the communists, who also constitute a party, want to end the parties' grip.

[Answer] I have already said so in part. It is necessary to act, within observance of the constitution, to prevent the secretariats from dictating cabinet lists and the parties from continuing with the impermissible sharing out of public posts, of which the state holding companies are the most obvious example. In short, to lessen the parties' hold on the state.

[Question] Why a monocameral system?

[Answer] It is best suited to providing a real picture of the country and reduces the weight and excessive power of the secretariats.

[Question] Open or secret ballots?

[Answer] Those who propose secret ballots want a particular form of executive: a government with no program and power in the hands of the secretariats.

[Question] De Mita maintains that it is contradictory to aim at alternation while at the same time defending the proportional electoral system. However, he addes that the communists are beginning to realize this -- so much so that they are supposedly in favor of increasing the number of municipalities with a majority electoral system.

[Answer] I believe not. I really do not believe so, on the basis of the discussions that we have had within the party and the documents and conversations with other parties. Personally, as Comrade Pietro Ingrao, I have no prejudiced reservations about this solution, but I would first like De Mita to offer specific and convincing indications of good will. Dozens, hundreds of municipalities and regional governments are experiencing crises, and these last for months, if not years. The five-party councils resign, create a crisis and then cause one delay after another.... The situation in Calabria is enlightening. Why do the municipal and regional authorities remain paralyzed? To give the disputants time to resolve their problems. I offer the following proposals: To set time limits for resolving crises. Does De Mita agree? If so, we can negotiate.

[Question] De Mita also says that the parties should establish alliances before elections. This would mean in practice voting for one bloc or another, thus ensuring pluralism and stability.

[Answer] No, that is the way to a majority system. Prior liaisons are always entirely sham and fall apart at the first disagreement. The five parties which swore allegiance to each other not before, but after the elections, do nothing but argue.

FINANCIAL RESTRICTIONS AGAINST ARGENTINA LIFTED

LD150054 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0026 GMT 15 Sep 82

[Text] Britain's financial restrictions against Argentina were lifted at midnight, a treasury spokesman confirmed early today (Wednesday). The lifting of the restrictions, imposed shortly after the Argentine invasion of the Falklands, was in response to an announcement last night in Buenos Aires that Argentinian sanctions against Britain would be lifted at the same time. The spokesman said that later today the treasury would put the necessary "statutory instrument" before Parliament to make the revocation legal.

The statement issued by the treasury read: "Her Majesty's treasury notes that the Government of Argentina have announced the lifting of their financial restrictions on the United Kingdom with effect from 20,000 hours Buenos Aires time -- midnight London time.

"Accordingly, the United Kingdom's financial restrictions on Argentina are being removed with effect from midnight London time, Tuesday, September 14."

THATCHER CITED ON UPCOMING VISIT TO JAPAN

OW141349 Tokyo KYODO in English 1237 GMT 14 Sep 82

[Text] London Sept 14 KYODO — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Tuesday that her visit to Japan starting Friday will be aimed at deepening mutual understanding of common problems through talks with Japanese leaders.

Meeting with Japanese journalists here, Thatcher said during the visit she will seek an increase in Japanese investments in Britain.

Referring to current bilateral trade problems, she said that a solution to the issue will not be found without mutual recognition of each other's need to export its goods.

Interview on Visit

OW150203 Tokyo NHK Television in Japanese 2249 GMT 14 Sep 82

[NHK London correspondent Shibatsuji's exclusive interview with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher on 14 September conducted entirely in English -- recorded, place of interview not given]

[Text] [Shibatsuji] Prime Minister, what would you like personally to see in Japan?

[Thatcher] Personally to see? I have a very interesting program. We are going to see the Science City. We are going to see one of the nuclear power stations which we helped to build, and we still supply the nuclear material. I have a special interest in that, being a scientist myself. We hope to learn something from you from the way in which we use your science to turn into technological advantage.

I shall also be meeting a number of your industrialists in the Keidanren. I have met them once before when I came in 1977, and we had a meeting which I remember well. It was most stimulating, and we exchanged views on the economic situation, the role of government in industry and the role of free enterprise, so I am meeting the Keidanren again.

I hope to see some of your wonderful cultural achievements. I went to see the great Japanese exhibition here. I was a patron of it, and I had a special visit around it before the public came in very early one morning. There were some exquisitely beautiful things there, and I enjoyed them greatly.

I have a meeting arranged with the press -- always very important -- and perhaps most important of all, I am looking forward to talks with Mr Suzuki on a much more extended timetable than I have been able to have before. Previously, we have met at international conferences. This time one's whole attention will be given to talks between Japan and ourselves on how we see the world economic situation, the world political situation, and how we can help to further the things in which we believe.

[Shibatsuji] How do you see the prospect of future development of relations between the two countries?

[Thatcher] Well, I believe they are reasonably good. Japan is making quite a lot of inward investment into Britain. The factories that Japan has set up in Britain are working extremely well -- indeed, quite outstandingly well. For many people, it has been a fresh start when they have gone to work in those new factories. Your management is excellent. You handle labor relations superbly. Our people seem to have dropped their restrictive practices when they have a fresh start. They have only one union, and they have a fresh start, instead of many, so that has been a success story, and we know the need for investment. After all, we ourselves have invested the world over in other countries because, sometimes it is vital to keep your business in that country, you have to start to manufacture in that country. [sentence as heard] So that is something that is going very well. We are trying to promote the sale of more British goods in Japan, and I am going to one of the very big department stores to promote such an effort, and I hope that will be successful.

We both believe in the open trading system. We both have to export to live. So much of what we export, a much bigger proportion of our national income than Japan does -- much bigger, over a much wider range of goods. [sentence as heard] You have heavy exports over a particular range of goods. We have exports over a very wide range of goods. We want markets to be kept open if we are to continue to export, but we know that if we are to keep ours open, we require that other people keep theirs equally open because trade is a reciprocal business. Well, that is quite a lot to see and talk about.

[Shibatsuji] I wonder if you are aware that the scheduled meeting with Nissan officials will attract great attention in Japan too?

[Thatcher] I think it probably will attract great attention. There are many things we would like to talk about. I think we will talk more frankly and have more trust and confidence if we know that we can talk privately, and I do urge you to let that be so. There are occasions, you know, when reticence and privacy is more in the public interest than discussing everything openly, and so I hope that, that conversation will be able to remain private. And I have no doubt that both of us being used to a totally free press, will be able to talk freely and then just have a very brief message to the press. Do not expect to cross-examine us on every single thing. Otherwise, you will make us so nervous that the meeting might lose some of its constructive significance.

[Shibatsuji] On the subject of the Siberian gas pipeline, you have recently issued instructions to the company concerned to ignore the American sanctions and proceed to export. Do you see any possibility of the nature and strength of the Western Alliance sustaining a substantial change if not damage after the dispute?

[Thatcher] Yes, we had to issue those orders. We made commercial contracts. We keep our commercial contracts unless something quite devastating like a war intervenes. That is different, and we know you have to break them because there is a whole new situation. Had we been asked right at the beginning or told right at the beginning that this would happen, we would have never gone for these contracts, never have made them. But we entered into a contract; we will honor it. And so, the order was issued.

I am very sad that the whole question has arisen in this way -- very sad indeed. It is a difference between ourselves and the United States. The United States is still, of course, supplying her wheat to the Soviet Union. We stand by the United States in not exporting our most sensitive technology to the Soviet Union. We have never done that because we believe it is against our interests to do so. But these were not the most sensitive technology. But I want to make one thing absolutely clear, that this difference that we have with the United States will not undermine our fundamental friendship. It will not. It is in our interest to stay staunch and true to those things in which we believe, and I am sorry this thing should have occurred. I have to protect the employment or our people -- we have already enough unemployment -- and I have to protect Britain's word when she agrees to do something under normal commerical circumstances for other countries. But I stress again, the United States and Britain and Europe on the larger issues will remain true to one another. It is in our own interests to do so. It is in the interests of all those who believe in democracy and the world at large.

[Shibatsuji] Could you tell us when was the most critical moment for you throughout the Falklands issue?

[Thatcher] Well, the moment when the Falklands were invaded by the Argentines. That, obviously, was the worst moment because it was such an absurd thing to do. We did not think that they would invade -- I mean -- they must have known we would not sit back and do nothing, and therefore we had to send the task force, and then of course, it was something which I never expected to be involved in. A war is not a thing any prime minister expects suddenly to find they have to -- what can I say -- they have to get involved in, planning and executing. There were days of great anxiety because every decision mattered because they were a matter of life and death. But we achieved our objective. Our forces were wonderful in their professionalism, in their confidence, in the humane way in which they dealt with the Argentinian soldiers, and it is a great chapter in British history.

[Shibatsuji] Well, thank you very much, Prime Minister.

[Thatcher] It is a pleasure. Thank you very much for giving me the opportunity, and I do so much look forward to my visit to Japan.

[Shibatsuji] And we wish you all the best on your trip to Asia.

INTERCOMMUNAL TALKS HELD IN NICOSIA 14 SEPTEMBER

NC141732 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 14 Sep 82

[Text] A new meeting within the framework of the intercommunal talks was held this afternoon at Ledra Palace. A UN communique mentions that an exchange of views on the issue of the transitional provisions was made during the meeting. Before the meeting, the interlocutors, Mavrommatis and Onan, stated that there will be a recess of about 1-month after their meeting the day after tomorrow.

Mavrommatis, the Greek Cypriot side's representative to the talks, stated that a general discussion of various issues will be held at the meeting the day after tomorrow, which will be the last of the current round. Asked to comment on the latest statement by Onan, the Turkish Cypriot interlocutor, that after the completion of the evaluation he will have a personal discussion with Mavrommatis on the issues that were discussed when Mavrommatis was not an interlocutor, he replied that he did not think that a personal discussion will be held. Mavrommatis mentioned that during the recess he will go to Geneva to attend the conference of the committee on human rights, and then he will go to New York when the president of the republic goes.

Turkish Cypriot interlocutor Onan stated that a general discussion of various issues will be held at the meeting the day after tomorrow. Asked how long the recess will last, Onan said that he estimates it will last 4 to 5 weeks.

Perez de Cuellar on Talks

[Text] UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar has stated that the intercommunal talks in Cyprus are continuing despite the fact that no solution to the problem is in view.

In a statement in Paris, as reported by the Hellenic radio television, Mr Perez de Cuellar also stated that the Cypriot Government has shown good will in deciding not to put the Cyprus issue before the UN General Assembly, something that will allow the international organization to intensify its efforts to achieve progress in the problem. In his statement, the UN secretary general stressed that the UN Security Council should be in a position to avert conflicts and this is why it wishes to strengthen its role.

Mr Perez de Cuellar stated that he had contacts with the permanent members of the Security Council to which he proposed a meeting to study ways to strengthen the council's role.

SPOKESMAN ON ARMENIAN ISSUE, GOODS IN NORTH

NC141130 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1030 GMT 14 Sep 82

[Text] In reply to a question if the government is considering taking recourse to the UN Security Council with the aim of denouncing the Turkish side's threats and allegations of armed Armenians in Cyprus, the government spokesman has stated that this issue always has the government's keen attention but, he added, the government has not decided to take recourse to the Security Council.

In reply to a question regarding commercial transactions and the sending of goods to the occupied territory, the government spokesman has stated that the government considers the Turkish Cypriots equal citizens and it does not put terms on sending goods to the occupied territory as long as these goods do not strengthen the positions of the occupation troops.

KIPRIANOU RECEIVES ROMANIAN MILITARY DELEGATION

NC141611 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1500 GMT 14 Sep 82

[Text] Today President of the Republic Kiprianou received the Romanian military delegation which is visiting Cyprus. The delegation was accompanied by Defense Minister Veniamin, Romanian Charge d'Affaires Alexie, Cypriot Ambassador in Romania Khatzimiltis, chief of the National Guard General Papanayiotou and Military Attache of the Romanian Embassy Colonel Manea.

President Kiprianou affirmed that this visit will contribute to the further development of the friendly relations and cooperation between the two countries and expressed appreciation of Romanian's steadfast support of the Cypriot people's struggle for freedom and justice.

In reply, First Deputy Minister of Defense of Romania and chief of the Romanian Armed Forces General Staff General Milea, who heads the delegation, gave assurance of the respect enjoyed in Romania by President Kiprianou's efforts to find a just solution to the Cyprus problem. My country's government, he said, wholeheartedly supports your efforts for Cyprus' freedom and unity and for the restoration of the Cypriot people's rights.

CULTURAL AGREEMENT SIGNED WITH GDR 14 SEPTEMBER

[Text] The fifth program for cultural and scientific cooperation between Cyprus and the German Democratic Republic for the years 1982-1983 was initialed today at the Foreign Ministry. The program was signed on behalf of the Cypriot side by Deputy Director General of the Foreign Ministry Markidhis and on behalf of the German side by the ambassador of the Democratic Republic of Germany, Schurath. The main provisions of the program concern cooperation and exchanges in culture, arts, theater, education, sciences, literature, movies and sports.

BRIEFS

DELEGATION RETURNS FROM USSR -- The commercial delegation of the Cypriot Chamber of Commerce and Industry has returned from the Soviet Union. A chamber statement says that the results of the delegations' contacts in the Soviet Union were satisfactory. The delegation met with representatives of the Soviet Union's Chamber of Commerce and Industry and with officials of the country's Ministry for Foreign Trade. During these meetings, Cypriot-Soviet commerical relations were reviewed in depth and the Cypriot delegation stressed the need for speeding up the purchase of spirits, wines and citrus. The Soviet side gave assurances that purchases will not be less than last year's. [Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 14 Sep 82 NC]

TURKISH DIPLOMAT INJURED BY TURKISH EXILES

NC141410 Athens ATHENS NEWS in English 14 Sep 82 p 4

[Text] The military attache at the Turkish Embassy in Athens was seriously injured yesterday by leftwing Turkish exiles during a political demonstrations, police said. A police spokesman said Osman Boyalar, 42 was attacked by a group of Turks as he took photographs of a gathering of about 350 leftists outside Athens university. "His condition is serious but stable," a spokesman for Athens general hospital said.

Police said Boyalar refused to make a statement about what had happened.

Witnesses said the Turks dragged Boyalar across a street to the university campus, where police have no right of entry and began kicking and punching him. Greek demonstrators intervened and carried the Turkish diplomat, bleeding from head injuries, to a police car parked outside the university precinct.

About 50 leftwing Turkish political refugees, wearing cardboard masks, took part in the demonstration to mark the anniversaries of military takeovers in Turkey in 1980 and Chile in 1973. "Down with the juntas of Turkey, Chile and Poland," the demonstrators shouted. They carried banners reading "Victory to the Turkish People" and "No to Fascism."

More than 200 fugitives from Turkey's military regime have sought political asylum in Greece in the past 14 months. Many are leftwing extremists who take part in political activity here despite their refugee status.

Official Spokesman's Statement

NC142148 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 2100 GMT 14 Sep 82

[Text] Alacam, Turkish ambassador in Athens, today communicated with Deputy Foreign Minister Kapsis who, according to press reports, gave him all of the evidence the government has at its disposal in connection with last evening's incidents at the university courtyard instigated by Turkish demonstrators against the Turkish air attache in Greece. At the same time, Kapsis arranged for the delivery of the air attache's car, which was parked near the university.

In Ankara, Turkish Foreign Minister Turkmen asked that the perpetrators of yesterday's incident be arrested and punished and that any activities by Turkish citizens who have asked for asylum in Athens be prohibited. Turkmen added that this event, along with certain statements and the behavior of some responsible persons in the Greek Government, have violated the verbal agreement aimed at detente in relations between the two countries. At the same time, a statement by the Turkish Government mentions that Ankara wants to believe that the Greek Government does not share in the events, which run contrary to the spirit of detente.

The Greek reply, which will be given to Ankara tomorrow, reportedly stresses that the Greek Government hopes that the spirit of detente which prevailed after the moratorium will be maintained.

In connection with the entire issue, government spokesman Maroudhas made the following statement this evening: The Greek Government has quite objectively informed Greek Ambassador in Ankara Papoulias on the incidents. During his meeting with Turkmen, Papoulias stressed that the Greek police acted in an exemplary manner and without reproach; without magisterial orders, they violated the university sanctuary in order to offer help to the two Turkish military personnel. Papoulias also stressed that the Athens prosecutor has brought charges against all responsible people. Thus, the entire affair is in the hands of Greek justice.

PAPANDREOU INTERVIEWED ON FOREIGN POLICY

NC141630 Athens I KATHIMERINI in Greek 14 Sep 82 p 2

[Text] A few days after Papandreou affirmed, on the occasion of Francois Mitterrand's arrival in Athens, that Greece belongs to the Atlantic Alliance (an advanced variation of the slogan "We belong to the West"), in a new interview with the Italian magazine EPOCA he attributes the confrontation of national problems to the foreign policy that was expressed through the phrase "We belong to the West." Specifically referring to his government's foreign policy, in this interview he claims:

"The Greek Government follows an independent multidimensional foreign policy and seeks friendly relations and equal cooperation with all countries. It is natural that within this framework, it also follows a policy contributing to the maintenance and further development of an atmosphere of detente, peace and international cooperation throughout the world, especially in Europe.

"For the specific exercise of our policy, we are naturally obliged to take into consideration current international conditions all the more when we are confronting national problems. However, we are simultaneously promoting our independent, multidimensional foreign policy on all great international problems.

"As a Balkan country, Greece follows an active policy of detente, friendship and cooperation in the Balkans.

"I should say that after the great step taken by George Papandreou in 1964, this policy was significantly promoted after the fall of the dictatorship by the current president, Konstandinos Karamanlis.

"Within the framework of this policy, the Greek Government reserves special interest for the idea of the denuclearization of the Balkans.

"This idea had been announced by the Greek Government as a concrete proposal during its policy statement. A similar proposal has been made by other sides, including by Bulgarian President T. Zhikov.

"The implementation of this idea could alter the political atmosphere in all of Europe and mark the beginning for the deescalation of the arms race, especially of the nuclear arms race, throughout the world.

"The establishment of a denuclearized zone in the Balkans certainly does not depend only on the Greek Government's stance. Greece is ready to discuss the means and the procedure for the implementation of this idea with all interested parties.

"There has been an initial reaction by the EEC Committee to the [Greek] note [for special treatment] which in a way can be considered encouraging to the extent that it recognizes the peculiarity of Greek conditions and the need for the introduction of special arrangements.

"The specific negotiations which will be held during the next months will show the extent to which Greece's complete accession to the EEC is incompatible with the need for the implementation of a national development program, something that is the government's basic goal and the country's urgent need."

REGIME PROTESTS EURODEPUTIES' NORTH CYPRUS VISIT

[By special correspondent Kostas Kekis]

[Excerpt] Strasbourg — The Greek Government, through its foreign minister, I. Kharalambopoulos, has conveyed to European Parliament President Dankert, who is visiting Athens, a document of protest against the conservative Eurodeputies' recent visit to the Turkish-occupied part of Cyprus as guests of Turkish Cypriot politician Denktas.

According to press reports, Mr Kharalambopoulos stressed in his document that the European Parliament must respect the sovereign rights of Cyprus. He asked Mr Dankert to convey the Greek protest to the chairman of the Parliament's political groups.

At the same time, Mr L. Bournias and K. Kallias, Greek Eurodeputies of the New Democracy Party, made a strong protest yesterday during the plenary session of the Christian-Democrat political group to which they belong because four Christian-Democrat Eurodeputies have visited the Turkish-occupied part of Cyprus with other colleagues from conservative political groups in the European Parliament and have made political statements.

TURKISH OFFICERS FLEE TO KHIOS, SEEK ASYLUM

[Text] Greece will participate in the Display Determination 82 maneuvers to be held from 17 September to 13 October in the area of the NATO southern wing. In connection with Greece's participation in the maneuvers, Deputy National Defense Minister Andonions Dhrosoyiannis has made the following statement:

We will participate in the Display Determination 82 maneuvers after long and difficult negotiations and under terms which do not affect our sovereign rights, even by an iota. Land, air and naval forces from Italy, Turkey and the United States; air and naval forces from Greece, land and air forces from Portugal; as well as naval forces from France and Great Britain will participate in the maneuvers. The maneuvers will be held within the framework of the alliance's annual training program, which is prepared the previous year.

KUWAIT, PLO TO DEPOSIT FUNDS IN GREEK BANKS

NC121707 Athens TO VIMA TIS KIRIAKIS in Greek 12 Sep 82 p 1

[Text] Following the political recognition by all sides of Greece's efforts during the Lebanese crisis, the Greek Government's initiatives appear to be bringing the country economic benefits.

It is expected that Kuwait will deposit $500 million in a Greek bank, which will most probably be announced by Mr Andreas Papandreou during his visit there in November. Some of the capital handled by the Palestine Liberation Organization, around $200 million, will also probably be deposited in Greek banks. Thus, by the end of the year the total amount of Arab deposits in Greece will reach nearly $1 billion.

For obvious reasons, the matter is being handled secretly, but in any case the relevant consultations are in the final phase. Along with the deposits, the questions of Arab investments in Greece is also being discussed. However, this question is much more complicated, because the Arabs prefer to invest their funds in real estate rather than in productive investment.

DELEGATION TO DISCUSS ROMANIA'S TRADE DEFICIT

[Text] Alternate National Economy Minister Ioannis Pottakis flew to Bucharest over the weekend for talks on economic links between Greece and Romania, a government spokesman said yesterday. The spokesman said Pottakis will prepare the ground for a visit to Romania next month by Premier Andreas Papandreou. He also is expected to discuss Romania's 50-million-dollar trade debts to Greece.

Since Greece joined the European Economic Community (EEC) in 1981, trade between the two countries has been conducted in free exchange and Romania's deficit has grown from $20 to $50 million. Despite a Romanian pledge during President Nicolae Ceausescu's visit to Athens in May that the deficit would soon be covered through increased exports to Greece, an Athens Chamber of Commerce official said "little has been done so far." The chamber suggested last week that only a return to the clearing or barter system formerly operated with Balkan countries until Greece's EEC succession could ensure healthy trade relations with Romania.

The chamber asked the government in an open letter to pressure Romania into settling its debts, perhaps through ordering Romanian products for state-owned Greek firms. Greece exports mostly agricultural produce to Romania, in return for industrial machinery, cars and tractors.

CHILEAN CP LEADER ARRIVES IN ATHENS 13 SEPTEMBER

[Text] Luis Corvalan, secretary general of the Chilean Communist Party, arrived in Athens yesterday.

BRIEFS

ARMED FORCES TV RENAMED -- The Greek House of Deputies with the New Democracy Party deputies absent again from its session on Wednesday night, passed the bill providing for converting the Yened army TV station into a civilian TV channel and redesignating it ERT 2. Application of the new law is expected in 20-25 days and the new ERT 2 channel signal will then be on the air. The departure of New Democracy Party deputies was not connected with the Yened redesignation, which they accepted, but with the entire procedure bringing about such a change -- a procedure concerning which they expressed their reservations. FOREIGN MINISTRY ON ATHENS ATTACK ON OFFICIAL

TA141446 Ankara Domestic Serivce in Turkish 1424 GMT 14 Sep 82

[Statement by Foreign Ministry spokesman Ambassador Nazmi Akiman on attack against Turkish official in Athens on 13 September -- recorded]

[Text] An anti-Turkish demonstration was held in front of the Athens Univserity on Monday, 13 September. Our air force attache at the Turkish Embassy in Athens, Lt Col Osman Boyalar, who went to the vicinity of the university to observe the demonstration, was attacked by the demonstrators and injured. We have recently been informed that his condition does not give rise to concern. According to information received from our embassy in Athens, the incident occurred as follows:

Boyalar and the senior military attache at the embassy, dressed in civilian clothes, went to the vicinity of the university to observe the demonstration. The demonstrators attacked Boyalar. Our senior military attache, Col Tuzuner, tried to rescue our air force attache from the hands of the demonstrators. However, he was also attacked while trying to intervene. The Greek Interior Ministry and the security forces, who were watching the demonstrations on a close circuit television, did not initiate an immediate intervention following the recognition of the air force attache by the demonstrators and their subsequent attack on him. When the incident proved to be grave, the Greek police took our air force attache away from the scene of the incident to the hospital. According to information furnished by the Greek Government, the demonstration was organized by extreme leftist factions and by Turkish citizens who are fugitives and are currently at the camp in (Lavrion).

Upon hearing of the incident, Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen invited the Greek ambassador in Ankara to his office and protested the failure of the Greek police, which it was learned had been watching the incident on closed circuit television, to prevent the incident by intervening on time. He requested that the culprits be captured and brought before the law. The foreign minister also demanded that the Greek Government prevent the fugitive Turkish citizens from engaging in political activities. Turkmen stressed that this incident and the behavior and statements by various Greek officials violated the verbal agreement reached between the two countries aimed at ameliorating bilateral relations within the framework of mutual trust and detente.

FOREIGN MINISTER DENOUNCES ARMENIAN TERRORISM

[Excerpt] A state ceremony was held in Ankara today for Bora Suelkan, administrative attache in the Turkish Consulate General in Burgas, Bulgaria, who was martyred by an Armenian terrorist last Thursday. Suelkan's body was placed in front of the Foreign Ministry at 1145. The ceremony began with a moment of silence for Suelkan.

In a statement at the ceremony, Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen said that the government is deeply grieved over the loss of Suelkan. Pointing out that the responsibility for this murder also falls on the Armenian terrorists, Turkmen noted: We are full of the same despair and indignation. We are screaming out our condemnation and hatred.

Turkmen thanked the Bulgarian Government for its concern in bringing Suelkan's body to Turkey. He noted that Turkey insistingly expects the Bulgarian authorities to exert every effort for the speedy apprehension and punishment of Suelkan's murderer, adding: It is very difficult to find the words to express our anger and attitude in the face of the despicable assassinations and attacks, which are becoming increasingly more frequent. We all justifiably want every necessary step to be taken to quickly halt these loathsome actions.

This will, of course, be realized. However, as a state and as a nation that has undergone every kind of experience for centuries, we have to maintain our courage and cool-headedness. We will win this ruthless struggle through determination, but also through a cool-headed and prudent attitude.

The foreign minister said that the aims of Armenian terrorism have now become clear. He continued: Only recently, ASALA members explained these aims to a magazine in detail. Their goal is to influence the Armenians throughout the world and convince them that political gains can be obtained through armed actions, make world public opinion indentify with so-called Armenian cause, use the Armenian republic in the Soviet Union as a springboard, paralyze the Turkish Government, disconnect Turkey from the West and redirect it into Chaos. Is it possible for them to attain their goal as long as Turkey continues to be a strong and stable country and does not swerve from the sensible path?

Turkmen explained that Armenian terrorism has admitted that it is collaborating with all international terrorist organizations. He stated that the truly effective way to fight this terrorism is through close international cooperation. Pointing out that Armenian terrorists are caught before they are able to launch their attacks in countries that adopt this concept and realize the importance of fighting terrorism, Turkmen said that a recent example of this was displayed in Britain. He expressed the hope that Britain's responsible attitude will serve as an example to other countries as well.

Referring to the confession by Armenian terrorist Levon Ekmekjian, who participated in the Esenboga Airport raid, Turkmen said that it has become clear that youths are led into terror after being indoctrinated with erroneous information concerning Turkey and historical facts. Turkmen said that the media in countries that continue to allow Armenian propaganda should extensively review these confessions. However, it was sadly seen that this was not the case in this incident.

GUNES: GREEK CYPRIOTS 'DANGEROUS NEIGHBORS'

NC140809 Istanbul GUNES in Turkish 9 Sep 82 p 3

["Lens" column by Refik Erduran]

[Excerpt] In the course of his trial, Levon Ekmekjian [the Armenian terrorist] made a very interesting disclosure when he said that his band had planned to emigrate to the Greek Cypriot part of Cyprus when they realized that they could not survive in Beirut. Thus, we must never again lose sight of the truth that our most dangerous neighbors -- dangerous because they do not act with logic -- are the Greek Cypriots.

The Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA) militants are a small minority within the Armenian community. Those who see the Turks as satans from former worlds and who breed enmity from morning till night are the sizeable sections of that peculiar nation living in southern Cyprus.

Most of the Turkish Cypriot journalists are trying to surmount this handicap by doing everything in their power to bridge the gap with the community in the south. They participate in meetings in full force and generally try to refrain from rousing sentiment. There are those among Greek Cypriot colleagues who are trying to respond to those efforts, too. But they are only a few.

EVREN TO VISIT YUGOSLAVIA 20 SEPTEMBER

TA141525 Ankara ANATOLIA in Turkish 1450 GMT 14 Sep 82

[Text] Ankara, 14 Sep (AA) -- Head of State Gen Kenan Evren will leave on an official visit for Belgrade on 20 September as the guest of the president of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, Petar Stambolic. Evren's visit will last until 23 September.

In his weekly news conference today, Foreign Ministry spokesman Ambassador Nazmi Akiman made the following statement in connection with the 3-day official visit Evren will make to Yugoslavia:

"Head of State Gen Kenan Evren will hold bilateral talks with SFRY President Petar Stambolic. Meanwhile, official talks will be held between delegations and industrial installations in Belgrade and its vicinity will be visited.

"The Turkish Republic attaches importance to developing friendly relations in the Balkans and to peace and cooperation in the region."

Bilateral Relations

Economic relations between the two countries in recent years have been carried out within the framework of the economic, technical, industrial and scientific agreement signed on 12 May, 1979. Turkey and Yugoslavia have recently cooperated in building the brick factory in Kutahya and have cooperated on the issue of telephones and a telephone exchange system. Work is continuing to further develop cooperation.

"Trade relations between the two countries is as follows: Imports amounted to $30 million and exports to $19 million in 1978, imports $45 million and exports $35 million in 1979; imports $73 million and exports $25 million in 1980; imports $51 million and exports $25 million in 1981. Import figures for the first 6 months of 1982 reached $12 million and exports for the same period were determined as $15 million.

"The issue of developing economic, trade and cultural possibilities within the framework of the existing agreements will be discussed during the official talks between the two heads of state. Agreements in principle regarding the development of relations may also be reached during these talks."

Foreign Minister Ilter Turkman and technical experts are among the members of the delegation headed by Evren.

FIVE MEMBERS OF ILLEGAL ORGANIZATION CAPTURED

[Summary] The Press and Public Relations Office of the Army 6th Corps and the Adana, Icel, Kahramanmaras, Gaziantep, Adiyaman and Hatay Martial Law Command had issued a statement saying that five members of the illegal Turkish Communist Party-Marxist-Leninist-Revolutionary People's Unity Organization who were trying to form cadres in order to reactivate their organization have been captured in Hatay.

DEATH SENTENCE DEMANDED FOR 10 DISK MEMBERS

TA131600 Ankara ANATOLIA in French 1520 GMT 13 Sep 82

[Text] Istanbul, 13 Sep (AA) -- The military prosecutor has demanded the death sentence for 10 members of the Research Institute of the Confederation of Revolutionary Works Unions [DISK].

Among those who face trial are Ahmet Yildiz, a member of the National Unity Committee, which had overthrown the Adnan Menderes government in 1960; and M. Teoman Ozturk, former chairman of the Chamber of Engineers and Architects. They are accused of attempting to overthrow the regime in the country and of forming an illegal organization for the revolution.

The military prosecutor has also demanded prison sentences ranging from 5 to 15 years for Prof Sadun Aren, founding member of the Turkish Labor Party [passage indistinct]. The defendants will face charges along with 52 DISK administrators, among them Abdullah Basturk, leader of the confederation.

NATIONALRAT ELECTIONS TO BE HELD 24 APR 83

AU161416 Vienna ARBEITER-ZEITUNG in German 16 Sep 82 p 1

[Excerpt] Vienna (AZ) -- The next Nationalrat elections will be held on the last Sunday in April. In other words, on 24 April 1983. This was confirmed by Chancellor Kreisky in a talk with ARBEITER-ZEITUNG. Orginally, 15 May had also been under consideration as a possible election date.

LANC RECEIVES U.S. CHARGE D'AFFAIRES POLANSKY

[Special DIE PRESSE report by "A.U., GPE"]

[Excerpt] [Vienna/Washington] -- The discussion which arose in the past few days around the new U.S. refugee policy, which was presented to Congress by Refugee Affairs Coordinator Douglas on Tuesday, has now also led to political activities in Vienna. U.S. Charge d'Affaires Polansky confered with Interior Minister Lanc. In an official statement by the U.S. Embassy, it was stressed that the total number of refugees accepted for immigration in the 1983 U.S. fiscal year should be as high as the 1982 total.

In the period 1 October 1981 to 30 September 1982, [as published] the Vienna embassy -- the statement continues -- has issued immigration visas to 7,196 refugees from East Europe. It is pointed out that the United States has done more than any other country in admiting refugees. At the same time, however, the role played by Austria as a first country of asylum for political refugees in stressed "with admiration." It is stated that Austria will continue to be supported in the future as well.

NORWEGIAN KING CONCLUDES OFFICIAL VISIT

[Text] King Olav of Norway has ended his 4-day official visit to Austria. The monarch departed this morning from Vienna Schwechat Airport. In his talks with President Kirchschlaeger and Chancellor Kreisky, both sides stressed the good relations between Austria and Norway, which are free of any problem.

GDR TO INCREASE IMPORTATION OF CONSUMER GOODS

AU161327 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 16 Sep 82 p 7

[Summary] In the presence of the GDR ambassador to Austria, GDR State Secretary Gerhard Beil, first deputy minister of foreign trade, had a talk with Chancellor Bruno Kreisky in Vienna yesterday, which primarily dealt with economic questions. "There was consensus that both sides are fulfilling their commitments in bilateral relations in an exemplary manner." Agreement was reached in principle on further intensification of these relations, and it was agreed that negotiations to this end will be held between the Austrian and GDR ministries concerned.

"Within the framework of future economic relations, an intensified importation of Austrian consumer goods by the GDR will play a prominent role. In addition, the GDR representative submitted a number of proposals for expanding bilateral economic relations in many fields."

GOVERNMENT COLLAPSES, FOUR DEPUTIES RESIGN

NC170940 Paris AFP in English 0933 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Bonn, Sep 18 (AFP) -- West German Social-Democratic Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's government collapsed today after four Liberal ministers pulled out of the coalition.

The Christian-Democratic opposition immediately announced its agreement for early elections to be organized.

Replacements Announced

LD171046 Hamburg DPA in German 1017 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn, 17 Sep (DPA) -- After the resignation of the four FDP ministers, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt will take over the position of foreign affairs minister, headed until now by the FDP chief, Hans-Dietrich Genscher. Schmidt announced this on Friday in his statement to the lower house. The Economics Ministry, for which Otto Graf Lambsdorff had been responsible, is to be taken over by Minister of Finance Manfred Lahnstein. Justice Minister Juergen Schmude [title as received] is to administer the Ministry of the Interior, which until now has been headed by Gerhart Baum. Minister of Education Bjoern Engholm [title as received] is to perform the duties of Agriculture Minister Ertl, who has also resigned.

Schmidt Blames FDP

[Excerpts] Bonn, 17 Sep (DPA) -- In the lower house today Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has laid the blame for the break-up of the Social Democrat-Liberal coalition clearly at the door of the FDP. In his eagerly expected statement he said that since Genscher's "speech about a turning point" last year, it had been doubtful whether the FDP had the will to continue the coalition.

These doubts had been "considerably strengthened" since the Hesse FDP statement in favor of a coalition with the CDU [in the Hesse state diet]. It had "at no time been credible," as the Hesse FDP had insisted, that this coalition statement would not affect the cohesion in Bonn. Schmidt said that this assurance was, in fact, not even given anymore now.

The Hesse election is to be held on 26 September. The chancellor stressed that the reliability of the FRG Government in the areas of foreign and economic policies was indispensible. The situation demanded a government that was capable of action. FDP chief Hans-Dietrich Genscher and FDP parliamentary party chief Wolfgang Mischnick had failed to give a clear and unequivocal commitment to the Bonn government coalition. One sentence had been missing in FDP statements in the past few days: "The FDP stands firmly by the Social Democrat-Liberal coalition.

Schmidt stated that he had already stressed last week that "only new elections to the lower house can create full democratic legitimacy for another federal chancellor and for another policy." Together with his closest political friends, he was of the opinion that new elections "ought to take place as quickly as constitutionally possible."

Schmidt said that last week he had called upon the opposition to introduce a constructive vote of no confidence so that in this way another Chancellor could be elected. He said the opposition leader had replied that first, one should await the elections to the state diets in Weisbaden and Munich. From this he had deduced that "Dr Kohl does not presently believe that he can get enough deputies of the German lower house behind him.

Elections by Late November

[Excerpts] Bonn, 17 Sep (DPA) -- Following the breakup of the Bonn SPD/FDP coalition, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt is aiming for new elections by the end of November as a way of solving the crisis. Speaking to the lower house today, Schmidt called upon all parties to hold talks next week on an agreement which would lead to new elections by means of the chancellor asking for a vote of confidence.

To laughter from the CDU/CSU ranks, Schmidt said that such an agreement must, however, include the renunciation by the opposition of a constructive vote of no confidence that aimed at the election of a chancellor from their own ranks. Schmidt said that in past weeks, leading CDU/CSU politicians from Franz Josef Strauss to Helmut Kohl had repeatedly demanded new elections. Now it was a matter of whether Kohl stood by his word. Schmidt said that German public opinion would universally welcome the proposal for immediate new elections.

Schmidt stressed that he and his party did not find it easy to bring about new elections by asking for a vote of confidence which they intended to lose. He was also aware that in new elections, the SPD would "not escape unscathed," but the SPD was a confident party which could also weather crises. Schmidt laid the blame for the breakup of the coalition at the door of the FDP because they had not committed themselves clearly and unequivocally to a continuation of the coalition even though there are still many things in common between the parties.

CDU/CSU CONSIDERING NO CONFIDENCE VOTE

[Text] Bonn, 17 Sep (DPA) -- The CDU/CSU is considering a constructive vote of no confidence in order to end the Bonn government crisis. On Friday, at a special session the CDU/CSU parliamentary group left this option open for opposition leader Helmut Kohl in the event that he comes to an agreement to this effect with the Free Democrats. The union was thus reacting to the offer of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt to bring about elections as soon as possible now that the SPD/FDP coalition has broken up. The parliamentary business manager of the CDU/CSU parliamentary group, Philipp Jenninger, told journalists of Kohl's view that the opposition would decide on the timing of elections and would now allow itself to be told when to hold the elections by the chancellor.

According to the course decided on by the union, the minority Schmidt government is to be dissolved by means of a constructive vote of no confidence and afterward, a CDU/CSU and FDP cabinet is to be formed. If such an agreement with the FDP should come about, the government thus formed would present its program and go into elections. Jenninger said that it was now up to the FDP to say which path it wished to take.

The chairman of the CDU/CSU group in the lower house, Friedriche Zimmermann, cancelled all his election commitments in Hesse and will discuss the political situation in the evening with the CSU chief Franz Josef Strauss.

GENSCHER: FDP PREPARED TO FORM GOVERNMENT

LD171246 Hamburg DPA in German 1223 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Bonn, 17 Sep (DPA) -- Speaking in the lower house debate today, FDP Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher said that his party was prepared to form a government capable of acting. If this did not prove possible, then fresh elections would have to be held. "We do not fear the decision of the voters," Genscher said.

He stressed that the FDP had respect for all other Democrats, and had "special respect for our partner of yesterday," the SPD. Genscher, who began his statement with the words "The coalition of the SPD and the FDP is at an end," gave the reason for leaving the government as the increasingly widening differences between the coalition partners.

KOHL REJECTS SCHMIDT OFFER, URGES RESIGNATION

LD171208 Hamburg DPA in German 1133 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Excerpts] Bonn, 17 Sep (DPA) -- CDU Chairman Helmut Kohl has rejected Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's proposal for talks between the parties with the aim of holding new elections and has called for the chancellor's resignation. In his reply to the chancellor's statement today, Kohl said in the lower house that Schmidt should stop maneuvering and should draw the "most natural and simplest conclusion" from the poor balance sheet of his period of government.

Kohl said, to lengthy applause, that the chancellor had, as a patriot, done his best in office, and "now it is your patriotic duty to resign."

In his reply, Kohl called upon the chancellor to ask for a vote of confidence, and made it clear that otherwise the opposition would introduce a vote of no confidence for the election of a new chancellor. Kohl said that then the CDU would try as soon as possible to form a government capable of action and then face the electorate. The CDU had no fear of the results. "We are convinced that our people need a new beginning," the opposition leader said to lengthy applause from the CDU/CSU benches.

EARLIER GENSCHER INTERVIEW ON LAMBSDORFF DISPUTE

DW161121 Mainz ZDF Television Network in German 1815 GMT 15 Sep 82

[Interview with Foreign Minister and FDP Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher by reporter Schroeder in the program "Balance" -- videotaped]

[Excerpt] [Question] The chancellor asked Graf Lambsdorff in cabinet today whether his concept should be considered to be a letter of separation. What did he reply?

[Answer] The chancellor asked the economics minister to outline his concept, which is quite natural in the economic situation we have now. The economics minister outlined his concept, the possibilities and necessities he foresees, as well as his statement that this concept should be discussed now. It was his aim to make a contribution to overcoming the unemployment situation. In doing this, he did not have any coalition policy intentions, which is being imputed.

I think that all these tactical things should be put aside. Our people demand government activity. We are determined to do that. This was demonstrated today in the businesslike cabinet atmosphere. I hope that the discussion of the Lambsdorff document will become more businesslike now. Everybody is invited to suggest improvements or changes.

[Question] The chancellor asked the minister to announce publicly this week that he does not intend to abandon the government policy basis with his document. Will Mr Lambsdorff make this statement?

[Answer] The minister of economics maintains -- and this is also my opinion -- that his concept lies in the framework of the common government policy. If new developments take place, it is quite natural to consider these ideas and how they can be further developed. What part of them will be incorporated in the government's policy is another question. Agreement must be reached on that. As long as something has not become the government's policy, you can only represent the agreed upon policy. I think that the talk between the chancellor and the economics minister late this week will serve the development of a businesslike discussion.

AFP OVERVIEW DEALS WITH GOVERNMENT'S COLLAPSE

NC171027 Paris AFP in English 1006 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn, Sep 17 (AFP) -- A statement from the Social-Democratic group in parliament said that the chancellor had convinced the opposition of the need for general elections owing to a total deadlock between the coalition partners.

The Liberals, of the Free Democratic Party, had threatened to change camp and join the conservative Christian-Democrats over an economic policy dispute. The Liberals want austerity and cutbacks in social benefits, firmly opposed by the Social-Democrats.

This economic dissidence was led by Economy Minister Count Otto Lambsdorff, a Liberal, who over the past two weeks had pushed for policy changes rejected as "rightwing" by the Social-Democrats.

Count Lambsdorff's suggestions were largely backed by his party chief, Mr. Genscher.

Elections were not scheduled in West Germany until 1984.

Before the resignation of the four ministers became known, the Christian-Democrats had asked Mr. Schmidt today for a vote of confidence before resorting to elections.

Mr. Schmidt was addressing parliament as the resignations were announced, and a reply from opposition leader Helmut Kohl was expected to make it clear whether elections would be organized immediately or whether the Christian-Democrats would press for time to first organize a new coalition with the Liberals.

Count Lambsdorff openly favoured a Liberal-Christian Democratic alliance in pressing for economic policy changes, and Mr. Genscher was said to privately support the plan.

The economy minister's "anti-social" package aimed at off-setting a forecast budget deficit of nearly 30,000 million marks (12,000 million dollars) next year. It included limiting unemployment payments to one year, even in case of sickness, and trimming benefits from the present 68 per cent of the most recent net salary to 50 per cent for the first three months out of work.

Other measures included the suppression of paid maternity leave and financial help for school children, and increases in social security contributions from pensioners and the obligation for students to repay grants at the end of their studies.

COMMUNIQUE ISSUED ON CHEYSSON VISIT TO LEBANON

AB171023 Paris Diplomatic Information Service in French 0935 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Communique on the visit of French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson to Beirut -- issued on 16 September]

[Text] The minister of foreign affairs, Claude Cheysson, was received in audience by Ilyas Sarkis, president of the Lebanese Republic, at 1030 on 16 September. Mr Cheysson was in Beirut to affirm to the legitimate authorities of Lebanon, on behalf of the president of the republic and the French Government, France's solidarity with Lebanon, which has again met with sad trials. That was the meaning of the message sent by Francois Mitterrand to Ilyas Sarkis soon after the assassination of the president-elect.

During his visit to Beirut, Mr Cheysson talked by telephone with Shafiq al-Wazzan, chairman of the Lebanese council, whom he could not meet because the route was blocked by the advance of the Israeli troops into west Beirut. Mr Cheysson conveyed the same message to Kamal al-Assad, president of the National Assembly.

By these actions, the French Government wants to show its support for the legitimate authority in Lebanon.

MINISTERS' COMMUNIQUE ON BEIRUT FORCES' RETURN

AB161116 Paris Diplomatic Information Service in French 0930 GMT 16 Sep 82

["Extracts" of communique issued following 15 September meeting of French Council of Ministers]

[Text] Lebanon-Middle East: The mission of the French contingent within the multinational intervention force in Beirut has ended well. Conditions have been created for the Lebanese Army to ensure order and security in the capital.

It is now essential that the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Lebanon be undertaken immediately, as provided for by the resolutions of the UN Security Council, statements by numerous states friendly to Lebanon, and more recently, the Arab summit during its conference in Fes. The French Government attaches great importance to this insofar as, as stated on many occasions by the president of the republic, this withdrawal is a condition for the independence, integrity and restoration of full sovereignty of Lebanon; principles to which France remains deeply attached.

The Arab statement, which came after President Reagan's speech in Burbank, and which followed the positive reactions of many countries to the draft France-Egypt resolution which is presently being studied by the Security Council, confirms the desire of a greater number to engage in a process of negotiations for a peace based on the principles of rights, which France has recalled so many times, and which yesterday, constituted and tomorrow will constitute the basis of its action.

MITTERRAND STATEMENT ON STRENGTH OF FRANCE

AB161306 Paris Diplomatic Information Service in French 0940 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Statement by French President Francois Mitterrand, given in Paris 15 September]

[Text] 1 The present disorder is due to the disintegration of the old monetary system, the serious indebtedness of large developing countries and the worsening of the world economic recession. This has resulted in speculative fevers, which in turn bear on gold and the major currencies, including the franc.

2 In order to respond to a new attack from the international operators, we must set up additional stringent measures needed to carry out our program.

3 We notice real and constant progress has been made on most of the plans, thanks to the efforts by a greater number of the people. This is not yet the case for the balance of trade, which suffers from the very old weakness of some of our structures of production. We must immediately mobilize the nation's forces and initiate the technical measures needed for this redress.

The government will use all appropriate measures within its means. Everyone should know that speculation cannot hope to lead France to devalue its currency in any way.

4 The systematic development of all the nation's true resources has begun. National cohesion through social justice takes first place; invention, innovation, training and research will make France one of the leading creative nations. The call to save toward productive investment will ensure the fullness of this renaissance.

I do not doubt that from month to month, the fertility of the new France economy will assert itself. It will bring to the country the vigor of its human resources. The state has the means to vouch for it. This cannot be done without the efforts of all. These efforts will be supported, and will be distributed justly.

JAPAN'S AID SOUGHT FOR FAST BREEDER REACTOR

OW161043 Tokyo KYODO in English 0709 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Text] Vienna Sept 16 KYODO -- France desires Japan's technological and financial cooperation when it undertakes a project to develop a large fast breeder reactor (FBR) for commercial use in 1985 or later, the head of the French Atomic Energy Commissariat said here Thursday.

Michel Peckqueur, general administrator of the commissariat, said in an interview with KYODO NEW SERVICE that the "superphoenix" fast breeder reactor now under construction in France will be put into operation around the middle of 1984. Peckqueur is now visiting here to attend an international conference on atomic energy.

After the completion of the project, he said France will embark on the development of a big fast breeder reactor for commercial use, although details of the project are yet to be determined.

But the commissariat will be able to work out details of the post-"superphoenix" project towa d the end of 1985, he said. He added France hopes to promote the project with the cooperation of other advanced countries, especially Japan, with advanced technology and abundant funds.

EYADEMA HOLDS 2D ROUND OF TALKS WITH MITTERRAND

AB160915 Lome Domestic Service in French 0615 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Text] Gen Gnassingbe Eyadema, founding chairman of the Togolese People's Rally (RPT) and president of the republic, who is on a private visit to Paris, has held a second round of talks with French President Francois Mitterrand. For 2 hours, the two heads of state discussed various bilateral and world issues. President Eyadema did not make any press statement at the end of the audience.

In the afternoon, after the meeting with his French host at the Elysee, the founding chairman of the RPT received French Defense Minister Charles Hernu, who after the audience declared that he was impressed by the clear vision which the Togolese leader has of present problems.

On Tuesday, General Eyadema received a delegation of the France-Togo association led by Mr Gillard, its chairman.

Togo's policy of self-sufficiency in food production, the situation in Chad and the OAU crisis following the admission of the SDAR were the key subjects for their discussion. President Eyadema explained Togo's position concerning these issues to the French chairman. Talking about relations between rich and poor countries, he deplored the deterioration in the terms of trade. Pleading for an increase in assistance from the developed countries to those of the Third World, General Eyadema expressed himself in these words: "By helping us, you help us to help you."

JOBERT ON EUROPE'S ROLE VIS-A-VIS SUPERPOWERS

PM091455 Paris LE MATIN in French 30 Aug 82 pp 4-5

[Interview with French Foreign Trade Minister Michel Jobert by Henry Laurent -- date and place not given]

[Excerpt] LE MATIN: Are you now convinced that Francois Mitterrand's France has the means to implement the policy and exert the influence it intends to exert abroad?

Michel Jobert: Venice was great not only because of its intellectual and artistic prestige, but also because its coffers were full and its arms respected. Without economic and financial strength, there can be no lasting influence. All French heads of state have observed that there could be no good foreign policy without an attentive and constructive eye on the economy. Precisely because France still enjoys that exceptional grace of being neither a big nor a small country nor even a medium-sized country, we constantly have to be concerned with its world role. As for the judgments which some people pass on France's foreign policy, there is no cause to be troubled by the exclamations made by various people. There is only one good foreign policy which follows the direction of our permanent interests. It is obvious that with the new majority, people at the international level are watching France live, fail or succeed with renewed interest.

LE MATIN: Does the foreign policy inspired by the head of state evoke a recent past for you?

Michel Jobert: The government has taken very courageous options -- toward the Third World countries -- in national defense and international strategy. But it has also done so in the Near East where, in fact, we could have chosen to adopt a low profile. That is what many other people have done and they are satisfied with it. I will venture a Gaullist remark: Precisely because France is France, it could not merely watch. Its national instinct, as interpreted by its leaders, led it to adopt courageous positions which in fact correspond to what some people call its vocation. You know, courage is like gymnastics. When you practice it you cannot do without it any longer.

LE MATIN: We now have a difficult position to maintain in the Near East....

Michel Jobert: Any position is difficult to maintain in the Near East. When will people realize that we are not in a peace zone but in a war zone in which the vocation and interest of most of the protagonists is not peace but war? Do you think that the two superpowers aspire to peace in the Near East? They prove the contrary to us each day. It is therefore useful for there to be at least one country which is working for peace.

LE MATIN: We are clashing with the Americans in the monetary and commercial spheres and we are almost at war with them over the Siberian gas pipeline. On the other side of the Rhine, pacificism is giving its own reply to the Euromissiles decision.... what is happening?

Michel Jobert: What we are really seeing is that the Western world is mismanaging its affairs. You mention the economic and political difficulties with the Americans in the same breath as the rise of West German pacifism. But that is because the West's policy is not clear and is often unrealistic. Our place in the Western world is obvious. I would even say, without being paradoxical, that the USSR belongs to the Western world. Do you think that the people I meet in Moscow, Sofia, Bucharest or Budapest do not belong to the Western world? Of course they do. But they are caught in a political system to which they adapt to varying degrees and which does not correspond to our civilization. That system could have been an improvement on the latter. But it has developed in such a way that it has become a perversion of it, particularly because individual freedom has been crushed.

The Western world is unrealistic because it is divided. The two superpowers refuse to accept that anything should come between them and form a third reference point. When there is talk of pacifisim and an embargo on the Siberian gas pipeline, you can clearly see that that is an attempt to deny the European states the opportunity to define their own policy when it does not exactly follow the contours of a Soviet-U.S. joint administration. We are living in a world whose two pilots are ultimatley close accomplices. They are racing each other to keep the lead, primarily by trampling on everybody else.

LE MATIN: And you really think the Europeans can be more than just extras in that?

Michel Jobert: Let us stop being a clientele for the Soviets and the Americans. We are worth more than that. Let us be ourselves. Unless a country like France asserts that European thinking, it will have trouble breaking through that wall of prohibitions. In the military strategy sphere, France did not wish for excessive levels of armaments. It took note of them. Thus, from 1954, under Pierre Mendes-France, it initiated its nuclear effort. From that viewpoint, I note that president Mitterrand is more lucid and realistic than Mr Giscard d'Estaing and Mr Chirac, who suspended the construction of our sixth nuclear submarine.

As for European destiny, it will not exist without courage, and any approach, however clumsy, that asserts that destiny is progress. Of course, the European peoples are not independent. But the important thing is not that de facto situation. The important thing is to want to be more independent in the future than we are today. That is being truly independent.

PCF'S FAJON REVIEWS BOOK ON WW II FORCED LABOR

PM161127 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 7 Sep 82 pp 1, 6

[Etienne Fajon article: "The Truth About the Departed Workers"]

[Text] A book by Jean-Pierre Vittori reveals the truth about the STO. The initials STO (Compulsory Labor Service) refer to workers conscripted and enrolled by force to perform slave labor in Germany. After so many years, it was high time that the French who experienced this situation were made the subject of an impartial and serious investigation. Jean-Pierre Vittori, a contemporary journalist and writer, has carried out such an investigation and his book "The STO," gives us the results.

Among other things, the book refutes the deliberate slander that places the STO in the same category as those who crossed the Rhine of their own free will. Of course, there were volunteers who were seduced by the fascist ideology, who believed the propaganda lies that their decision would enable prisoners of war to return, or who were guided by the hope of earning some money.

In fact, the number of deported workers totaled almost a million from our country alone. They constituted a substantial body of war victims, exiled and exploited.

"All these men have to be fed, housed and treated in such a way as to exploit them to the maximum at minimum cost." This excerpt from a letter from Fritz Sauckel to Rosenberg appears at the start of the work.

Fritz Sauckel was none other than general manager of the huge undertaking, the purveyor of foreign labor to Hitler's Germany. It was in this capacity that he found himself arraigned at the Nuremberg trials and was sentenced to death as a war criminal and hanged. In fact, he was answerable in law for the fate of the deported workers.

Basically, Jean-Pierre Vittori's book is a collection of eye-witness accounts. The author has spoken with dozens of survivors. He proceeds from the answers to a questionnaire sent to hundreds more. An appendix carries the principal official documents on this too-little known aspect of Nazi crimes.

Thus, we can relive the real nature of the deported workers' existence.

According to Sauckel's principles, they worked 12 hours a day, were treated like animals and lived in disease-ridden barracks....

People sometimes ask them: Why were they there? Were there no objectors? In our own country, did our party not urge the workers to avoid the roundups and to join the underground fighters? Undoubtedly, but at the time when conscription was at its height, under conditions of illegality and terror, the means available to the resistance for informing and enrolling labor conscripts fell tragically short of requirments.

Jean-Pierre Vittori shows us that the deported workers were nevertheless far from constituting a passive group. Many of them sought the most varied pretexts -- imaginary bereavements, real or fabricated illnesses, sometimes deliberate mutilation -- to obtain leave and never return. Others attempted to escape, and sometimes succeeded. Many of them resisted in their own way: by slowing up production, by inertia, by "mislaying" tools, or by resorting to sabotage, the slightest instance of which was punished by death. And of course, as in France, there were some who did nothing. "Let nobody expect me," Jean-Pierre Vittori says, "to fall back on Epinal's old picture of an entire people divided into resistance and collaborationists."

Having said that, how is one to explain the decades of silence about the STO or, worse, the resolute attempts to heap blame on them or dishonor them by likening them to the enemy's servants?

The explanation is obviously a political one.

The deportation of the labor force could only take place with the active involvement of the Vichy traitors. It was a law issued by Vichy on 4 September 1942 that authorized the conscription of French workers for Germany. It was another law from Vichy, dated 16 February 1943, that established the STO. Bearing in mind the valiant and courageous exceptions cited in the book, it was French accomplices of the occupier (policemen, gendarmes, mayors or employers) who ensured the execution of these vile laws. To blame the conscripted workers (that is, the victims) is just another way of whitewashing and clearing the names of all the former (that is, the guilty parties) and the cause that they served.

It is also a maneuver -- regrettably not unsuccessful, designed to set the war victims against each other, in particular, the conscripted workers and escapees from the death camps, the survivors of long and hideous suffering haunted by the memory of those who were never to return whether killed under torture, slowly assassinated or thrown into the crematoriums. But, who ever dreamed of placing an equals sign or drawing any kind of parallel between the former and the latter? Nobody, as far as I know. In any case, not the conscripted workers.

The conscripted workers seek neither praise nor glory. They simply want to be recognized for what they were; for people at last to stop denying them the status conferred on them by life itself and by the Nuremberg trial of war criminals -- the status of victims of war and of the deportation of workers. They have no demands other than those of fairness and truth, "the real truth." This is the title of the series in which editions Messidor publishes "The STO." By writing his book and combating caricatures of the objective truth, Jean-Pierre Vitorri is giving the conscripted workers their due and contributing to the success of their legitimate action.

MINISTER INTERVIEWED ON MAURITIAN ISSUES

MB151315 Port Louis LE MAURICIEN in French 1 Sep 82 pp 1-6

[Interview with Jean-Pierre Cot, French minister delegate to the ministry of external relations for cooperation, in Port Louis on 31 August]

[Text] [Question] For the first time, France is planning a regional cooperation project that will include a French territory and sovereign countries. Do you think this will mean setting up new structures in your ministry? By the same token, do you envisage the creation of a new regional cooperation agency?

[Answer] We strongly want to participate in regional cooperation if our partners agree to it of course. We think there are many things that we can do together as sovereign countries. As you know, France is also a sovereign country, and it is as an equal partner that we want to participate in this project. There are many things to do in many fields and I am sure -- I have discussed this with Jean-Claude de L'Estrac and other members of the Mauritian Government -- that we can soon, and in concrete terms, set up cooperation projects as soon as the Mauritian initiative is approved and put into effect by its neighbors. For our part, we have said we will support this effort and will participate within our possible means. I want to add that we will act through an EEC inermediary. The EEC delegate has confirmed the community's willingness to support such projects. We should not let this opportunity pass. At last, conditions favor the establishment of this regional cooperation. I am pleased about the Mauritian initiative.

[Question] Will you participate in this cooperation through the intermediary of Reunion or directly from France?

[Answer] I think all cooperation should be encouraged not only at the state level, but also at group, personal and organizational levels, and we will all have to participate. I have always, as French minister of cooperation and development, encouraged all forms of French cooperation; that is to say, not only at the state level, but for example, cooperation through nongovernmental organizations and through the French cooperation movement. During my stay here, I strongly hope to make contact with agricultural cooperatives, fishing cooperatives and also with the other forms of the Mauritian cooperative movement. And I think in this regard one should encourage all the participants. In Reunion, there are some people who are interested. The Reunion Chamber of Commerce and Industry has made some proposals to this end, and the Reunion Institute of Development wants to organize a symposium on regional cooperation next year. To me, all this seems encouraging.

[Question] Mr Minister, you have just spoken about the role that France wants to play in this regional cooperation. Would this be possible without the political will of Reunion, which is solidly conservative? It is difficult to imagine for example, Michel Debre sitting next to Rastiraka or Aneerood Jugnauth to discuss regional cooperation.

[Answer] You conclude too quickly that Reunion is conservative. You should wait for Reunion to vote. You know there will be regional and departmental council elections, so don't prejudge the Reunion voters, who are mature and responsible and know where their interests lie. Having said that, I think there is interest in regional cooperation because the political conditions create certain opportunities today, and because a certain number of governments have similar ideas and political perspectives that would make things easier. At the same time, there is interest in our history and geography. In other words, it goes beyond political labels and I find it interesting that some Reunion officials in the economic and social sectors -- and they are not particularly known for ultra-leftist militancy -- have personally made these proposals.

[Question] Mr Minister, in a recent statement you talked about the development and the sharing of the riches in the scattered islands. Now that you are at the end of your visit, can you explicitly tell us the French stand on Tromelin Island?

[Answer] There is no subject that is taboo. France is ready to discuss with its partners and, in particular, with the Mauritian Government, problems that could arise, mainly the territorial status of Tromelin. It is certain that these different scattered islands of the Indian Ocean, besides their historical or symbolic value, which I do not discount, are mainly sources of present or potential riches and of security. I am thinking of the role of metereological safety and cyclones and of a series of operations that can be concretely set up to profit from exotic resources; for oceanographical research, for metereological observation stations and for the exploitation of mineral nodules. These are operations in which France has experience, a technological potential, a capacity that it wants to offer to the region as a whole. We think that through this active and friendly cooperation we can undoubtedly help the region rather than exhaust ourselves in discussions.

ACTIVITIES OF PLO LEADER 'ARAFAT CONTINUE

Meets Party Leaders

AU161955 Rome ANSA in English 1940 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 16 -- On the Capitoline Hill and in the presence of Rome's Communist Mayor Ugo Vetere, Yasir 'Arafat today evoked the image of the Apostle Peter when he appealed to the hearts of the Roman people to back the Palestinian cause. The head of the Palestinian Liberation Organization has been in the Italian capital since yesterday to take part in the 69th session of the world Interparliamentary Union.

In an address given before city officials on the historic hill topped by the town hall, 'Arafat said that many long years ago a man from Palestine, a fisherman, entered not only the city of Rome but the very hearts of the Romans themselves. Now another man has come from Palestine, he went on. "I am not a fisherman but an engineer, but I too want to speak to the hearts of the Roman people so that they will back the cause of my people who suffer," he said.

For his part, Vetere said there could be no peace in the world until the Palestinians had a homeland and a state.

'Arafat greeted those members of Rome's leftwing city government present: the Communists and the Socialists. The Social Democrats and the Republicans stayed away from the meeting to protest the 'Arafat visit.

Later, the PLO leader conferred for 40 minutes with the president of the Christian Democratic Party, Flaminio Piccoli. 'Arafat outlined the latest political developments in the Middle East and urged Italy and Europe to encourage the unitary Arab project that came out of the Fes summit, a PLO communique said.

A DC communique said that the party had stressed the need for a diplomatic and political solution to the Mideast that guaranteed Palestinian rights to a homeland and the security of the state of Israel.

'Arafat next met with Senate Speaker Amintore Fanfani, also a Christian Democrat. The two men focused on the final resolution approved by the recent Fes conference. Fanfani presented the PLO leader with a book he wrote on the thirty-year efforts of Giorgio la Pira, (the late mayor of Florence) to promote world peace, and especially peace between the Arabs and the Israelis.

'Arafat also met today with Enrico Berlinguer, head of the Italian Communist Party, who reconfirmed the PCI's full solidarity with "the just and heroic struggle of the Palestinian people and their right to have a state." Berlinguer said he wanted to take this occasion, however, to express keen concern over developments in Lebanon where Israeli troops have launched a massive attack against the population of west Beirut and against Palestinian camps in and around the city.

At the end of their hour-long meeting, 'Arafat asked that the Italian Bersaglieri be sent back to Lebanon along with the French and U.S. troops that made up the peacekeeping force, this time to guarantee the safety of the Palestinian camps. The Bersaglieri went to Lebanon on August 26 and returned home a week ago.

Berlinguer said that the violation of the accords by Israel directly called on the three nations who sent troops into the peacekeeping force in Lebanon to find a way to halt the massacre and guarantee the inhabitants of west Beirut and the Lebanese and Palestinian people in Lebanon, the right to peace.

Appeals to Peace-Keeping Force

LD161754 Rome Domestic Service in Italian 1700 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Text] 'Arafat concluded his visit to Rome with a press conference. The meeting with the journalists was to have taken place tomorrow, but it was held today because the PLO leader is leaving immediately due to the serious situation in Beirut.

He spoke about the situation in Beirut in particular. He demanded that Italy, France and the United States immediately send back their troops of the multinational peace-keeping force, which had given its word of honor to maintain peace in the Lebanese capital. He now asked them to honor the pledge. 'Arafat pointed out that he spoke to our foreign minister about his formal request and that Colobmo has already been in contact with Washington and Paris. The leader of the PLO also asked for the immediate summoning of the UN Security Council, and it appears that he has already spoken by telephone with UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar.

The journalists put many questions to the PLO leader, who replied with his habitual smile and obvious answers. The Fes summit, he said, and the whole plan, not only the part which can be interpreted as favorable for the recognition of Israel, will be taken into account. The PLO does not express its views on the Reagan plan because a committee was set up in Fes by the seven Arab countries to follow the developments of this diplomatic initiative. 'Arafat also said a Palestine government in exile will be discussed shortly by the PLO National Council.

Incredibly, the Palestinian leader glossed over two questions, one from a Tunisian woman journalist who asked him about news of 3,000 Syrians massacred in the Al-Biqa' Valley, and one about the statement by 'Arafat himself made last August in which he accused a number of Arab countries of having given the green light to Israel's action against the Palestinians in Beirut.

Departs for Syria

[Excerpt] (ANSA) - Rome, September 17 -- Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasir 'Arafat was in Damascus today after winding up a two-day stay here with a dramatic appeal to Italy, France, and the United States to send their peace-keeping troops back to Beirut in the wake of the Israeli occupation of the western part of the Lebanese capital.

The Palestinian leader left Rome just before midnight (local).

VATICAN COMMUNIQUE ON POPE-'ARAFAT MEETING

AU160848 Rome ANSA in English 0815 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) - Vatican City, September 16 -- The Vatican Press Office last night released a communique on the twenty-minute meeting Pope John Paul II had with Palestinian leader Yasir 'Arafat Wednesday. The communique stressed that the pontiff had agreed to receive 'Arafat because of John Paul's constant concern to do whatever possible to promote the difficult Mideast peace process.

During the talk, the pope voiced his good will towards the Palestinian people and his sympathy for their long sufferings, the communique said. The pope also voiced the hope for a just and lasting solution to the Middle East conflict, achieved without the resort to arms, violence, terrorism or reprisals: a peace that would bring the recognition of the rights of all peoples in the area, and in particular, the right of the Palestinian people to a homeland and Israel to security, the Vatican note said.

Turning to the situation in Lebanon, the communique said that the drama there had worsened with the tragic death of President-elect Bashir al-Jumayyil.

The holy father strongly deplores this unspeakable act of terrorism and has voiced the hope that Lebanon's reconstruction will not be delayed so that it can serve as a precious element of stability and peace in the Middle East the communique added.

Pope Appeals for Calm

[Text] (ANSA) -- Vatican City, September 16 -- Pope John Paul II dwelled on the Palestinian question, Lebanon and Jerusalem when he held his usual general audience in St. Peter's Square Wednesday. Earlier that afternoon he had a historic 20-minute meeting with Palestinian leader Yasir 'Arafat.

Addressing a crowd of around 20,000, the pope began by expressing his total censure of the attack which killed Lebanon's President-elect Bashir al-Jumayyil, and voiced keen concern for the consequences that "tragic episode" could have for Lebanon and for "the tormented Mideast region." He appealed to all Lebanese, Christian and non-Christian, to unite for the good of their homeland and to eschew violence. Lebanon must also have sovereignty over all of its territory, the pope stressed.

Turning to the Mideast as a whole, John Paul said he was following with careful attention all of the intense diplomatic activity underway to relaunch negotiations aimed at finding a global solution to the conflict. The Holy See, for its part, plans to contribute on the plane of moral principles, affirming, first of all, that the rights of all the peoples involved be recognized in a stable, adequate and fair way, he said. He listed as among these primordial and inalienable rights that of the right to existence, to the security of one's territory, and to one's identity.

He noted that two peoples, the Israelis and the Palestinians, have seen these rights, simultaneously or alternately, denied them. The Catholic Church looks upon both these peoples with sympathy and considers them the inheritors of rich, religious, historical and cultural traditions.

Repeating a question he posed some five months ago, the pope asked when, after so many disappointments, these two peoples would accept the existence and the reality of the other, and find the path to dialogue which would lead to a fair solution in which both sides could live in peace, dignity and freedom in an atmosphere of toleration and reconciliation.

Repeating his appeal to eschew all recourse to war, violence and all forms of armed struggle, the pope reiterated the position of the Holy See on the City of Jerusalem which can become a city of man in which believers of the three great monotheistic religions -- Christianity, Judaism and Islam -- live in full liberty and parity with followers of the other religious communities.

Israel Reponds Sharply

[Excerpts] (ANSA) -- Rome, September 16 -- A communique in which Israel labelled the meeting between Italian head of state Sandro Pertini and Palestinian leader Yasir 'Arafat "an act that encourages international terrorism" was called totally inadmissible by circles at Palazzo Chigi (the premier's office) today. The gesture on the part of the Italian president, preceded by "his noble words" at the inaugural address before the interparliamentary assembly underway here, is to be seen in line with a policy of detente and peace based on the peaceful coexistence of the people of Israel, guaranteed of their security, and the Palestinian community having had its national identity restored to it, the same circles insisted.

Tel Aviv issued a sharp communique Wednesday charging that the Italian president had made a gift to those who perpetuate terrorism that threatens the basis of democracy and moral values. Sandro Pertini, addressing the opening session Tuesday of the interparliamentary assembly which continues here until September 22, voiced solidarity with the Palestinian people in exile. "Israel, after the bitter exodus and cruel persecutions, had a homeland: the Palestinian people too will have a homeland and our solidarity goes out to them," the Italian president had said.

At the end of an eventful day, 'Arafat met last night with Italian Socialist Secretary Bettino Craxi for an hour and a quarter. Informed sources said that 'Arafat asked that all European Socialist parties push the NATO nations towards a more favorable stance with regard to the PLO.

Last night members of Rome's Jewish community staged a peaceful demonstration against the presence of the PLO chief in the Italian capital. The demonstrators wound up inside the city's synagogue to hear a speech delivered by Israeli Deputy Premier David Levi. He told an audience of around 1,000 that it was a pleasure to bring them greetings from Jerusalem, "your Jewish capital."

He said that this was a time when the Israeli people were fighting for their right to exist, in the face of enemies and in the face of those who say they are friends.

While the demonstration was going on, a paper bomb went off on the outskirts of the Jewish quarter in old Rome. It later turned out that the incident was touched off by a young out-of-work Sicilian who wanted in this way to draw attention to his plight. He was slightly injured in the blast.

Today 'Arafat is to meet with Italian political and labor leaders.

His departure is scheduled for Friday morning after a press conference.

Further Vatican Statements

AU161545 Rome ANSA in English 1530 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) -- Vatican City, September 16 -- The Holy See was "confident" today that the message delivered by Pope John Paul II yesterday during the general audience in Saint Peter's Square, immediately after Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasir 'Arafat's private audience with the pope, and the Vatican communique released in the evening would correct the assessment of the audience contained in an Israeli Foreign Ministry note made public yesterday.

The duty director of the Vatican Press Office, Don Pierfranco Pastore, told newsmen today the Holy See was confident that the Israeli view of the "significance and the content of the meeting" between the pope and 'Arafat would be (?set) straight by the subsequent developments.

The Israeli document voiced "disappointment" for the fact that the audience was held "despite numerous appeals from people and organizations [word indistinct] around the world urging the pontiff to refrain from meeting the head of an organization which has perpetrated countless crimes against the Jewish state and against the citizens of other countries. "The pope's decision," the Israeli Foreign Ministry note continued, "contradicts his declaration of January 1, [year indistinct] in favor of peace and against violence."

According to Israel, "by meeting 'Arafat, the pope augmented the stature (of the PLO leader) thereby committing a serious act because it threatens the process of peace, the personal desire of the pope himself and the supreme aspiration of the state of Israel."

The Vatican spokesman recalled the communique released in the evening after the private audience by the Vatican Press Office in which the meeting was attributed to the pope's "constant concern for favoring the difficult peace process in the Middle East."

The Vatican note also underscored the pontiff's hopes for "achieving soon an equitable and lasting solution for the Middle East conflict along with recognition for the rights of all the peoples of the region, especially the rights of the Palestinian people to their own homeland and that of Israel to security."

In the Wednesday general audience, the pontiff told the people assembled in the square that he was following with careful attention all of the intense diplomatic activity underway to relaunch negotiations aimed at finding a global solution to the conflict.

The Holy See, for its part, plans to contribute on the plane of moral principles, affirming, first of all, that the rights of all the peoples involved be recognized in a stable, adequate and fair way, he said.

Speaking of the Palestinians and the Israelis, the pope asked, "Is it unreal, after so many disappointments, to hope that these two peoples will accept the existence of each other, will find a way towards a dialogue aimed at an equitable solution in which each can live in peace."

On Monday, a Vatican reply to Israeli criticism said that the statement of an Israeli Government spokesman on the church's attitude towards the holocaust during the Second World War was an "outrage against the truth."

IRANIAN STUDENTS PROTEST AGAINST KHOMEYNI REGIME

AU161020 Rome ANSA in English 0830 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, September 16 -- Iranian students in Italy have begun a hunger strike to protest the repression of leftwing Muslims by the Iranian Government.

A communique released last night by the Association of Iranian Students in Italy, sympathizers with the organization of "The Mojahedin of the People" in Iran, said that the strike aimed at obtaining the expulsion of the illegitimate representatives of the Khomeyni regime and the condemnation of the Tehran government for the killing of 20,000 Mujahedin and the jailing of 50,000 political prisoners. The hunger strike coincides with the opening here of the interparliamentary assembly which represents 98 countries.

PSI LEADER CRAXI MEETS SOMALI FOREIGN MINISTER

AU161024 Rome ANSA in English 0804 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, September 16 -- Italo-Somali ties were the theme of talks here Wednesday between Somali Foreign Minister Abdurahman Jama Barre and secretary of the Italian Socialist Party, Bettino Craxi.

According to a communique released by the PSI, the talks also centered on Ethiopian threats and armed attacks on Somalia with the help of foreign forces and assistance.

Craxi accepted an invitation to travel to Somalia and confirmed the commitment of Italian Socialists to seek to bolster Italy's participation in the North-South dialogue. The PSI leader stressed the importance his party gives to the development of cooperation ties between Italy and Somalia.

[Text] The last session in the current phase of the intercommunal talks was held at the Ledra Palace Hotel this afternoon. A UN statement says that a general exchange of views was held at the session according to the agreed agenda. The next meeting will be held on 2 November.

In a statement before the session, Mr Gobbi, the UN secretary general's special representative in Cyprus, stressed that the recess is necessary so that a general evaluation of the situation can be made and efforts exerted to bridge certain differences. In answer to a question on the forthcoming meetings UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar will have with President Kiprianou and the Turkish Cypriot leader Denktas, he said that contacts at this level are always important and useful. Mr Gobbi said that the territorial aspect was not discussed before the New York contacts because of a lack of time. He also said that the territorial aspect is a very important problem and will be discussed at the new phase of the talks. Mr Gobbi said that he will leave for New York on 29 September.

Mr Mavrommatis, the Greek Cypriot representative, also stated that the territorial issue will be discussed in the new phase of the talks. Mr Mavrommatis ruled out the possibility of a joint meeting of the representatives of the two communities with the UN secretary general.

Mr Onan, the Turkish Cypriot interlocutor, said that Mr Denktas will leave for the UN headquarters around 10 October. He also said that there was no intention whatsoever of not discussing the territorial aspect of the problem in the last phase of the talks.

In view of today's session, Mr Gobbi met with Mr Mavrommatis, Greek Cypriot representative to the talks, today. Mrs Souliotis and Mr Stavrinakis, advisers to the talks, were also present at the meeting. Mr Gobbi also met Mr Onan, the Turkish Cypriot representative. Mr Mavrommatis also met today with General Grendl, commander of the peace force in Cyprus.

GREEK-CYPRIOT LEADERS' MEETING INADVISABLE

Government Opposition

NC171120 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1030 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Text] Asked how the Cyprus Government views the proposal by Democratic Rally Chairman Kliridhis for a broad conference in Athens under Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou, the government stated that it does not consider the holding of such a conference advisable.

Papandreou Opposition

NC170807 Nicosia O FILELEVTHEROS in Greek 17 Sep 82 p 10

[Dispatch by correspondent K. Serezis]

[Text] Athens, 16 Sep -- The proposal by Democratic Rally Chairman Glavkos Kliridhis for a conference in Athens among all parties in order to study the Cyprus problem -- Athens papers also carried this proposal yesterday -- is not new to the Greek Government. Mr Kliridhis submitted a similar proposal in the past. However, the Papandreou government would not like to play the role of leader and thus be accused of interferring in Cyprus' domestic affairs.

There is the Cyprus Government, which can, if it so desires, undertake initiatives. Beyond this, there is also the National Council in Cyprus. Something similar to this was stated recently on another occasion by Mr Dhimitris Maroudhas, the Greek Government spokesman.

The initiatives in connection with the domestic front in Cyprus are the concern of the Cypriot side. The Greek Government's interest will never be demonstrated in this direction, particularly now in view of the elections and because of the possibility of Athens being accused of interfering in Cyprus' internal affairs or of partisan exploitation of such interest. This stance may change after the presidential election in February.

In Athens, it is being said that there is a misunderstanding in Cyprus with regard to the question of the disagreement between Nicosia and Athens over the handling of the Cyprus problem. It is added: It is believed by many that this is a dispute between nationalist-minded people and communism. On the contrary, the disagreement is in the existing different assessments of the approach to the question.

The Greek Government, say political circles, is opposed to being dogmatically committed to the one or the other superpower because this would impede the implementation of a multidimensional policy and the utilization of every available possibility.

The trouble with the Cyprus problem, as it appears in the present phase, that makes the Greek Government cautious is something else: The intercommunal dialogue in Cyprus is coming to a halt. What prospects are now opening? Will the dialogue be continued or will it be boosted through an initiative by the UN secretary general? Will the situation be explained through a recourse to the Security Council? Or will the situation be left as it is until the forthcoming recourse to the UN General Assembly?

The question will be examined by the Greek and Cypriot sides when Kiprianou and Papandreou meet in Athens when the Cypriot president reutrns to Cyprus from New York.

DENKTAS ON ROMANIAN MILITARY DELEGATION'S VISIT

TA161609 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1440 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Text] Lefkosa, 16 Sep (AA) -- President Rauf Denktas of the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus expressed his regret over the current visit to southern Cyprus of a Romanian military mission. Denktas told reporters Romania had up to now followed a carefully impartial policy toward the Cyprus question, while the current visit conflicted with its impartial stand.

There have been press reports but no official statement about the visit of Gen Vasile Milea, Romanian chief of staff, to the southern zone of the island under Greek Cypriot administration.

PAPER SCORES WEINBERGER LETTER TO PAPANDREOU

NC161601 Athens RIZOSPASTIS in Greek 16 Sep 82 p 2

[From the "Radical" column: "Provocative Letter"]

[Text] The insolent letter U.S. Defense Secretary Weinberger sent to Prime Minister Papandreou leaves no doubt as to its real aims. The Greek Government is called on to align itself with the adventurous and aggressive policy of the United States and NATO. The U.S. secretary of defense demands, in a most provocative manner, that the Greek Government practically support the crazy arms race on which the United States and NATO have embarked and join the cold war anti-Soviet campaign. With outrageous impudence, warmonger Weinberger demands that the Greek Government give up all efforts to establish a nuclear free zone in the Balkans because such a thing runs contrary to the aggressive plans of the United States and NATO! This letter is tantamount to unacceptable and open interference in our country's internal affairs. This is an action by a Gualeiter and is reminiscent of past eras of servitude and submission to the Atlantic bosses. The government has every reason to reject it. However, it has not done so and has kept this a secret. But in similar cases in the past, at the time of rightwing governments, the present government party was denouncing -- quite rightly -- Washington's rude interference as well as the policy of the rightwing.

PAKISTAN DENIES TURKISH NUCLEAR COOPERATION

NC151904 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1830 GMT 15 Sep 82

[Text] Pakistani Ambassador Mustafa Khan Malik called today on Deputy Minister of the Press Dhimitris Maroudhas and discussed foreign press reports that included an allegation that Pakistan has been cooperating with Turkey for manufacturing nuclear weapons. Mr Malik assured Mr Maroudhas that these allegations are totally unfounded, and added that his country has a very conservative nuclear program for peaceful purposes and that it does not intend to make, either alone or in cooperation with any other country, nuclear weapons that would disturb the balance in the region.

PAPANDREOU, COUNCIL OF MINISTERS MEET 16 SEP

NC162216 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1830 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Text] Inflation at the end of the year will be lower than last year. This optimistic statement was made by National Economy Minister Yerasimos Arsenis at today's Council of Ministers meeting under Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou.

Justice Minister Yeoryios Mangakis also spoke at the meeting, analysing the question of the Papakarias report [on the behavior of members of the Greek judicial corps during the junta administration in Greece]. The minister of justice said that he has given instructions that he receive the results of the preliminary investigation by 30 October.

Referring to the question of curch-state relations, Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou described them as positive. He held a meeting on this question this morning with Archbishop Serafim.

AKROPOLIS WARNS OF KKE INFLUENCE OVER PASOK

NC161814 Athens AKROPOLIS in Greek 16 Sep 82 p 2

[From the"Laconic" column: "The Bases"]

[Text] PASOK as a government has become less demanding on our major foreign policy issues than when it was in opposition. We hope that it will avoid terminal solutions when the U.S. bases negotiations start.

The great difficulty lies in the fact that PASOK, with its preelection demagogy, has put shackles on itself. It is being pressured by KKE and the Communists which operate within its lines "to show consistency." Let it at last understand that KKE serves the Soviet and not the Greek interests with the simple theory that whoever works for the Soviet Union is also working for Greece indirectly, despite the fact that "in the long run," Greece is harmed. But the PASOK government has not undertaken the obligation to carry out Moscow's affairs (or has it undertaken to do so with some exchanges of which we are unaware?) If it really moves, as it says, with the country's interest as its yardstick, it must use the greatest mathematical accuracy to weigh the profits and losses that will arise from the various ways of handling the issue and choose the solution which will present the greatest advantages for the country.

BRIEFS

NORWEGIAN PARLIAMENTARIANS -- Prime Minister Papandreou received today the 13-member foreign and constitutional affairs delegation of the Norwegian parliament that has been in Athens since 13 September for talks with politicians on international issues. The Norwegian delegation will also meet New Democracy Chairman Evangelos Averof, KKE Secretary General Kharilaos Florakis and (?President) of the Chamber of Deputies Yiannis Alevras. COST OF LIVING DROPS -- The cost of living index dropped significantly in August as a result both of discounts in clothes and shoes and a drop in prices for vegetables, fruits, meats and other foodstuffs. Specifically, the consumer index dropped by 1.3 percent in August, whereas last year at the same month it dropped by 0.8 percent. [Athens I KATHIMERINI in Greek 11 Sep 82 p 7 NC]

GOVERNMENT CONDEMNS ISRAELI ATTACK ON BEIRUT

TA161454 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1445 GMT 16 Sep 82

HURRIYET: ASALA PLANS AGAINST TURKISH LEGATIONS

NC170812 Istanbul HURRIYET in Turkish 14 Sep 82 pp 1, 11

[Excerpts] Geneva, (HURRIYET) -- It has been learned that the Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia [ASALA], whose strength has greatly diminised as a result of the Israeli occupation of Lebanon and the evacuation of the PLO camps, has prepared new acts of militancy against our legations abroad and "against the joint Turkish-U.S. defense installations in Turkey," calling these acts the "General Antranik Operations."

Meanwhile, the mystery of the bomb-filled suitcases which ASALA plans to send to Turkish embassies has been solved. It has been established that ASALA, which has become Turkey's misfortune, has placed 2.3 kilograms of high explosives known as "piten" in each of 10 suitcases in order to cause mass killings for this criminal plan.

The ASALA militants, who have been trained in the training camps at Nebatiye Sabra, Lebanon, and who consider themselves experts in carrying out these cowardly attacks, call themselves "Commandos of General Antranik." They are reported to have scattered to all parts of the world in order to carry out their criminal acts.

A militant who was caught in Switzerland and who gave information regarding the 'bomb-filled suitcases' disclosed that 2.3 kilograms of "piten" explosives were placed in 10 green colored Italian suitcases marked "Daligeria," fitted with a special mechanism and smelling like chocolates.

With the recent tightening of the belt round the Armenian militants, two facts have emerged: The center where the bombs used by the Armenian militants are made is in Switzerland and women militants are playing a big role in these militant acts.

[Text] Ankara, (HURRIYET) -- The Martial Law Coordination Department of the General Staff has disclosed that at preset there are 493 persons in custody and 17,641 persons under arrest in the military prisons. It has also been stated that from the date martial law was proclaimed until 25 July 1982, 29,831 court cases were finalized in the military courts attached to martial law commands; 25,983 persons were subjected to various punishments.

During the same period, 36,494 cases were submitted to the military courts and work is still going on on 6,673 dossiers. At present, there are 7,312 persons convicted of ideological offenses.

VOTCP RAPS TRIAL OF PEACE COMMITTEE MEMBERS

TA161011 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Station commentary: "The Peace Trial Is the Trial of the People"]

[Text] The prosecution of the Peace Committee members is continuing in Istanbul. This trial is as important for our people as it is for the junta. It is important for our people because what is on trial is the desire to live peacefully in a world free of wars. This is not the desire of the Peace Committee members alone. It is the desire of 45 million Turks. Our people are observing the trial of its desire for a peaceful existence and is aware of the junta's obscure aims. It realizes that U.S. imperialism is gradually pushing Turkey toward becoming a war factor in the region.

The Peace Committee trial is important for the junta as well. Through this trial, the junta wishes to stifle the voice of our people desiring and defending peace. Imperialist warmongers are moving about freely in our country. The junta is making concessions to the imperialists for a handful of discarded planes and loans and in order to keep the antipeople system alive.

Facilities are being secured for the activities of the AWACS spy planes and permission is being granted to the Rapid Deployment Force, namely the U.S. attack units, to be stationed on our soil in a bid to realize U.S. imperialism's plans in the Middle East. The junta is irresponsibly advancing on a road which will render Turkey the first target in the event of a nuclear war. The junta is prosecuting the Peace Committee members and the desire of our people for peace in order to do all these things without interference because the presence of a peace movement embracing the masses is not in the interests of the junta and its supporter, U.S. imperialism.

In his public address in Afyon, Evren particularly dwelt on the Peace Committee trial. Through this trial, he wanted to undo the bond of the people and to divide and destroy the forces of peace. Evren's Afyon address was a trap for the democratic forces and the peace forces. Therefore, Turkish Communist Party [TCP] Central Committee Secretary General Comrade Bilen, in his statement on the anniversary of the party's establishment on 10 September, drew attention to this trap, saying: The TCP calls on all national democratic forces to unite in order to defend peace. The junta is trying to prevent the formation of such a national democratic front through brutality. This is the main goal of Evren's Afyon address. Bilen continued: The TCP supports all the progressive democratic patriotic forces, organizations, parties and individuals and their struggle. The Peace Committee members, DISK administrators, youths and women arrested by the junta, barbarically tortured and tyranically tried, are all defending peace, the bread of the people, its freedom and democratic rights at the trials. The TCP is fully supporting these individuals, who are the honor and dignity of our people.

This proves to the world that the TCP is protecting the interests of the toiling masses and national interests. The TCP has been defending peace for 62 years. It is defending peace as it has defended the bread, dignity, rights and freedoms of our people. It has been defending them for the last 62 years. It is easy to see. When the TCP began to defend peace, the junta generals were either children or were not even born. The TCP continues to defend peace. It is defending all peace-loving patriotic people. It supports their struggle and will continue to do so. Forces of peace and democracy, the path to avoiding this trap passes through stronger support of one another and through mutual trust. Our suffering, poor and toiling people stand against the trial of peace because the future of our country is at stake.

GENERAL APPEALS TO U.S. FOR MILITARY AID

[Text] Chief of the Armed Forces General Staff Gen Melo Egidio today said that Portugal needs foreign military aid to fulfill its duties as a NATO member country. Speaking at a dinner in honor of his U.S. opposite number, Gen John Vessey, at Sao Juliao da Barra Fort, Gen Melo Egidio began by underlining the good relations between the two countries, particularly in the sphere of the armed forces, stressing that our country is undoubtedly one of the European countries most affected by the world economic crisis.

Gen Melo Egidio also said that as a full-fledged member of the Atlantic Alliance, Portugal feels that the removal or at least the minimization of such difficulties is absolutely necessary in order to ensure the capability and readiness required for the fulfillment of the mission to which we are committed within NATO. The Portuguese general emphasized that an increase in the aid which we have been receiving from our NATO partners is vital, particularly from those with greater economic resources, as aware as they are of our needs and difficulties.

The chief of the Armed Forces General Staff concluded by saying that he believes the United States will continue their efforts to maintain the effective and important assistance they have been rendering to Portugal.

KUWAITI OFFICIAL SHOT TO DEATH IN MADRID

NC161358 Paris AFP in English 1352 GMT 16 Sep 82

[Text] Madrid, Sep 16 (AFP) — The first secretary of the Kuwait Embassy, Sayed Hassan Najeed, was killed today and his chauffeur wounded when a man fired on their embassy car here, police sources said. The sources said the assailant, whose gun was equipped with a silencer, fired several times on the consul's car before being chased and captured by police. The incident occurred near the Kuwaiti Embassy here.

The attack in the Spanish capital was reported hours after unknown gunmen opened fire on the Kuwaiti Consulate in Karachi, Pakistan, wounding Acting Consul Hammad Saleh al-Jutaili.

GOVERNMENT SHOCKED AT AL-JUMAYYIL MURDER

LD151548 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1509 GMT 15 Sep 82

[By Tom McMullan, PA diplomatic correspondent]

[Text] Britain today expressed shock at the assassination of Lebanon's president-elect, Mr Bashir al-Jumayyil, and urged "all parties" to refrain from action which might increase tension.

In a statement, the Foreign Office said: "We deplore this resurgence of violence and in particular the murder of a man who since his election had committed himself to the search for peace between all communities in Lebanon.

"We hope that all Lebanese leaders will continue to work for reconciliation and national construction and that all parties will refrain from any action which might increase tension at this difficult time".

TINDEMANS, PLO RESPOND TO SYNAGOGUE ATTACK

NC181310 Paris AFP in English 1306 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Text] Brussels, Sept 18 (AFP) -- Four persons were wounded, two of them seriously, when a lone attacker machine-gunned Jewish worshippers as they filed into the city's biggest synagogue today to attend Jewish New Year ceremonies, police on the scene reported.

The lone gunman sprayed the crowd gathered at the entrance to the synagogue, located in the busy central Rue de La Regence, and then escaped on foot through a labyrinth of tiny streets around the building.

A policeman on guard outside the synagogue fired back, but missed the man.

An eye-witness described the gunman as short and well-dressed, with brown curly hair. He was carrying an attache-case, the witness said.

Foreign Minister Leo Tindemans, who rushed to the scene of the shooting, immediately denounced the "cowardly attack."

"We will do all we can to put a stop to terrorist actions of this kind," he said.

Mr Tindemans added that it was "high time" for the European nations to meet in order "to take the necessary measures to counter terrorism."

Jewish community leaders here, meanwhile, expressed total confidence in the Belgian authorities. The head of the synagogue's board, Roger Levy, asked the government to take measures to protect the community, but said he was confident of support from both Belgians and the Belgian police.

Today's attack was the seventh against a European Jewish synagogue since March 1979.

The last to date, the explosion of a booby-trapped van near a synagogue in Antwerp in October last year, left three dead and 106 injured.

The Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) office here also condemned the "cowardly attack."

"These attacks do not serve peace and damage the cause of the Palestinian people," the PLO said, adding that it considered that "attacks against Jewish buildings or against persons of the Jewish faith serve to divert public opinion from the reality of Zionism."

The "aggressions" perpetrated by Zionsim "has been widely demonstrated during recent events in Lebanon and by the occupation of Beirut." the organizations said.

GOVERNMENT 'STRONGLY CONDEMNS' BEIRUT MASSACRE

LD192024 Hamburg DPA in German 1617 GMT 19 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn, 19 Sep (DPA) -- The Federal Government has expressed its "consternation and horror" at the massacre of Palestinian civilians in the two camps in west Beirut. A spokesman stated today in Bonn that the Federal Government most strongly condemns the "terrible bloodbath" among the civilian population and demands immediate and complete clarification. The immediate intervention of the UN Security Council was welcomed. The Federal Government saw the strengthening demanded of the UN presence in and around Beirut as a correct move to defuse the situation and avoid further bloodshed.

FDP MEETS TO DISCUSS NEW COALITION PROPOSAL

LD171654 Hamburg DPA in German 1631 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn 17 Sep (DPA) -- The FDP Bundestag group met for a joint session with the party Executive on Friday evening in order to discuss a new coalition proposal in favor of the CDU/CSU following the breakup of the SPD/FDP coalition.

Party Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher and group chief Wolfgang Mischnick both refused to comment before the session.

Mischnick said that this question is still wide open. Other participants in the session, when asked by journalists, gave different views concerning the question of new elections; some were in favor, others against.

Results of Coalition Vote

LD172050 Hamburg DPA in German 2040 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn, 17 Sep (DPA) -- The FDP National Executive tonight in Bonn has come out with only a small majority for coalition negotiations with the CDU/CSU. In a vote on the motion proposed by FDP Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher to enter into coalition negotiations with the union, 18 executive members voted in favor, and 15 voted against. One executive member abstained. This was announced by FDP (?spokesman) Herbert Schmuelling.

[Text] Bonn 17 Sep (DPA) -- Former Berlin Senator Meyer resigned from the FDP National Executive on Friday in protest against FDP Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher. Participants in the session said that Meyer took the decision because he could "no longer stand the leadership style of the party chairman."

Mischnick Sees Agreement

LD180848 Hamburg DPA in German 0702 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Text] Hamburg, 18 Sep (DPA) -- Wolfgang Mischnick, chairman of the FDP parliamentary group, is confident that his party can achieve agreement with the union parties on the formation of a new government, above all, in the sphere of economic policy. On West German radio Saturday morning, [18 Sep], Mischnick said that he still harbors doubts about the question of elections. Elections should be the last thing to be considered since they mean that all bills presently before the Bundestag have to be postponed, and that for the time being there could be no economies, rather that new credits would have to be taken up.

The interview was made available to DPA in edited form.

FDP Will Continue Policies

LD181546 Hamburg DPA in German 1455 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Text] Rothenburg, 18 Sep (DPA) -- According to Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher, with the formation of a new majority in Bonn, the Free Democrats want to begin a great drive to create employment and uphold internal and external peace. At an election meeting of his party in the Bavarian town of Rothenburg ob der Tauber on Saturday, Genscher said that in this new majority the FDP would guarantee that the foriegn and security policy of the Federal Republic would be continued in the future on the same basis as the Free Democrats had helped shape it from the very beginning.

CSU General Secretary Edmund Stoiber called Genscher's remarks a "signal for a new beginning." His remarks contained many constructive elements for detailed talks in the coming days.

Coalition Supported

LD181340 Hamburg DPA in German 1248 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Duesseldorf, 18 Sep (DPA) -- The Executive of the North-Rhine Westphalian FDP, the largest land organization of the liberals, voted in a secret ballot on Saturday -- by a large majority -- in favor of the federal policy line of FDP Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher. Eighteen members of the Executive voted to support Genscher's policy of negotiating on a coalition with the CDU and of holding elections next spring, but against holding a special, earlier FDP party conference.

Genscher Interview

[Text] Hamburg, 18 Sep (DPA) -- FDP Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher has warned the SPD not to "cling" to a minority government in Bonn, for this would be an "insult to 2 million unemployed people." In an interview with the newspaper BILD AM SONNTAG, the FDP chief once again spoke out against immediate elections. He said: "We need laws on economy cuts. If these do not come about because parliament is dissolved, the debts will submerge us."

When asked how he viewed the small majority in the FDP National Executive favoring negotiations on a coalition with the CDU/CSU, Genscher answered: "The task of the FDP is always more difficult than that of the other parties. Although it is the smallest party, compared with the SPD and the CDU, it always has to push fundamental decisions through." In this connection, the FDP chairman mentioned the topics of market economics and the Western alliance in the post-war period, the 1969 reconciliation with the East and "the current improvement of the state's finances and economic upturn."

Genscher pointed out that the FDP Executive is primarily concerned with when elections take place. A coalition with the CDU/CSU has been supported by several members of the Executive, who only voted "no" because of the date of the elections.

On Friday evening, the FDP National Executive voted by only 18 votes to 15 to start coalition negotiations with the union parties.

CDU/CSU PARLIAMENTARY GROUP RECALLED FOR 21 SEP

LD181316 Hamburg DPA in German 1236 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Bonn, 18 Sep (DPA) -- In connection with the break-up of the government coalition, the CDU/CSU parliamentary group has been recalled to Bonn for Tuesday [21 Sep] as a precautionary measure. This was confirmed by a spokesman in Bonn on Saturday. Political observers assume that this step has been taken in connection with the constructive vote of no confidence planned by opposition leader Helmut Kohl for next week.

If the CDU/CSU reach agreement with the FDP on the formation of a new federal government by Tuesday, the opposition parliamentary parties can then decide on the introduction of the vote of no confidence.

CSU on Kohl Vote

LD181312 Hamburg DPA in German 1232 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Excerpts] Munich, 18 Sep (DPA) -- As far as the CSU in concerned, CDU Chairman Helmut Kohl can be elected as chancellor on Friday by way of a constructive vote of no confidence. Friedrich Zimmermann, deputy CSU chairman and leader of the land parliamentary group in the Bundestag, told DPA on Saturday in Munich that the initial discussions with the future coalition partner, the FDP, are to begin on Monday.

Zimmermann said that the CSU is laying claim to just as many ministerial posts as the FDP -- four. He, Zimmermann, wants to take over the Ministry of the Interior. The CSU will not accept the FDP minister who previously held this office, Gerhart Baum. However, he could take on a function in another sphere within the new government.

The CSU will nominate Oscar Schneider (Nuremberg) as the new minister of housing. He is at present chairman of the Bundestag Committee for Town Planning. In regard to the other two ministeries the CSU is flexible, Zimmermann said. For example, Party Deputy Chairman Werner Dollinger, Chairman of the Traffic Committee Karl Heinz Lemmerich, Chairman of the Research Committee Albert Probst, and Bavarian Minister of Education Hans Maier (for the post of federal minister of education) are available. The CSU wants elections early next year.

The CSU Executive will meet in Munich on Monday to discuss the new situation and a coalition program.

MERTES OUTLINES CDU/CSU FOREIGN POLICY AIMS

LD171556 Hamburg DPA in German 1437 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn, 17 Sep (DPA) -- "A new coalition of the CDU/CSU and FDP would be the surest guarantee for broad continuity of the policy of active safeguarding of peace based on a reliable alliance with the West and a constructive dialogue with the East." It was in these words that Alois Mertes, the foreign policy spokesman of the CDU/CSU parliamentary group today outlined the foreign policy aims of his party colleagues. He stressed: "The positions of the former Schmidt-Genscher government, which the CDU often helped to shape in recent years, have been supported unreservedly, clearly and cohesivelyby the CDU/CSU."

He said that as far as the Ostpolitik was concerned, the fights about it belonged to the past. The opposition also welcomed the fact that 3 years ago Genscher had taken up the CDU/CSU's phrase that "the Atlantic alliance must reach a cohesive and reliable strategy in the shaping of economic relations with the Soviet Union and its allies." The CDU/CSU does not want a hostile policy toward Moscow, but instead, a balanced policy of firmness and a readiness to reach understanding.

Mertes said that relations with the Third World also had to take into account the Soviet Union's expansion, in order to thus remove friction between Europe and America.

KOHL'S VIEWS ON FORMATION OF NEW GOVERNMENT

LD171828 Hamburg DPA in German 1808 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Bonn, 17 Sep (DPA) -- A constructive vote of no confidence against Chancellor Helmut Schmidt in the Bundestag is likely to take place next week, if by that time the CDU/CSU and FDP have arrived at a clear arrangement, opposition leader Helmut Kohl indicated tonight in a special program on 2d German Television on the break-up of the SPD/FDP coalition.

The objective is to form a new government capable of acting at the earliest possible time, Kohl emphasized.

The CDU chief pointed out that the leading CDU bodies will be meeting on Monday.

Kohl on Future Plan

LD171344 Hamburg DPA in German 1238 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Excerpts] Bonn, 17 Sep (DPA) -- Immediately after the lower house debate, opposition leader Helmut Kohl stressed that he wanted to form a viable government as soon as possible. He told newsmen that he intended to talk about further developments with FDP Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher. Kohl's deputy, Friedrich Zimmermann (CSU), said he assumed that there would be an opportunity today to talk with the future coalition partner about the timetable.

Kohl said that the various CDU bodies wouod discuss the new situation at the beginning of next week. With regard to further developments in parliament, Kohl said that Genscher and he had put forward the same arguments. However, Kohl refused to name a date for the constructive vote of no confidence, and also ducked the question of whether this vote, which would topple Helmut Schmidt, would be introduced before or after the Hesse election on September 26th. It is also still unclear when the new election envisaged by Kohl and Genscher, should they be able to form a government, will take place. Kohl reaffirmed his opinion that it should be "soon."

Genscher on Kohl Votes

LD191650 Hamburg DPA in German 1224 GMT 19 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Bonn 19 Sep (DPA) -- Opposition leader Helmut Kohl, in a constructive vote of no confidence against Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt in the Bonn parliament, can, in the view of FDP chief Hans-Dietrich Genscher, expect a sufficient majority from the FDP.

In an interview on ZDF Television (Bonn Perspektiven) on Sunday evening, Genscher replied to the question as to whether Kohl can firmly rely on the FDP votes and risk a constructive vote of no confidence, with a plain "yes." Genscher admitted that the present development constituted a serious strain for his party: being the smallest party it has to make the most difficult decisions during any change. In the same program, CSU Chairman Franz-Josef Strauss said that Genscher had told Kohl that during a constructive vote of no confidence, more than the mathematically required 23 FDP deputies would come out in favor of Kohl. "We assume that this promise by the FDP will hold good."

Genscher emphasized that all those involved want fresh elections. He does not believe there are difficulties with regard to dates. In his view, the elections should take place in the first quarter of 1983.

Strauss Interview

LD191658 Hamburg DPA in German 1158 GMT 19 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Bonn, 19 Sep (DPA) -- Franz Josef Strauss, CSU chairman and minister-president, does not exclude a return to Bonn should the union gain the absolute majority in fresh elections after a Helmut Kohl transitional government.

Strauss, in a ZDF Television interview (Bonn Perspektiven) on Sunday, when asked whether he would be foreign minister in a government consisting only of the union, said: "Of course, in an all-union government I shall possibly be available for this or that office, in accordance with my experience, responsibility and my political weight."

At the same time, Strauss made clear that he is to maintain his candidature for the office of minister-president at the diet elections on 10 October. Therefore, should the coalition of CDU/CSU and FDP in Bonn come about, he would "not be available this time round."

Strauss affirmed his wish for the earliest possible fresh elections as desired by the FDP once the Kohl/Genscher government was set up.

BRANDT COMMENTS ON SCHMIDT STANDING IN ELECTIONS

LD190904 Hamburg DPA in German 0555 GMT 19 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Bonn, 19 Sep (DPA) -- SPD Chairman Willy Brandt has left the question open as to whether Chancellor Helmut Schmidt as SPD top candidate will still be available should early elections only take place next year following the limited period of CDU Chairman Helmut Kohl's chancellorship.

In an interview on Bavarian Radio published in Bonn, Brandt said on Saturday evening that he is unable to give a reply to this on behalf of Schmidt. The SPD leadership has agreed during the past few days that Schmidt will enter the election campaign as top candidate "for the fresh elections proposed by us." The SPD advocates immediate fresh elections.

Schmidt proposed fresh elections for November in the Bundestag on Friday.

Brandt on Election Policy

LD191746 Hamburg DPA in German 1235 GMT 19 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn, 19 Sep (DPA) -- The SPD intends to affirm its call for immediate fresh elections to the Bundestag at a special party congress within the next 14 days, SPD Chairman Willy Brandt announced in Bonn on Sunday following a party council session.

A unanimously adopted resolution supports the proposal of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt for agreement by all parties on such new elections. At the same time, the SPD party council, the highest SPD body between party conferences, accused the majority of the FDP leadership of having broken its 1980 election promise. At the time, FDP chief Hans-Dietrich Genscher had said: "Anyone voting FDP guarantees Helmut Schmidt will remain as chancellor."

According to Brandt, Schmidt has stated his preparedness to be available as the SPD's top candidate in immediate fresh elections this year should CDU Chairman Helmut Kohl be elected new chancellor with the help of the FDP. A decision on who would be SPD candidate for chancellor at a later election date has not yet been made, Brandt said.

Minority Cabinet Meeting

LD171608 Hamburg DPA in German 1550 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn, 17 Sep (DPA) -- The new SPD minority cabinet met on Friday evening under the chairmanship of Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt. It is thought that further government business is being discussed in light of the resignations this morning of the four FDP ministers. Immediately before the session, the chancellor and the three ministers who have taken over the posts of the resigned FDP ministers received their letters of appointment from Federal President Karl Carstens.

TEXT OF SCHMIDT ADDRESS TO BONN BUNDESTAG

DW171147 Cologne Westdeutscher Rundfunk Network in German 0930 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Statement by FRG Chancellor Helmut Schmidt to the FRG Bundestag in Bonn -- live]

[Text] Mr President, ladies and gentlemen, in the report on the state of the nation on 9 September, I spoke with great concern about the FRG's domestic political situation. The situation was and remained characterized by uncertainty and insecurity with regard to the existence of the Social-Liberal coalition.

Since our colleague Genscher in the summer of 1981 coined the phrase about a turning point and used it several times thereafter, it became questionable whether the FDP wanted to stay with the government coalition and with the Social Democrats -- a coalition which was impressively strengthened by the voters in 1980 -- until the end of the 4-year election period. [applause]

These doubts have increased continuously since the statement by the Hesse FDP about the coalition. The reason which was first given for the agreement with CDU -- namely that they wanted to support the Social-Liberal coalition in the Bundestag through a CDU-FDP coalition in Hesse -- was never believable, and it is no longer needed. [applause]

I therefore used last week's address on the state of the nation as a way to stress the claim of the citizens for truth and clarity. Truth and clarity in the formation of a political will are prerequisites for a government and a parliament which are able to act. [applause] They are a prerequisite for internal and social stability and for a stable economic policy. They are particularly a prerequisite required for reliability of the government in foreign policy. [applause] In short, the political and economic world crisis calls for a federal government which is fully capable of acting.

My appeal and the plenary debate last Thursday unfortunately did not produce the necessary clarity. Dr Kohl did not accept my offer to achieve the chancellorship for which he is striving immediately through a constructive vote of no confidence in accordance with Article 67 of the Basic Law and to then hold new elections thereafter. Colleagues Genscher and Mischnick also did not unambiguously and clearly -- without ifs and buts -- speak up for their party's remaining with the Social-Liberal coalition. One clear statement was always missing -- and it was still missing this week, which ends tomorrow -- namely, the statement that the FDP would stand firmly by the Social-Liberal coalition. One paper was correct the day after the debate on the state of the nation when it said that Mr Genscher delivered a characteristically ambiguous speech and avoided tying his party down with regard to the coalition problem.

Since then, the doubts and the uncertainty about the goals and aims of the FDP have grown daily. I regret this very much because I believe as before, that there still is a great and solid stock of substantial political agreement between Social Democrats and liberals. [applause]

Therefore, I believe that we should have succeeded in a great common effort -- as far as this is possible for an individual industrial state which greatly depends on foreign trade -- to get out of the current difficulties without damaging social justice and upsetting social peace. [applause]

The prerequisite would be an honest and partaicularly limited will regarding common political interests. It would have to be clearly stronger than the joy and desire for changing tactics and for skirmishes in interviews based on political opportunism. [applause]

Cooperation is impossible if there are hidden and unspoken reservations. [applause] The often repeated and publicly used phrase of, I quote, new factual problems seeking new majorities, was reason enough to recognize the inner reservations of the speaker, namely colleague Genscher. Up until now, colleague Genscher, we have solved all factual problems in agreement with each other.

The citizens, the media and public opinion as a whole were almost in total agreement in considering the memorandum submitted to me by a federal minister late on 10 September as a divorce letter or, I quote, a manifest of secession, which means in German a document of separation. This approach was by no means eliminated by yesterday's statement by the minister of economics here in the Bundestag. I also cannot see that the memorandum is in agreement with the annual economic report for which the same minister is responsible.

It is also incomprehensible that the memorandum was meant for the medium-term and not the immediate future. In addition, in May the same speaker repeatedly told industrial circles that any government change in Bonn would not lead to large-scale or important economic policy changes because our state objectively does not have enough leeway to do this.

By the way, public opinion understood the memorandum very correctly. It really is aiming for a turning point -- a turning point away from the democratic social state as outlined by Article 20 of our Basic Law, and a turn toward a society you have to elbow your way through. [shouts, applause] Regarding the interjections by the CDU, I can only say: Ask the Catholic Worker Movement how it understands this. [applause]

The memorandum is obviously supposed to serve as a sign post for other majorities. At any rate, this impression is being consciously accepted and it is not being convincingly corrected.

The insecure situation which has resulted from the action of several FDP politicians cannot continue. Many land organizations and many individual FDP coalition partners are publicly quarreling with each other about the problem of whether to remain loyal to the coalition or whether a constructive vote of no confidence can be risked -- and if so, when. The party leadership should have eliminated the uncertainty and the additional economic insecurity created by all this, but this has not happened. [applause]

In the interests of our country, in the interests of our parliamentary-democratic government system and its reputation, and, last but not least, also in the interests of the social-democratic coalition partner, I can't and won't look on any longer as the Federal Governmemt's ability to act and its reputation are being constantly damaged. Nobody will hold it against me if I don't want to be torn down myself. [applause]

I asked the opposition last week to submit a constructive vote of no confidence and thus to elect another federal chancellor. The opposition leader replied that they want to first wait for the outcome of the Landtag elections in Wiesbaden and Munich. Only after that would they see what should be done. I gather from this, Dr Kohl, that at present you don't think you can get the support of enough Bundestag deputies. It can be gathered from the public discussions of FDP politicians that those who want to overthrow the current federal chancellor and replace him with Dr Kohl also want to wait for the outcome of the two Landtag elections and thus test the reaction of the voters to the envisaged FDP coalition change in Wiesbaden.

In other words, if the FDP overcame the 5-percent hurdle in Wiesbaden, this would give some FDP politicians in Bonn sufficient courage to overthrow the chancellor. If the FDP remained under the 5-percent minimum in Wiesbaden and thus had to leave Landtag, the same colleagues would perhaps be prepared to continue the ocial-Liberal coalition in Bonn. But a percentage point more or less in Wiesbaden is not a solid basis for a federal government. [applause]

In the first case -- 1 percent more -- it seems to me preparatory work is being done to pass the buck to the Social Democrats for a planned coalition break.

I stressed last week that irrespective of my expressed reference to the constitutional possibilities of a constructive vote of no confidence, only new Bundestag elections can bring full democratic legitimacy to another federal chancellor, another Federal Government and another policy. I repeat that the citizens are entitled to know the intentions with which a so-called new majority will actually be starting as well as how a different federal chancellor intends to respond to the nation's vital questions and what his leadership team, his team of ministers, will look like. Up to now, Dr Kohl has not responded with a single word regarding his intentions. Apart from you yourself, Dr Kohl, nobody knows whether you have other or even better solutions to the problems that are pressing all of us.

Since the last cabinet meeting the day before yesterday, I have examined the situation soberly with my closest political friends. Mr Brandt, Mr Wehner and myself have arrived unanimously at the conclusion that new Bundestag elections would indeed be the best way to get out of the current domestic crisis. They should be held as soon as possible according to constitutional law. [prolonged applause]

This is why we expressly agree with Minister-President Stoltenberg, and with Minister-Presidents Albrecht, Spaeth and Strauss as well as with colleagues Barzel, Biedenkopf and their Secretary General Geissler. These and other CDU/CSU leaders and also many others in this country have come out quite unequivocally in recent days for new elections. You yourself, Dr Kohl, told the West Faelische Rundschau in Dortmund a few days ago that what you would prefer most would be new elections, although you added that for the time being you could not see any realistic path to them. You also added -- and I quote verbatim -- that a minority government under Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt tolerated by the CDU/CSU would be possible only if it were to prepare new elections in concurrence with the opposition. You went on to say, verbatim: I do not see any chancellor from the SPD who will make such an agreement. Dr Kohl you are mistaken because I am ready for such an arrangement and agreement, and I am very anxious to know whether you will stand by your word. [prolonged applause]

I now propose to the parties and factions represented in the Bundestag an arrangement, as Mr Kohl puts it, or an agreement for the purpose of holding new elections without delay. Everyone knows that the Basic Law offers a way to achieve them. It is, however, a very complicated way and it requires a political effort of will and the unanimity of a Bundestag majority. This road, which was taken once, 10 years ago, begins with the federal chancellor asking for confidence according to Article 68 of the Basic Law. In line with this, the federal president can dissolve the Bundestag at my proposal in the event that a preceding motion by the federal chancellor asking for confidence has not received a majority in the Bundestag.

However, as a second condition, the Basic Law prescribes that the Bundestag can be dissolved only if another federal chancellor has not been elected in the meanwhile through a constructive no confidence vote. The road toward agreement which I offer you is not an easy one for me and it is even less so for the major government party which carries me because in reality, full confidence exists between the Social Democratic Bundestag faction and the federal chancellor. [prolonged applause] However, for my part I am ready to set these considerations aside, and during the debate party Chairman Willy Bandt will speak on behalf of my party friends. I for my part am ready to set such considerations aside. So as to first, ask for a vote of confidence when it is agreed and, second, to ask my party friends to abstain from voting on this so that I then will be in a position to propose to the federal president that the Bundestag be dissolved.

Third, this road presupposes that it will be embarked on through a clear-cut majority of the Bundestag on the basis of an agreement, and fourth, for this agreement the opposition must of course, not make use of Article 68, paragraph 1, sentence 1, in other words -- I will explain this to those who aren't familiar with the Basic Law [commotion] -- in other words, the arrangement must include the opposition's renunciation of a vote of no confidence in the meantime. Otherwise, new elections would be postposed indefinitely, if you really want new elections at all. [prolonged applause]

The question of new elections to the Bundestag would in fact then become a subject for discussion at the forthcoming coalition negotiations between you and the FDP, our hitherto partner, and perhaps new elections would then not take place at all. I want to clarify one thing: I cannot -- and I naturally also do not want to -- I cannot bar you from taking the road of a constructive vote of no confidence, something which I actually asked you to do last week without having received any answer so far. If you were to embark on this road now, then there of course cannot be any cooperation from the federal chancellor. You must find out for yourself whether you can find enough votes within the FDP.

At any rate, I fell that the leader of the opposition must soon state when he actually wants new elections to be held -- elections about which the entire CDU and the entire CSU have been talking about in public. [prolonged applause].

Thus, I am ready to invite for a talk on such an agreement all party and faction chairmen of the Bundestag for next week. In this I am proceeding from the premise that new elections to the Bundestag should take place as early as this fall. As you know, the Basic Law prescribes in Article 39 that the new elections will not take place later than 60 days after the dissolution of the Bundestag. Thus I think of new elections by the end of November.

We all certainly are aware that the dissolution of the Bundestag in the midst of an election period must remain an exception. This is why, under the impression of the negative experiences gained from frequent dissolutions of the Reichstag in the Weimar Republic, the fathers of the Basic Law deliberatley had made the dissolution of parliament extremely difficult. This actually was a good and correct decision and they have left open only the single complicated way that I just described. But because the Federal Republic has come of age in the meantime and because Weimar conditions must not be feared in Bonn also in the future, I do not doubt that the voters will understand my proposal. On the contrary, I am convinced that public opinion in Germany will unanimously welcome the proposals for immediate new elections. [prolonged applause]

Messrs Brandt and Wehner and all my political friends and I are aware of the fact that Social Democracy at present finds itself at a downright political low ebb. We know that we most probably will have to suffer losses in the new elections. In the face of the world economic crisis, hardly any government party in a parliamentary democratic state can win over additional voters. This perhaps will also happen to us. But the SPD is a self-confident party that can also weather crisis. [prolonged applause]

It has often enough proved this in the course of its 120-year history in much harder times. We are bearing government responsibility with inward conviction but we are not glued to our chairs. [prolonged applause]

I do not overlook the fact that new elections are raising weighty questions for the FDP as well. It will need courage to agree to new elections, for it moved into the Bundestag in the 1980 election year with 10.6 percent of the second votes, when such results at present are not in the offing for it. [laughter] But it would not be in order, ladies and gentlemen of the FDP, if you wanted to get those mandates into a CDU/CSU-FDP government that you had won with poster titled such as "Schmidt, Genscher against CSU and CDU." [prolonged applause]

The FDP's critical situation was caused by some of your leading figures proper. I cannot spare you of the observation that you will be liable for your preceding action in the near future and I hope that you will be good debtors. [commotion] If a historical epoch in the development of our democratic community is coming to a close now ladies and gentlemen, and if the future of this development is uncertain now, then I would like to stress once again in this connection that I take pride in what has been achieved in the Social-Liberal coalition. [applause] This applies to the reconditioning of the reformed deficit, which we had come upon in 1969, this applies to the building of the social state and this likewise applies to our peace policy together with our partners in the alliance but also vis-a-vis our neighbors in the East. [prolonged applause]

I'm proud of this common achievement and I will defend it with great personal engagement. I back everything equally clearly which we have together agreed on up to this day. I belong to those Social Democrats who have created very close human and friendly relations with many FDP deputies in the course of the common work. I thank you all, particularly Wolfgang Mischnick [prolonged applause] and particularly all those who have been loyal to the Social-Liberal coalition up to the last hour. [applause]

I have met much good will in your faction with regard to Social-Liberal cooperation. My prodecessor in this office, Mr Willy Brandt, experienced the same. It has given us the strength over and over again which was necessary for the efforts to be made in controversies, to find compromises which were simultaneously useful for public benefit and acceptable to both coalition partners. This applied last to the difficult discussions on the 1983 budget draft and the ensuing texts of bills on 30 June and 1 July.

Thereafter I have tried in a long talk with colleague Genscher on 31 July again to stabilize the common interests. I did it again in the 25 August cabinet session and I wrote a personal letter to Mr Genscher in the same sense in the evening of 25 August. The letter led on 30 August to another talk. Up until that Wednesday, I have made every possible effort to preserve the common interests against the skeptics in both coalition factions. I didn't show lack of good will. [applause]

However, after the events of past days I had to lose political confidence in some FDP leaders. Further cooperation cannot be expected from the Social Democratic Federal Ministers or the federal chancellor. [applause] Messrs Genscher and Mischnick have known for 1 1/2 hours the text of the statement I am making at present. Mr Genscher just announced to me the resignation of the four FDP ministers.

I intend to head the foreign office myself up to the new elections of the Bundestag. I intend to make Federal Minister Lahnstein responsible also for the Ministry of Economics, Federal Minister Schmude also responsible for the Interior Ministry and Federal Minister Engholm also responsible for the Ministry of Agriculture [laughter, shouts] until the Bundestag has been newly elected. [shouts, applause]

If in such a serious hour a joke on my part is permitted with regard to the friendly CDU faces, I took Engholm because next to Joseph Ertl he is one of those who really know something about fish. [laughter, applause]

The opposition leader demanded a new beginning today in a Frankfurt paper. New beginning, Dr Kohl, is a very unclear word. Stick to new elections within the shortest possible time, which has been demanded last week with many interpellations from the opposition benches.

I quoted you a while ago as speaking of a minority cabinet in another press interview. I repeat that I don't want to fidget with that, I'm for new Bundestag elections. In the meantime, the Social Democratic ministers and I will do our duty, current government business will not suffer from it. It has not suffered so far, although this was hardly brought to the attention of the citizens.

I summarize: Not just many young Germans but also an always increasing number of older citizens feel more and more depressed by what those people in Bonn are doing. I can understand this concern very well because I share it.

Because I'm taking my reponsibility seriously, I refuse to look any longer on tactical maneuvers. [applause]

For us Social Democrats, the reputation and firmness of democracy are more important than gaining tactical advantages for our own party. [applause]

Time and again, I have made the serious offer to the coalition partner to strengthen the Social-Liberal Federation Government's capability of action through a great and joint effort and to perform creative government work also in the second legislation period, extending beyond the 1983 budget. Time and again I did not receive a clearcut answer. A single sentence would have sufficed to create clarity. It is lacking up to this day. Instead, I had to hear and read many times from Mr colleague Genscher that new objective facts (sachfragen) would create new majorities. I am under the impression that some of the FDP's leading figures were carrying on the consultations on the budget only pro forma because they are looking for a pretext so as to explain the change of partner to the public. [applause]

What has been said, written but never clarified for several weeks now about timetables and itineraries for a change, touches on the self-esteem of the Social Democratic Party of Germany, on the Social Democratic federal ministers and on my own self-esteem. But even if my own personal feelings are not so important, what remains important is that the government office must not be allowed to be harmed by such machinations. [applause]

Selfish partisan action may harm the reputation of the Federal Republic of Germany beyond our borders also. Reliability for our partners in the alliance and our neighbors in the West and in the East cannot be created through continuity in our foreign and security policy alone, but predictability for our allies and our partners in the first place, depends on the credibility of our democratic-parliamentary system.

This is why I am asking the parties and factions represented in the Bundestag to take a courageous step jointly, so as to put an early end in a convincing way, to the current domestic crisis. I thank you. [prolonged applause]

MITTERRAND STATEMENT ON PALESTINIAN MASSACRE

LD182144 Paris Domestic Service in French 2100 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Text] President Mitterrand has reacted to the announcement of the massacre of several hundred Palestinian civilians in two refugee camps located in west Beirut. This reaction has just been released by an Elysee spokesman.

[Begin unidentified spokesman recording] The reports that have reached us from Beirut provoke a reaction of horror. Those who bear the responsibility for such excesses betray the causes that they believe they are serving. The international community must rise up against such massacres and draw up the necessary measures to prevent them. France has already intervened in order to facilitate the implementation of a peaceful settlement in the region.

In the present circumstances, France has decided to act once again. The minister of external relations is in touch with the interested parties in order to define the desirable initiatives, especially through the utilization of the resources of the United Nations.

'ARAFAT IMPLORES MITTERRAND TO STOP MASSACRE

NC181910 Paris AFP in English 1852 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Text] Paris, Sept. 18 (AFP) -- Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) chief Yasir 'Arafat today "implored" French President Francois Mitterrand to take urgent steps to halt the "barbaric" massacres in Lebanon and obtain the withdrawal of Israeli troops from the Lebanese capital.

In a message to the president, later issued by the PLO office here, Mr 'Arafat said that "the Israeli Army is perpetrating terrible crimes against the Palestinian population inside and outside the Beirut refugee camps."

Israeli radio, international news agencies and international observers "have recognized the truth of the facts," he said.

"Responsibility for the Israeli Army's crime against the civilians of Beirut lies on the entire world," he said.

The crimes, he added, committed "after the departure of Palestinian troops" from Beirut, came "despite all promises and guarantees and violate the accords concluded with U.S. special envoy Philip Habib."

"Mr President," he said, "we entrusted you with the safety of the Palestinian refugee camps and their residents in Beirut. We entrusted them to the international buffer force and to United Nations observers. I therefore beg you to do all you can to halt the massacre of Palestinian women and children."

The Palestinian news agency WAFA, monitored in Damascus, said Mr. 'Arafat had sent similar "urgent, important" messages to Pope John Paul II, Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev and United Nations Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

GOVERNMENT DEMANDS IMMEDIATE ISRAELI WITHDRAWAL

NC171811 Paris AFP in English 1744 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Text] Paris, Sep 17 (AFP) -- The French Government today demanded the "immediate" withdrawal of the Israeli Army from west Beirut and charged that Israel had violated the agreement that led to the Palestinian retreat from Beirut."

In an official statement released today, External Relations Minister Claude Cheysson said it was "absolutely necessary" that Israeli troops move back to positions held Tuesday before the drive west so that "immediate negotiations on the evacuation of all armed foreign forces from Lebanon can be undertaken."

The Israeli offensive since Wednesday and the accompanying bombardments are "a violation of the agreement accepted by the belligerents." Under this agreement, France, the United States and Italy sent roops to Beirut to man a buffer force to oversee the evacuation of the Palestinian fighters.

The situation since (?Wednesday) leaves large numbers of the civilian population without protection, since guarantees given in exchange for the evacuation of armed forces have been seriously compromised.

Mr Cheysson said France "denounced and condemned this new, unjustified challenge" by Israel and stressed that it was up to Lebanon alone "to ensure the continuation of its own institutions."

The statement also said it was "essential" to send United Nations observers to Lebanon, as called for in earlier UN resolutions.

TEXT OF STATEMENT ON BEIRUT 'OFFENSIVE'

PM201205 Paris LE FIGARO in French 18-19 Sep 82 p 2

[Unattributed report: "Paris Calls for Israelis' 'Immediate Withdrawal']

[Text] The following is the text of the statement issued by [French External Relations Minister] Claude Cheysson on Lebanon:

The Israeli offensive in west Beirut since 15 September and the bombing accompanying that action are a violation of the agreement accepted by the warring sides, widely approved by the international community and which France, the United States and Italy helped to implement. This situation leaves numerous civilians unprotected, and the guarantees given in exchange for the withdrawal of the armed forces are henceforth seriously jeopardized.

France denounces and condemns this as an unjustified challenge. It is up to Lebanon and it alone to ensure the continuity of its own institutions. France thinks it is vital for the Israeli Army to return immediately to the positions it occupied on 14 September so that negotiations can immediately be started on conditions for withdrawing all foreign armed forces from Lebanon.

Durihg his brief visit to Paris, the UN secretary general's attention was again drawn to the need for immediate implementation of Resolutions 516, 517 and 518 on UN observers in Beirut. Their presence in Lebanon in adequate numbers on conditions to be drawn up with the Lebanese Government seems to be a vital step. France now asserts its determination to give full support to decisions which might be taken.

Ready To Send Troops

NC191151 Paris AFP in English 1141 GMT 19 Sep 82

[Text] Paris, Sep 19 (AFP) -- Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson today announced that France was ready to send troops back to Lebanon to protect the civilian population.

Mr Cheysson, interviewed on television, said that he had discussed with French Defense Minister Charles Hernu how France could act jointly with the United Nations or "otherwise."

[French External Affairs Minister Claude Cheysson's interview on television station Antenne 2 in Paris on 19 September]

[Text] [Question] Mr Minister, can you tell us France's position?

[Answer] Bombs and victims here, war, bombing raids, invasion and violations of international resolutions there. We now have massacres and summary executions. This cannot be allowed to continue. The international community must stand up against these excesses, President Mitterrand said in his declaration yesterday.

The civilian population must be protected. We asked for this protection right from the beginning. We the French made precise proposals right from the beginning. On 25 June, the president of the republic made an appeal to the world and we submitted to the Security Council a resolution which said: All armed forces should be evacuated from Beirut, which should be under the sole control of the Lebanese Army reinforced by international elements supplied by UNIFIL [United Nations International Force in Lebanon]. This is the UN force in Lebanon in which France had two batallions. The mission of this force would be to strengthen the Lebanese Army to ensure security in Beirut. The resolution received 14 votes for and one against. The opposing vote was that of the United States, which thus vetoed the resolution. Three months were thus lost and here we are now. The resolution unanimously adopted last night does not say only that there must be more observers, it also says that an international force should come to support the Lebanese Army. Here we are: The method of action we have been recommending for weeks and months now has at last been adopted.

[Question] The buffer forces returned from Beirut barely a few hours ago. Is France prepared to return to Beirut?

[Answer] Let me quote the president of the republic, for one cannot quote a higher authority: "France is determined to act again." This was contained in the statement he issued yesterday. We are prepared to do this at any moment. As early as this morning, the defense minister and I discussed how we could help the United Nations -- if, as we hope, the United Nations decides to send a force -- or what else we could do.

[Question] Mr Minister, the buffer force which was in Lebanon recently did not fulfill its role. Why did we leave Beirut before the end of its mandate, which was to expire on 21 September?

[Answer] The role of that force was to enable evacuation of the combatants in an orderly manner and in dignity. This was accomplished. This was so much the role of the force that its mandate was short. This was so much its role that one of its most important elements -- the American element -- never left the port. [Passage indistinct] Its role was not to protect the civilian population of Beirut, as this would have implied a much longer stay. Its role was not what we proposed on 25 June this year. This force should be in conformity with the decision of the international community and not with the ad hoc decision of three countries.

[Question] Was there no disagreement between the French, who were prepared to stay longer, and the Americans?

[Answer] Right from the beginning, there was disagreement on the way of dealing with this problem. As a matter of fact, it is necessary to recall the rest of the reasoning: There will be no peace in the Middle East unless the right of each state to security is recognized, beginning with Israel, and there will be no peace in the Middle East unless each state has a future. How can a people without a future, a territory and a homeland and who are aliens in the land, fail to arouse such a reaction? As a result, we have all sorts of passions including hatred as well as the horrible images of the past.... We must therefore deal with the political problem. This was what we proposed right from the beginning. It is tied to the immediate problems. The international community has a very clear duty; it must take immediate measures in less than 48 hours. It must also create a situation which can make it possible to take a political path leading to a future and to security.

[Question] What did you feel during your visit to Beirut a few days ago?

[Answer] In the first place, this very striking fact of the Israelis' entry into west Beirut. When you are in east Beirut, you can see clearly what is happening in west Beirut. We therefore saw the Israeli advance, we saw the Israelis enter the camps -- the Chatila camp -- and bombard the entrance to the camp in order to take control of it. But the other glaring impression I had and about which I speak with much seriousness is that the Lebanese people, whose passion one may fear unleashed at the assassination of their president-elect, agreed, with a remarkable and wise reflex, that a constitutional process should be engaged in as soon as possible to elect a new president in line with the recommendations of the texts. One could have expected exceptional measures -- but never. [as received]. The assembly has been summoned for Tuesday. Applications for candidacy were filed in perfectly normal conditions, which no one contested. There is every hope that in a few days time -- in a few weeks time -- there will be a president in Lebanon under conditions that you will term exemplary.

[Question] In spite of the massacre?

[Answer] I think it will go this way, and in this way Lebanon will demonstrate its desire for unity, which is above everything and which to us, naturally, constitutes the sacred principle of our action. We must help Lebanon to reaffirm its unity. Every external event which aggravates passions is a supplementary inconvenience which tends to compromise this evolution.

LE MONDE: AL-JUMAYYIL DEATH REOPENS OLD DILEMMAS

[Editorial: "Back to 'Go'"]

[Text] There were very few people who thought that Bashir al-Jumayyil would complete his presidential term of office because he had aroused so much passionate opposition and implacable hatred on the left as well as on the right, even among "moderate" Christians. But who would have thought that he would be killed even before his investiture, and in his east Beirut domain in the "fortress" which his party headquarters constituted?

Bashir al-Jumayyil wanted to be "president of all the Lebanese." To that end, he had offered dialogue to the Muslims, partly represented by Mr Sa'ib Salam, who accepted it more out of realism than out of deep conviction. Most of the leftwing groups were in the same state of mind but did not have many illusions. The president-elect intended to disarm what he called the "private militia" and integrate his into the regular army, thus increasing distrust of it.

Even those who were prepared to give him a chance were following his efforts to reconcile seemingly irreconcilable forces with skepticism mixed with hope. The dilemma was great: If Bashir al-Jumayyil had been forced to sign a separate peace with Israel, he would have lost the support of Lebanese Muslims and of a section of the Christian community anxious not to cut the country off from its Arab "hinterland." If he had been forced to abandon such a settlement, he would have run the risk of considerably delaying the withdrawal of Israeli troops.

Bashir al-Jumayyil had opted for a "balanced" language which did not exactly delight the Jerusalem government either. He had advocated the withdrawal of "all foreign forces" from Lebanon, and gave evasive answers to questions about the future of Israeli-Lebanese relations. He had not shown any haste to sign a peace treaty, which was also regarded as premature by U.S. Secretary of State Shultz, who recently maintained that "a treaty cannot be signed under the threat of bayonets." Mr Begin and Mr Sharon tried more than once to compromise the Lebanese president-elect, notably by announcing that they had had secret meetings with him, but it was to no avail. Bashir al-Jumayyil was clearly distancing himself from Jerusalem to ensure the "national reconciliation" which he earnestly desired.

The Phalangist leader's assassination also crushed the hope of normalization which a broad section of the Lebanese people cherished, and may open a new violent chapter in that country's tragic history. A civil war could be avoided assuming two hypotheses, that of the extension of Mr Elias Sarkis' mandate for a limited period and that -- more problematic -- of the election of a "consensus president" which the Muslims, prominent rightwing Christians and the left wanted. But in neither case would Lebanon sign a separate peace with Israel, thus delaying the withdrawal of General Sharon's forces and consequently that of the Syrians and the Palestinian fedayeen who remain in northern Lebanon.

That would bring us back to "go," and show, once again, that it is very difficult to separate the Lebanese problem from the Israeli-Arab conflict.

MARCHAIS: 'OVERWHELMING' SUPPORT FOR POLICY

PM170853 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 13 Sep 82 p 3

[Unattributed report: "France Has Assets for Coping With Crisis"]

[Excerpt] Georges Marchais was the guest of the 1300 hours newscast on French television's channel 1 on Saturday. The secretary general, who was answering questions put by Yves Mourousi and Jean Marie de Morant, emphasized first of all the two aspects of the L'HUMANITE festival -- mobilization of the workers and the PCF's own contribution to that mobilization in order to forge ahead.

After noting that the overwhelming majority of Communists are resolutely in favor of the PCF's participation in the government majority, G. Marchais explained the Communists' tactics in the municipal elections: To check the right and ensure success for the left. Pointing out that Chirac is banking on defeat for the left in 1983 in order to demand an early election, the secretary general stated: "It is necessary to defeat the right and to consolidate all the municipalities which the left won in 1977. All the party's activity is directed toward that end."

Is There Nothing To Be Done?

G. Marchais referred next to the conduct of the new majority, whose assessment is favorable. If grave problems are being encountered, this is because the right is fighting back — primarily with its most favored instrument, the employers — not forgetting the pressures of an international nature, such as those exerted by the United States. The secretary general stated that we must not give in to this dual pressure. This entails not reducing the workers' purchasing power and producing French goods. The PCF has decided to launch a major campaign on this issue.

"I recently heard a majority politician speaking of the international crisis." After recalling that he published an article analyzing the crisis of French society in L'HUMANITE 11 years ago, G. Marchais continued: "That crisis exists, and it is weighing increasingly heavily. But when I hear people presenting an apocalyptic situation, tending to argue that there is no more to be done and that work, wages and poverty must be shared, are they not joking?"

Problem of New Economic Order Is Posed.

"In our own country there are millions of people who are experiencing enormous difficulties in merely subsisting. In all the capitalist countries, millions of people are in this situation. In the United States 33 million people are living below the poverty line. So much for the capitalist world. As far as the Third World countries are concerned, hundreds of millions of human beings are hungry, ill and illiterate. They have certainly won their political independence, but they do not have the economic resources necessary to subsist. Is there nothing to be done in this field? Third, the socialist countries, which started from very low bases, have made considerable progress, but today they need international cooperation. Is there nothing to be done with the socialist countries? When I hear it said that the production system is to be developed no further and that it is no longer necessary to effect developments in scientific and technical research and to use our era's tremendous capabilities, I say that is a sick joke. Above all, we must not give in to this demagogic campaign about an inescapable international situation forcing the unemployed to remain unemployed and the poor to remain poor. No, there are solutions and France has assets.

"There is a need for a new economic order, and I do not deny that we are confronted with difficulties here: reservations in the capitalist countries and even reservations in the socialist countries, which I have often discussed with them. But the world can no longer live today as it has lived over the last few decades. The problem of a new economic order is posed. It is the necessary condition for forging ahead, because it is at the same time a matter of justice and a condition for extricating France from the crisis."

PCF LEADER COMMENTS ON MIDEAST, WORLD MOVEMENT

PM171127 [Editorial Report] Paris L' HUMANITE in French on 13 September carries on page 9 the 2,500-word text of PCF Secretary General Georges Marchais' opening speech at the international section of the L' HUMANITE festival at La Courneuve on 11 September. Addressing the foreign delegations, Marchais recalls the PCF's solidarity with national liberation movements throughout the world and goes on to devote the bulk of his speech to the Near East situation in light of the recent war in Lebanon. After hailing the "resistance, courage and heroism" of the "Palestinian and Lebanese fighters" Marchais stresses that the war "has solved nothing" and pledges to make every effort to ensure that France contributes "to the search for a peaceful solution."

Marchais welcomes the "plan for a settlement put forward by the Arab League." He goes on to condemn U.S. backing for Israel's invasion of Lebanon and criticized UN inaction. After stressing the advance of "the social, national and human liberation forces" in the world and imperialism's "disarray," Marchais concludes by reiterating the PCF's "new internationalism" outlined at the party's 24th congress, implying the PCF's complete autonomy as a party but its energetic cooperation with "all the communist and workers parties in all socialist countries" and "all revolutionary and progressive parties in Africa, Asia and Latin America."

TUNISIAN PRESIDENT ARRIVES FOR PRIVATE VISIT

NC181051 Paris AFP in English 1035 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Text] Paris, Sept 18 (AFP) -- Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba arrived here today on a private visit to France for dental treatment.

Talks with French President Francois Mitterrand and other government officials are also scheduled, and political circles in Tunis said President Bourguiba would be expressing his concern at events in Lebanon.

Tunisia is the headquarters of the Arab League and has been selected as a provisional base by Palestine Liberation Organisation leader Yasir 'Arafat following the evacuation of PLO forces from Beirut.

VIETNAMESE FOREIGN MINISTER ARRIVES ON STOPOVER

NC171110 Paris AFP in English 1044 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Text] Paris, Sep 17 (AFP) -- Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach arrived here today for a stopover expected to last two or three days, on his way to New York for the autumn U.N. General Assembly session opening next Tuesday.

He said he would be meeting French External Relations Minister Claude Cheysson this afternoon.

COLOMBO: READY TO PARTICIPATE IN BEIRUT FORCE

LD182054 Rome Domestic Service in Italian 2030 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Text] This evening in Rome the Foreign Ministry issued a communique which states that Minister Colombo had been in touch with the prime minister and after consultations with Paris and Washington confirms that the Italian Government is ready to participate in an international peacekeeping force to ensure the safety of the population of the Lebanese capital.

Government Condemns Attack

AU191857 Rome ANSA in English 1835 GMT 19 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 19 -- The Italian Government Sunday voiced strong condemnation and censure "of the bloody actions perpetrated, or at least allowed, by the Israeli Army in Lebanon" and of the slaughter of hundreds of Palestinian refugees and other civilians in Beirut.

The government also launched a pressing appeal to Israel to immediately cease fire in accordance with a unanimous United Nations resolution and to start pulling its troops out of the Lebanese capital.

In the meantime, Italy would go ahead with the diplomatic initiatives begun by Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo, in concert with Premier Giovanni Spadolini, the government said. These moves aimed at the reassembling of the peacekeeping force made up of Italian French and U.S. troops and the immediate sending on of U.N. observers to Beirut so as to avert further massacres the like of which "strike the conscience of mankind", the government said.

Already Saturday evening the Italian Government issued a communique stating it favored the return to Lebanon of the multinational peacekeeping force.

Following the massacres perpetrated in Beirut, Italy announced it stood ready to once again take part in the force, clearly with the consent of Lebanese authorities, to help ensure the safety of the civilian population.

Colombo Comments

AU191909 Rome ANSA in English 1845 GMT 19 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Maratea (Potenza) September 19 -- "Words like execration and condemnation are inadequate in the face of the criminal massacre carried out in Beirut against civilians, women and children," Italian Foreign Minister Emilo Colombo told a convention of the Catholic Press Union of Italy here Sunday.

He said that in just a few days hopes for peace had been stifled "first by the assassination of Bashir al-Jamayyil, then by the illegitimate occupation of west Beirut by Israel, and finally by the massacre perpetrated yesterday".

Those who perpetrated the massacre and those who allowed it or at least did nothing to stop it were equally responsible he said. Israel must leave Beirut and Lebanon just like all of the external forces still present in that country, Colombo said.

"The Israeli cause is ever more isolated and weakened in the eyes of the world because of a policy based on aggression and violence. Now the international community can no longer stop short at moral judgements and condemnations. Political action is required," Colombo said. "Italy must and wants to do its part," he continued.

The minister recalled Italy's lastest moves to return the multinational peacekeeping force to Lebanon to safeguard civilians and to get the U.N. to send in a corp of observers. What was important now, he said, was that delays or improvidence did not open the way to more violence.

As soon as word of the massacre got out Saturday, the Farnesina (Foreign Ministry) convoked the Israeli ambassador to Rome to protest the fact that the Israeli Army had illegally entered west Beirut with the excuse of maintaining order, yet did not prevent the massacres, Colombo told the press union.

The foreign minister also said he received a message from U.S. Secretary of state George Shultz Sunday morning urging ready cooperation to deal with the dramatic developments in Lebanon.

Colombo also conferred telephonically with his French colleague Claude Cheysson who he will be meeting in Brussels Monday during a European Economic Community foreign ministers' council session.

Pope Deplores Killing

AU191900 Rome ANSA in English 1840 GMT 19 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) -- Castelgandolfo, September 19 -- Pope John Paul II Sunday said there were no words adequate to express the condemnation of crimes so repugnant to the human, and Christian conscience, as the massacres perpetrated against civilians in Beirut.

Addressing around 7,000 people gathered outside his summer villa here for his regular Sunday benediction, the pope said that it was with deep grief and bitterness that he had learned of the horrible massacres carried out in the Palestinian camps in Beirut.

There are reports of hundreds and hundreds of victims, children, women, the elderly, ruthlessly put to death, he said.

The pontiff voiced grave concern over this terrible demonstration of the forces of evil and the spiral of violence that is spreading through the world and invoked God's mercy for humanity which has fallen to such excesses of barbarism.

He also prayed that God would illuminate the people of the world and their leaders so that they can break this chain of mourning and rancour and with renewed fervor and commitment once again take up the path of dialogue and negotiation to at last achieve peace and reconciliation in the Middle East.

Protest at Israeli Embassy

AU191915 Rome ANSA in English 1842 GMT 19 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 19 -- A demonstration was staged in front of the Israeli Embassy in Rome Sunday to protest against the massacre of civilians in Beirut. A similar demonstration will be staged there again Monday.

The protest rally was organized Sunday by members of the Communist and Proletarian Democratic Parties.

Demonstrators shouted pro-Palestinian slogans and carried signs calling on Italy to recognize the PLO and Palestinian rights. "We feel we are Palestinians. We are all on 'Arafat's side," one sign said.

Proletarian Democratic deputies have announced that Monday they will boycott the ongoing conference of the Interparliamentary Union in sign of protest.

Other protest demonstrations will be organized in Italy throughout the week to condemn the Beirut massacres and show solidarity with the Palestinian cause.

COLOMBO FACES SENATE QUESTIONS ON 'ARAFAT VISIT

AU181533 Rome ANSA in English 0826 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, September 18 -- The two-day visit to Rome conducted by Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasir 'Arafat for the 69th Interparliamentary Union conference moved into the domestic political arena today when Giorgio la Malfa, the Republican budget minister, charged that it was "inconceivable for a leader of international terrorism to be received by a government representative".

La Malfa's statement, appearing in an interview carried in today's edition of LA STAMPA of Turin, was a reference to 'Arafat's meeting with Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo. Between his arrival in Rome early Wednesday morning and his departure for Damascus Thursday night, the PLO leader also met head of state Sandro Pertini, was received in private audience by Pope John Paul II, and encountered a number of the nation's political party leaders and other public figures.

Responding to the cabinet minister's statement on the Colombo-'Arafat meeting, described as private for reasons of protocol, the Foreign Ministry said, "as is well known by now, the encounter took place following an understanding reached within the government and among the coalition parties, of which La Malfa himself is a member".

According to a deputy secretary of the Socialist Party, another government partner, "the budget minister's statement on Italian foreign policy, on 'Arafat's visit to Italy and the position of the government and the other parties in the coalition sounds like a deliberate and useless provocation".

Taking the matter a step further, Valdo Spini said that La Malfa's remarks echo "the spirit of closure and arrogance" of the Israeli drive into Muslim strongholds in west Beirut this week.

The deputy secretary concluded his statement by noting that Italy's Socialists, in line with many other members of the Socialist International, have long recognized the PLO as a political movement and the legitimate representative of the Palestinian people.

Last night it was learned that the foreign minister will appear before the Senate Foreign Affairs Commission on Wednesday to respond to a number of queries filed by M.P.S on 'Arafat's visit to Rome against the background of developments in Lebanon following the assassination of President-elect Bashir al-Jumayyil and the Israeli move into west Beirut.

Another spokesman for a government party, Valerio Zanone, the Liberal Party secretary, commented last night, "during his visit, Yasir 'Arafat presented himself in a 'moderate' image but it appeared that he would not or could not take the exceptional opportunity offered as an observer to the Interparliamentary Union and in talks with the president and the head of the Catholic Church to announce without ambiguity that the PLO is finally ready to pursue a clear and realistic project for peace."

The leadership of the Social Democrat Party, another junior coalition partner, approved a document in which the party voiced "its serious concern for the means involved and the significance attributed to the PLO leader's visit to Italy."

Senator Cesare Pozzo of the neofascist MSI, Italy's fourth largest party, and a member of the MSI delegation to the Interparliamentary Union asserted last night that, "'Arafat's visit was not a diplomatic success but merely a propaganda triumph, which is quite another thing."

SPADOLINI VIEWS NATIONAL, EUROPEAN ISSUES

PM171203 Lisbon DIARIO DE NOTICIAS in Portuguese 10 Sep 82 pp 1, 3

[Interview with Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini by Manuela Paixao; date, place not given]

[Excerpt] DIARIO DE NOTICIAS: Italy was the first country to support Portugal's application to join the EC. The French Government recently demonstrated that it does not approve of our joining in the envisaged time frame. What is Italy's current stance?

Spadolini: I expressed before the European Council in Brussels the opinion that the enlargement to include Portugal and Spain represents a natural and essential development of the historic process which should lead to completion of the building of Europe. I intend to remain firm in this stance.

There are objective problems connected with a 12-member Community which should be resolved in the interest of the European blueprint's vitality itself. But we Italians hope that the process toward the necessary solution will not interfere with the timetable. That is why I am personally committed to some of my proposals put forward in Brussels which are aimed at defining a different method of organization during the transitional or premembership period.

DIARIO DE NOTICIAS: Will the agricultural problems, and especially the "wine war" between France and Italy, have a favorable or unfavorable outcome on our membership?

Spadolini: We are attempting to accelerate the revision of the common agricultural policy so that it can achieve a better balance in safeguarding Mediterranean products such as wine, oil and horticultural products. We have already taken some important steps in that direction by approving initiatives concerning the minimum guaranteed prices for wine and fruit. Our aim has been and will remain to eliminate or avert the causes of the disputes which, especially at the trading level, have occasionally occurred within the Community. Not everything has been done, of course, but there is, at least on Italy's part, the will and interest to continue along this path.

Cultural and Trading Relations

DIARIO DE NOTICIAS: What are the prospects for greater cultural and trading exchanges between Italy and Portugal following this visit, Mr Prime Minister?

Spadolini: In both sectors we are witnessing a dynamic development of our bilateral relations with Portugal. We are also aware of the extensive prospects for being able to do much more still, and we wish not only to take the opportunities but also to create new and better preconditions for their future development. In the cultural field, we are very pleased to learn of the spread of Italian in Portugal, and we hope that other initiatives in addition to study can be made soon with the aim of giving a new cultural impetus to our two countries.

In the economic field, I believe that the response to the joint aim of intensifying bilateral relations should be made through closer forms of cooperation in production and technology, even through the setting up of joint enterprises.

DIARIO DE NOTICIAS: Your government -- the first secular government in 40 years of the republic -- to some extent ends the DC's hegemony. Do you believe that your second government will last until the election in 1984?

Spadolini: I have never considered such a problem. On the contrary, I have always believed -- and I said so in Parliament during the government's inaugural session -- that we have a duty to govern; that is, to contain, channel and control the tendencies toward breakup and disintegration present in Italian society, as in all advanced industrial societies. With the duty of governing on this basis, the coalition of five parties with different traditions and histories -- the DC, the PSI, the Italian Social Democratic Party, the PRI and the Italian Liberal Party, assembled in the largest democratic coalition that Italy has known since the war -- was effected for the second time. It is a coalition which is aware of the grave problems which the country must tackle: from the economic situation to terrorism's offensive.

General Dalla Chiesa's murder in Palermo demonstrates that the battle against this cancer of society will still be long and difficult, and this is why the government did not waste a minute in appointing the general's successor and giving him extensive special powers.

As regards the duration, allow me to answer you in the words of a great Italian politician -- the DC leader murdered by the Red Brigades, Aldo Moro. Moro used to say, and I repeat: "We will perform our duty to the end, as if each day were equally the first and the last of our government."

PREMIER ON ANTITERRORIST STRUGGLE, ACTIONS

LD182230 Rome Domestic Service in Italian 2030 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Prime Minister Spadolini made a speech in Naples at a meeting with the citizens arranged by the Republican Party. He said: From yesterday to today we have brought about a new phase in the struggle of the democratic state against terrorism and the camorra in Naples and the Campania. The government will carry out its commitment in view of the challenge which puts the sovereignty of the republican institutions in jeopardy. We shall have recourse to all the means which the new antimafia law, approved in its final form by Parliament, and the preceding legislation have put at our disposal.

PSI LEADER MEETS IRAQI PARLIAMENTARY OFFICIAL

AU181501 Rome ANSA in English 0842 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 18 -- The situation in the Middle East revolving around the Israeli push into west Beirut and the two-year-old war between Iraq and Iran were discussed here Friday during a meeting between an Iraqi parliamentary delegation, led by Prime Minister [as received] Na'im Haddad, and the secretary of the Italian Socialist Party, Bettino Craxi.

A communique released last night by the Socialist Party headquarters reported that they talk also took up "the joint intention of the PSI and the Ba'th Party of Iraq to foster the development of relations between Italy and Iraq which are already good."

The Socialist note also said that Craxi expressed hope for a negotiated solution for the Iraq war with Iran and favored the mediation efforts now conducted by Algeria.

COMMUNIQUE ON TALKS WITH SUDAN FINANCE MINISTER

AU170847 Rome ANSA in English 0843 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 17 -- Sudan would like to see an expansion of Italian credits to the east African state in order to finish off development projects which have already been started and to realize new ones in farming and fishing, according to Sudan's Finance and [Economic] Planning Minister Ibrahim Mun'im Mansur.

According to a Foreign Ministry communique here, the minister advanced the proposal during a meeting with his Italian counterpart Emilio Colombo yesterday.

The communique quoted Colombo as replying that he favored examining the request, but would like discussions to start only when Sudan's financial situation has been restructured.

Earlier, there was a meeting of the Italo-Sudanese joint commission chaired by Undersecretary Roberto Palleschi on current development projects.

According to the communique, Italy will contribute to projects in the fields of energy, health, farming and fishing, as well as professional (?planning) and the exploitation of water resources. It added that Italy will supply wide ranging consultation and advice on hold to give Sudan banking systems similar to those used by Italian savings and rural credit banks. [sentence as received]

DC SECRETARY DE MITA VIEWS PCI 'EVOLUTION'

PM171423 Rome L'ESPRESSO in Italian 12 Sep 82 pp 16-17

[Interview with DC Secretary Ciriaco de Mita by Fabrizio Coisson in Rome; date not given]

[Excerpt] Question: And so how do you view the PCI?

Answer: I believe that the yardstick for the PCI's evolution is not so much a shrewd ideological abjuration but rather its involvement in a process of institutional renewal. which is not merely institutional engineering but above all a cultural choice: It is tolerance; it is a measure of consensus; it is emancipation from preconceived truths. Accepting this institutional process means an objective rejection of dogmas.

Question: And translated into political terms?

Answer: It is the essential condition -- the only real condition -- for realizing a government culture and hence for developing that "complete democracy" which will lead to government alternatives.

Question: But do you believe that the PCI is prepared for this kind of development?

Answer: The proposal of the alternative would appear to embark upon this path. But there is still some improvization, some pointless arrogance, in the PCI's attempt to always justify everything without explaining its own choices and admitting its own mistakes.

Question: However, the PCI's line seems tied to a kind of exchange of "K factors" [orginial "K factor" -- PCI's alleged subservience to Moscow "kommunizm" -- was used to argue PCI's ineligibility to join government]: You, the DC, have so far excluded us from the government; now we intend to exclude you....

Answer: This line in itself serves to demonstrate the weakness of certain PCI arguments. When Natta says in the Chamber that the PCI is an alternative to the DC, he is in fact setting out an agreement to exclude the DC from the exercise of power. And in my opinion, he does this precisely in order to uphold and make people understand the PCI's strategy. But if that is how it is, the PCI cannot then theorize that the current system's shortcomings are due to the DC's parallel agreement to rule out a government agreement with the PCI.

Question: So where does the solution lie?

Answer: The problem is how to regenerate the power structures with a contribution from all forces, so that they can then be legitimized to alternate in the leadership of these renewed institutions. If we allow the subject to degenerate to the level of a mere slogan or expedient, we will lose the only opportunity to discuss the crisis seriously and in a manner untainted by the following two defects: Nostalgia for a past that no longer exists or the desire for a future that we are incapable of building.

Question: This is similar to [PSI Secretary] Craxi's dilemma: another center-left or an alternative....

Answer: This new pointer from Craxi deserves a thorough analysis on the political planes. One must proceed from the political situation as it actually is: At present I see no possibility of majorities other than the existing one. But this majority has a raison d'etre if it assumes responsibility for the future of our democratic life as well, that is, if it builds the conditions for a transition from a blocked democracy to a complete democracy. If this is the nature of what is called the "socialist ambiguity," then we agree with it.

Question: Even if it were to bring the DC into the opposition?

Answer: None of us imagines that when this process has developed the alternative cannot be realized by Communists and Socialists together. Nor do I believe that it will mean the defeat of the DC. In any case, the DC's transition to the opposition within a consolidated democratic system will mark the historic victory of the Christian Democrats in Italy.

UCD'S LAVILLA ADDRESSES PARTY CONVENTION

PM:71139 Madrid YA in Spanish 12 Sep 82 p 6

[Text] [UCD Chairman] Landelino Lavilla delivered his speech [at 11 September UCD national convention in Madrid] in a fervent and powerful tone with electioneering characteristics, which drew ovations from the audience. Among other things, the centrist chairman said:

-- We have no right to disappoint and abandon the thousands of voters who placed their trust in us. We have expressed in a party the tradition of liberality, dialogue and understanding which had not hitherto been manifested in Spain embodied in this way.

-- The Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] is different from the right and the left. We made an offer of a new state, and the people responded to us, to everybody's amazement. That transformation will enable us to continue to stand firmly on Spanish reality, with a better claim than other parties on our right and our left.

-- We also played a leading role in establishing harmony, and -- what is more important -- we have made that harmony a reality. Now it seems normal, but this was not foreseeable at that time. We have been the magnetizers of the other political forces.

-- Those who deny that the UCD is the party with the best chance are mistaken, because it is the UCD which is in tune with the Spanish people's enthusiasm. It is not true that the UCD's role is finished, because the longing for understanding among the Spanish people is not finished and because the dilemma of voting either for a conservative right or a still-utopian and immature left is not accepted. The Spanish people know that crushing centrism means crushing the Spanish people's chance for coexistence.

-- Those who are shooting at us from outside are not entitled to say that we are committing suicide. The desertions and disloyalties which have occurred in the UCD were desertions from the disloyalties to the center political blueprint. Those who have helped create the party's problems are no longer entitled to criticize us, because they view us not as something of their own which must be preserved but as something alien which must be destroyed.

Neither Natural Majority Nor Majority for Change

-- We must now make a new offer for a new society. The natural majority as hypothesized by the right is nonexistent in Spain. If we joined in that operation we would be betraying ourselves.

-- It is Fraga [Popular Alliance leader], who in the past upheld a center option, who has changed, aligning himself now with right. We are different from the right because we are not prepared to maintain a number of things from the past. We are not prepared to reform the Constitution or to restore the death penalty, even for the most abominable crimes. We do not like conservative demagogy.

-- We are not, under any circumstances -- nor will anybody be able to convert us into -- preservers of injustices or forms of discrimination.

-- The majority for change is unattainable on the basis of socialism, because the Spanish people do not want a total change or a transformation of society, but a reformist change of that society which precisely the UCD can carry out. The peoples who have advanced most in Spain are those who have been governed from the center, far from revolutionary creeds and ideologies.

-- The UCD has two great political priorities: the struggle against unemployment and the struggle for the rule of law. We must bring all the political and social forces to an agreement to make them join in the unemployment struggle. We believe in the spontaneity of private enterprise, and we must make this very clear.

-- The solutions to unemployment come through private and public investment, which creates new jobs.

-- The rule of law is an important issue in a democratic society. Law in a democracy should have greater social and moral force to obligate through being legitimized by citizens' free votes.

Convincing French Socialist Government

-- Considerable progress has been made recently in the struggle against terrorism and against common crime. A great deal of work has been done in this field. Tribute must be paid to the state security corps for the tireless work which they have performed. The penal code must be reformed and justice improved.

-- The struggle against terrorism must be included as one of the priorities of our foreign policy: coordinating the European nations' [action] against terrorism, and, very especially, convincing the French Socialist Government that the right of asylum must not protect those who attack our democratic system with goma 2 explosives and submachineguns.

-- I must now refer here to the issue of divorce, which the Popular Alliance is still brandishing as a flag of attack against us. Our election program in 1979 proposed the existence of a law which would make divorce possible, but with protection for family stability for political reasons.

There is a majority of believers who are not prepared to place their faith and their religious convictions at the service of political operations. There is a majority of believers who do not need their consciences protected.

-- The UCD will consolidate the process of the autonomies, but without seeking to revise Spain's history. The autonomies entail not revising history but safeguarding the personality and ethnic characteristics of each Spanish region or nationality.

-- Let nobody expect participation in a coalition government unless it is because the governability of the state requires it. We are not prepared to lose our identity through a bad pragmatism.

-- Spain is not socialist; we must break with that image of resignation which seems to proclaim a socialist triumph. Spain will support a proposal of change.

-- The strongest authority is democracy, which can make it constantly clear that its decisions are supported by the majority of the Spanish people. The electorate's faith has weakened when it has seen a possible weakening of the UCD in its own faith. This is what we must reaffirm.

RIGHTWING PARTIES SIGN ELECTION COALITION PACT

PM171447 Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 14 Sep 82 p 21

[Excerpt] There will not be sufficient champagne to celebrate the Popular Alliance's triumph on the evening of 28 October," an exultant Manuel Fraga said yesterday at the end of the signing of the rightwing coalition composed of the Popular Alliance itself, Oscar Alzaga's Popular Democratic Party [PDP] -- which defines itself as centrists -- the Aragonese Regionalist Party, the Valencian Union and the Union of the Navarrese People.

After a lengthy hug with Fraga in the presence of some 100 Popular Alliance and PDP members, Alzaga once more expressed regret at not having been able to include the Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] in the coalition: "The UCD has chosen the path of consolidation through meetings and not by seeking convergences," he said, in a clear allusion to the UCD convention and to Landelino Lavilla's speech at it. The PDP, which last weekend received the entry of hitherto Minister of Agriculture Jose Luis Alvarez, yesterday enlisted Senator for Palencia Guerra Zunzunegui.

POLL ON ELECTION VOTING INTENTIONS REPORTED

PM171437 Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 14 Sep 82 pp 16-18

[Excerpt] Some 80 percent of the people who voted for the Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] in 1979 do not intend to repeat their vote in the coming general election according to the data in the first of a number of opinion polls commissioned by the Center for Political Research and Techniques (CITEP) for a political panel called Report-2. In mid-August, when the questioning of the sample took place, 5.6 percent intended to vote for the UCD, 33.5 percent for the Spanish Socialist Workers Party, 7.8 percent for the Popular Alliance, 3.7 percent for the PCE and 1.7 percent for the Democratic and Social Center.

Together with the overwhelming loss of its voters, the study demonstrates that the UCD is receiving scarcely any new voters -- only 1.7 percent of the abstentionists, voters for other parties and so forth -- and that adding this percentage to the core loyal to the UCD (which represents 3.93 percent of the total of the sample questioned) shows a definite vote for this party of 5.6 percent of the electorate. The study also reveals a leadership even weaker than the voting intentions and very slender prospects of the UCD winning votes in the "potential reserves" comprised by citizens who have not yet made their political choice.

MILITARY CREDIT AGREEMENT SIGNED IN WASHINGTON

LD181742 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1300 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Text] The Governments of Spain and the United States have signed an agreement in Washington by which the United States will grant the Spanish Armed Forces a loan of $125 million to acquire U.S. military equipment. According to diplomatic sources in our country, the agreement falls within the budget of the U.S. fiscal year 1982 which ends on 1 October and which concludes the series of annual agreements of this kind which the two governments have signed within the framework of the previous bilateral treaty.

SWEDEN

SOCIAL DEMOCRATS GAIN MAJORITY IN ELECTION VOTE

LD192308 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 2224 GMT 19 Sep 82

[Summary] With votes in 349 of a total of 362 municipal districts counted, the situation with regard to votes and seats gained by the parties is as follows:

	PERCENT
Moderate Unity Party	23.2
Center Party	15.7
Liberal Party	6.0
Social Democrats	46.1
Party of the Left (Communists)	5.5
Environment Party	1.6
Christian Democratic Assembly	1.9

The Socialists thus have 187 seats and the non-Socialists 162 seats.

Further Report

LD192346 Stockholm International Service in English 2300 GMT 19 Sep 82

[Excerpts] Sweden is to have a new government. In Sunday's general elections the opposition leftist bloc received 52 percent of the vote. The Center-Liberal coalition and (?their) Conservative ally received only 45 percent of the ballot cast. The country's largest party, the Social Democrats, will have 166 [as heard] seats in the new parliament. Their Communist ally should have 20 seats, and the total 186 [as heard] against just 163 for three center-right parties. The big losers in the election are the Center Party and the Liberals. The Center has dropped almost 3 percent in voters' support since the last elections 3 years ago while the Liberals have lost more than 4 percent. The Conservatives have gained 3 percent.

More than 6 million Swedes over the age of 18 were entitled to vote in Sunday's parliamentary and county council elections. Eighty-nine percent of those entitled to vote cast their ballots in Sunday's elections. That's the lowest figure here in Sweden in 10 years.

Falldin Government Resigns

NC200950 Paris AFP in English 0935 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Text] Stockholm, Sept. 20 (AFP) -- Swedish Prime Minister Thorbjorn Falldin resigned with his government today following the parliamentary election victory won by Olof Palme, leader of the Social Democratics, with a comfortable majority.

Mr Falldin will continue in his post as caretaker premier until the new government is formed "in a few weeks time."

The newly elected parliament will hold its first session on October 4, and Mr Palme will formally become prime minister on October 8. Mr Palme was prime minister from 1969 until his defeat by a conservative coalition in 1976.

He will have the support of 186 votes in the 349-seat Riksdag (parliament) -- 166 Social Democrats and 20 Communists who traditionally support their ally without asking for a cabinet post.

KIPRIANOU DENOUNCES ISRAELI AGGRESSION IN BEIRUT

NC191715 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1500 GMT 19 Sep 82

[Text] Cyprus has unreservedly condemned Israel's new aggression against Lebanon and the inhuman slaughter of Palestinian women and children and aged refugees in west Beirut.

In a statement, President of the Republic Kiprianou has stressed that the violation of the truce and cease-fire line of 15 September in Beirut by Israel, in conjunction with the contempt it manifests for the verdict of all humanity against its aggressive activities, constitute an unprecedented crime that must be dealt with determinedly by the United Nations through the Security Council. Cyprus, adds the statement by the president, reaffirms its support of the oppressed Palestinian people, expresses its revulsion at the new Israeli crime against Palestinian women and children and aged refugees and asks for the immediate withdrawal of the Israeli troops from Lebanon so that its independence and territorial integrity, which are being violated by the Israeli aggression and the Israeli crimes against the Palestinian refugees and the Lebanese people, can be guaranteed.

AKEL Condemns Invasion

NC171711 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Text] AKEL issued a statement today strongly condemning the Israeli invasion of west Beirut. The statement stresses that an end must be put to the genocide of the Lebanese and Palestinian peoples. The statement also says that the Israeli troops must immediately withdraw from Lebanese territory and stresses that the United Nations must act immediately.

SPOKESMAN ON GREEK-OWNED PROPERTY IN NORTH

NC171434 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1030 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Text] The government spokesman was asked to state what the Cyprus Government has done or intends to do in order to effectively deal with the activities of the Denktas administration that aim at legalizing and issuing certificates of permanent ownership of Greek-owned property to Turkish Cypriots. The spokesman answered as follows:

Immediately after the intentions of the Denktas administration were demonstrated in connection with the legalization and the distribution of Greek-owned properties, the Cyprus Government studied the whole question persistently and decided that at this stage the following should be done:

1. To place the whole question before the Human Rights Commission European committee which will shortly meet in Strasbourg. As is already known, the Cyprus Government's third appeal against Turkey on the violation of human rights in Cyprus has been pending before the committee.

2. To seek the Greek Government's cooperation and support for Cyprus' appeal.

3. To have the Cypriot diplomatic missions provide greater enlightenment about the activities of the Denktas administration and the serious implications of these activities.

AKEL QUESTIONS GOVERNMENT ON 'NEW ANOMALY'

NC190737 Nicosia KHARAVYI in Greek 19 Sep 82 p 1

[Text] Ezekias Papaioannou, the AKEL-leftwing parliamentary spokesman, has submitted to the House of Representatives the following question:

"The abominable murder of Vrionis Yiannaka, a democratic figure of Kilani village, by A. Moustakas, an EOKA B member, and the fact that the murderer has been hiding and has so far not been arrested, affirm the soundness of the AKEL charges about new planes for anomaly in the country.

"In view of the fact that part of the extreme rightwing press has been showing concern not so much for the danger from anomaly but for the fact that such charges have been made, the competent ministry is asked to brief the House of Representatives on the following:

"A) What measures are being taken for the arrest and the exemplary punishment of A. Moustakas?

"B) What measures are being taken to recover all of the illegally held weapons and to decisively stamp out the criminal plans for a new anomaly?"

ROMANIAN MILITARY DELEGATION ENDS VISIT

NC171830 Nicosia Domestic Television Service in Greek 1730 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Text] The Romanian military delegation left today at the end of a 5-day official visit to Cyprus. Head of the delegation, General Milea, first deputy defense minister and chief of the Romanian Armed Forces General Staff, expressed his satisfaction with the welcome and hospitality accorded the delegation in Cyprus. He said: This visit will undoubtedly contribute to the further strengthening of friendly relations between the two countries. A National Guard detachment presented arms during the delegation's departure at Larnaca Airport.

General Milea has invited Defense Minister Veniamin to pay an official visit to Romania. Mr. Veniamin has accepted the invitation. Bidding the delegation farewell, he said that the delegation's visit has undoubtedly contributed to the further strengthening of friendly relations between the two countries.

In addition to Mr Veniamin, the delegation was also seen off by Romanian Charge d'Affaires Alexie, Cypriot Ambassador in Bucharest Khatzimiltis, National Guard Commander General Papanayiotou, National Guard Deputy Commander Major General Azinas and other officials.

EDUCATION MINISTER KILLED IN TRAFFIC ACCIDENT

NC180619 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 0430 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Last night Education Minister Panos Ioannou was killed in a traffic accident; two others were also killed. According to the police report, at around 2230 the minister's car, driven by Gendarme Petros Yeoryiou from Nicosia with Education Minister Ioannou and his wife, Chloi, as passengers, collided with an oncoming car on the Kokkini Trimithia-Ayios Trimithia Road. The report states that the minister as well as the driver of the other car, Ioannis Theofanous, 26 years old, from Paleometokho, and his passenger, Theofanis Savvas, 21, also from Paleometokho, were killed. The minister's wife and driver were seriously injured.

PAPANDREOU ASKS MIDEAST SECURITY COUNCIL MEETING

NC182024 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1830 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Text] As soon as Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou was informed about the new horrible crime of the massacre of noncombatant Palestinians at the Beirut camps he instructed our UN Delegate Dhoundhas to ask for an emergency session of the Security Council to deal with the question of confronting the new situation, which creates a direct danger of war in the Middle East. According to the Greek action, the Security Council is also called upon to condemn this new criminal genocide and to immediately send a UN multinational force in order to implement the resolutions of the Security Council and the agreement on the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon.

DAILY SUSPECTS FOREIGN MINISTER TO BE REPLACED

[Excerpts] Deputy Foreign Minister I. Kapsis will substitute for Foreign Minister I. Kharalambopoulos at the European Community's foreign minister conference to be held on Monday in Brussels. According to press reports, the Foreign Ministry sent a message to this effect yesterday. This event has been noted by government and diplomatic circles, because until now Mr Kapsis has not dealt, at least officially, with Community matters: As a rule, any time Mr Kharalambopoulos was faced with a obstacle, he was replaced by Deputy Foreign Minister Gr. Varthis, who is the minister responsible for Common Market issues.

Mr Kharalambopoulos did not participate in yesterday's cabinet meeting. His office reports that he will be absent until Monday. According to the same reports, Mr Kharalambopoulos did not go to his office the day before yesterday either, and it is rumored that he is slightly ill. It has been rumored among government circles that Mr Kapsis would replace Mr Kharalambopoulos as minister and that he would probably be used in another post, possibly as deputy prime minister. These reports, which are difficult to verify because of their nature, have given rise to various comments among government circles, who consider them to be a small reshuffle, particularly with the removal from such a key position of a person who has been enjoying Prime Minister Papandreou's trust since the beginning of his political career.

Diplomatic circles note more Mr Kapsis' temporary replacement of Mr Kharalambopoulos at the EEC foreign ministers conference. It is particularly noted that this meeting will involve the most serious issues occupying Europe today, as it will be the first meeting of the 10 foreign ministers since the summer recess.

Diplomatic circles also comment on the fact that the issues to be discussed are not in Mr Kapsis' area, but in the area of his counterpart, K. Papoulias, who is also in charge of the section of relations with the Arab world and Eastern Europe. Moreover, this meeting of the 10 foreign ministers will also include discussion of the Greek proposal to issue a joint resolution on the Lebanese crisis and the Palestinian problem.

On this issue, the Greek delegation will have to expound on its arguments and, naturally, refer to the meeting between the prime minister and PLO leader 'Arafat during the latter's recent visit to Athens. However, the talks with 'Arafat were held by Mr Popoulias, who also attended the prime minister's meeting with 'Arafat.

Papandreou Denial

NC171941 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1700 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Text] Prime Minister Papandreou made the following statement today: Rumors that Foreign Minister Kharalambopoulos, who is an elite member of the government, is to be replaced are devoid of any seriousness. Mr Kharalambopoulos is a personal friend of mine and enjoys my respect, that of the government and of the movement [PASOK]. On the other hand, the motives for such rumor mongering are very serious -- at a time when Mr Kharalambopoulos is to represent Greece at the United Nations and to have talks with his Turkish counterpart, Mr Turkmen -- and all attacks on Mr Kharalambopoulos constitute an undermining of our government's national foreign policy.

The prime minister stressed that other rumormongering in reference to our foreign policy, which is a proud Greek political position, also falls within the framework of national undermining.

KKE LEADER FLORAKIS CRITICIZES GOVERNMENT

NC192104 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1800 GMT 19 Sep 82

[Text] Speaking tonight at the Greek Communist Youth festival in Peristerion [Athens suburb], KKE Secretary General Kharilaos Florakis outlined his party's positions on domestic and international issues. The KKE secretary general maintained that only a democratic government -- which would be based on all the forces of the change and would have behind it a robust, uniting, mass and popular movement -- could really accomplish its targets.

At the same time, Florakis criticized the government by maintaining that, despite certain changes it has brought about, it is not advancing on the road to true change. He added that the forces of change are many and strong and that the struggle will certainly be vindicated.

The KKE secretary general also stressed the necessity to hit at the privilges of big capital so that evil may be hit at its roots by erecting a barrier to the predatoriness of monopolies.

NEW DEMOCRACY'S AVEROF VIEWS GOVERNMENT POLICIES

NC192149 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 2100 GMT 19 Sep 82

[Text] In a speech he made this evening at the Democracy Festival 1982, organized by the youth organization of the New Democracy Party in Thessaloniki, New Democracy Chairman Evengelos Averof criticized the government because, although it had declared that the people would climb to power together with PASOK, only the PASOK party machine has climbed to power.

Averof also criticized the government for its antismog policy, the bad course of the economy, the upheaval in justice and higher education and the factionalization in trade unionism. The New Democracy chairman also said that the radio and television media have become the agents of party propaganda and, in fact, of the left.

Referring to rumors that he intends to withdraw from the New Democracy leadership, Averof said that these are government fabrications and that soldiers, especially officers, never abandon a battle while it is being waged. After he announced a program for dealing with youth problems, especially the problem of employment, Averof expressed the opinion that the time is near when the golden Greek sun will rise to shed light on the quick march of the blue generation [referring to New Democracy Party colors].

In reply to a question on whether he wanted to comment on Averof's speech, the government spokesman stated: I do not think that there can be a reply to Averof's speech. Averof seems to be living in an imaginary world, a world he has constructed with his imagination and in which he has set for himself the role of officer.

SPOKESMAN DENIES LEAKING STATE SECRETS TO PRESS

NC191835 Athens ATHENS NEWS in English 19 Sep 82 p 4

[Text] Press Undersecretary Dhimitrios Maroudhas yesterday discarded the possibility that sensitive information might have been leaked during his daily briefing of political reporters.

"Under no circumstances," Maroudhas said, are there any national secrets disclosed in any form during the daily briefing of political reporters. Besides, I am not myself authorized to have knowledge of such information".

Maroudhas' statement referred to the controversy that developed over the story in the pro-government evening tabloid "THNOS" earlier this week. The paper, in a front page banner headlined story, had charged that comments made off the record by Maroudhas during the daily briefings were often reported by foreign correspondents to foreign embassies and the wire services, with possible harmful effects to foreign policy.

The Foreign Press Association Friday protested the implication that some foreign correspondents might be working against the country's interests, and Maroudhas in earlier statements had defended the record of foreign newsmen, recalling in particular their vital role in providing world public opinion with accurate information about Greece during the 1967-74 military dictatorship.

IRAN-EUROPE GAS PIPELINE TO STOP IN TURKEY

NC171647 Athens AKROPOLIS in Greek 17 Sep 82 p 8

[Text] The visit to Athens of a U.S. businessman, who wanted to contact Greek officials to propose to them that the Iran-West Europe natural gas pipeline, which will run through Turkey and end in West Europe, should also pass through Greece, has been cancelled.

The government cancelled the visit by having its representative directly contact the U.S. businessman to advise him not to come to Greece. Thus, the businessman, named Zarb, in turn informed the U.S. Embassy in Athens that he has abandoned his intention to talk with Greek officials. Mr Zarb intended to meet with Mr Kouloumbis, minister of energy and natural resources.

Additional information states that the private investment bank, which Mr Zarb represents, is very closely connected with a French company dealing with the exploitation and transportation of natural gas.

A group from the French company and the investment bank have already decided that the pipeline from Iran will end in Turkey, from where the natural gas will be transported by ship to West Europe.

BRIEFS

EXPORTS -- Greek exports during the first 6 months of 1982 showed a 26 percent increase. TURKMEN: ISRAEL RESPONSIBLE FOR BEIRUT MASSACRE

TA191532 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1525 GMT 19 Sep 82

[Text] Ankara, 19 Sep (AA) -- As far as Turkey is concerned, Israel is the primary responsible party in the Beirut massacre, when armed thugs killed hundreds of women, children and men in Palestinian refugee camps, Turkish Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen said Sunday.

In a strongly-worded statement, the minister condemned the brutal massacre of armed civilians in west Beirut, which was invaded by Israeli forces early this week.

(In Israel, hundreds of demonstrators chanted "Begin, murderer" while they also condemned the killings).

Noting that Turkey was shocked and terror-stricken when word was received about the brutal killings of Palestinians, Mr Turkmen said Israel would assume responsibility for the massacre as it first invaded the city and then violated all the agreements and her obligations concerning the evacuation (of the Palestinian fighters).

He said peace had to be restored in Lebanon withoutviolating the independence, sovereignty and the territorial integrity of that country. Turkey, as a first step demands the full evacuation of Israeli forces from west Beirut and believes that the formation and the early dispatch of an international force is necessary. Turkey expected the United Nations to take immediate and effective steps in this direction.

Mr Turkmen said Turkey was following the latest developments with deep concern as she was a regional power and these developments posed a serious threat to peace and stability in the Middle East.

EVREN SPEAKS ON CURRENT SECURITY SITUATION

TA181345 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Speech by Head of State Gen Kenan Evren addressing the public in Tokat; 18 Sep -- recorded]

[Excerpts] As you know, last year I visited Pakistan. During my visit, I toured the refugee camps of some 2.5 million refugees. Among them there were refugees of Turkish origin. There were refugees who had previously applied to come to Turkey. But, their applications had not yet been processed. When I saw their living conditions I felt pity and gave the necessary order for them to brought to Turkey. As you know, they came to Turkey and you, the citizens of Tokat, requested that some of these refugees be settled here. We were very pleased with your noble act. We intended to come here as an expression of our gartitude and to see their places of settlement. We took this opportunity to come to Tokat. A while ago I saw their places of settlement and conversed with them. In the afternoon I will go to [name of place indistinct] and see them. I am here now before you on this occasion and I sincerely thank you for your manifestations of love.

My Dear Citizens, a week ago, last Sunday, the second anniversary of the 12 September operation was marked. We began the third year in an atmosphere of tranquillity, peace and security. In speeches I delivered in various parts of the country after the 12 September operation, I stated that our first and foremost task consists of providing security for all our citizens -- young, old, male or female -- who have for years suffered day and night from the lack of security of life in their homes, in the streets, in their places of work and in the schools. This is why, at every opportunity, we mentioned that we must struggle together as a nation against the anarchists and terrorists who created this lack of security, formed various organizations among themselves and who for the most part enjoyed support from outside, and asked for your help.

You will remember this. Thanks to the relentless work of our security forces and military units as well as the great help of our self-sacrificing citizens, who do not want this country to be surrendered into dirty hands and whose hearts are filled with patriotism, in a short time we led our Turkey into an atmosphere of comfort, tranquillity and peace.

One cannot talk about anarchy and terrorism in Turkey today. One cannot say that there is anarchy and terrorism in Turkey. However, every now and then one encounters the local lackeys of foreign forces who attempt to rebel again or reestablish those obscure organizations. Sometimes you hear of these on the radio, television or in the press. However, these people are caught and turned over to the judiciary before gaining strength.

My Dear Citizens, there are 7,400 suspects currently at large and being sought inside or outside the country. I wanted to inform you about this as well. The number is decreasing, however 7,400 of them are still at large. I want all my citizens to know this. In other words, all is not finished. Actually, in all my speeches I point out that under the current world circumstances it is impossible to entirely eliminate anarchy and terrorism and that this struggle must be waged continuously. I mentioned this in several of my speeches. Such incidents will always occur, but the struggle must not be relaxed and vigilance must be maintained at all times. If the administration and our people are alert, then the struggle with these elements will be easy.

Now, I would like to give you figures comparing the incidents -- not anarchic incidents, but all petty crimes -- that occurred in Turkey during 1981 with the incidents that occurred in another Western country, whose population may be greater than ours. The number of [word indistinct] crimes committed in that country during the course of 1 year is 20,678; the corresponding number for Turkey is 1,593. The daily average for that country is 57; for Turkey it is 4. The number of robberies that take place during 1 year in that country is 458,741; in our country it is 907. The daily average there is 1,250; 3 to 4 in Turkey. Burglaries during the course of year in that country exceed 6 million; in Turkey the number is 22,000. There, 17,270 burglaries occur every day; in Turkey there are 60 cases of burglary on a daily basis. These figures for Turkey do not include anarchic incidents, but are petty crimes.

As you can see, My Dear Citizens, following the fact that these incidents have greatly decreased in Turkey and the negligible nature of the figures I supplied, certain circles seem -- consciously or unconsciously -- to have forgotten the situation prior to 12 September. We also witness that these persons want to act as if a normal order has been restored and everything has been resolved. A week ago, incidents that occurred before 12 September were briefly screened on the television. Many of you may have watched this. What was shown on television is what the television cameras were able to register by chance. What about everything throughout the country that was not registered by the cameras? I know that certain circles are disturbed by the fact that these incidents are shown on television again. However, no matter how disturbing they are, in order to prevent this nation, which suffered great pain, from experiencing those dark days ever again, these screenings must be repeated from time to time so that lessons are learned, and if the perpetrators have any feelings of shame, then let them be ashamed.

These bitter and dark days were experienced here in Tokat as well. Here, too, they divided you into two or three groups by exploiting citizens' religious beliefs. They created strife among these groups and caused the bloodshed of our citizens in vain. Moreover, an incident such as occurred in Maras or Corum was barely avoided. We know this and you know it as well. Those who wanted to take advantage of the citizens' religious beliefs gathered part of the citizens under the aegis of a party. Such persons who want to exploit the religious beliefs of the citizens can emerge in the future as well. In the new constitution we will establish measures necessary to prevent such occurrences, however, they may again make such (?obscure) moves through other means that we have not thought of. In such a case, great tasks will fall on you in this matter. It is you who will deny them this opportunity. If you are alert you will not be deceived by their schemes.

Those who prepare the constitution and the laws cannot block every loophole. Ill-intentioned people are so numerous that they will find the loopholes in the laws or they will act through illegal means. You must be aware of these cases and give them the necessary answer they deserve.

My Dear Citizens, this is all I have to say on the subject of anarchy and terrorism. Now, I am proceeding to a second subject. In my speeches after 12 September I noted that the second most important matter before us is the recovery of the economy, which deteriorated because of an inflation rate of over 100 percent. There are also people who quickly forget those days. Or, there are people who long for their unjust and exaggerated profits of those days; for goods whose prices increased daily, not only weekly or monthly; for shortages of gasoline, cigarettes -- although produced locally -- light bulbs, cooking oil, salt, rice, coal and even tea, which is produced in our country but could not be transported due to the shortage of gasoline, and coffee, whose taste we forgot. Shall I mention more? How quickly they forgot all this. There are people who did not forget, however there are also people who are trying to make us forget.

The government devised a program in a bid to save the country from this situation created by high inflation rates and a foreign currency bottleneck. It followed this program with care. The most important aim was to curb inflation, reduce the rate of inflation. To this end, the government stressed measures to prevent the printing of money by the Central Bank without collateral and enacted new tax laws. These measures would inevitably be accompanied by certain difficulties, and they were. It was impossible to (?attain recovery) without enduring and overcoming these difficulties.

However, those who were opposed to this administration from the beginning continuously spread false rumors and disrupted things with ulterior motives in order to wear down the government and the administration.

They took advantage of the issue of brokers. There were even those who rejoiced at the bankruptcy of a large brokerage firm. They claimed that the bankruptcy would lead to the destruction of the administration. As you can see, the administration has not been destroyed. If a state is to go under with the bankruptcy of a single broker firm then that state is not a state. Then that state cannot be called a state but rather [word indistinct].

The government took all the necessary measures as soon as possible and put up with various difficulties in order not to cause losses to the citizens. The government did not behave in a way similar to reactions seen in many developed and industrialized countries where such incidents occur very frequently. The government did not say to the citizens as in those countries: Do whatever you have to. Did you consult me while investing your money?

You must be reading the dailies. In many Western countries, industrialized and rich countries, such brokers, banks, large firms and establishments are going bankrupt daily. The world is going through an economic crisis. However, this government, as I have already pointed out, did not leave the citizens alone to cope with the problem. It took all the necessary measures to minimize the damages caused to the citizens. The government is still doing all in its power on the issue. We have brought a certain order to the activities of these establishments, namely brokerage firms and others.

My Dear Citizens, an economic crisis cannot be overcome in a short time. Many measures have been taken to overcome this crisis. Had this crisis been only in Turkey then it would not be a problem. However, the whole world is suffering. Therefore, there are many who are taking advantage of this issue as well. They claim that the peasants' produce is being taken but the peasants are not being paid.

Furthermore, there are those who from time to time spread the rumor that the government will be changed and that the prime minister will be (?replaced). They are spreading these rumors with ulterior motives. Have I not been telling you that these persons spread lies because they are machines of lies and falsehood, because they are made of lies and wickedness?

Hav I not been telling you this all along? Here is the proof. You can see that our prime minister is next to me. All these rumors are lies and concoctions. Do not, I repeat, do not believe these lies. In the past as well, just after the 12 September operation, they [words indistinct]. Did they not try in vain to create discord among the Security Council members by claiming that the council members were in disagreement? The whole nation (?is a witness) that we did not fall into the trap of such intrigues. We knew well that such people would resort to all sorts of tricks and (?dangers). All the allegations spread are lies. We are performing our duties with a unity of mind and soul. Believe me, Dear Citizens, if the concoctions created by these people prove to be right, they will be overjoyed. They could not care less about the fact that the country would be destroyed, the nation divided. If, let us suppose, we do fight among ourselves, they will rejoice. We will advise them busy themselves for a while more with these sweet dreams which they wish would come true. Because, after a while these sweet illusions will disappear, as though they were the result of wine, and the world will crash down on them.

My Dear Citizens, I have not referred to the issue of the constitution. The time will come for this issue as well. I will talk about it as well, I will talk a lot when the time comes.

ACTING HEAD OF STATE DURING EVREN ABSENCE NAMED

TA181619 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1600 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Text] Ankara, Sep 18 (AA) -- General Nurettin Ersin, a member of the National Security Council and commander in chief of the Turkish Land Forces will act as the head of state during Head of State General Kenan Evren's 4-day visit to Yugoslavia next week.

A statement to this effect from the office of the head of state was submitted to the Consultative Assembly Saturday.

ARTICLE ADOPTED ON DUTIES, POWERS OF PRESIDENT

TA171202 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Excerpt] The Consultative Assembly has concluded the debate on the articles of the draft constitution which have been redrafted by the committee. The provisional articles of the draft constitution will be submitted to the Assembly tomorrow afternoon.

Article 113, which was adopted at the Assembly this morning, defines the duties and powers of the president. Stating that the president is the chief of state and that in this capacity he represents the Republic of Turkey and the unity of the nation, the article further defines the duties and powers of the president.

According to the article, the Turkish Grand National Assembly will open on 1 September each year with the address of the president. The president, when necessary, will be able to call the Assembly to a meeting and will be able to send bills back for rediscussion. He will be able to file suits of nullity at the Constitutional Court. The president, who will be able to ask that the nullity decisions made by the Constitutional Court be reexamined, will also be able to request that the elections be postponed. He will also be able to decide that the elections be renewed.

The president will appoint the prime minister and accept his resignation. The article further stipulates that appointing the ministers and dismissing them, on the suggestion of the prime minister, and when necessary calling the cabinet to a meeting under his own chairmanship, are among the duties and powers of the president.

Deciding on the use of the Turkish Armed Forces, appointing the chief of the General Staff and declaring a state of emergency together with the cabinet are also among the duties and powers of the president.

The article also empowers the president to decide on the execution of death sentences or commuting them to life imprisonment based on the power of special amnesty.

The president will also choose members of the Constitutional Court, one fourth of the members of the State Council, the chief public prosecutor and his deputy, members of the Supreme Court of Military Appeals and of the High Military Administrative Court, members of the High Council of Judges and Prosecutors, university rectors and the heads of the Turkish Central Bank and the religious affairs office. Furthermore, he will appoint the head and members of the State Inspection Council, the director general of Turkish Radio and Television and its three Administrative Council members.

According to Article 114, which was adopted today, the president will not be responsible for his activities in connection with his duties. The prime minister and the ministers concerned will be responsible for the president's decisions which are to be signed by the prime minister and the ministers concerned. The article also notes the decisions to be signed by the president alone.

Provisional Articles

[Text] Ankara, Sep 18 (AA) -- General Kenan Evren, Turkey's head of state will be proclaimed the president of the Turkish Republic the day Turkey's new constitution is approved by popular vote next November, the provisional articles of the constitution draft says.

These articles were made public Saturday by the drafting committee, which is headed by Professor Orhan Aldikacti. One new clause says that General Evren will retain his twin titles of the chairman of the National Security Council and the chief of General Staff until general elections are held. Once the new Turkish Grand National Assembly convenes and elects its presiding officers, the present National Security Council will transform itself into a republican council, and will hold office until the end of the president's 7-year tenure of office.

According to provisional Article 2, the new president's 7-year term of office will start the day the new constitution is approved in a national referendum.

Provisional Article 3 says that the republican council will be composed of the members of the National Security Council. These members will enjoy the same immunity as those enjoyed by the members of the new Turkish parliament.

The republican council will study specific laws sent to the president for his seal of approval, will study matters pertaining to general elections, declaration of an emergency, management of the Turkish Radio and Television, problems of the youth and rearrangement of religious affairs, shall take undertakings in internal and external security matters and will be briefed by the Council of Ministers of specific issues, either in writing or verbally.

Article 4 says that with the adoption of the new constitution previous laws on the constitutional arrangement, on the National Security Council and on the Consultative Assembly will be declared null and void. Thus the legal entity of the council and the Assembly will be terminated.

Articles Adopted

[Excerpt] The Consultative Assembly has discussed and adopted the provisional articles of the draft constitution.

According to the 12 provisional articles, the head of the National Security Council and head of state will become the president the day the draft constitution is approved by a referendum. The National Security Council will become the presidential council following the general elections. Concerning the general elections, the government in power will remain in office until the Council of Ministers is formed. The National Security Council, governments formed during the administration of the council and the Consultative Assembly will not be held penally, financially or legally responsible for their decisions made during the period between 12 September 1980 and the day the Turkish Grand National Assembly begins functioning. Those who have not voted in the referendum will not be able to participate in the first general and regional elections and will not be able to submit their candidacy.

According to another provisional article, the Council of Ministers will determine the year in which the provision of exempting the minimum wage from taxes will be implemented.

VOTCP Urges Rejection

TA191701 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 19 Sep 82

[Station commentary]

[Text] The Turkish Communist Party [TCP] is an ardent defender of a national democratic constitution. The TCP is opposed to the junta's constitution, called the 1982 constitution, because the junta's constitution is not a national democratic one; because the junta's constitution is one of dictatorship and slavery to imperialism; because the junta's constitution is giving the reins to the hands of the Reagan administration and NATO; and because the junta's constitution renders the national economy dependent on the outside world. It is opting for a dependent and crisis-ridden economy instead of a healthy and independent one.

A statement issued by the TCP Central Committee on 16 December 1981, expressed the party's views on what kind of a constitution should be prepared. The party stressed that it is the ardent defender of a national democratic constitution. The party statement said the following: The constitution should be based on national independence, should aim at rescuing the country from the chains of imperialism and NATO and should defend peace instead of war.

The desire for national independence unites on a single platform the large democratic forces in our country, military and civilian patriots and all the citizens suffering from the yoke of imperialism. The TCP, which is organized throughout Turkey and which is waging a political struggle, supports every step taken toward the defense of national independence against imperialism. The Communists are ready to accomplish the most difficult tasks awaiting our people on this path. Yes, the Turkish Communists are opposed to the junta's constitution because it does not protect national interests against imperialism. The Communists support the demand for a constitution that legally secures the country's economic and political independence. They support the demand for a constitution that secures cultural values, that enriches our people's traditions and that is closed to the American way of life, to rotten capitalist trends and to the exploitation of religion.

The TCP proposes a constitution that will guarantee the rescue of our country from the chain and yoke of imperialism and NATO. The armed forces should be rescued from the Reagan administration and the war-crazy NATO generals. The country's defense requirements should be met, not in accordance with the interests of U.S. imperialism, not in accordance with an attitude of sacrifice in the name of imperialism but in accordance with a national defense concept that takes into consideration our national security. NATO expenditures are destructive for the workers, peasants and all the citizens with the exception of a handful of collaborationists. An end should be put to these expenditures. U.S. and NATO nuclear depots and bases in Kars, Erzurum, Diyarbakir, Adana and other parts of Anatolia should be dismantled.

We want a constitution that will close all possibilities to the disputes U.S. imperialism wishes to provoke in our region. We support a constitution that will put an end to all the extraordinary rights granted to the Rapid Deployment Forces. An end should be put to the spy flights being carried out, many times without the knowledge of governments, from the U.S. and NATO bases in Turkey. The plan to deploy AWACS in Konya should be thwarted.

The TCP proposes a constitution that (?orders) the government to pursue a peaceful foreign policy calling for the purge of nuclear arms from our country and our region. Such a constitution should guarantee good relations with all neighbors. It should support all the peoples struggling for their national independence. It should stipulate solidarity with the Palestinian people and the peoples of Namibia and not with those who wish to stifle the people's desire for national independence, such as Israel and the United States. The TCP proposes a constitution that (?bases) relations with all countries on the principles of equality and mutual interests and not on chains of slavery and concessions to imperialism. The Communists propose such a constitution. The TCP struggles for the rejection of the Junta's constitution, the constitution of dictatorship and dependence on imperialism. It dauntlessly explains to the people that saying yes to the junta's constitution is tantamount to completely renouncing national independence, which is one of the most sacred values of any nation. The Turkish Communists support all those in favor of national independence. They call on all of them to say no to imperialism and to the constitution of dictatorship and to struggle for a national democratic constitution.

FOREIGN MINISTRY ON TURKISH-GREEK RELATIONS

[Text] Ankara, 17 Sep (AA) -- Foreign Ministry Spokesman Nazmi Akiman said if problems arising between Turkey and Greece damage bilateral relations seriously, there is proportionally more need for negotiations.

Akiman made the statement in response to queries from the press as to whether the scheduled meeting of the Turkish and Greek foreign ministers during the fall session of the NATO Council of Ministers to be held in Canada would be gone through with after the recent attack by Turkish political refugees on the Turkish military attache in Athens.

The Foreign Ministry spokesman pointed out Turkey had never set preconditions for the ministerial interview anyway, as her basic stand continued to be the settling of any disputes with other states through negotiations.

Hence it was normal for the Canada tete-a-tete, viewed as a preliminary contact anyway, to be held.

Akiman agreed there had been a verbal agreement between Turkey and Greece to create an atmosphere of goodwill and confidence between the two countries. The latest incident in Athens had extremely adverse effects, he noted, but added the Greek Government was also aware of this and had promised it would meet the reasonable and justified demands by Turkey, namely to bring the assaulters on the attache to justice and to prevent future demonstrations by Turkish fugitives from justice.

It was no use to debate at this moment whether the gentleman's agreement between Turkey and Greece was still in effect, as this verbal agreement was nothing more than a reflection of desirable rules of behavior such as "common sense, wisdom and restraint" which are always valid.

BULVAR LINKS ASALA WITH PASOK, EDEK PARTIES

NC171148 Istanbul BULVAR in Turkish 14 Sep 82 p 3

[Text] Developments in recent months have clearly proved that Armenian terrorist organizations are in close collaboration with Papandreou's PASOK party and France's PSU [not further identified] party as well as with the Greek Cypriots. Although the collaboration between the Greek Cypriots and the Armenian terrorist organizations was known earlier, it has assumed a definite official form following the resolution that the Greek Cypriots defend the idea that the Armenians must be supported. They accept the argument that eastern Anatolia belongs to the Armenians -- an argument maintained by the Armenian terrorists.

The resolution advocates that the Armenians should be allowed to return to eastern Antolia and gives assurance that efforts will be made to persuade the parliaments of other countries to identify themselves with this idea.

The socialist EDEK party leads the other Greek Cypriot political parties, which are in close collaboration with the various Armenian terrorist organizations attached to the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia [ASALA]. It has been established that relations between the Armenian organizations and the socialist EDEK party have in recent days become much closer.

It has also been reported that in addition to the Greek Cypriots, the Armenian terrorist organizations are in close collaboration with PASOK, the socialist party which is currently in power in Greece. Representatives of the PASOK party were in the frontline during the demonstrations staged in Athens by the "People's Revolutionary Armenian Movement" known to be affiliated to ASALA in Greece.

The Greek Cypriot press appears to be extremely alarmed at the fact that the Greek Cypriot administration has connived on the establishment of the Armenian military center in southern Cyprus.

Meanwhile, anti-Turkey slogans, written in Armenian on the walls in the Greek Cypriot sector of the island claiming part of eastern Turkey, are being erased.

[Text] A Turkish club in the town of Neustadt Bei (Kober) north of Nurnberg has been set on fire. A statement by the Bavarian police says that the assailants threw a Molotov cocktail at the club building from their car. The fire was extinguished by the 15 Turks who were at the club. The police said further that the assailants have not yet been identified, and that there were no casualties.

TWO SHIPS TO SAIL FROM BANDAR KHOMEYNI PORT

TA101501 Ankara ANATOLIA in Turkish 1450 GMT 10 Sep 82

[Text] Ankara, 10 Sep (AA) -- It has been announced that the Iranian authorities have prepared a convoy to save the two Turkish ships confined in Bandar Khomeyni port.

Foreign Ministry Spokesman Ambassador Nazmi Akiman has said that representations have been made to the Iraqi authorities to save the two Turkish ships, and that meanwhile Iran has prepared a convoy to enable the two ships to sail.

INTERPRETER FOR RAILWAY PROJECT KILLED IN IRAQ

TA171648 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1535 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Text] Ankara, 17 Sep (AA) -- A Turkish interpreter working on a railway project in Iraq was killed, when the car he was in went into a prohibited zone near Baghdad Airport, by fire opened by the guards.

Sadi Bulent Sinar had just met at the airport the representative of a Turkish firm from Istanbul and they were driven by an Egyptian chauffer who lost his way in the dark, Foreign Ministry spokesman said in Ankara.

Sinar was employed by the Brazilian firm (Mendes Juniore) which is building the Baghdad-(Akashad) railway 215 km from the capital.

TURKISH-TUNISIAN EXTRADITION AGREEMENT ADOPTED

TA171651 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1540 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Text] Ankara, 17 Sep (AA) -- The Consultative Assembly committee on defense, interior and foreign affiars Friday adopted three conventions signed between Tunisia and Turkey. The conventions relate to legal aid in penal law matters and extradition of criminals, legal aid in civil and commercial law, and a consular agreement. Turkish broker Cevher Ozden, better known by his firm's name as "Kastelli" was recently apprehended in Tunisia. The Turkish Government had alerted Interpol after three Turkish courts issued warrants of arrest for him on charges of fraud.

KREISKY AGAIN LAUDS REAGAN'S MIDEAST PLAN

[Special DIE PRESSE report by "HWS"]

[Excerpts] Vienna -- "We must never forget what debt of gratitude Austria owes to the American people. Never before have there been such good and close relations between the United States and Austria as in the period after 1945." With these words, Chancellor Kreisky opened on Wednesday morning in Vienna's First District a roving exhibition devoted to the 35th anniversary of the Marshall Plan. This exhibition, organized by the Austrian-American Society, will tour the provinces in the coming weeks.

"The Marshall Plan was a magnificent attempt by the American people to help the Europeans build up their economies again so that they could eventually carry on themselves," Chancellor Kreisky said in his speech. It was proof of American generosity that this offer was made to all European countries, irrespective of their political and social systems. "The fact that the states east of us rejected the offer at that time -- against their will -- has contributed to the difficulties they are now experiencing. At that time, their problems could have been solved."

From the subject of Austria's gratitude to George Marshall and John Foster Dulles, Kreisky turned to the present: "We are grateful that President Reagan has championed the Middle East problem with such engagement. The Austrian Government will support these endeavors with all its heart."

[Vienna KURIER in German, on 15 September, page two, states in its report on the same passage of Kreisky's speech: "In this context, Kreisky welcomed President Reagan's latest Middle East initiative and stressed that Austrian Government not only supports this policy with all its heart, but that it will also do everything in its power to promote it."]

EEC MINISTERS CONDEMN MASSACRE, BACK UN MEASURES

NC201650 Paris AFP in English 1635 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Text] Brussels, Sep. 20 (AFP) -- Foreign ministers of the ten European Economic Community countries today jointly condemned last week's massacre of Palestinian civilians in Beirut.

In a communique, the ministers expressed their "shock and deep repulsion" over "this criminal act," and called for all necessary measures to be taken to guarantee the security of the population.

The ministers vehemently condemned what they described as a "violation" of the peace plan engineered by U.S. envoy Philip Habib, and called for the immediate withdrawal of Israeli forces from west Beirut.

They voiced strong support for United Nations Security Council Resolution 521, which condemned the bloodbath and called for stepped up U.N. observer presence in Beirut, and said they would back any necessary complementary measures including deployment of U.N. or multinational forces.

The ministers said they were "convinced that the interests of Lebanon and the region demand the withdrawal as rapidly as possible of all foreign forces, except those authorised by the Lebanese Government, whose authority should be fully re-established throughout the whole national territory."

They also appealed to all sides in Lebanon to show moderation and "avoid new acts of violence" in the country.

PYM PLEDGES SUPPORT FOR PEACE-KEEPING FORCE

LD201806 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1743 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Text] Britain is ready to offer practical support for any new multi-national peace-keeping force in the Lebanon, Foreign Secretary Mr Francis Pym indicated today. This could involve sending troops, supplies, transport, or cash aid to the area to strengthen a fresh initiative now under consideration.

Mr Pym spelled out Britain's willingness to act during today's meeting in Brussels of EEC foreign ministers, who issued a strong declaration condemning the Beirut massacre.

Britain's role might involve providing observers to the team of up to 50, which is now being proposed should go into the area.

Mr Pym told a press conference after the foreign ministers issued their statement on the Middle East crisis: "We all condemn the atrocities and massacre at the week-end. We felt that very strongly. Obviously, it will put back the peace process and that is very regrettable."

Mr Pym said the 10 Common Market countries were very anxious to support "weak" and "divided" Lebanon. Such support certainly implied the withdrawal of all forces. Mr Pym said that a multi-nationalpeace-keeping force was now being considered by the U.N. secretary-general. Community countries fully supported the latest American Middle East peace initiative which, he said, was a sound basis for long-term peace.

Mr Pym promised that the EEC would do all it could to bring latest moves to a successful conclusion.

During their talks, the foreign ministers expressed the hope that a new international peace-keeping force could be assembled quickly.

This could involve French and Italian troops -- the only two countries representing the EEC so far involved in peace efforts. The prospect of other Community countries becoming directly involved would depend largely on the outcome of the U.N. secretary-general's present deliberations.

The response of the Lebanese Government was also to be considered. The ministers' declaration on the Middle East situation expressed readiness to support measures to ensure the safety of Beirut's civilian population. The Ten demanded immediate withdrawal of Israeli forces from west Beirut and stated that it was in the interests of Lebanon that all foreign forces, except those authorised by the Lebanese Government, should be withdrawn.

The declaration states: "The tragic events in Lebanon have once again demonstrated that the Middle East can enjoy true peace and lasting stability only through a comprehensive settlement to be concluded with the participation of all parties, which means that the PLO will have to be associated with negotiations. Such a settlement should be based on the principles of security for all states in the region, including Israel's right to exist, justice for all peoples, including the right of self-determination for the Palestinians with all that this implies, and mutual recognition by all the parties involved."

The Ten also called for an expression of a will for peace from Israel.

COLOMBO URGES 'HARSH' EC RESPONSE TO MASSACRE

AU201956 Rome ANSA in English 1930 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Brussels, September 20 -- The ten nations of the European Economic Community must "harshly respond to the massacre" of Palestinian refugees in west Beirut last week, Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo insisted here today in a statement made to the EEC foreign ministers conference on political cooperation.

Colombo, who demanded an Israeli withdrawal from Muslim west Beirut and urged the creation of a United Nations peace-keeping force to safeguard the civilian population of the capital, declared that "the European Community must have no leniency for events such as those in Lebanon which have terrified the world.

"It makes little difference whether Israel was directly or indirectly responsible. The Ten must harshly respond to the massacre," he argued.

The foreign minister went on to note that the slaughter of hundreds of men, women and children in two Palestinian refugee camps by rightwing Christian militiamen has also devastated hopes for a settlement to the situation in Lebanon based on the agreement reached through the mediation efforts of American envoy Philip Habib. The agreement provided for the evacuation from Beirut of the Palestinian fighters under the supervision of an Italian-French-American peacekeeping force.

Referring to this accord, the foreign minister said that "Israel, by occupying west Beirut, committed an act which contradicts precise agreements, an act which cannot be allowed to pass by in silence unless there is a desire to acquiesce to this policy which is, either deliberately or because of an inability to control it, illegal and increasingly violent and arrogant."

At this point, Colombo recommended an Israeli withdrawal from west Beirut as a necessary first step towards the pacification of the capital. For the second step, the foreign minister said that the UN peacekeeping force must be reformed to guarantee the safety of the civilian population.

He noted that the Italian-French-American force was pulled out of Beirut, some three weeks after it was deployed, on the request of Lebanese authorities after it had completed its mission of supervising the evacuation of Palestinian fighters.

Colombo then named the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon and the extension of Lebanese sovereignty over all national territory as the final objective of all peace plans. He said that, "the chronic state of the occupation of Lebanon by Israeli, Syrian and other irregular troops cannot be left in place."

At the end of his remarks, Colombo said that the plan for Palestinian autonomy drafted by American President Ronald Reagan and the final document of the Arab summit in Fes are both factors capable of "facilitating a global peace process in the Middle East," but that no illusions should be created as rewards the immediacy of this goal.

Earlier in the day, it was learned that Italy and France, the two European countries which sent contingents to the multilateral force in Beirut, shared an identical position on developments in the capital surrounding the Israeli occupation of the west sector and the massacre of Palestinians.

Colombo and Claude Cheysson, the French minister for external relations, declared their governments' willingness to rejoin the peace force for a new mission in Beirut.

LATE REPORT: EEC DECLARATION ON MIDDLE EAST

AB211123 Paris Diplomatic Information Service in French 1043 GMT 21 Sep 82

[Declaration of the 10 EEC countries on the Middle East on 20 September 1982 -- place not given]

[Text] The 10 express the deep shock and revulsion they feel as a result of the massacre of Palestinian civilians in Beirut. They very strongly condemn this criminal act and appeal for necessary measures to ensure the security of the civilian population. They hail the UN Security Council's Resolution 521 and are prepared to support, to the extent they can, all appropriate complementary measures, including even the reinforcement of the UN group of observers in Beirut and the eventual deployment of the UN or the multinational forces.

They strongly deplore the violation of the Habib plan and demand the immediate withdrawal of the Israeli forces from west Beirut. They are convinced that the interests of Lebanon and of the region necessitate the withdrawal as early as possible of all foreign troops with the exception of those authorized by the Lebanese Government, whose authority should be fully reestablished over the entire national territory.

The EEC member states remain deeply preoccupied by the situation in the whole of Lebanon. They strongly condmen the assassination of the Lebanese president-elect. They appeal to all the parties concerned to demonstrate moderation and avoid new acts of violence in that country.

The 10 reaffirm their solidarity with that friendly country, whose people have so cruelly suffered and whose fragile stability is being seriously threatened. They are convinced that the Lebanese people will be able to elect a new president in conformity with the Lebanese Constitution and effect national reconciliation. The tragic events which have occurred in Lebanon have again proved that the Middle East cannot achieve a veritable peace and lasting stability without a global settlement with the participation of all the parties concerned; this means that the PLO should take part in the negotiations.

This settlement should be based on the principles of security for all the states of the region, and include: Israel's right to exist, justice for all the peoples, including the right of self-determination for the Palestinian people with all that this implies, and mutual recognition by all the parties concerned.

The 10 note that the principles mentioned above have met with increasing acceptance. Consequently, they salute the new American initiative contained in the speech made by President Reagan on 1 September 1982. The 10 feel that this offers an important occasion to achieve peaceful progress concerning the Palestinian problem and that it constitutes a step toward the reconciliation of the contradictory aspirations of the parties.

The 10 appeal to all parties to seize this occasion to implement a process of mutual rapprochement which will lead to a solution of global peace.

In this regard, they stress the importance of the declaration adopted by the Arab heads of state and government in Fes on 9 September, in which they see an expression of the unanimous desire of the participants, including the PLO, to work in favor of the restoration of a just peace in the Middle East which includes all states in the region and Israel.

They appeal to Israel for a similar expression of a desire for peace. They feel that the discussion on the draft French-Egyptian resolution by the Security Council could play a useful role in the establishment of a common basis for the solution of the problems in the region.

The 10 continue to believe that the creation of a climate of confidence between the parties is a fundamental element towards the solution of global and negotiated peace in the region. Consequently, they feel that the Israeli decision to establish eight new settlements in the occupied territories constitutes a serious obstacle in the peace efforts and is even illegal according to international law.

The 10 confirm that they will actively continue their efforts to promote a solution of global, just and lasting peace. In this regard, they will maintain and develop their contacts with all the parties.

KREISKY BLAMES ISRAEL FOR BEIRUT INCIDENT

AU200915 Vienna ARBEITER-ZEITUNG in German 20 Sep 82 p 1

[Text] In a talk with ARBEITER-ZEITUNG, Chancellor Kreisky said he was horrified at the mass murder [in the west Beirut Palestinian camps]. If the Israeli Army is not capable of guaranteeing that the civilian population is not murdered in a country which it has invaded and where it has defeated the enemy, then this task of guaranteeing security must be assigned to international units, Kreisky said and added: It is an incomprehensible disgrace that such genocide can occur in a country that is under military control.

IRAQI EMBASSY, AIRLINES OFFICE TARGETS OF BOMBS

AU210706 Vienna Domestic Service in German 0500 GMT 21 Sep 82

[Text] At midnight, two attacks were made on Iraqi institutions in the city of Vienna. The first explosion was at 2340 [local time] in front of the Iraqi Embassy in Johannesgasse. Two minutes past midnight an explosive device detonated in front of the office of the Iraqi airlines at Opernring. No one was injured but the material damage is considerable. So far there is no information on who is responsible for it. Along the front of the embassy building pieces of broken glass and parts of the facade were lying on the pavement. An Iraqi car with diplomatic plates was damaged. The explosion also caused concern among the guests of a hotel nearby. The offices of the Iraqi airlines was completely destroyed by the explosion. The shopwindows of an adjacent automobile shop were also destroyed. Several parked cars were damaged. According to the staff of a restaurant next to the building, there was suddenly a glaring flash. The shaking was likened by eyewitnesses to an earthquake.

PROMINENT FIGURES SPONSOR NEW PEACE INSTITUTE

AU101350 Vienna ARBEITER-ZEITUNG in German 10 Sep 82 p 2

[Text] Eisenstadt (APA) -- Recently the founding meeting of the Austrian Peace Institute Association was held in Vienna. The institute is to operate in Vienna and Schlaining [near Oberwart in Burgenland]. In compliance with the association statutes, Science Minister Hertha Firnberg was elected chairman and Burgenland provincial government member Tgerald Mader, deputy chairman. Chancellor Kreisky, Cardinal Koenig and Nationalrat Chairman Benya have agreed to act as members of the institute's board of trustees, which will be under the patronage of President Kirchschlaeger. The peace institute will begin operating at Burg Schlaining in 1983.

CDU/CSU, FDP LEADERS HOLD COALITION TALKS

LD201748 Hamburg DPA in German 1656 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn, 20 Sep (DPA) -- The leaders of the CDU/CSU and FDP have met in Bonn this evening for their arranged special talks on the possibility of a new coalition government. The meeting, which is taking place in the parliamentary office of CDU Chairman Helmut Kohl, is attended on behalf of the FDP by Hans-Dietrich Genscher and Wolfgang Mischnick. The union is also represented by Gerhard Stoltenberg and CSU politicians Franz Josef Strauss and Friedrich Zimmermann, as well as Kohl.

The meeting was overshadowed by differences of opinion between the CDU and CSU regarding the date for parliamentary elections. Genscher, who according to his party spokesman, already had a meeting with Strauss in Bonn this afternoon, stated that this matter would have to be resolved between the two union parties.

Agree on Chancellor, Elections

LD202050 Hamburg DPA in German 2034 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn, 20 Sep (DPA) -- CDU Chairman Helmut Kohl is to be voted federal chancellor on 1 October in a constructive no confidence vote against Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt. The leaders of the CDU/CSU and FDP agreed on this recommendation to their parties on Monday evening in Bonn.

A statement read to journalists by the union group spokesman, Eduard Ackermann, at the same time notes that Kohl, as elected federal chancellor, will set fresh elections in motion before the end of the year so that new Bundestag elections can be held on the first Sunday in March 1983.

CSU Links Elections, Vote

LD201308 Hamburg DPA in German 1151 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Excerpts] Munich, 20 Sep (DPA) -- The CSU Executive calls for fresh elections for the Bundestag to be held before the end of the year. This decision was reached by the party's Executive on Monday at its special session in Munich with no opposing votes or abstentions. With the specific reservation of "holding fresh elections this year," the Executive of the CSU Bundestag group recommended supporting a constructive vote of no confidence to dissolve Helmut Schmidt's minority cabinet.

The CSU leadership also unanimously stressed the demand "that in the formation of a transitional govenment the CSU is given due consideration, according to its political weight and the ability of its politicians."

Bonn, 20 Sep (DPA) -- Questioned whether a constructive no confidence vote could misfire because of the CSU position, enabling Schmidt to enter fresh elections as chancellor after all, Strauss [CSU chairman] said Schmidt's cabinet has been decimated and incapable of action for so many months that an election campaign against him in such circumstances would be acceptable. Early new elections are in any case better than a "tortuous and lengthy transitional period."

"We can only recommend that the FDP makes no new demands in this connection," Strauss said, with reference to speculation about future government members. Former FDP Minister of the Interior Baum is unsuitable for the post of justice minister because of his views on legal policy. "We advise the FDP to make sensible suggestions." Strauss refused to specify names or numbers of CDU participation in a cabinet.

BRANDT, SCHMIDT AGREE ON ELECTION ISSUE

LD201358 Hamburg DPA in German 1333 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Excerpts] Bonn, 20 Sep (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Schmidt has reaffirmed his interest in immediate elections. Schmidt, who wants to (?lead) the election campaign if elections are held this year, has left open the question as to whether he will stand as leading SPD candidate if elections are held at a later date. Following the statement by SPD Chairman Willy Brandt that the SPD will decide on a candidate in the case of later elections, government spokesman Boelling refuted suggestions that there are differences of opinion between Brandt and Schmidt. The chancellor and the SPD chairman were in total agreement on this issue.

FDP'S MISCHNICK AGAINST EARLY ELECTIONS

LD201342 Hamburg DPA in German 1239 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Text] Kassel, 20 Sep (DPA) -- The chairman of the FDP group in the lower house, Wolfgang Mischnick, has spoken against early elections. In an interview with the newspaper HNA HESSISCHE/NIEDERSACHISCHE ALLGEMEINE (Tuesday edition), Mischnick said he would welcome it if a new CDU/CSU-FDP coalition brought the current legislative period to an end in 1984 in a "normal way," that is, without new elections. He would not, however, resist an earlier election. Mischnick said it was important to come to an agreement on the formation of a government as soon as possible in the forthcoming coalition negotiations. His party would not make any demands as regards the cabinet composition. He excluded the possibility of the recent events in Bonn leading to a split in the FDP.

FDP BAVARIAN LAND EXECUTIVE BACKS COALITION

LD181644 Hamburg DPA in German 1611 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Text] Rothenburg, 18 Sep (DPA) -- Only one member of the ten-member FDP Bavarian Land Executive opposed a coalition of the CDU/CSU with the FDP in Bonn when the Executive met on Saturday in Rothenburg ob der Tauber. At the same time, the body agreed with plans to arrange new elections in the spring of 1983.

Rhineland FDP on Coalition

LD171810 Hamburg DPA in German 1506 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Mainz, 17 Sep (DPA) -- The willingness to come out in favor of a coalition with the CDU prior to the 1983 diet elections appears to be becoming stronger within the Rhineland-Palatinate FDP. It seems that the liberals will no longer insist on a government partner which has an absolute majority. They had insisted on such a condition prior to the 1979 parliamentary elections.

BADEN-WUERTTEMBERG DIET PRESIDENT RESIGNS

LD201746 Hamburg DPA in German 1320 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Text] Stuttgart, 20 Sep (DPA) -- The president of the Baden-Wuerttemberg diet, Lothar Gaa (CDU) resigned on Monday with immediate effect. Gaa gave as his reason for resigning the strong attacks against him for allegedly combining his office with his professional activity in industry. Such attacks could damage the high office of the diet president, even if he is unaware of any responsibility on his part.

YOUNG DEMOCRATS TO CAMPAIGN AGAINST COALITION

[Excerpt] Bonn, 20 Sep (DPA) -- On Monday the Young Democrats close to the FDP announced a broad campaign within the FDP aimed at stopping the party leadership from entering into a coalition with the CDU/CSU at the forthcoming FDP congress and forcing party chief Hans-Dietrich Genscher and former Economics Minister Count Otto Graf Lambsdorff to resign. In view of the mood in the party, they were optimistic about success in this campaign at the federal congress to be held in Berlin at the beginning of November, or at an early special congress, the chairman of the Young Democrats, Werner Lutz, said at a joint press conference in Bonn with the chief of the young socialists, Rudolf Hartung.

The Young Democrats would not be fighting alone but with the social-liberal wing in the FDP. If, however, they were unable to prevent the FDP from returning to the "age of Bismarck," the Young Democrats would try to form a new party outside the FDP together with the social-liberal wing. FDP members were already "grimly determined" to do so. Hartung announced that the leftwing of the FDP would be discussing his plan of action at a congress in Norderstedt near Hamburg this weekend.

COMMENTATOR VIEWS BONN COALITION BREAKUP

DW201339 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU in German 20 Sep 82 p 3

[Commentary signed Moe: "Under Pressure To Make a Move"]

[Text] After the initial contacts this weekend, the chairmen of the CDU/CSU and FDP will officially begin their negotiations today to set up a government. It is no longer a question of whether the three party chairmen have received the appropriate mandates. Now that the four FDP ministers have left the cabinet of Social Democrat Helmut Schmidt, the CDU/CSU and the Free Democrats are under pressure to make a move.

The "murder of the king," with the help of the so-called constructive vote of no confidence, can no longer be avoided if the decisions of 17 September are to make sense to the people. The internal CDU/CSU quarrel over the best Bundestag election date is of secondary significance now. According to the principles of representative parliamentary democracy, immediate new elections would have been the most convincing form of democracy. But politics are no beauty contest and a person like Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who wanted a change of power, must remain consistent with regard to his tactics.

The FDP leadership has burned the bridges behind it so that it has only the choice of either achieving as firm as possible a coalition agreement with chancellor candidate Helmut Kohl or destruction. In this connection, it is not so important whether the fall of Helmut Schmidt will occur prior to the Hesse elections next Sunday or not; there are several indications that the Hesse FDP could enter the Landtag again despite all the ado and the competition of the Greens. However, the essential agreements with Helmut Kohl and Franz Josef Strauss must be made prior to the Hesse elections for safety's sake.

These agreements must also take place because, by selecting a new chancellor, the new Bonn coalition partners want to stay a step ahead of Helmut Schmidt, who might still call a confidence vote. Such a vote would help the current government chief to alter his fate, but it could again put his successor under the pressure of time. Genscher told Kohl this weekend that he could promise him more than the 23 FDP votes necessary to be elected chancellor. The question remains, however, whether Kohl can rely on his team any more than Rainer Barzel could 10 years ago.

DIE WELT Commentary

DW201239 Bonn DIE WELT in German 20 Sep 82 p 1

[Manfred Schell editorial: "This Week"]

[Text] The CDU/CSU and the FDP are apparently determined to act quickly and to show the face of the new majority. The new federal government is supposed to be set up quickly. Helmut Kohl and Hans-Dietrich Genscher have made this promise and will be measured by how they fulfill it. The autumn performances in Bonn have lasted long enough.

In the interests of the FRG, it would be desirable for the new government chief and his ministers to start working this week. Increasing unemployment, economic and finance problems as well as our foreign policy can't tolerate a long government crisis.

So it has to be a matter of only days and not of agonizing weeks. Genscher prevailed in his faction and on his party executive board (although with a narrow margin). Pressure from land organizations to make the switch continues to increase, however. He doesn't want to supply his adversaries in his own house with the argument that he has ignored internal opposition. He could, therefore, want to hold the vote on changing chancellors only after the Hesse elections.

In the meantime, however, Schmidt's minority government cannot be expected to show any creative impulses. All government wheels have stopped. The federal chancellor has only enough strength and liberty to launch attacks at the FDP. As long as official statements are involved, he is supported by the SPD with the demand for new elections. The trumpet, however, is not producing a clear tone. It is probably just a matter of keeping the government apparatus available if the great election campaign were to take place unexpectedly soon. Maintaining the advantage is the slogan.

Is everything else mere appearance? Behind the scenes, which are being set to show a picture of unity, basic SPD changes are taking shape. According to reliable information, Chairman Brandt is supposed to take over the leadership of the faction after the Hesse elections, and Hans-Jochen Vogel is reportedly already slated as the next candidate for chancellor. This would mean that Schmidt is to be tolerated for another week. After that, he will have served his purpose.

FDJ-DBJR CHAIRMEN SPEAK ON YOUTH TOURISM

LD202304 Hamburg DPA in German 1211 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Excerpt] East Berlin, 20 Sep (ADN) -- The Federal German Youth Circles (DBJR) and the FDJ [Free German Youth] have both underlined their willingness to promote and expand youth tourism between the two German states. DBJR Chairman Josef Homberg said in a press conference that his organization puts emphasis on as balanced a relationship as possible in numerical terms in youth tourism between the two German states. FDJ Chairman Egon Krenz, candidate member of the SED Politburo, refused to comment any further on the arrangements in the GDR for participation in youth tourism. He assumed that young people could travel from the GDR under given circumstances. He did not believe this would lead to a mass exodus of people.

MAUROY: GOVERNMENT 'READY' TO AID LEBANON

[Excerpts] The premier today chaired the opening session of the Institute for Higher Defense Studies. At this session he said, and we quote: France remains ready to again come to the aid of Lebanon and to give support to the armed forces of that country. France continues to do all it can for peace, continued the premier, and will help Lebanon to regain its sovereignty, unity and integrity. Pierre Mauroy recalled that France had also wanted to see included in the mandate of the first multinational force the protection of the civilian population. The latest unhappy events have shown that the French fears were well-founded, he said.

Lebanese Request Received

LD201626 Paris Domestic Service in French 1600 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Text] Lebanon has officially requested the return of the Multinational Buffer Force. The French ambassador to Beirut, Paul-Marc Henry, was advised of this by the Lebanese prime minister at the conclusion of a meeting of the council [of ministers] this afternoon. The French ambassador confirmed that France will reply favorably to this request. There will be coordination with the American and Italian Governments and permanent members of the Un Security Council will be consulted. Lebanon wishes the French, American and Italian soldiers to return for a period of at least 20 days while the Israelis continue to leave Beirut.

Troops To Return

[Statement by President Francois Mitterrand -- live] .

[Text] The massacre of the Palestinian innocents, which distresses international feelings, again covers Lebanon with blood. Without wasting any more time, the Lebanese Armed Forces must be able effectively to ensure the security of the civilian population in Beirut and its surroundings and to return the country to the exclusive authority of the legitimate government.

Now the resolution adopted by the United Nations Security Council cannot be implemented rapidly. I have thus decided, at the request of the Lebanese Government and in reply to calls from all sides -- notably from the Arab world -- that France will participate in the formation of a new multinational force which will be tasked with contributing to a return to security and the respect of the people's rights. The French soldiers who will carry out this mission will once again find themselves side by side with American and Italian soldiers. Our first contingents will be ready to assume their responsibilities in Lebanon itself within the next 3 days.

MARCHAIS ON TALKS WITH MITTERRAND ON UN FORCE

[Text] As soon as the Beirut slaughter news was announced, Communist Party Secretary General Georges Marchais demanded an audience with President Mitterrand. Marchais was received at the Elysee at 1600. Here is the comment he made to Dominque Souchier after his meeting:

[Begin recording] I am very pleased to note that there is complete agreement between the president of the republic and myself on what seems to us an essential issue, namely that France is immediately ready to assume all its responsibilities in order that a UN international force can go to Lebanon.

The president informed me, moreover, that the necessary military measures have already been taken. Clearly -- and we are in agreement over this point -- if we do not reach agreement [on the UN force], then France is equally prepared to assume its responsibilities within the framework of a multinational force, that is, the three countries which have already been in Lebanon. But priority goes, and I repeat that, to the UN multinational force. That is France's position. [end recording]

CHEYSSON INTERVIEWED ON MIDDLE EAST SITUATION

AB171325 Paris Diplomatic Information Service in French 1015 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Interview granted by External Relations Minister Claude Cheysson to the magazine D'ETUDES PALESTINIENEES; date and place not stated -- interview carries embargo: "Text of interview to appear in October 1982; do not publish at this time"]

[Text] [Question] What is your evaluation of France's diplomatic action since the invasion of Lebanon by the Israeli Army?

[Answer] Right from the beginning, France unequivocally condemned the invasion of Lebanon by the Israeli Army and voted in favor of UN Security Council Resolutions 508 and 509 demanding the withdrawal of the aggressors. Later on it endeavored to avoid the destruction of west Beirut, the consequences of which would have been dramatic for the populations concerned and would have ruined for a long time the chances of a future dialogue. That was why the president of the republic appealed for a disengagement of the rival forces. On 25 June, France submitted to the Security Council a draft resolution in this respect. The draft resolution, which was approved by 14 countries, was vetoed by a permanent member. When the disengagement agreement was finally concluded, France -- at the request of the Lebanese Government and with the accord of all the parties concerned, including the PLO -- agreed to participate in the buffer force. As a matter of fact, the French contingent was the first to arrive in the Lebanese capital and we helped considerably to ensure that the departure of the Palestinian troops took place in security and dignity. Thus, our country did not spare any effort to avoid the unpardonable and safeguard the chances of a just negotiation between the concerned political forces in the region.

[Question] You have on many occasions expressed your fear that there would be a new Yalta in the Middle East. What do you mean by this?

[Answer] France firmly believes that all disputes between neighboring peoples should be dealt with by the parties directly concerned and, if necessary, with the help of friendly countries and the international community. If this is not done, the superpowers are naturally tempted to impose a settlement which -- like the Yalta settlement in Europe -- is effected in conformity with their own interests without really taking into account the interests of the peoples and states concerned.

[Question] The Habib mission is considered by some people in the Arab world as an attempt to avoid the possibility of an exclusively French initiative. What do you think about this?

[Answer] France is not so much worried about taking its own initiatives as about promoting efforts capable of reducing the tensions and opening the way to negotiation. The Habib mission aimed to avoid a tragic outcome in Beirut. It therefore received the support of the French Government, which is happy to have contributed to its success since this mission had the explicit support of the Lebanese Government and the PLO leadership.

[Question] What are the differences between the French and American Governments with regard to the creation of a Palestinian homeland? Have these differences been openly expressed?

[Answer] The French Government has always affirmed that Israel's security also entailed taking into consideration the need for a Palestinian homeland and consequently the need to recognize the legitimate national rights of the Palestinian people, including the right to self-determination with all that this implies. The U.S. President's latest declaration did not go to the extent of affirming this right, this is one of the differences between our position and that of the United States.

[Question] The events in Lebanon have confirmed that the Camp David accords do not constitute an adequate framework for the global solution of the Israeli-Arab conflict and the Palestinian problem. What is your opinion?

[Answer] France did not wait for the invasion of Lebanon to express its position concerning the Camp David accords. These agreements made it possible to take a step forward by establishing peace between Israel and Egypt, but we are obliged to admit that they did not make it possible to deal with the problem of the other territories occupied by Israel in 1967, because they ignored the fundamental right of the Palestinian people to have a homeland.

[Question] Does the Fahd plan today constitute a solid base for a global negotiation of the Israeli-Arab conflict?

[Answer] The Fahd plan refers to principles recognized by the international community. It includes positive aspects to which France is very sensitive as it comes from an Arab state which is influential in the region. It will be very interesting to know the conclusions of the current Arab summit on the subject.

[Question] Is the Egyptian-French draft resolution at the Security Council a new international peace plan for the Israeli-Arab conflict?

[Answer] It would not be a question of a country foreign to the region proposing a plan. The French-Egyptian draft resolution being studied by the Security Council is aimed at recalling all the principles which should help a future political global solution of the Middle East problem. These principles are:

--The right of the states in the region, especially Israel, Lebanon and the future Palestinian entity, to live in peace within secure and recognized borders.

--The right of the peoples, especially the Israeli, Lebanese and Palestinian peoples to self-determination and all its consequences.

--The respect for international decisions which cannot be modified by unilateral actions.

--The need to solve problems through negotiations between the forces concerned, the PLO being associated with the negotiations.

[Question] Is it possible to envisage a negotiated solution in the Middle East without the active participation of the Soviet Union, as the American authorities believe?

[Answer] Certain modalities in a solution should probably be guaranteed by the international community, maybe the Security Council, probably the neighboring countries. The Soviet Union will therefore one day be part of the group of countries involved in the solution.

[Question] Who represents the Palestinians? To them -- including the people of Transjordan and Gaza -- to the Arabs, to a greater part of the international community, it is indisputably the PLO. What is France's position on this subject?

[Answer] It is for the Palestinian people to choose their representative as soon as they can do so. For the moment, the PLO, which represents the combat force of the Palestinians, must be the interlocutor with which dialogue must be engaged. The French Government, as well as its partners in the European Community, have been stating this for many years.

[Question] What do you think of the opportunity now of the formation of a Palestinian Government in exile, as the Egyptian president suggested?

[Answer] It is for the Palestinian leaders to determine which form their political expression should assume.

[Question] How can the PLO be asked to recognize the State of Israel when the Israeli Government denies the Palestinians a nation and affirms that it will never negotiate with the PLO?

[Answer] It is precisely to solve such prerequisites that we propose the mutual and simultaneous recognition of the rights to existence of each of the parties. This is the position expressed in the French-Egyptian draft resolution presented to the Security Council.

[Question] The European emissaries, Mr Thorn and Mr Van der Klaauw, have toured the Arab world as a commission of inquiry for a joint European initiative. Does it really exist? Where are we presently?

[Answer] Just as there cannot be a French action that will be in support of the initiatives taken in the region, there cannot be a European initiative which claims to substitute for the parties concerned. It is for the people in the region themselves to begin a process of negotiation to which -- if they are called upon -- France and its European partners would immediately bring their assistance.

[Question] To what do you attribute the absence and silence of the European Community faced with the Israeli aggression in Lebanon?

[Answer] On many occasions the states of the European Community have condemned the Israeli invasion of Lebanon, particularly on 29 June during a European Council meeting in Brussels. Also, the Community and its 10 member states immediately responded to the appeals for humanitarian assistance. One cannot therefore talk of absence or silence in such a case.

[Question] How do you envisage your future relations with the PLO?

[Answer] Now as in the past, France -- which intends to establish confident and sincere dialogues with all the parties concerned, without any exception -- is maintaining with the PLO sustained relations that cannot be compromised by circumstances. It is maintaining these relations in all places where the organization is represented at all levels of its leadership.

[Question] Have the dangers of a partition of Lebanon been definitively ruled out?

[Answer] France is against anyone talking about putting in question Lebanon's territorial integrity. We are fundamentally and irrevocably attached to the country's integrity, independence and unity. The Lebanese are assured of the support of the French people in the event of one of these principles being threatened. That is why the (?French Government) has expressed its unequivocal support for the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Lebanon.

[Question] How does French diplomacy think the situation in the Middle East will develop after the war in Lebanon?

[Answer] It is again necessary to affirm the political dimension of the Palestinian problem, whose solution is the condition for the establishment of a just and lasting peace in the Middle East. President Reagan's recent declarations were in accordance with what we have been advocating for a very long time now.

[Question] How do you envisage the future relations between the European and Arab countries outside purely economic cooperation?

[Answer] As a member of the Brussels commission and then as the French minister of external relations, I have often stressed the complementarity of Europe and the Arab world. We are united in the same community of values and of the vision of man. Our economic interests are tied together. War and peace have always affected us together. Cooperation is therefore an imperative and I am looking forward to the day when attention can be turned toward the edification of the common elements of our future.

MINISTRY: AL-MURABITUN LEADER NOT IN EMBASSY

TA201227 Jerusalem Domestic Service in Hebrew 1200 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Text] In Paris, the Foreign Ministry officially denied that the head of the Al-Murabitun militias, Ibrahim (Klilat), has taken refuge in the French Embassy in Beirut. At last night's cabinet session in Jerusalem it was reported that (Klilat) is the prime suspect in the murder of Bashir al-Jumayyil and that he was granted a haven by the French Embassy in Beirut.

Our Paris correspondent, Gil'ad Sher, has learned that the Phalangist representative in Paris and the former top candidate for the post of commander of the Lebanese Army, (Fu'ad Maliki), discussed this matter with the Israeli ambassador to France this morning.

PS FIGURES JUSTIFY GUINEAN PRESIDENT'S VISIT

[Text] Questioned in the corridors of the National Assembly on Thursday, 16 September, PS First Secretary Lionel Jospin stressed that the nature of [Guinean President] Sekou Toure's visit to France was part of the usual framework of interstate relations. He commented that "if economic, financial and cultural relations were to be limited" only to the countries practicing a form of democracy comparable to French democracy, "the number of countries with which we could maintain relations" would be small. "It is possible to tour Africa, Latin America and Asia and then return home and file away our speeches on the Third World," he added. According to Mr Jospin, the problem can be posed in simple terms: "Is it possible to have a Third World policy wihtout maintaining relations with Third World countries?"

That position was shared by most of the Socialist deputies questioned at their group's parliamentary meeting which began in Paris on Thursday, 16 September. "If we could really only talk to all those who... we would no longer receive anybody. [sentence as published] And even we would not always be received," Mrs Gisele Halimi (Isere) noted. Mr Philippe Marchand (Charente-Maritime), who is also a lawyer, thinks that Mr Sekou Toure's visit corresponds "to the need for international relations" but he does not find the visitor an attractive figure.

GROUP TO CONSIDER CUBAN DEBT RESCHEDULING

NC210750 Paris AFP in English 0716 GMT 21 Sep 82

[Text] Paris, Sep 21 (AFP) -- France may head a group of creditor nations to supervise rescheduling of Cuba's external debt, an informed source said here today.

The total debt is 3,500 million dollars and Cuba has asked for a 10-year moratorium on paying back 1,300 million dollars falling due between now and 1985.

The four main creditor nations are France, Spain, Japan and Canada. A Cuban delegation is currently touring a number of capitals to discuss Cuba's monetary position.

One subject being discussed is continued availability of a 1,000 million dollar line of credit recently granted to Cuba.

GRENADIAN PRIME MINISTER VISITS; AID TO INCREASE

PM210839 Paris LE MONDE in French 19-20 Sep 82 p 4

[Text] France has decided to increase its aid -- mainly technological and economic -- to Grenada, the first socialist state in the Lesser Antilles, by allowing it to benefit from the aid and cooperation fund which is primarily reserved for French-speaking African countries.

That is the main result of the official talks which Mr Maurice Bishop, leader of Grenada's "people's revolutionary" government, has had in Paris with [French President Francois] Mitterrand, [External Relations Minister Claude] Cheysson and [Cooperation and Development Minister Jean-Pierre] Cot.

The visit illustrates the French desire to "cooperate with all the Caribbean states whatever their political system -- which they are perfectly free to choose -- and to encourage their mutual cooperation," Mr Cheysson said after a meeting with Mr Bishop.

Questioned on the possible repercussions of the French position on relations with Washington (which excluded Grenada from its Caribbean aid plan), Mr Cheysson said that he believed that it would be "unreasonable for any country to see any disadvantage in our cooperation policy."

Mr Bishop's visit follows visits by several Central American and Caribbean leaders, especially Cuban Vice President Carlos Rafael Rodriguez and Nicaraguan junta leader Maj Daniel Ortega.

For his part, Mr Bishop expressed his "admiration" for French policy toward Central America and the Caribbean "despite Washington's pressures." He said that he believed that Paris has a "strategic role" to play "in face of the U.S. desire to destabilize and divide the countries in the region in order to recolonize them."

The French-Grenadian cooperation plans relate mainly to technical aid in the spheres of agriculture, food, and wealth (equipment, hospital extensions). They also relate to civil aviation. Grenada, which wants to encourage tourism, hopes to establish air links with Martinique and Guadeloupe and television (the island of Grenada, which is extremely mountainous, has only a small television transmitter with a limited range).

PREMIER REASSURES PS DEPUTIES ON TERRORISM

PM201217 Paris LE FIGARO in French 18-19 Sep 82 p 4

[Excerpt] "You see, we are not sitting back and doing nothing in the face of terrorism." Speaking to the National Assembly and Senate Socialist group deputies, [Premier] Pierre Mauroy stressed the government's determination to put an end to terrorist actions. "Such outrages," the premier continued, "are, unfortunately, not a new phenomenon."

"We have had occasion to deplore such outrages over recent years. What I would like to note is that this terrorism is not a product of French society itself, unlike the Italian Red Brigades or, in the past, the Baader gang in Germany. It is, in a way, an imported terrorism linked with the Near East conflict."

The premier continued: "There are some people who are hostile to any French influence in Lebanon. There are some people who indulge in anti-Semitism and who readily strike in France since it is our country which has the biggest Jewish community in Western Europe -- a community which the government is anxious to protect as effectively as possible, although, as everybody realizes, it unfortunately cannot guarantee that all danger of attacks is now over."

At the end of his speech to the deputies the premier was informed of the attack which had just taken place outside the Lycee Carnot. He immediately returned to the Hotel Matignon and, with the president's agreement, received the Israeli ambassador to express his emotion.

Earlier, when addressing the PS deputies, the premier stressed various points: "I would like to pay tribute to the courage and sense of responsibility shown by France's Jewish community. I would like to assure it of the whole French nation's solidarity.... You have seen that the government has taken measures to strengthen the struggle against terrorism, particularly with a view to coordinating the action of the various departments concerned more effectively. There is already constant close coordination. That coordination is not carried out without some gnashing of teeth, but it exists."

"The determined struggle launched against terrorism des not cast doubt on France's vocation as an open-door country, a land of asylum.

"As regards extradition, for example, we will still be cautious and vigilant. But it must be clear that a mere political motive cannot afford protection to the perpetrators of grave actions which are unjustifiable in a democracy."

MINISTRY CONFIRMS COMMITMENT TO PEACE FORCE

LD202232 Rome Domestic Service in Italian 2200 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Text] Reacting to the announcement made in Washington by President Reagan, the Foreign Ministry confirms that the American, Italian and French Governments are in agreement on resuming the international peace-keeping force in Beirut. The agreement was reached after intensive consultations between the three governments and accords with the Italian proposal made last Saturday [18 September]. A Foreign Ministry note states that the agreement is based on the request of the Lebanese Government. The urgency was stressed to Israel that its forces withdraw from west Beirut to make possible the deployment of the force. The force will carry out its tasks for a limited period of time and is aimed at enabling the Lebanese Government to exercise its own responsibilities. The force will act in conformity with the objectives of the United Nations, which was asked to strengthen the group of observers already present in the Lebanese capital.

JEWISH COMMUNITY CONDEMNS BEIRUT MASSACRE

AU201946 Rome ANSA in English 1920 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 20 -- The worldwide chorus of condemnation of the slaughter of Palestinian refugees in undefended camps in west Beirut last week was joined today by Italy's Jewish community today which voiced "disgust, bitterness and sorrow for the recent tragic events in Lebanon" in a telegram sent to Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin and members of the Israeli Knesset.

After describing the massacre as an act "repugnant for the Jewish conscience," the message demanded that "those responsible for the slaughter, directly or indirectly, of whatever side or nationality, be identified and prosecuted".

The telegram concluded by insisting that "only the path of negotiations can lead to a solution to the conflict which has lacerated the people of the region for too many years".

COLOMBO CALLS FOR CLOSE MEDITERRANEAN LINKS

AU170834 Rome ANSA in English 0831 GMT 17 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 17 -- A Mediterranean convention should be created on the lines of the Lome Convention which links the European Ten to their developing African, Caribbean and Pacific partners, according to Italian Foreign Minster Emilio Colombo.

Addressing a Mediterranean congress of orthopedic and traumatological surgery here Thursday, Colombo said that the Rome governent's policy remains one of finding "linkage points" between the Mediterranean countries.

"Even if they are still divided by political contrasts", Colombo added, these points would make it possible for them to "create initially partial understandings as premises for more general ones".

MALTESE PRIME MINISTER MINTOFF PAYS BRIEF VISIT

AU181522 Rome ANSA in English 0814 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, September 18 -- Maltese Prime Minister Dom Mintoff conferred with Italian Premier Giovanni Spadolini on bilateral issues and the situation in the Mediterranean and the Middle East in a meeting in Naples Friday during a brief working visit to Italy. Later in the day, Mintoff met in Rome with Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo.

In their discussion on developments in the Middle East, the Italian head of government told the visiting prime minister of the Rome government's condemnation of the "atrocious assassination of Lebanese President-elect Bashir al-Jumayyil, the ongoing recourse to arms in that tormented country and the new bloody military action in west Beirut.

"It is imperative" Spadolini said, "that a new cease-fire be called, the indispensable premise for the complete and rapid withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon".

After referring to the need for a solution to the Lebanese crisis and Italian Government efforts in this direction, the premier said, "Italy intends to be receptive to and develop every constructive indication of detente and dialogue for the purpose of creating greater trust between the Arabs and the Israelis".

In this context, he referred to Rome's "satisfaction with American President Ronald Reagan's recent proposals for reviving negotiations on Palestinian autonomy and the conciliatory signals sent out by the Arab summit at Fez".

Speaking of conditions in the Mediterranean region, the Italian premier said that his government is working to "remove those obstacles in the way of stability and to broaden cooperative relations with all the countries in the region with respect for the principles of freedom and pluralism".

He said these efforts were undertaken with the conviction that stability in the Mediterranean would "assure greater stability in Europe and the world".

On the bilateral front, the two heads of government voiced satisfaction for the trend of trade relations and ties of economic, financial and technical cooperation developed in the context of accords signed in 1980.

LATE REPORT: REPUBLICAN PARTY CONDEMNS ISRAEL

AU210917 Rome ANSA in English 0820 GMT 21 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 21 -- Italy's Republican Party condemned the Israeli Government both morally and politically for the errors it has committed, which are such as to deprive Israel of the sympathy "of all democratic consciences around the world," according to the "PRI" daily in an editorial believed to be inspired by Premier Giovanni Spadolini, who is also the party president.

The PRI's condemnation of the Beirut massacres was that much more serious and firm in that it comes from a party with a long history of sympathy with the cause of Jewish emancipation, the "VOCE REPUBBLICANA" editorial went on.

In response to criticism (chiefly from the Communists), the paper said that "our government was the first, in accord with the friendly governments of the US and France, to propose a return to Beirut of the peacekeeping force that had already guaranteed the peaceful evacuation of PLO guerrillas just a few weeks ago."

National Demonstration Planned

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 21 -- A national demonstration against the genocide of the Palestinian people will be held in Rome this afternoon. Similar demonstrations were staged in Rome, Milan and many other Italian cities Monday to protest the massacres in Palestinian refugee camps in Beirut last week.

A march was organized through central Rome yesterday by leftwing groups and parties. They were addressed by a member of the Palestinian Liberation Organization's Rome office who called for true solidarity with the Palestinian cause and who also voiced the solidarity of his own people with the Jews themselves, who he called "other victims of the butcher (Italian premier [as received] Menahem Begin."

In Milan, around 6,000 people marched through the city, led by a PLO representative and a parliamentary deputy from the Italian Proletarian Democracy Party, Mario Capanna. Capanna wore a sign around his neck saying "I have nothing aginst the Jews but against Zionism and Nazism."

The demonstrators stopped in front of the Israeli Consulate's office shouting violent slogans against Begin.

FELIPE GONZALEZ CITED ON ELECTION CAMPAIGN

PM201451 Barcelona LA VANGUARDIA in Spanish 17 Sep 82 p 12

[Excerpt] The Spanish Socialist Workers Party [PSOE] yesterday approved its election program, which was explained by Felipe Gonzalez at a press conference. He said: "If the Socialist Party wins the election, we are prepared to take the state of the autonomies to its final conclusion; that is, Spain's unity."

Gonzalez referred to the opinions polls: "All the data tell us that we are the party which is going to win the election. However, there are still some doubts, such as whether we will secure an absolute majority. Our desire is to have that majority, which will enable us to form a homogeneous government, not composed exclusively of people holding party cards, but quite the contrary, since, aware of the desire for change demanded of us by society, we wish to make an effort at integration to serve this idea better."

With respect to the kind of campaign which will predominate, the Socialist leader stated that there will be a dialectic "between those of us who are advocating a change in hope and those who are advocating a backward change; there are political forces which want change but which regard us as incapable of effecting it and will agree with those forces advocating a backward change." He referred to those who are attacking the PSOE on the basis of the French experience: "I must tell them that if inflation has increased by 2 percent in France, the same thing has happened in Spain, and the aims are not comparable."

Concerning the campaign in Catalonia and the Basque Country, Gonzalez stated that there will be individual features, "since the electoral opponents will be different: At any event, we believe that there will not be excessive bitterness over the issue of autonomy policy; if we govern we will wish to promote full cooperation between the autonomous governments and the central government.

FINLAND

DECISION IN PRINCIPLE TO SEND FORCES TO LEBANON

LD201426 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1200 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Text] The Finnish Government has taken a decision in principle to provide Finnish peacekeeping troops for the use of the UN secretary general to safeguard peace in Lebanon. The government has authorized Finland's permanent UN ambassador to contact the UN secretary general on the matter. The government has received a guarantee from the Ministry of Defense that a company of Finnish peacekeepers can be immediately detached for this duty, and according to Foreign Minister Par Stenback, Finnish troops in the Golan Heights will be considered for this duty. The government Foreign Affairs Committee has decided to endorse the UN Security Council statement which strongly condemns the massacre in west Beirut. The government holds the view that Israel is partly responsible for these events.

Stenback Interview

[From the "Radio Magazine" program]

[Excerpts] The Finnish Government has issued a statement condemning the massacre of the Palestinians in west Beirut. The government's statement says that Israel is partly responsible for the events in west Beirut. In connection with the statement, the government's Foreign Affairs Committee has also announced that Finland is prepared to send peacekeeping troops to Lebanon if necessary. Finland's permanent UN representative was authorized to inform the UN secretary general about Finland's readiness to participate in peacekeeping operations. This is what Foreign Minister Par Stenback had to say at a news conference this afternoon:

[Begin recording] [Question] Did the government (?discuss) the recognition of the PLO?

[Answer] [Word indistinct] the general attitude toward the PLO we have discussed, but no new decisions have been made yet. The discussion is sure to continue on the political level. There is no question of an actual recognition of the PLO or the preparation of a recognition, but of an arrangement of the relations (word indistinct].

[Question] Is this Beirut massacre and the situation in Lebanon in general the kind of phenomena which might, for instance, influence Finland's foreign policy in such a way that the foreign policy line would be increasingly dictated by [words indistinct]?

[Answer] This is a very tragic event and undoubtedly it will affect the opinions of Finns, but the principles which have dominated Finland's Middle East policy do not change as such on the basis of this tragic event. It does not affect the (?human) considerations, it will not lessen out condemnation of Israel in accordance with the Security Council view. We feel that since Israel announced that it had entered west Beirut for the specific purpose of protecting civilians, but in this situation had allowed -- or in the areas controlled by it, such a massacre had been allowed -- to take place, there is good reason to agree with this clear Security Council statement. [end recording]

Foreign Minister Par Stenback was interviewed by Markku Lehto.

SORSA ON USSR TRADE, MISSILES, NEUTRALITY, PLO

AU201236 Vienna ARBEITER-ZEITUNG in German 18 Sep 82 p 4

[Chief Editor Manfred Scheuch exclusive interview with Finnish Prime Minister Kalevi Sorsa on the occasion of Sorsa's official visit to Austria on 21-23 September; date, place not given]

[Excerpts] AZ: Finland's balance of trade with the Soviet Union shows a rather constant Finnish surplus, as distinct, for example, from Austria, where there is a deficit on account of the natural gas deliveries. Is Finland also importing Soviet natural gas? Are there any opportunities for larger purchases from the large neighbor so as to even up the balance of trade?

Sorsa: Finland has been importing natural gas from the Soviet Union since 1974. In that year, the construction of a natural gas pipeline from the Soviet Union to southeast Finland -- a joint project of the two countries -- was completed. In the past few years, we have imported about 1 billion cubic meters of natural gas annually from the Soviet Union. The capacity of the natural gas pipeline would permit even higher imports, but natural gas has not always been able to compete with the other sources of energy. Soviet natural gas meets about 3 percent of Finland's annual energy requirements.

At present, possibilities are being studied for increasing imports from the Soviet Union, but it is difficult to predict how soon tangible results will be achieved. One of the possibilities under review, for example, is on expansion of the natural gas pipeline to new places in southern Finland -- which is a big project both technically and economically and requires careful preparation.

Finland's trade with the USSR is at present marked by a very large Finnish surplus. Since our goods exchange is carried out on a bilateral basis, our trade should in the long run be more or less balanced. However, we do not want to balance it to the detriment of our exports, and that is why we are primarily attempting to find new import products in the Soviet Union. Natural gas is playing a prominent part in these considerations, and we hope that the problems which have hampered the growth of our imports can be solved.

AZ: One of the differences between Finnish and Austrian neutrality -- surely not a fundamental one -- is the fact that Finland's army has defensive missiles. Lately, one has heard about a plan to expand the antiaircraft defense around Helsinki. How far has this plan developed?

Sorsa: In accordance with the Paris peace treaty, Finland is entitled to acquire defensive missiles. Accordingly, Finland has actually acquired antiaircraft missiles for its army. Soviet territorial air defense missiles [territorialluftabwehrraketen] have to date been primarily acquired to improve the technical preparedness and for training purposes. At the same time, these missiles serve to strengthen the antiaircraft defense of the capital of Helsinki so as to bring it up to the latest level of development. The training of the air defense personnel has progressed according to plan. The territorial air defense missiles effectively contribute to strengthening the overall antiaircraft defense.

AZ: What would you consider to be the basic differences between Finnish and Austrian neutrality?

Sorsa: I believe it is neither expedient nor even possible to define the term neutrality so unequivocally that this definition could apply to all neutral states. That is why there are no two countries in Europe whose neutrality is identical.

If we look at Finland's and Austria's position, we should first of all take into consideration the fact that Austrian neutrality is based on a state treaty, while Finnish neutrality is based on the recognition of a consistently pursued policy of neutrality.

Every individual state -- whether it is neutral or not -- is seeking to pursue its own interests to the best of its ability within its own sphere of activity, which is of course, the legitimate endeavor as well as the duty of each individual state.

Any policy of neutrality is marked not only by formal factors but also by its economic interests. This explains the varied forms of neutrality. But it is precisely this variation that enables the neutrals to serve as an elastic connective tissue between the ossified blocs, and that is their most important function in the international society.

AZ: The situation in the Middle East continues to burden international relations. What is Finland's attitude toward the PLO?

Sorsa: The Palestinian question, in our opinion, is the most central issue of the Middle East conflict. We consistently advocate an overall solution which would not only guarantee the security of all states in the region but would also give the Palestinians the right to organize a state of their own, and in such a case would also ensure their right to national self-determination. We are of the opinion that the PLO must be entitled as an equal partner to represent its people at the negotiations in which an attempt is made to find a solution to the basic problem of the Middle East conflict. As early as 1974, we called for giving the PLO observer status in the United Nations and since then have maintained constant contacts with this organization with a view to opening a bureau in Helsinki. Since Finland only recognizes states, however, our relations with the PLO are only of an unofficial nature.

[Text] It is now believed that the crew of a Soviet vessel landed on Gotska Sandon [Swedish island north of Gotland] in the summer. Gotska Sandon is a prohibited military area. The security officer of the island (Hans Olin), says that in the early summer footsteps were found. At the same time, a Soviet vessel lay moored in the vicinity. (Hans Olin) says that the Soviet crew must have left the footsteps. He informed the coast artillery chief of Gotland about the matter, but no developments have as yet taken place. The police who usually investigate this type of territorial violation are not cognizant of the event, while the military command in Gotland has not received any formal notification.

U.S. 'BEARS HEAVY RESPONSIBILITY' IN LEBANON

PM201231 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 20 Sep 82 p 14

[Editorial: "Out of Control"]

[Text] Israel has been carried out of its depth in Lebanon. The massacres in the Palestinian camps took place as result of Israel's policies, whatever the direct responsibility. Mr Begin and Mr Sharon thought they could mastermind Lebanon. They thought that they could produce a vassal state there, with obedient mercenaries to do their bidding. Pride goes before a fall; great has been Israel's fall. Israel is now seen to have been consorting with forces alien to the spirit of the founding fathers. Pictures of the dead women and children in the Sabra-Shatila camp, seen by millions throughout the world, willy-nilly, recall pictures from Auschwitz and Warsaw. Something has gone dreadfully wrong.

The United States bears a heavy responsibility. From the early stages of Israel's invasion of Lebanon last June, it was clear that a multi-national force would be needed to hold the ring if the only possibly beneficial result of the invasion -- restored Lebanese unity and independence -- was to come about. Yet no moves were made. It was only in the very last stages that penny packets of American, French and Italian troops went to "supervise" the Palestine Liberation Organisation's evacuation of Beirut. Even they withdrew hastily before the agreed date. Israel's policy has been to keep inter-Arab disruption at a maximum. President Reagan's task now should be to arrange for the immediate despatch of an effective Western multi-national force to oversee the evacuation of Lebanon by Israeli and Syrian troops and the country's reconstruction. It is action long overdue.

[Excerpts] Commerce and Industry Minister Andreou today returned from his visits to Greece and Yugoslavia. Mr Andreou visited Greece at the invitation of [Greek] Commerce Minister Moraitis to attend the opening of the Thessaloniki International Fair. He also held talks with the Greek Government on matters under his jurisdiction. In Thessaloniki Mr Andreou had a brief conversation with Prime Minister Papandreou to whom he expressed Cyprus' gratitude for Greece's wholehearted support.

In Yugoslavia, Mr Andreou attended the Zagreb International Fair and participated in a congress on the industrial development of developing countries. He also reviewed Cypriot-Yugoslav trade relations with Federal Secretary of Foreign Trade Bojanic. The two men decided that a Yugoslav Government delegation should visit Cyprus to discuss ways of expanding trade between the two countries.

Mr Andreou was also received by the Yugoslav alternate prime minister [title as heard], who reaffirmed his country's support for the Cypriot people's struggle.

TURKISH CYPRIOTS TO MOURN WEST BEIRUT MASSACRE

TA201117 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Excerpt] A day of mourning has been declared in the TFSC following the massacre in the Palestinian refugee camps in west Beirut. Flags will be lowered to half-staff in government offices and schools in the TFSC tomorrow to mourn some 1,500 Palestinians who were killed in the massacre.

In a statement issued in Lefkosa [Nicosia] today, TFSC President Rauf Denktas said that this massacre of innocent and unarmed people in the refugee camps in Beirut must be thought-provoking for the entire world. He noted: Those who perpetrated and supported this and who did not prevent it although they had the power to do so are known to humanity and history. Despite this, such incidents are daily being brushed aside with protests and new UN resolutions and the screams of innocent people are rising. We are grieved on behalf of humanity.

SPOKESMAN SAYS OFFICIAL SOVIET VISIT PLANNED

[Text] The exact date of the visit to Athens by Soviet Prime Minister Nikolay Tikhonov -- which, according to a report in KIRIAKATIKI ELEVTHEROTIPIA yesterday, will most probably take place in January 1983 -- will be fixed following the consultations currently taking place between the two governments.

Deputy Minister for Press Issues Dhimitris Maroudhas, who is also government spokesman, confirmed the report carried by KIRIAKATIKI ELEVTHEROTIPIA. Answering a question he said:

"The visit of a top Soviet official has been awaited for a long time." "The exact date has not yet been fixed."

According to the latest reports, the Soviet side has already sought to settle a number of economic issues with the Greek Government with the ultimate aim of concluding a final agreement during Tikhonov's visit to Athens.

Authoritative diplomatic sources say the USSR has proposed the Greek Government link our country with the natural gas pipeline from Siberia. It is even said that the Soviets have expressed concern over reports that the American pipeline to Western Europe, which will pass through Turkey, will probably pass through Greece as well.

EVREN BLAMES ISRAEL FOR WEST BEIRUT INCIDENTS

TA201420 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1400 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Text] Head of State Gen Kenan Evren issued a statement on board his airplane en route to Yugoslavia today concerning the savage massacre of the civilian population in west Beirut.

Evren said that the Israeli forces who are controlling the area and the Israeli State bear great responsibility for the occurrence of the savage attack in west Beirut. Evren noted: We watched on television with horror the savage attack of forces that entered west Beirut. Whoever perpetrated this attack, it is savage and barbaric. The Israeli forces who are controlling the area and the Israeli State in general bear great responsibility for this attack. The entire civilized world must turn its eyes towards this area. As the Republic of Turkey, we condemn this incident and hope the United Nations organization will quickly take the necessary effective measures to provide tranquillity and security in this region.

EVREN LEAVES ON OFFICIAL VISIT TO BELGRADE

HUNGARIAN CULTURAL EXCHANGE PROGRAM REVIEWED

TA201600 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1515 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Text] Ankara, 20 Sep (AA) -- The cultural exchange program between Turkey and Hungary dating from 1981 was re-examined Monday between teams headed by Turkish Undersecretary of Culture and Tourism Kemal Gokce and Hungarian Deputy Minister of Culture Ferenc Ratkai.

Gokce deplored the lull in the exchange of artists, films and exhibits recently, while he commended the Hungarian Government's decision to build a monument to the memory of Ottomon Sultan Suleyman the Magnificent.

The opening of Hungarian nationalist Kossuth's home to visitors in Kutahya, Turkey, would present another opportunity for better understanding between the two nations, Gokce believed.

He called for mutual translation of selected works, exchange of scholars and folk dance troupes.

SYRIA TO SETTLE 5,000 PALESTINIANS ON BORDER

NC210918 Istanbul BULVAR in Turkish 16 Sep 82 p 1, 9

[Text] Tel Aviv (BULVAR) -- Syria is preparing to allow 5,000 Palestinian guerrillas who left Lebanon to settle on the Turkish border. Well-informed sources say that these guerrillas belong to the Habash, the Hawatimah and the Jibril branches of the PLO which are affiliated with Moscow. It is reported that among the PLO guerrillas, who were trained together with Armenian terrorists in Lebanon, there are also Turkish terrorists.

Preparations to settle such a large armed group near the Turkish borders and not on the Israeli borders, and the fact that the group includes Armenians, is characterized by the Israeli authorities as a movement directed against Turkey. The Israeli media say that Turkey has been informed. As is known, Syria, which has a hostile attitude toward Turkey, is training both Turkish terrorists fleeing from Turkey and Armenian terrorists.

In other developments, the interrogation of a group of Turkish terrorists caught in Lebanon has been completed. Meanwhile, during a raid on a PLO center near the town of Sayda, a Turkish woman who spoke English quite fluently and her husband were captured. Israeli authorities say this woman shouted in English at the soldiers: "Don't kill us; we are not terrorists." And yet, she was seen continually passing rifle magazines and ammunition to her Turkish husband. The Turkish woman and her husband are still being interrogated.

The Israeli authorities have stated that they are preparing to return [to Turkey] -- those Turks whose interrogation has been completed. They reported that some of these people said they were doing this for money, but also added that some of these Turks were wanted in Turkey. Israel is still interrogating these people in order to find out whether they were involved in acts of militancy against it.

MILLIYET: GREEK-TURKISH RELATIONS DETERIORATING

NC210846 Istanbul MILLIYET in Turkish 16 Sep 82 pp 1, 11

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] A much tested era in the Turkish-Greek relations is closing and, in all probability, a new era full of dark clouds is beginning.

The same scenario is being repeated persistently over the years. After a period of tension and storm, the Turkish and Greek authorities have agreed on the following: "Let us soften the atmosphere, let us not provoke each other." As if promising Turkey a present, Greece has been saying: "We will avail ourselves of this relaxed atmosphere and move on to serious talks step by step." But when the date of those "serious talks" approaches, something is bound to happen to bring about a sudden increase in tension.

In the end, instead of carrying out serious bargaining on say the Aegean or on any other prepared topic, the Turkish and Greek foreign ministers hold sessions dominated by mutual complaints and end their meetings without achieving anything. Then there is more tension and again efforts to create a relaxed atmosphere. This vicious circle is thus allowed to continue.

Prime Minister Papandreou's attitude is crystal clear: "No talks can be held with Turkey so long as there is a military administration there... Greece has nothing to discuss regarding the Aegean."

This policy, which the Papandreou administration started in the early days with much noise, and which it has had to moderate as a result of foreign pressure and internal circumstances, has never changed.

Last May, although Turkey knew that the moratorium would not work and that it was a mere tactic by Papandreou for gaining time, it nevertheless accepted it. It did so in order to show the world that "it was trying again in good faith and giving Papandreou another change." What is more, Ankara remained absolutely faithful to the moratorium, while Athens acted exactly the opposite.

On the whole, Papandreou has restricted his speeches but he has never refrained from displaying his feelings at the most crucial moments. Almost as if he were using the Turks at the Lavrion camp, he did not prevent them from staging anti-Turkey demonstrations. He has openly supported the Armenians in Greece and Cyprus in their campaign against Turkey. He has failed to stop his propaganda for even a little while, which would help create an atmosphere of relaxation to which Turkey is so sensitive.

What has Turkey achieved from the moratorium? The question of the Aegean control command within the NATO framework is still on the shelf. [Greece] has acted in the meantime as if the airspace over the Aegean Islands was 10 miles and as if Turkey had accepted this. It has become clear that Athens is not going to Ottawa for serious talks.

The period ahead of us is a period full of tensions and dark clouds. The danger lies in the fact that Ankara has come to realize that no agreement can be reached with Papandreou. We must not doubt in the least that the world will be told that the "moratorium has been violated by the Turks." We must not therefore cherish the illusion that "the world has witnessed too" [as published].

So, within this framework, future developments will depend wholly on Greece's attitude. As long as Greece continues to prefer an escalation [of tension], tension will mount.

It would be very much in the interests of both the Greek prime minister and our region, which is shaken by dangers, if he stopped dreaming of becoming "the man who has brought democracy to Turkey" and chose relaxation to escalation.

So long as the Greek authorities do not abandon the idea of "we are trying to keep Turkey quiet," it will be terribly difficult to eliminate the tension between the two countries.

TURK-IS LEADER CRITICIZES DRAFT CONSTITUTION

TA201601 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1540 GMT 20 Sep 82

[Text] Ankara, 20 Sep (AA) -- President Sevket Vilmaz of the Turkish Confederation of Labor "TURK-IS" said the draft constitution as it stands after the first reading in the Consulative Assembly was "disappointing".

Opening a leadership training seminar for women workers sponsored jointly by TURK-IS and the Asia-American Free Labor Institute "AAFLI" which opened in Ankara Monday, Vilmaz said the draft constitution at the moment strips the worker of union protection, and (by lifting the check-off system of paying dues) dries up the financial resources of the unions for services to members through research, training, legal advice and cooperatives.

The strike, Vilmaz noted, was not a means of damage, but a sanction for social justice, a useful tool in capable hands. TURK-IS had always used the strike responsibly, he added.

If the strike is limited to a maximum of 60 days as the draft provides for, Vilmaz said, it will have no practical significance. The limit will reduce the bargaining power of labor to nil, while it will lead the employer into believing he can insist on his own demands to the end. "There could be no better way to disrupt labor peace" than to restrict the right to strike, Vilmaz retorted.

The TURK-IS president said he did not expect much from the second reading of the draft constitution in the Consultative Assembly, where the majority, and particularly the "learned men on the drafting committee" seemed to give vent to their own petty angers and dreams.

Vilmaz hoped the five-man National Security Council, which will review the draft constitution and make the final revisions, would produce a "contemporary and democratic" constitution worthy of the Turkish people.

FIVE KURDISH WORKERS PARTY MEMBERS DIE IN PRISON

NC180842 Paris AFP in English 0803 GMT 18 Sep 82

[Text] Athens, Sept 18 (AFP) -- Five leaders of the Kurdish Workers Party have died in southern Turkey's Diyabakir Prison after a hunger strike begun on July 15, the committee for Turkish and Kurdish refugees in Greece said here.

The five, named as Kemal Pir, H. Durmus, Mustafa Karasu, Ali Gicek and Betrettin Kavak, were protesting alleged torture and summary executions in Turkey, three members of the committee -- their faces masked by scarves -- told a press conference.

The Greek Government had asked the committee not to do anything that might jeopardize moves to iron out longstanding differences between Athens and Ankara, the three added.

On Tuesday, Turkish Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen asked Greek authorities to prevent Turkish refugees from taking part in political activity.

This followed an assault on a Turkish air attache during a demonstration the day before to mark the second anniversary of the military taking power in Turkey.

[Text] This morning, some 30 Kurds and other members of the opposition in Turkey occupied the offices of the Amnesty International organization in Vienna's first district. According to one of the occupiers, this is a nonviolent act through which pressure is to be exerted upon Amnesty International to pay increased attention to the persecution of Kurds in Turkey. According to the occupiers, similar operations are currently also underway at the Amnesty International offices in the FRG, in Denmark, Switzerland, the Netherlands, Sweden and France.

IRAQI TERRORIST GROUP CLAIMS CREDIT FOR BOMBING

[Text] In a telephone call to KURIER on Tuesday, a terrorist group calling itself the "Iraqi Democratic Front" claimed responsibility for the bomb attacks on the Iraqi Embassy and the Iraqi airlines buildings in Vienna on Monday night. State security police immediately started a search for the anonymous caller, who made no reference to the motive behind the attacks.

To date, the investigation into the bombings has not brought forth any tangible results as to the identity of the perpetrators. They used 1 kg of TNT for each of the two explosive devices.

CENTRISTS SEEN BLOCKING FORMATION PROCESS

PM221001 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 17 Sep 82 p 3

[Unnamed "own correspondents" report: "People's Party for Freedom and Democray's Attitude Toward Government Formation Negotiations Leader Is Improper"]

[Excerpt] The Hague -- Christian Democratic Appeal [CDA] parliamentary group leader Lubbers considers the refusal by the People's Party for Freedom and Democracy [VVD] to take any further part in the talks on the cabinet formation objectionable. According to Lubbers, the liberals [VVD] are causing time to be lost and are acting incorrectly toward the government formation negotiations leader, who is appointed by the head of state.

In talks with VVD parliamentary group leader Nijpels earlier this week, Lubbers urgently requested the liberal leader to continue to take part in the negotiations.

In his turn, Nijpels considers that it is a waste of time to continue to take part in negotiations which must of necessity lead to a cabinet comprising the Labor Party [PvdA] and the CDA or, the PvdA and the VVD, both with the possible involvement of Democrats '66. "It must be made clear that we do not favor these two combinations," Nijpels wrote in his letter to negotiation leader Nan Kemenade.

CDA parliamentary group leader Lubbers has advised his VVD counterpart only to terminate the talks after it is clear that there are insurmountable policy differences. According to Lubbers, such a point has not yet been reached -- first, because there have been no negotiations about socioeconomic problems and, second, because nuclear arms still have to be discussed.

The standpoint adopted by VVD parliamentary group leader Nijpels, who is supported by his parliamentary party, amounts to an embargo against the PvdA. Earlier this week, Nijpels said that there would have to be an earthquake with the PvdA before cooperation with the VVD would be possible. Thus, at present the VVD is excluding the possibility of cooperation with the PvdA. But Nijpels' letter to Van Kemenade says that in a later phase talks with the PvdA might be possible.

DE VOLKSKRANT VIEWS CABINET FORMATION SCHEDULE

[Text] The Hague -- It is probable that the Second Chamber groups of the Labor Party, the Christian Democratic Appeal [CDA] and Democrats '66 [D'66] will not be informed of the outcome of their leaders' talks with government formation negotiations leader Van Kemenade until after next weekend [25/26 September]. Then the Second Chamber groups will have to decide whether they are willing to proceed further with negotiations which could lead to the formation of a cabinet.

This is apparent from the timetable drawn up by negotiations leader Van Kemenade. At the end of next week, he will present to Den Uyl [Labor Party], Lubbers [CDA] and Brinkhorst of D'66 a list of major points in the field of social and economic policy. This cannot be done any earlier, because on Monday [20 September], the nuclear arms question will be discussed. On Tuesday, the budget will be presented to the First and Second Chambers and the head of state will read the queen's speech. On Wednesday and Thursday, CDA group leader Lubbers will be in Brussels for a meeting of the Brandt Commission.

Thus, Van Kemenade can discuss his socioeconomic list with the CDA negotiator on Thursday evening at the earliest, or on Friday. The work of the negotiation leader will also be delayed somewhat by the absence of D'66 Chairman Brinkhorst, who returns on Wednesday morning from a visit to the United States.

It is Van Kemenade's intention to raise the question of nuclear arms again at the end of next week. The Labor Party negotiation leader will also present the parliamentary group leaders with a note on the subject.

When these proposals from Van Kemenade have been discussed, the CDA group leader wants to consult his parliamentary group. Only after the discussion of socioeconomic problems and the nuclear arms issue will "the political minefield be charted."

It is primarily the CDA parliamentary group which will decide whether Van Kemehade, who will then be into his third week of government formation negotiations, will advise the head of state whether a coalition of other parties with his own stands a real chance of success. Given the divisions within the CDA parliamentary group, and the attitude of the People's Party for Freedom and Democracy toward the Christian Democrats, the possibility of such a coalition cannot be ruled out entirely.

But first, Van Kemenade must present proposals which make the disagreements on the subject of nuclear arms open to discussion. On the basis of the "political testaments" of the outgoing foreign and defense ministers and the party programs, Van Kemenade will attempt to formulate a proposal this weekend. He will discuss this proposal with Den Uyl on Monday morning and with Lubbers later in the day.

ARMS EMBARGO ON ARGENTINA TO BE LIFTED

[Text] The Netherlands has decided to lift the arms embargo it imposed on Argentina as a result of the conflict with Great Britain in the South Atlantic.

This information was disseminated in The Hague after consultations with EEC authorities.

A spokesman for the Netherlands Foreign Ministry has stated that there is no reason to maintain the embargo since there are no signs that the hostilities will be resumed.

GOVERNMENT ISSUES STATEMENT ON LEBANON

LD221432 Hamburg DPA in German 1349 GMT 22 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn, 22 Sep (DPA) -- The Federal Government has called for an "immediate and complete clarification" of the massacre in the Palestinian camps in Beirut. A cabinet statement on the situation in Lebanon, read today by government spokesman Klaus Boelling, says that this must be done through an independent investigation.

The government also announces that in the course of its joint efforts with the EEC partners for a comprehensive Middle East peace settlement, it will "maintain and expand" its contacts with "all parties involved." Boelling indicated that this also included contacts with the PLO. Asked whether Bonn was interested in a talk with PLO head Yasir 'Arafat, Beolling said: "If Mr 'Arafat wanted to come to the Federal German Republic, then the matter would have to be thought over."

The statement again sharply condemns the massacre of the Palestinians in Beirut, which was probably committted by the Christian Phalangist milita, as a "criminal act." The government repeated its "deep shock and revulsion" at the bloodbath and demanded that all necessary measures be taken to prevent a repetition and ensure the safety of the civilian population.

In this connection, Bonn welcomed the move to increase the number of UN observers in Lebanon and the intention of the United States, France and Italy to send troops to Lebanon again. Israel is urged to withdraw its troops from west Beirut ("a violation of the Habib plan").

CDU/CSU PARLIAMENTARY GROUP VOTES FOR KOHL

LD211120 Hamburg DPA in German 1050 GMT 21 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn, 21 Sep (DPA) -- The CDU/CSU parliamentary group voted almost unanimously today for opposition leader Helmut Kohl to be the candidate for chancellor at the constructive vote of no confidence a week from Friday. In a secret ballot, Kohl received 228 of the 231 votes cast. One deputy voted against, another abstained. Kohl himself did not vote. Afterward, he expressed great satisfaction at the result.

WISCHNEWSKI, NOT GENSCHER, WILL SPEAK AT UN

[Excerpt] Bonn, 22 Sep (DPA) -- Minister of State Hans-Juergen Wischnewski (SPD) will address the UN General Assembly in New York on September 30th, taking the place of former Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher. Nothing more is yet known about Wischnewski's plans. Wischnewski, who is functioning as a double minister in the Federal Chancellor's Office and the Foreign Ministry, will probably fly to New York solely for the purpose of giving the speech. He will be representing Chancellor Helmut Schmidt in the new capacity as foreign minister.

Well-informed sources in Bonn said today that State Secretary in the Foreign Ministry Berndt von Staden will fly to New York on 28 September. Genscher had arranged to have talks with U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrey Gromyko and GDR Foreign Minister Oskar Fishcer. It is not clear whether Von Staden can conduct these talks. It is expected in Bonn that Von Staden will be able to take part in the scheduled working meetings of the Namibia contact group of the five powers, among others.

FINANCE, ECONOMY, FOREIGN RESIDENTS DISCUSSED

LD211622 Hamburg DPA in German 1535 GMT 21 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn 21 Sep (DPA) -- After the formation of a new government, the CDU/CSU and the FDP want to withdraw the 1983 draft budget put forward by the social-liberal coalition and present a new one. This was confirmed by FDP Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher following further coalition talks with the CDU/CSU on Tuesday in Bonn. Genscher stressed that in the coming budget negotiations, the latest developments should be taken into account. "This is a difficult decision," he conceded.

The problems of finance, the economy and foreign residents were the main topics of the coalition talks between the leaderships of the two union parties and the FDP. It was said after the 2 1/2 hour talk that after the primary fundamental decisions have been made, further details will be elaborated in working groups. The next round of talks is planned for this Thursday.

CSU chief Franz-Josef Strauss, who left the talks before 1500 because of election commitments, told journalists: "We made a good bit of headway." The outlines discussed in the talks will now be fleshed out by experts. "Then the plan will be adopted," Strauss said. CDU Chairman Helmut Kohl also stressed that a good deal was achieved. He said that the balancing of the 1983 federal budget, the improvement of the economy and the problem of foreign residents were covered. Solutions must be reached by the end of the year.

POLL FINDS FDP SHARE OF VOTE TO BE 2.3 PERCENT

LD221636 Hamburg DPA in German 1603 GMT 22 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn 22 Sep (DPA) -- The negotiations between the CDU/CSU and the FDP on the formation of a new federal government are being accompanied by continuing internal FDP divisions on which direction to pursue. One day before the third round of negotiations, four regional FDP associations pushed through an extraordinary party congress which, however, it will not be possible to hold before the constructive vote of no confidence against Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt next Friday. Meanwhile, in a lightning poll for DIE ZEIT, the Allensbach Institute has found that at present, the FDP would only receive 2.3 percent of the votes in Bundestag elections.

GENSCHER INTERVIEWED ON INTERNAL FDP PROBLEMS

DW231049 Mainz ZDF Television Network in German 1700 GMT 22 Sep 82

[Interview with FDP Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher by reporter Hirsch on 22 September, place not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Question] Four FDP land organizations have demanded a special party congress. Will this special party congress take place, and could it possibly become a test of the FDP's cohesion?

[Answer] Certainly not a test of our cohesion, but there will be intense discussions. The four land organizations have a right to request this party congress. We are currently examining whether their request can be met by holding the federal party congress earlier than originally planned.

[Question] Mrs Schuchardt spoke today of a move forced on the party from above which caused the coalition to collapse. How do you view things?

[Answer] This was certainly not the case. The decisions we base our actions on are those of the FDP Federal Executive Board and the Bundestag faction. It must be expressly said in this connection that this majority decision -- a decision by a large majority of the Bundestag faction -- was responsibly made by elected deputies. The FDP is a liberal party and is a party loyal to the constitution. Therefore, no imperative commands exist in our party.

[Question] Some segments of your party's left-liberal wing have demanded immediate new elections. In Hesse, some segments of the party are even calling for an election boycott.

[Answer] There have been discussions on new elections. However, the majority decided to first get our house in order and adopt measures to combat unemployment, then face the voters. This will take place on 6 March.

[Question] The party's leftwing doesn't want to cooperate in Hesse; it isn't campaigning for the FDP.

[Answer] There are some people among them who make us happy by not campaigning.

[Question] Do you think that there is still a place for those people in the party?

[Answer] It is the responsibility of those people to decide this themselves.

NICARAGUAN HEAD OF STATE'S VISIT POSTPONED

LD221712 Hamburg DPA in German 0546 GMT 22 Sep 82

[Text] Managua, 22 Sep (DPA) -- The planned visit to Bonn this weekend by the Nicaraguan head of state, Daniel Ortega Saavedra, has been indefinitely postponed "by mutual agreement." This was announced by the Foreign Ministry in Managua last night. A short statement gave as the reason, the "present political situation in the FRG." Ortega, who is coordinator of the Nicaraguan governing "Junta of National Reconstruction," was to have stayed in the Federal Republic for 3 days at the invitation of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt.

COMMENTATOR VIEWS U.S.-USSR GRAIN DEALS

[Commentary signed KPK: "Depending on Each Other"]

[Text] The Americans produce far more grain than they need themselves, the Soviets produce by far not enough for themselves. The Americans must try to sell their overproduction of grain and the Soviets must try to buy the needed grain supplies somewhere. The old and obvious procedure that the Soviet Union buys most of its needed grain supplies from the United States has experienced a political setback in the past 2 1/2 years.

In early 1980, there was the partial embargo on grain supplies to the Soviet Union under President Carter as an answer to the Russian invasion of Afghanistan; today there are President Reagan's sanctions against Moscow (because of developments in Poland) together with the attempt to block the Soviet-European natural gas pipeline deal. Despite this political hardening, America wants to increase its grain supplies to the Soviets. It is pressing for it almost as if nothing has happened.

You can understand it: American silos are bursting with grain, high interest rates are a great burden, and the new harvest is setting a new record. Political pressure exerted by the American farmers' lobby on the government is strong, demanding that something eventually be done. For such quantities however, only the Soviet Union, the great customer, comes to mind (also because of its purchasing power). Other sales possibilities on the world market have been more or less exploited. Hardly a day passed in the last 2 or 3 months without the U.S. secretary of agriculture telling the farmers somewhere in the country that he is optimistic with regard to an extension of the grain agreement between the two countries. Now, once it has been extended, he spreads optimism that Soviet orders will soon come in.

The Soviets, however, are in no hurry. However, they cannot afford "offending" the Americans by ignoring them. Without American help, the Soviets will be unable to close their grain gap in the long run. So, (gritting their teeth), both depend on each other.

MITTERRAND SENDS CONGRATULATIONS TO AL-JUMAYYIL

AB231058 Paris Diplomatic Information Service in French 1005 GMT 23 Sep 82

[Message dated 22 September from French President Francois Mitterrand to Lebanese President-elect Amin al-Jumayyil]

[Text] Mr President, I am anxious to address to you my warm congratulations as you are about to assume the highest functions of the Lebanese State in exceptional and extremely dramatic circumstances for your people, your family and yourself.

You have just achieved the much expected union of the Lebanese people around you. The indisputable authority conferred on you by the national will will enable you to ensure the progress of Lebanon on the path of final reconciliation and assert its presence and independence on the international scene.

In the name of the French people, who are more than ever by the side of Lebanon, Mr President, I address to you my warm wishes for the success of your mission as well as the expression of my personal sentiments.

MAUROY ADDRESSES NATIONAL ASSEMBLY ON LEBANON

AB221127 Paris Diplomatic Information Service in French 1010 GMT 22 Sep 82

[Premier Pierre Mauroy's address to the National Assembly in Paris on 21 September 1982]

[Text] Mr Speaker, ladies and gentlemen and deputies: Last evening the president of the republic announced to the country that French troops would take part in a new multinational force in Lebanon. He indicated that the mission of this force will be "to contribute to the return of security and respect for the rights of peoples." As in the case of the preceding mission, which resulted from the agreement we signed with the Lebanese Government on 19 August, our troops will act side by side with American and Italian soldiers.

The first French contingent of 350 men will be in place by Thursday evening. The second and third contingents will be dispatched as soon as possible.

The rapidity of our reaction befits the emotions aroused in France and in the whole world by the massacres perpetrated at Sabra and Shatila. The complication of circumstances denounced by the president of the republic last July has now produced the results he feared at that time. Unfortunately, the warnings issued by France were ignored and we are now expressing horror over this massacre of innocent people. France will never accept that.

The government regrets that the international community was unable to implement the clear proposals made by France on 24 June. We have lost 3 precious months. Faithful to the defense of human rights, France is now taking the necessary measures to put an end to the trials of the tragically tested population. As it would take too long to implement the UN Security Council decision, we have, with the agreement of the Lebanese Government and the countries of the Arab world, decided on an immediate multinational action.

France is also faithful to the policy it has always advocated with regard to the Palestinian people and which was expressed by the president of the republic on 24 June and 18 August. The preceding mission of the French troops in Lebanon consisted of ensuring the departure of the Palestinian soldiers from Beirut in security and dignity. It also consisted of saving the PLO leaders, who were threatened with physical elimination. We thus intend to safeguard the chances of a political dialogue with the PLO in conformity with what France has always advocated.

From the beginning of the Israeli invasion, France has continued to recommend that the PLO's abandonment of the military path should be compensated by the recognition of that organization's major political role. This is the idea that formed the basis of the French-Egyptian resolution submitted to the UN Security Council on 28 July.

Allow me to reiterate that to us, the immediate solution to the Middle East crisis lies in the evacuation of foreign troops from Lebanon and the respect of the following rights:

-- The right of all the states in the region to existence and security.

-- The right of the Palestinian people to self-determination and the founding of a nation.

-- Mutual and simultaneous recognition among the parties concerned.

We also remain attached to a Lebanon which is always threatened by civil war but which, in the midst of trials, arrives at endowing itself with a head of state by preserving the democratic functioning of its institutions. France will continue to do everything possible, so that Lebanon may recover its sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity.

In this present crisis, France trusts the democratic values of the Israeli state. It is sensitive to the moves requesting an independent inquiry by President Yitzhaq Navon, whose good faith cannot be questioned in the massacre of the Palestinians. It hopes that a similar move will be initiated by the new Lebanese leader.

The abominable excesses committed in Lebanon should not in any case serve as excuse for an anti-Semitic campaign. I say very strongly that the Jewish community in our country, which is celebrating its traditional festivals today, is the victim of odious and cowardly attempts. From the platform of this Assembly, I want to solemnly restate the solidarity of the entire French nation.

On 19 August, before the agreement reached with the Lebanese government and accepted by all the parties in the conflict was made public, I had alerted the presidents of the parliamentary assemblies of it by letter. Today, before the new agreement with the Lebanese Government is formalised, I continue to alert the national representation of it.

I wish to state that if this second mission is necessary, it is because the mandate given to the first international force was not to protect the civilian population in Beirut. At that time, we should have provided for the troops staying much longer.

In this regard, I observe that the French troops were the first to arrive and the last to return. The Americans left on 10 September, the Italians on 12 September and the French on 14 September. It is in conformity with the accords signed and the request made by the Lebanese Government that this withdrawal was made.

The mandate of the new international force should therefore be specified taking this precedent into account. Contacts were made soon after the election of Amin al-Jumayyil, the new Lebanese president.

Members of parliament, such is the meaning and the span of the decision announced by the president of the republic to the nation yesterday. This decision is in conformity with France's commitments and noblest historic traditions.

NO TIME LIMIT SET ON FORCES' STAY IN BEIRUT

[Excerpts] The Council of Ministers session has ended, Dominique Souchier reports.

[Souchier] The cabinet discussed Lebanon, and on that subject, Charles Hernu has just pointed out to us that there was no time limit to the mandate fixed for the French forces which have departed for Beirut, forces which will arrive there before 1400 tomorrow. The minister of defense added: This second mission, if not more difficult than the first, is at least a more delicate one.

LE MONDE EDITORIAL ON BEIRUT MASSACRE

[Text] The massacre of the Palestinians in Beirut is not the first in the Near East's contemporary history, and previous ones have shown us that their perpetrators and victims illustrate the violence and martyrology of all the parties involved, of all religions and all ideologies, There are no longer any innocent people, except on an individual basis, and the guilty parties change. That is the absurd but inevitable logic of any confrontation which is based on the adversaries' denial of each other's existence and which aspires to carry on to the end.

As long as this is the situation in the Near East or elsewhere, there will be terrorism and massacres. Neither phenomenon is the result of a mistake or blunders. They are the products of a situation and, in some cases, a policy. It is certainly because of the policy pursued by its government that Israel is now confronting accusations because it bears grave responsibility in the Beirut massacres.

It bears that responsibility because the Israeli troops went much further than the objective initially announced, which was to guarantee peace in Galilee. That was not a mistake.

It bears responsibility because those same troops pursued their true objectives after Bashir al-Jumayyil's death by invading west Beirut. That was not a mistake either. The violation of the agreement was based on the need to maintain order. Whac order? Today it is an order of terror.

The traditional efficiency of the Israel Defense Forces, which were nonetheless so very present, so close to the scenes of the crime, was, it seems, lacking for 36 hours. How can we not think that the "opping up" -- a frightful term -- was allowed to be carried out in the Palestinian camps in west Beirut since from the beginning, that seemed to be the goal of the military intervention in Lebanon. How can people henceforth accept the explanations given by Mr Begin and Mr Sharon on which doubts are cast by their fellow citizens? If international and Israeli opinion demands explanations, it is from them that they must demand them. Emotion or anger cannot justify confusion between a policy and the destiny of a people; otherwise we would move from opposition of the former to condemnation of the latter, and in this case, slide down the familiar slope of anit-semitism.

The Jerusalem government's political responsibility is shared by those who thought it right to allow it to settle the Palestinian problem in its own way, not going too far but, nonetheless, going far enough. The U.S. leaders are ill-placed to complain about Mr Begin, to whom they have conceded so much. They claimed to exercise their responsibilities while refusing to shoulder them to the end.

If the United States wishes to play a pacifying role in that region of the world, it will have to show more personal courage and more perspicacity in the causes it supports. It may perhaps do better to come more into accord with its European allies' opinions.

Further Reaction

[Eidtorial: "Mr Begin's Bankruptcy"]

[Text] If pain and pity bring lucidity, indignation and disgust tend to cloud the vision. The crime which has just been committed against hundreds of Palestinian civilians in Beirut was bound to prompt the inaccurate language of anger, or selfish exploitation of the horror. Nonetheless, it is necessary to try to draw from it its repercussions on the whole Near East situation -- repercussions which are already considerable.

In Lebanon itself -- however frequent atrocities have been in all camps in the past -- the Sabra and Shatila massacre, committed in cold blood outside the murderous insanity of the civil war, is in no way seen as a development or revival of the latter. Moreover, it has not prevented Lebanese Muslims from rallying to the candidacy of Phalangist leader Amin al-Jumayyil, who is going to be elected president of the republic more easily than even his brother Bashir. The massacre perpetrated by Israeli army auxiliaries who usurp the fine name of "free Lebanon" further increases the climate of national unity which, paradoxically, the invader has recreated against himself completing the work of an excessively long conflict of which every Lebanese is sick to death.

By deliberately concealing the massacre committed by its armed henchmen -- because no "blunder" could conceivably continue for 36 hours only 200 meters from the Jewish state's soldiers -- Israel has followed through Mr Begin's own insane logic. Fortunately, many Israelis do not launch themselves with him into that paranoia which sees in the "terrorists" -- and every Palestinian is presumed to be such -- absolute evil and a bunch of villains to be exterminated. It is to be hoped that revolt and disgust will bring about a change in Israeli opinion, moving toward more reasonable positions before the general election. In any case, the horror of the scense being shown on U.S. television will push the influential U.S. Jewish community in that direction, and hence toward the Labor Party.

Has the international community done its duty in full? Mr 'Arafat is condemning the absence of the intermediary force, and it is easy to understand his bitterness. Of course, as Mr Cheysson points out, the U.S., French and Italian soldiers did not have the job of "protecting civilians" and left when their mission was accomplished.

That mission could have been defined more liberally and realistically if the Americans, still suffering the effects of the Vietnam War, had not speeded up the withdrawal process and refused to take the slightest risk in the field even though they play a leading role in the whole affairs.

In any case, the tragic failure of the Israeli "pacification" shows that Lebanon is now more than ever in need of friends and protectors other than Jerusalem.

LE FIGARO Criticizes U.S.

PM220951 Paris LE FIGARO in French 20 Sep 82 p 1

[Text] The Beirut massacre is a crime and a mistake. The crime is unpardonable. The consequences of the mistake must be controlled and limited as far as possible. This is in the interests of Lebanon and of the entire international community.

It is futile to issues anathemas. It is necessary to analyze the causes and to consider what actions are to be carried out. The events in Beirut were not inevitable. The "c'est la guerre" of the military Pontius Pilates is unacceptable, and credit must be given to Israel for not having washed its hands of this tragedy.

Perhaps some day we will know exactly who the authors of the killings are. The only fact that is at all certain now is that they are Christian militiamen (but which ones?). It was known from the outset that there was a major threat that accounts would be squared between Lebanese Christians and Palestinians once the PLO military forces had left. This, moreover, was the argument used by the Israelis for occupying west Beirut last Tuesday night.

The Israeli army must now bear the burden of the responsibility that it decided to assume in this way. We opt for the hypothesis apparently closest to the truth, namely that the IDF [Israel Defense Froces], though reputed for its efficiency, was unable to control its Christian allies and to prevent the heinous crime committed by some of them.

What must also be stressed, it seems, is the responsibility of President Reagan and of the U.S. Congress. By grudgingly agreeing to send the Marines to Beirut and then suddenly withdrawing them very prematurely, drawing the Italian and French forces in their wake, the Americans took a huge risk out of cowardliness ("Let's not engage the boys," congressmen said), inconsistency and too many reservations. This inconsistency was again apparent last week when Washington tacitly approved, then officially condemned, the Israeli army's entry into west Beirut. A state which does not speak clearly does not risk being understood.

It is now obvious that the international buffer force should not have been withdrawn from Beirut, that on the contrary, its mission should have been extended. It alone could have properly guaranteed the transition in the Lebanese capital before that country's regular army took control.

The UN Security Council deliberated and reached a wise conclusion the other night in seeking specific and possible forms of action to restore a minimum level of control in Beirut. The return, albeit belated, of an internaitonal force was certainly a good decision.

Moreover, it must be realized that like it or not, the international community, and above all the countries most directly concerned (the United States, France, Italy, and so forth), must consider themselves responsible for Lebanon and take the necessary decisions, whomsoever it may displease. The time is more than ripe to deal efficiently and courageously with Lebanon's human tragedy and its consequences for peace.

MAUROY CITED ON MILITARY SERVICE, NEUTRON WEAPON

PM221441 Paris LE MONDE in French 21 Sep 82 p 48

[Excerpts] Speaking to a civilian and military audience at the Higher National Defense Studies Institute Monday morning, 20 September, Premier Pierre Mauroy advocated a reform of military service whose length would vary from 6 to 18 months according to the post held by the young conscript. In addition, he expressed the view that the neutron weapon had a place in the French nuclear deterrence panoply.

"The definition of a new model for the army is now the subject of preparatory work on military planning for 1984-1988, Mr Mauroy said. When decisions have been taken, it will be possible to specify the number of men, the distribution among the different categories of personnel and hence the effects on national service. In other words, the positions put forward during the presidential election have not been abandoned."

Of course, there are economic constraints which prevent us from envisaging the abrupt reduction in manpower which would be caused by reduction to 6 months service without any compensatory measure. Thus the reduction of the length of military service can be studied after discussion of the planning law.

With regard to the neutron weapon (or neutron bomb), Mr Mauroy said: "Consideration is still being given to the enhanced radiation weapon. That nuclear weapon par excellence would make it possible to reduce the damage to the infrastructure necessary for maneuvering forces. It is therefore conceivable that it might take its place in our deterrence potential. But no decision has been taken yet. We are only at the stage of developing that weapon. That modernization and strengthening of our potential in no way involves a change in the countercity strategy. It is still the relentless but inevitable foundation of deterrence of the strong by the weak."

Such a development would eventually lead to the end of conscritption and the republican principle of the equality of citizens.

"It is necessary, therefore, to think about alterations to be made to military service, bearing in mind that the essential and even the only justification for that service is the country's defense. A reduction in its length can therefore be envisaged provided it makes it possible to maintain the military efficacy of the conscript units. [quote marks as published]

VIETNAMESE FOREIGN MINISTER TALKS WITH CHEYSSON

PM221421 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 18 Sep 82 p 8

[Text] Nguyen Co Thach, foreign minister of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, arrived in Paris yesterday and will spend 2 or 3 days here before going to New York to attend the UN General Assembly.

Nguyen Co Thach, who is a member of the Vietnamese Communist Party Politburo, met with PCF Central Committee Secretary Maxime Gremetz. The warm and friendly meeting provided an opportunity to reaffirm the two parties' joint desire to develop their relations and contribute to the development of cooperation between France and Vietnam.

The Vietnamese foreign minister had talks yesterday afternoon with French External Relations Minister Claude Cheysson. Before the meeting, Mr Nguyen Co Thach had specified: "We will discuss bilateral relations and the very important although discreet contribution which France is making to the maintenance of stability in Southeast Asia.

FOREIGN MINISTRY STATEMENT ON PEACE FORCE

AU222035 Rome ANSA in English 1905 GMT 22 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, September 22 -- The primary task of the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon will be to offer assistance to [words indistinct] government in the Beirut area to enable it to restore its sovereignty and thereby guarantee "the safety of the population and put an end to recurrent violence", according to an Italian Foreign Ministry statement today.

The note said that efforts are under way at the diplomatic level to draft the joint American-French-Italian force [word indistinct] through exchange of letters between the Lebanese Government and each of the three countries sending troops to Beirut.

As for the duration of the force's mandate, the Italian Foreign Ministry statement said it is likely to be "limited in time without a pre-established expiration date".

Spadolini Comments

AU222105 Rome ANSA in English 1935 GMT 22 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, September 22 -- Italian Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini today voiced "deep satisfaction" for the "rapid decision of the Washington and Paris governments" to adhere to the Italian proposal to send peacekeeping troops to Lebanon to "prevent further bloodshed" in Beirut.

Speaking at a cabinet session to formalize the government's decision to send an Italian contingent to Lebanon, Spadolini said that "the new mission is a first step toward an international action to restore peaceful conditions and effective independence in Beirut and in the martyred Lebanese nation.

"Italy's aim, in close cooperation with its European partners and the United States, is to assist in reestablishing full Lebanese national sovereignty within the framework of lasting equilibrium in the entire Mideast region, through a stable understanding between Arabs and Israelis".

During the cabinet meeting, the prime minister also voiced a "firm condemnation and reprehension for the bloody events which culminated in the tragic slayings of Palestinian refugees and civilians which have overwhelmed the friendly Lebanese nation".

Later in the session, Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo and Defense Minister Lelio Lagorio reported on ongoing talks with the French and U.S. Governments and on the organization aspects of Italian participation in the multinational force.

The Italian Contingent will comprise one thousand troops -- Bersaglieri, paratroopers and marine units. Three hundred troops of the special marine units set sail this afternoon on board the vessel "Grado" from Brindisi.

Composition of Force

[Text] The Council of Ministers has formalized the decision to reassign to Lebanon the Italian troops who will form a multinational control force with the French and the Americans. According to a government communique, at the end of the meeting Prime Minister Spadolini emphasized that Italy, in close cooperation with other European partners and the United States, aims to assist in the restoration of full national sovereignty in Lebanon within the framework of a durable balance in the Middle East region through lasting agreement between the Arabs and the Israelis.

COLOMBO COMMENTS ON LEBANON, 'ARAFAT VISIT

AU221713 Rome ANSA in English 1525 GMT 22 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) -- Rome, September 22 -- The Israeli military occupation of Moslem west Beirut last week, in the aftermath of the assassination of Lebanese President-elect Bashir al-Jumayyil, was described by the Italian foreign minister, Emilio Colombo, as "an extremely serious policy mistake" and a "flagrant failure (of the Israelis) to keep their word" as regards the understanding worked out through United States mediation with Lebanese authorities and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Colombo also reiterated the Rome government's "strong condemnation" of the massacre of Palestinian civilians conducted in the Beirut refugee camps of Shatila and Sabra in his statement to the Senate Foreign Affairs Commission today in response to queries filed on the situation in Lebanon and the visit to Italy last week of PLO leader Yasir 'Arafat.

With reference to "claims of Italian responsibility" for events in the Lebanese capital connected to the withdrawal earlier this month of the American-French-Italian peacekeeping force, the foreign minister rejected these claims and cited agreements reached with the Lebanese Government.

These agreements, Colombo said, covered only the peaceful exacuation of the Palestinian fighters from Beirut. It is clear, therefore, "that the Lebanese Government wanted the multilateral force to withdraw... as soon as this mission had been completed", he added.

Responding to criticism aired against the two-day visit to Rome conducted by the Palestinian leader, which included meetings with heads of state Sandro Pertini, with Colombo and other public figures and a private audience with Pope John Paul II, the foreign minister recalled that 'Arafat came to Rome on the invitation of the Interparliamentary Union, holding its 69th annual conference here, and that the PLO holds down observers status in the union.

Colombo also pointedly declared that 'Arafat arrived in Rome following the evacuation of the Palestinian guerrillas from Beirut and that in his new phase the issue of greatest concern is "the transformation of the PLO into a political movement which can contribute to a political solution to the Middle East situation".

These considerations, he said, led the head of state and the foreign minister to schedule meetings with the PLO leader. In conclusion, the diplomatic chief cited reciprocal recognition of Israel and the PLO as "the decisive problem" for the Italian Government".

MP's Call for PLO Recognition

AU222050 Rome ANSA in English 1925 GMT 22 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 22 -- Many Italian M.P.'s today called for Italy's official recognition of the PLO reply to Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo's report to the Senate Foreign Relations Commission on the Beirut massacre and Rome visit of PLO leader Yasir 'Arafat.

Colombo's speech in response to questions tabled by several members of Parliament confirmed the Italian Government's committment to "take steps in favor of the mutual, unequivocal and simultaneous recognition of the Palestinian Liberation Organization and Israel". The minister also said that the Italian Government considers this the key issue of its Mideast policies.

Christian Democrat M.P. Luigi Granelli voiced dissatisfaction over the government's "continuing reticence" on the issue of recognition of the PLO. "When Israel and the PLO mutually recognize each other", he said, "we will have already reached peace and, at that point, Italy's recognition of the representatives of the Palestinian people will be obvious and belated".

Socialist M.P. Margherita Boniver singled out recognition of the PLO as the sole representative of the Palestinians as a "priority issue" in the Middle East crisis.

Communist M.P. Dario Valori said Colombo's statements were "inferior to the gravity of the situation", adding that in order to defend the Palestinians, to pressure Israel to withdraw from Lebanon and support all negotiation initiatives in the Middle East "recognition of the PLO is required not only morally but also politically. The Italian Government has this duty to the massacred victims".

Two ships flying the Israeli flag were boycotted in Italian ports yesterday.

PSI, PCI LEADERS HOLD PUBLIC DEBATE ON RELATIONS

PM211309 Rome L'UNITA in Italian 17 Sep 82 pp 1, 18

[Eugenio Manca report]

[Text] Tirrenia -- "It is not true that we place the hypothesis of another center-left government on a par with that of an alternative government. A comprehensive alliance with the DC is impossible and out of the question. In any case, we know that [DC Secretary] De Mita aims to humiliate and subordinate us. Moreover, how can a party such as the PSI fail to work for an alternative?" Rino Formica, Socialist and minister of finance, made these statements before an attentive, lively and sometimes even unruly audience, which completely filled the debating hall at the Tirrenia [L'UNITA] festival. These statements are clearly different -- significantly different -- from the ones we have heard recently.

Formica was flanked by [PCI Secretariat member and L'UNITA editor] Alfredo Reichlin, who had just put to the Socialist leader -- but also to the entire audience -- a series of questions concerning not only the two parties' immediate options but the more general prospects for the Italian left. Has this left a historical and political role? Is it possible to commit the whole of it to a strategy of real change? How can confidence be imparted to people, to workers and young people, if the "blocked democracy" is regarded as unavoidable?

Formica's replies, as commented on by Reichlin, seemed to differ from recent statements by [PSI Secretary General] Craxi, according to whom the choice could be made without distinction between "a real center-left" and "a real alternative." Is the latter hypothesis therefore considered valid? Is the five-party coalition with the DC merely a temporary option? Is this a timid sign of a reconsideration?

Formica defended the PSI's government experience: It is true that the scope for reform is now limited, but the PSI has fought and is still fighting within the government for progress along the path of rigor, the defense of the industrial mechanism and the reinvestment of resources. But it is difficult to govern with such a burdensome heritage (as France's experience also shows). It remains to be seen whether we are able to fulfill the experience in a manner productive for the entire left or only for ourselves.

Responding to an interrruption from the audience, Formica said: No, our banner is not anticommunism. He portrayed Craxi's policy as an attempt to resolve a system within which the PSI is subordinate to the PCI within the context of the left and the DC dominant over the country and the other forces, while far from enjoying an absolute majority. Be that as it may, we must now look forward. We have two phases behind us: the center-left and the "national solidarity" government. Everybody has had the opportunity to reconsider those phases, possibly in critical terms. There is now talk of an alternative, but it will come closer only if we free ourselves of preconceptions, if we abandon the fixed idea that whoever is in government is subject to all kinds of contamination and that whoever is not in government is bound to stay there forever.

When the time came for the audience to put their questions, not all of them were actually in tune with the two introductory speeches. Some of them provided specific and regrettable evidence of the difficult nature of the dialogue between the parties, reflected animosity and even rancor and were not overparticular about details. Others cited the country's dramatic situation and people's personal and everyday experiences: the lack of work, uncertainty over labor contracts, the Socialists' ambiguity in local government, the struggle against the mafia and the camorra, which are strangling the southern regions, and the plight of elderly people.

But all the questions can be summed up in a single question: How can there be a credible prospect of change without the Communists' decisive contribution? If the PSI takes their exclusion for granted, does this not mean it is abandoning not only the alternative but even its role as a party of change?

Formica replied: The PSI is doing its utmost to conserve unitary relations in local government (objections from the audience); tax evaders can now be arrested because a law was passed thanks to the PCI's abstention (applause); nobody believes that the major institutional issues can be dealt with by slight majorities, and experience shows that the existing majority is not nonexistent, but that it fails when the confrontation is at its height. "What, then?" the audience asked polemically. The mafia and the P2 [outlawed Masonic Lodge] must be fought without quarter, but there is reason to wonder why the hidden powers have managed to organize and to penetrate even the state: Is it not partly because we and you paid too little attention the problems of the state for too long? The economy is important, but it comes after the building and defense of the democratic state.

Next it was Reichlin's turn: No, he said, the responsibility for the proliferation of hidden centers of power and for the decline of the institutions lies in very different quarters: Why was Moro killed at that precise political moment? No, the regression was not caused by the "national solidarity" arrangement, but by the fear that the way would be opened to the elimination of anticommunist discrimination. In any case, you must realize that this country of ours cannot be reformed by means of small adjustments with ambiguities in decisionmaking or shortcomings of efficiency. It is the structural problems, the fundamental options that are again at stake. The DC is now forced to acknowledge that the underlying cause of the Italian crisis and the decline of the state lies in the "blocked democracy," which rules out alternation and real changes. It acknowledges that the PCI is entirely justified in proposing itself as a government alternative with respect to the DC. But it hopes that the split in the left will relegate this alternative to the distant future. What is our reply? That the time is now ripe for the alternative? So let us start work now, Reichlin said amid applause, as we have done in recent months -- but without any temptation to form a front. The alternative must rally together different forces in a flexible fabric of experiences and ideas.

It is agreed that there must be no extremism, no intolerance and no preconceptions. Everybody must play their part -- but right away -- if democracy is to be unblocked, if we do not want to grant the DC eternal power.

AVANTI Report on Debate

PM220943 Rome AVANTI in Italian 17 Sep 82 pp 1, 2

[Paolo Gigante report:]

[Excerpt] Tirrenia, 16 Sep -- A major political debate took place yesterday evening at the L'UNITA festival between [PSI Directorate member] Rino Formica and [PCI Directorate member] Alfredo Reichlin. It was important not only because of the subjects discussed (the left's relations with the DC, the alternative, problems between the PSI and PCI) but because an attempt was made to shed light on equivocal matters and to have a practical and calm discussion even on the most controversial questions and the bitterest problems. In fact many of those polemics had their roots in the Communist camp because in most cases there was a tendency to disregard the PSI's role in the government majority and to establish relatively secret ties with the DC. Nonetheless the attention and the methods with which Reichlin approaches the PSI must be objectively pointed out, since they constitute a sign of innovation in the Communist position at least as regards the latest serious instances of opposition. The reasons for moving closer to the PSI will have to be closely examined and are probably partly the result of the line recently adopted by the DC Secretariat. It will now be necessary to verify in political behavior the desire for a resumption of dialogue among the leftwing forces expressed by Reichlin yesterday. Moreover Formica's calm and substantial reply gave him new elements for consideration in assessing the PSI's real position.

DA COMMUNIQUE BLAMES EANES FOR LEGAL DELAYS

[Excerpt] The Democratic Alliance summit "believes that the promulgation of the new text of the Constitution should be effected soon," and considers that the president of the republic's attitude "entails the danger of a paralyzation in the life of the democratic institutions." The communique, released following the meeting which the Democratic Alliance leaders held yesterday, states that for want of the promulgation of the law, the Assembly of the Republic cannot begin to debate today the laws on the constitutional court and national defense, "with all the resulting delays and political consequences."

The meeting, which began about 0900 hours and lasted until lunchtime, was attended by Nascimento Rodrigues, Angelo Correia and Antonio Capucho for the Social Democratic Party; Freitas do Amaral, Basilio Horta, Anacoreta Correia and Luis Beiroco for the Social Democratic Center Party; and Ribeiro Teles, Serra e Moura, Ferreira Pereira and Sousa Lara, for the Popular Monarchist Party, Pinto Balsemao was present for 1 and 1/2 hours, leaving afterward for Ireland, as we report elsewhere.

The communique, read out by Nascimento Rodrigues, expresses "deep concern at the political conduct which has been adopted by the president of the republic." It states that the Revision Law, approved over a month ago, is subject to compulsory promulgation, but Eanes has not as yet promulgated it or announced when he will do so."

The communique states that for that reason the Assembly of the Republic did not reopen on the envisaged date to appraise the laws on the constitutional court and national defense, and asserts that this postponement "does not benefit stability and security -- values which the state bodies' action should constantly guarantee."

The Democratic Alliance believes that promulgation will have to be effected "soon," and that the new text of the Constitution "should be the beginning of a path of peace and not a further step in the escalation of confrontation promoted by those who, acting outside and against the democratic parties, are merely pursuing selfish power interests."

The document also refers to the presidential veto on the electoral law and on the first date set by the government for the local elections. It states that at present "the date when the elections will be held is not known," and says that they will be governed by "a law approved by a minority government in 1976, which was not even appraised and approved by the Assembly of the Republic."

"It is above all the Communist Party which benefits from this decision," the document continues, pointing out the opportunity which the PCP keeps "to conceal behind another symbol its own party symbol." The president of the republic is also accused of not giving the government "an institutional support and democratic cooperation which the economic crisis and the country's development require," and of performing "actions capable of blocking or delaying government initiatives essential to the country's stability and to improving citizens' living conditions."

The Democratic Alliance leaders reaffirm in the communique their political course and the "stringent fulfillment of their program and of the mandate received from the people." During the meeting they also analyzed government action, which they deemed positive, and exhorted it to "remain firm in its conduct, aloof from secondary disputes which do not serve the state."

GOVERNMENT COMMUNIQUE CONDEMNS BEIRUT MASSACRE

PM221109 Barcelona LA VANGUARDIA in Spanish 20 Sep 82 p 15

[EFE report]

[Text] As soon as it learned of the killing of the Palestinians in Beirut, the Madrid government expressed its most resolute condemnation, calling for international action to bring peace to Lebanon.

The diplomatic information bureau issued the following communique Saturday night:

"The Spanish Government, profoundly moved and outraged by the fearful tragedy that took place today in Beirut, whose victims were defenseless and innocent people, expresses its most resolute condemnation and censure of this inhuman act of barbarism, which lacks any justification, as do all acts of terrorism, wherever they may occur.

"The Spanish Government believes that it is an extremely pressing necessity to adopt international initiatives capable of guaranteeing the Lebanese population the security and peace they need, so as to find the formulas of coexistence that will permit the rebuilding of a free, sovereign and united Lebanese state."

POLITICAL PARTIES PREPARE FOR ELECTORAL CAMPAIGN

PA211749 Madrid EFE in Spanish 1023 GMT 21 Sep 82

[By Gloria Valenzuela]

[Text] Madrid, 21 Sep (EFE) -- Spanish political parties are working on the final details for the electoral campaign, 2 weeks before its official opening date, while problems involving the candiates nominated for the 28 October legislative elections continue.

The possibility of a rupture within the conservative coalition between the Popular Alliance [Alianza Popular], AP, and the Popular Democratic Party [Partido Democrata Popular], PDP, has been ruled out; however, the absence of prominent PDP members on the list of candidates could still affect the alliance.

After AP leader Manuel Fraga apologized, the two parties announced that the coalition would be maintained, but it was learned today that Oscar Alzaga might abandon his PDP leadership and might even withdraw his candidacy.

The government party, Union of the Democratic Center, UCD, is also confronting problems in view of the breakdown of its pact with the Liberal Democratic Party, PDL, which will not participate in the elections.

Because of that breakdown, Ignacio Gomez Acebo, the UCD electoral campaign director resigned and a great number of Liberal deputies who are still in the government party decided not to participate in the electoral campaign.

As of today, former Minister Rafael Arias Salgado will be in charge of the UCD's electoral strategy, and preparations are continuing for the party's electoral campaign, which does not usually include massive rallies. On 23 September, UCD President Landelino Lavilla will visit Asturias (northern part of Spain) to outline his program, which will be based on a centrist platform.

AP leader Fraga has begun his campaign early, having started his "electoral visits" to various localities a few days ago. Last night in Madrid he announced his coalition's candidates and plans, emphasizing the defense of moral standards in social life and plans for a socially-oriented market economy.

Felipe Gonzalez, secretary general of the Spanish Socialist Workers Party, announced his platform to the press yesterday, noting that his party's campaign will concentrate on changing Spanish society and not on confronting other political parties.

In addition, former Prime Minister Adolfo Suarez also began his campaign yesterday in Avila (central Spain), his native province. He announced the candidates of his party, the Democratic and Social Center [Centro Democratico y Social], which he described as "progressive, and free of dogmatism and intolerance."

Meanwhile, the heads of the Spanish Communist Party's electoral committees met in Madrid to discuss the final details for that party's electoral campaign, in which they will insist on presenting their party as "a decisive factor for democratic stability."

CENTRIST ELECTION PACT BREAKDOWN DETAILED

PM221459 Barcelona LA VANGUARDIA in Spanish 20 Sep 82 pp 3-4

[Text] Madrid -- Only 7 and 1/2 hours after its lists of candidates had been presented to the Electoral Council, the electoral pact concluded on 10 September between the Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] and Antonio Garrigues' Liberal Democratic Party [PDL] broke down at 1630 yesterday.

However, as late as 1430 the pact was considered sound: [UCD Chairman] Lavilla had agreed, following his morning talk with Garrigues, to give the Liberals the third place on the list for Madrid and first place on the Murcia and Rioja lists -- for Garrigues, Julio Pascal and Luis Miguel Enciso respectively.

Lavilla and Garrigues had held several other meetings over the past few days and were still negotiating at UCD headquarters on the Calle Arbalan from 2000 Saturday through 0200 Sunday. Next Garrigues briefed his party's Executive Committee at an all-night meeting. Following the next Lavilla-Garrigues meeting yesterday morning, the Liberals' Executive Committee was again briefed. From 1500-1630 Garrigues had a plenary meeting with the UCD Electoral Commission: It was at this meeting that the pact was broken.

UCD Secretary General Inigo Cavero announced at an impromptu press conference after 1700 that "the UCD's electoral agreement with the PDL has proven impossible." The breakdown of the agreement, under which the Liberals would have been represented in the Congress of Deputies not under their own name but under the UCD's, though they would have carried the PDL name in the Senate, was ascribed by Cavero to "the difficulties of inserting the Liberals' demands in the UCD lists." A little later Garrigues summoned the press to praise Landelino Lavilla's attitude and to criticize the UCD "apparatus," specifically the "Blues" [former Francoists] in the ruling party.

Several UCD and Liberal sources agreed, despite mutual apportionment of blame, that the resistance of the UCD's Rioja and Murcia provincial committees together with Martin Villa's opposition to granting the PDL top place on the lists, apart from an offensive by UCD liberal Camunas, who succeeded in placing four UCD liberals at the head of the electoral lists, were decisive factors in the breakdown of the pact. Furthermore, Minister Roson told UCD leaders that he would stand down as a candidate if Garrigues occupied third place on the Madrid list.

Both Cavero and Garrigues stressed that political cooperation between the parties would continue, though the Liberal leader seemed very skeptical regarding the chances of a "regeneration " of the UCD.

Apart from critical reactions from other parties, the breakdown also prompted some degree of commotion within the UCD itself: "I very much regret this rupture," said UCD liberal and Culture Minister Soledad Becerril, who was hoping to head the Jaen list, but who agreed to stand after Finance Minister Garcia Anoveros on the Sevilla list.

Fontan Retires

The most dramatic reaction came from former minister and UCD liberal Antonio Fontan, who wrote UCD Chairman Lavilla yesterday, announcing his decision to step down from his fifth position on the Madrid list "for personal reasons." PDL sources said that the decision is directly related to the breakdown of the pact. Fontan is replaced by another liberal, Joaquin Satrustegui.

On Saturday night the PDL Executive Committee, envisaging the imminent breakdown, drew up PDL lists for 31 provinces, with Garrigues heading the Madrid list.

However, the Liberal leadership body decided after 2100 not to contest the elections. Garrigues explained that this decision was due to the PDL's desire to avoid at present further elements of confusion in the country's political life and to avoid the dispersion of the center vote. He also stated his confidence that the public would appreciate the PDL's gesture as a contribution to raising the Spanish people's level of confidence in the exercise of political life. A party spokesman announced that they nevertheless plan to contest the next municipal elections and elections in the autonomous communities.

After several days and nights of internal tensions and tensions with Garrigues' Liberals, the UCD yesterday finalized not only its lists but also its electoral program, which will be examined by its Secretariat today, approved by the Executive Committee Wednesday and presented by Lavilla at the end of the week. The UCD was yesterday the penultimate party to submit its lists to the Electoral Council in Madrid. Only the so-called CUC, the Communist Unity Candidacy, arrived later.

SOCIALIST 'GOVERNMENT PROGRAM' SUMMARIZED

[Mariano Guindal report]

[Excerpts] Madrid -- The Socialists' government program was discussed by their Federal Committee at yesterday's meeting in Madrid, as expected. The complete program is 900 pages long and a summary, to be distributed during the election campaign, runs to 100 pages. The government program defines special lines of action in the economic, legislative, administrative and judicial fields, which the Spanish Socialist Workers Party intends partly to reform. As is known, the most prominent and controversial aspect is the nationalization of the electricity grid and the decision to purchase refloated banks.

The major priority aims envisaged by the Socialist program are the legislative implementation of the Constitution, the reform of the administration of justice, the reorganization of the public order forces and a determined struggle against terrorism: "Where there is no justice there is no state." To this end 30 laws have been prepared, approval of which is wanted within the first year of government -- especially the organic law on the judiciary.

As far as citizens' rights are concerned, the following laws, among others, are envisaged: conscientious objection; restriction of the use of computer science; right to reply and correction in the state-controlled news media; professional secrecy; law on asylum; popular legislative initiative and a law on juries; citizens' participation in education and in public administration; and a consumers' law.

In the field of education the university autonomy law and the amendment to the teaching institutions' statute have been prepared.

In the sphere of the administration of justice the drafting of a new penal code and of laws on safeguards, such as assistance for detainees and the writ of relief [recurso de amparo] and amendment to the Code of Military Justice in search of maximum jurisdictional unity are proposed. Giving judges autonomy, a new judicial demarcation and the provision of financial, human and material resources for defendants are also proposed.

Reform of Public Administration

The reform of public administration reflects a philosophy centering on three main ideas: administrative democratization, a struggle for efficiency and structural adjustment to the new state of the autonomies. To this end it is proposed to professionalize the Civil Service, draw up a computer science plan and an accountancy program, put an end to civil servants' uncertainty stemming from the process of autonomy transferences [of powers from the state to the autonomous communities] and change the current trend of declining purchasing power. A basic law on the Civil Service is also envisaged. A maximum period of 4 years for carrying out these reforms is given.

Economic Program

In the economic field, the principal measures concerning which have already been published by LA VANGUARDIA, the Socialists set themselves as an essential aim the struggle against unemployment: To this end, according to what Felipe Gonzalez himself told us, "we propose to make the economic system competitive through increased productivity, greater sharing out of the existing work with a policy of early retirement, financial support for small and medium enterprises, adjusting the liberalization of the financial system to the economic system, creating an atmosphere of social responsibility through the trade unions and creating a special fund for encouraging investment."

They intend to secure the necessary financial resources by rationalizing the public deficit and, above all, by combating tax fraud. The nationalization measures will be confined to the electricity grid and to exercising the option of purchasing refloated banks.

A few days ago, Gonzalez commented to COVER-LA VANGUARDIA that "if we win power, we will have to see what we find under the carpet. If the real figures coincide with the official figures, it will not be necessary to make any additional sacrifice, because our aim is to fulfill the commitments undertaken by the Union of the Democratic Center government with the social interlocutors in the Moncloa pacts, the AMI [expansion unknown] and the national agreement of employment, which it has not fulfilled.

CAMEROON'S PRESIDENT ENDS VISIT TO MADRID

AB222020 Yaounde Domestic Service in English 1830 GMT 22 Sep 82

[Excerpts] President Ahmadou Ahidjo today ended a 3-day official visit to Spain during which he held talks with Spanish officials on bilateral and world issues. From the Spanish capital, Madrid, George Ngua, who is with the presidential entourage, has this report:

[Begin recording] It was a warm and friendly goodbye that was accorded President Ahmadou Ahidjo and his party when they left Madrid this afternoon. All in all, President Ahidjo's visit to Spain has been a very successful one. The objective of this trip -- creating human rapport and rapproachement between on the one hand President Ahidjo and King Juan Carlos and on the other, between the people of Spain and Cameroon in the interest of international friendship and cooperation has been largely met. No agreements were signed during President Ahidjo's visit to Spain, but very knowledgeable sources believe that they are in the pipeline. These will concern especially the cultural and sectors and will go a long way to balance commercial exchanges between Cameroon and Spain. [end recording]

SORSA: PLO TO HAVE HELSINKI BUREAU 'THIS YEAR'

LD222302 Kuwait KUNA in English 1758 GMT 22 Sep 82

[Text] Vienna, Sep 22 (KUNA) -- The 'PLO' may open an office in Helsinki, Finland's visiting Prime Minister Kalevi Sorsa said after official talks here Wednesday with Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky. Sorsa told reporters here that he had a special interest in the views held by the Austrian leader because he was the best-informed politician on affairs of the Middle East.

The two leaders agreed in their assessment of problems in the region, said Sorsa, adding that Finland had also condemned Israel's invasion of Lebanon in the strongest terms.

Finland's relations with the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) were characterised by long-standing contacts on unofficial levels since Finland only recognized states. Helinski could not, therefore, grant a diplomatic status to the 'PLO' he said adding the PLO would be allowed to open a bureau in the Finnish capital sometime this year.

NORWAY

REACTION TO BEIRUT MASSACRE, ISRAELI ROLE

PM230941 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 20 Sep 82 p 8

[NORSK TELEGRAMBYRA report]

[Text] "The Norwegian Government is appalled by the massacre of innocent children, women and men in Beirut Saturday," Prime Minister Kare Willoch told NORSK TELEGRAMBYRA.

"We fully endorse the international condemnation of this incomprehensible misdeed committed against Palestinian refugees. The full extent of the massacre and the identity of those directly responsible has still not been established. Those directly responsible will attract the detestation of the world community. It must be said of Israel's role that Israel as the occupying power has a responsibility to ensure that such violations cannot take place. However, they have not lived up to this responsibility.

"Saturday's events showed in full that the current situation in Lebanon is completely unacceptable. The world community must now use all its powers to bring about measures to ensure the reestablishment of the competence of the Lebanese authorities sothat there will once again be peaceful and orderly conditions in the country, and especially so that the civilian population can be protected against future violations, in accordance with the Security Council's unanimous resolution Saturday night. The Norwegian Government is following events closely," Willoch said.

"Israel bears no responsibility for the massacres in the two refugee camps in west Beirut," Storting Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Kare Kristiansen commented.

"But Israel must accept its share of the responsibility for the general situation and for the fact that the murders were not prevented.

"The massacre is an act of revenge following the assassination of President Bashir al-Jumayyil and Israel has nothing to do with it," Kristiansen said.

He pointed out that the Israeli invasion of west Beirut is a violation of the agreement entered into when the PLO withdrew, but stressed that the move was made to prevent the feared retaliation for the assassination of Al-Jumayyil.

UN MAKES ANNOUNCEMENT ON SHOOTING OF GUARDSMAN

NC230647 Nicosia Domestic Service in English 0530 GMT 23 Sep 82

[Text] A UN announcement confirms that a young national guardsman killed in Nicosia on Tuesday was shot by a member of the Turkish occupation forces. It says: During the evening UN Peace Force headquarters received the regrets and condolences of the commander of the Turkish forces over the incident, which is now being fully investigated by the UN Peace Force. The announcement adds that soon after the incident, UN peacekeeping forces increased their vigilance. Both sides are fully cooperating with the force commander, General Greindl, for the purpose of reducing tension in the area.

Turkish Radio Report

TA221835 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 22 Sep 82

[Text] A Greek Cypriot soldier who entered the prohibited zone between the Turkish and Greek Cypriot borders and who engaged in provocative behavior has been shot. The Greek Cypriot soldier died in the hospital.

According to a report from the Turkish Radio and Television Bureau in Cyprus, a Greek Cypriot soldier entered the neutral zone, into which entry without permission is prohibited, in the Omorphita region around 1630 yesterday and came as close as 3 meters from the Turkish guard post. The Greek Cypriot soldier, who engaged in provocative behavior and aroused suspicion and who did not obey orders to halt, was shot by a Turkish Cypriot guard. The Greek Cypriot soldier died in a hospital in the Greek Cypriot sector.

A statement issued by the Turkish Federated State administration expressed grief over the incident which resulted in the death of the soldier.

N. Cypriot Coverage

NC221340 Nicosia HALKIN SESI in Turkish 22 Sep 82 p 1

[Text] It has been learned that at a time when the TFSC has increased its security measures along its borders with southern Cyprus in view of reports that Armenian terrorists have built their nests in the south, a uniformed person leaving the Greek Cypriot positions and attempting to infiltrate into the Turkish Cypriot positions in the Kucuk Kaymakli (Omorphita) area was shot and killed after he ignored warnings to stop.

According to a disclosure made by the Greek Cypriot side last night, this person, who turned out to be Khristakis Yeoryiou, a soldier from Parashkos in the Greek Cypriot National Guard, had indeed left his position and advanced toward the Turkish Cypriot position.

Despite the fact that this young man has died as a victim of a test case, Rolandhis lodged a protest with Hugo Gobbi and a complaint with Perez de Cuellar.

Greek Spokesman on Incident

NC230732 Nicosia I ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 23 Sep 82 p 8

[Text] Athens, 22 Sep (ATHENS NEWS AGENCY) -- In connection with yesterday's incident in Cyprus, the government spokesman has stated that the report by UN envoy in Nicosia, Gobbi, is being awaited.

According to press reports, the murder of the Cypriot national guardsman was the work of a Turkish Cypriot and not of a Turk.

In connection with the representations to Britain and Turkey, the government spokesman said that they were made by Greece within the framework of its role as a guarantor power to these two countries, which are also guarantor powers.

According to an appraisal by Athens, this action by Greece cannot influence the "moratorium" with Turkey because it refers to Greek-Turkish relations and not to the Cyprus problem.

Paper Expresses Concern

NC230856 Nicosia I ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 23 Sep 82 p 5

[From the "Positions" column]

[Text] The killing of National Guardsman Khristakis Yeoryiou by Turks in the Omorphita area gives rise to many questions. One of the most important questions is the following: Should this murder be considered as an isolated crime or could it be that this is a deliberate action by the Turks aimed at causing exasperation and creating an anomalous situation. Furthermore, if the second part of this question applies, what would be the purpose of creating anomalous conditions which -- in any case and in the final analysis -- would be to the detriment of the two communities?

Our fears may be justified if we relate [factors such as] Mr Denktas' recent threats based on the nonexistent question of Armenians — and the efforts made by the Turkish propaganda not only to create an issue but also to broadly portray it internationally -- as well as the attitude of the Evren regime toward this murder of National Guardsman Yeoryiou. It is well known to the Denktas and Evren regimes that there are no Armenian commandos in Cyprus. And yet they are insisting on this. The conditions that were prevailing at the confrontation line prior to the shooting of the national guardsman did not justify, in even the slightest way, such a crime. And yet the Turks shot and killed the national guardsman.

All these events have created justified concern for both the people and the state. Thus the state and the people must be vigilant in order to face any practical demonstration of Turkish veracity. Differences or partisan expediencies should not have a place where it concerns such most important questions. The danger is common and it is imperative that there should be unanimity in order to face it.

[Text] The government spokesman yesterday stated that the Cyprus Government has no information that the Reagan administration is preparing to develop some initiative toward the Cyprus problem within the framework of an attempt for an overall settlement of the problems in the Middle East area.

Answering another question, the spokesman said that there is nothing new to report in connection with the allegations by AKEL Secretary General E. Papaioannou about activities by coupist elements.

TURKMEN 'HORRIFIED' BY MASSACRE OF PALESTINIANS

NC230744 Istanbul HURRIYET in Turkish 20 Sep 82 p 10

[Text] Ankara (HURRIYET) -- Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen has said: "Turkey is deeply horrified and indignant at the bloodthirsty way hundreds of innocent people in the Palestinian camps in Lebanon were attacked and murdered."

Foreign Minister Trukmen has demanded the immediate evacuation of west Beirut. He made this statement after saying that Turkey is watching with anxiety the latest developments, which threaten the peace, stability and security of the Middle East: "These tragic events have taken place in west Beirut, which Israel has occupied contrary to the pledges it made. Therefore, it cannot rid itself of the sin and responsibility involved.

"Peace and security must be restored in Lebanon before its independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity are trodden underfoot. As a first step, Turkey believes in the need for the immediate evacuation of west Beirut and the formation of an international force for the purpose of restoring the people's confidence. We expect the Security Council to adopt rapid and effective measures with this objective in mind.

"As a country in the region, Turkey is watching with deep anxiety the latest events, which threaten the peace, stability and security of the Middle East."

Assembly Condemns Massacre

TA221250 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 22 Sep 82

[Text] The Consultative Assembly has strongly denounced the massacre of Palestinians in west Beirut, which is under Israeli occupation. Chairing today's Assembly meeting, Deputy Speaker Fehmi Istinyeli made a statement expressing the Assembly's feelings on the issue. He said: Muslim women, men, elderly, youth and babies were massacred by Christian militia under the protection of Isarelis in west Beirut. Now the entire human race is living the horror of this atrocious drama in Lebanon. I condemn and protest, on behalf of you all who represent the Turkish nation, this massacre of civilian Muslims living in an unprotected and defenseless region.

The fact that the human community is impotent in the face of the massacres and acts of terror being committed in Afghanistan, Lebanon and other regions of the world constitutes a disgrace for our century.

REFERENDUM ON CONSTITUTION MAY BE HELD ON 7 NOV

TA221905 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1550 GMT 22 Sep 82

[Text] Ankara, 22 Sep (AA) -- The Consultative Assembly was midway through the second reading of the 200-article draft constitution Wednesday while its constitutional committee started to work on new legislation on procedures for the popular referendum on the draft constitution.

Sources close to the committee said the date for the referendum was likely to be Sunday, 7 November. White ballots will be marked yes while blue tinted ballots will signify rejection. The committee is expected to submit the law on the constitutional referendum to the plenary session of the Assembly this week.

In the second reading of the constitution, only minor amendments were made in the draft, while most amendment motions, nine including those proposing to re-introduce the check-off system of paying union dues and to set up an unemployment insurance system, were rejected.

The Assembly had completed the second reading of the chapter on the legislature by mid-Wednesday afternoon.

'NATIONAL MOVEMENT PARTY' MEMBERS ON TRIAL

TA221838 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1540 GMT 22 Sep 82

[Text] Ankara, Sep 22 (AA) -- Alparslan Turkes, leader of the suspended "National Movement Party" and his aides asked for their release at Tuesday's hearing of the party members' trial. The Martial Law Court in Ankara postponed decision on the defense plea for release until Thursday, the 29th of September.

Meanwhile, the Supreme Court of Turkey rejected former Public Works Minister Serafetin Elci's plea for release. Elci's hearing is scheduled to continue on the 19th of October.

In the Istanbul trial of "Peace Committee" officers, the court rejected the objections of defendant Orhan Apaydin and his brother Burhan Apaydin, both lawyers, that the case was outside the jurisdiction of a martial law court.

ANTI-TURKISH DEMONSTRATIONS IN EUROPEAN CITIES

NC221142 Paris AFP in English 1135 GMT 22 Sep 82

[Text] Paris, Sep 22 (AFP) -- Small groups of Turkish Kurds demonstrated simultaneously in European cities today to denounce the "repression" of Kordestan opposition movements in Turkey.

About 50 protestors gathered before the Paris bureau of the human rights organization Amnesty International to submit documents detailing the situation of Kurdish militants in Turkey while another 30 Turkish Kurds occupied Amnesty's Swiss bureau in Bern.

A group of 40 demonstrators took over the newsroom of WESTDEUTSCHE ALLGEMEINE ZEITUNG in Essen, West Germany, demanding the publication of photos and articles on alleged torture and arbitrary arrests in Turkey, the newspaper said.

Demonstrators in Paris and Bern said five militants had died from a hunger strike in a Turkish prison.

Our Radio Report

TA211026 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0500 GMT 21 Sep 82

[Text] There have been protests against the junta in various FRG cities following the killing of five prisoners at the Diyarbakir prison. The killing of Dr Cemil Tanriverdi, who announced to the public the deaths of five of the prisoners and who had been on a hunger strike since the beginning of September in protest against the tortures and inhuman conditions at Diyarbakir prison, and the tortures in the junta prisons by MIT [National Intelligence Organization] agents, has also caused harsh protests outside Turkey.

Turkish and Kurdish workers, intellectuals and democrats who learned about these new murders by the junta from FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU's Friday edition, held demonstrations protesting the murdering junta in West Berlin and many other FRG cities on Saturday and Sunday.

Following the demonstration attended by hundreds of people in West Berlin on Saturday, mass demonstrations were held in Hamburg and Stuttgart on Saturday and in Cologne on Sunday. Some 500 Turkish and Kurdish workers attended the demonstration in Hamburg. The 2-year-long terror, oppression and tyranny of the military dictatorship in our country were protested. (?Many) communiques on the transformation of the Istanbul, Diyarbakir and Ankara prisons into torture chambers and on deaths resulting from tortures were circulated.

Some 300 people participated in the protest demonstration held in Stuttgart. The new murders by the junta at the Diyarbakir prison were compared to the recent Israeli massacre in west Beirut. The demonstrators said that the world public cannot remain silent in the face of these murders. During the protest demonstration held in Cologne, a group of representatives went to the radio broadcasting to Turkish workers employed in the FRG and requested that a communique denouncing the murders at the Diyarbakir prison be broadcast and that the news of the killings be announced.

[Savas Ay report from Nicosia]

[Text] It has been established that a priest named Keshishyan is the leader of the Armenians who are being trained in the Troodos Mountains in the Greek Cypriot sector of the island. Various circles giving information in this connection say that Keshishyan lived in Syria and Lebanon for many years.

Intensive contacts are being made among the Western news media in connection with efforts to establish new training camps on the Troodos Mountains as branches of the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA), the secret terrorist organization. The authorities refuse to disclose Keshishyan's first name. However, it is stated that he is connected with the Marxist-Leninist People's Method (Halk Yontemi) which was set up in the Greek Cypriot sector in 1978.

It has been ascertained from some documents seized by the Israelis at the Shatila camp that this organization is in collaboration with the Habash group which is the Marxist-Leninist branch of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO).

PAPER VIEWS RECENT TURKISH-SOVIET RELATIONS

NC201444 Ankara YANKI in Turkish 6-12 Sep 82 p 11

[Unattributed commentary: "As Turkish-Soviet Relations Become Strained"]

[Excerpts] At the beginning, the National Security Council was meticulously careful in its relations with the Soviet Union. It was pursuing the traditional Turkish policy of not disturbing our strong northern neighbor. For example, despite the persistent insistence of our Western friends, it has never been officially maintained that the Soviet Union is behind terrorism. Turkey has never shared the attitude of the Western world toward either Afghanistan or Poland, by maintaining that "Turkey's position is different."

Moscow felt increasingly disturbed when Turkish-U.S. defense relations gradually resulted in the signing of a defense pact, when work began on improving certain bases in Anatolia and when the European commanders of NATO came to Turkey one after the other and visited the east. Among these developments, the permission given to a 12-member U.S. delegation to climb Agri Mountain has led to an unexpected toughening in Moscow's attitude.

As a result of the personal interest shown by General Evren, "a group searching for Noah's Ark," led by an American astronaut, obtained permission to climb Agri Mountain -- permission not given to anybody for years. The Soviet Union believes that such attempts to search for "Noah's Ark" are in fact searches directed against its security. This has been communicated to Turkey on several occasions.

A day after the American delegation began to climb Agri Mountain at the beginning of August, two Turkish soldiers were killed by Soviet guards on grounds that "they entered the Soviet territory, despite our warnings. They refused to go back and they opened fire. They died in the clash that ensued."

This attitude placed the Turkish Government in a difficult position in the eyes of the Turkish nation. Turkish Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen used tough language against Moscow. His visit to Moscow was postponed. The visit of official delegations to Moscow was also postponed. Tension mounted. The argument that Moscow had a finger in the terrorism carried out against Turkey was being expressed more openly.

General Evren's speech in Afyon strained relations between the two nations to the utmost. Turkish-Soviet relations had not experienced such an adverse escalation since 1960.

After the 12 September intervention [of the Turkish Armed Forces] the direction of relations between the two countries has gradually changed. This is mainly due to the open support the United States extended to the National Security Council [NSC] administration and to the attitude the NSC had taken toward satisfying the United States in matters of defense.

Turkey has always believed that both the United States and the Soviet Union should exercise utmost care in their relations with Turkey. Governments in Turkey, in power either through popular vote or through military intervention, are required by the public to protect their prestige in their dealings with these two big powers. They cannot afford to be too soft beyond a certain point. Nor can they appear to be making concessions. If Washington and Moscow wish to preserve good relations they must never lose sight of this fact.

Now it is quite obvious that the gradually increasing toughening in the attitude of the Soviet Union toward the NSC administration is bound to spoil Turkish-Soviet relations, at least this term. This will cause Turkey to seek greater support for itself. It may effect changes in its "cautious" attitude toward the traditional policy it has been displaying toward Moscow. In this atmosphere, Turkey may change its attitude toward the defense issues which the United States had been proposing but which we have not been considering positively in light of Turkish-Soviet relations.

The objective of the NSC administration is to establish a stable democracy in Turkey and to turn over the administration to elected civilians. It is to be expected that during its term in office it will seek to protect its prestige before the nation. Moscow should not lose sight of this fact in all its future dealings.

Turkish-Soviet relations should not be spoiled in such a manner that they can not be repaired later. Both countries stand to gain a lot from this.

BRIEFS

WORKERS' REMITTANCES -- Ankara, 16 Sep (AA) -- Remittances by Turkish workers abroad reached 242.4 million dollars in July 1982, officials said. The total amount remitted by workers abroad in the first 7 months of the year reached 1,148 million dollars, as compared to 1,265 million dollars in 1981. SPOKESMAN DENIES REPORT OF PAPANDREOU U.S. VISIT

NC221427 Athens AKROPOLIS in Greek 22 Sep 82 p 8

[Text] In view of a report published in a newspaper yesterday, the government spokesman stated that the Greek Government has no information about a contemplated invitation from the Americans to Papandreou to visit Washington nor have the Americans appraised the Greek Government of such an intention.

The fact is that during their meeting in Bonn last June Reagan had promised to continue his talks with Papandreou -- in Washington -- on issues that concern Greece. For this purpose he had asked then-Secretary of State Haig to brief him in greater detail. Following Haig's resignation, his successor, Shultz, undertook to brief him in this connection, but nothing more has been learned since.

In any case, during his meeting in New York with his U.S. counterpart on 1 October, Kharalambopoulos will have the opportunity to ascertain to what extent Shultz has been briefed on Greek issues.

VARIOUS DELEGATIONS RETURN FROM ROMANIAN VISITS

NC211922 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1830 GMT 21 Sep 82

[Text] Greek-Romanian economic cooperation is expanding: By year's end the $75 million Romania owes to our country from the import of Greek products will be paid off. The payment will be balanced through Greece's import of buses and other road equipment, helicopters, fertilizers and other products.

This statement was made by Alternate Minister of National Ecoromy Ioannis Pottakis on his return from Romania following talks with President Ceausescu and other government personalities. Pottakis said cooperation between the two countries will be expanded in the energy sector and in the creation of joint organizations.

Deputy Foreign Minister Karolos Papoulias also paid a 3-day visit to Romania. He also returned to Athens today. Prior to this visit, Papoulias visited Bulgaria.

The KKE-Interior delegation under Yiannia Bannias, secretary of the Central Committee, and Angelos Dhiamandopoulos, member of the Executive Bureau of the Central Committee, also returned to Athens.

PYM TO HOLD TALKS WITH GIBRALTAR LEADERS

NC221745 Paris AFP in English 1729 GMT 22 Sep 82

[Text] London, Sept. 22 (AFP) -- Gibraltar leaders will have talks next Friday with Foreign Secretary Francis PYM on the future of the Rock, official sources said today. The Gibraltar delegation will be led by Prime Minister Sir Joshua Hassan and will include the governor, Peter Isola and the economic development minister, Adolfo Cenepa.

A Foreign Office spokesman said no date had been fixed with Spain for the simultaneous opening of the frontier between the Rock and Spain and for talks on the future of the British colony. Such a move has already been called off twice this year. Communications between the Rock and the Spanish mainland were cut in 1969.

[Text] Vienna, Sept 24 (AFP) -- The International Atomic Energy Agency today failed by a narrow four-vote margin to adopt a motion suspending Israel's membership.

The motion rallied 43 votes against 27, but needed four more votes to reach the required two thirds majority of 47.

FRANCE'S CHEYSSON, UK'S PYM DISCUSS EEC PROBLEMS

[Unattributed report: "EEC budget Problem on Agenda Again"]

[Text] The British EEC budget demands, which have been dormant since the settlement in principle last spring, are again on the agenda and were the main subject discussed at the "regular consultations" which External Relations Minister Cheysson and Foreign Secretary Pym had over dinner at Celle-Saint-Cloud on Wednesday, 22 September. It is not so much the final solution, which has not yet been examined in depth, but rather the implementation of the decisions already taken (the funding of the relief granted to Britain for 1982) which is still raising problems. France apparently thinks that the state of its external finances rules out further generosity toward Britain.

Other Community problems (expansion, fishing) were also discussed, as was the Euro-Soviet gas pipeline problem, relations with the United States and the USSR and the forthcoming UN debate on the Falklands.

EUROPEAN-ARAB PARLIAMENTARIANS CONFERENCE ENDS

LD241832 Hamburg DPA in German 1611 GMT 24 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn 24 Sep (DPA) -- A European-Arab conference of parliamentarians has spoken out in favor of an independent European role in peace efforts in the Middle East. At the end of their 2-day meeting in Bonn on Friday, the 60 or so deputies from almost 20 European and Arab countries advocated the revival of the European-Arab dialogue. The delegates said that the massacre in the Palestinian camps near Beirut should be explained and those responsible should be punished.

WIENER ZEITUNG ON OPENING OF 28TH MBFR ROUND

[Unattributed report]

[Text] At the beginning of the 28th round of the Vienna negotiations on a troop reduction in central Europe, which have been underway in Vienna since October 1973, NATO and the Warsaw Pact yesterday reaffirmed their determination to achieve an agreement on a step-by-step reduction of the armed forces, while at the same time blaming the other side for the sluggish pace of the conference in the past.

Both sides have presented drafts for a multiphase agreement in the past few months: The East a two-phase concept on 18 February, and the West a four-phase plan shortly before the summer break of the conference on 8 July. There is consensus that in the first phase of the implementation of either plan, only the American and Soviet Armed Forces in central Europe are to be reduced. Only in the subsequent phases are the other parties to the agreement to effect reductions to such an extent that the overall strength of land and air forces of both pact systems in the central European region will eventually be reduced to 900,000 men, of whom at the most 700,000 men may be land forces.

In press statements following the 314th plenary meeting of the Vienna conference, spokesmen for East and West made it clear, however, that there are still substantial obstacles hampering a coordination of the two draft agreements. On behalf of the Eastern conference participants, CSSR Ambassador Emil Keblusek above all criticized the fact that the West wants to exempt armament materials from the reduction and wants to confine itself to a reduction of personnel strength. Through its refusal to consent to an immediate freeze of the present troop strengths as a temporary, confidence-building measure, NATO is exposing itself to the suspicion that it actually wants to adopt the road of "one-sidedly raising its military potential" in central Europe and altering the mutual "approximate balance of forces in its favor.

In a statement read by U.S. press spokesman Moen, the Netherlands chief delegate, Willem de Vos van Steenwijk affirmed that the West continues to attach the greatest importance to the Vienna negotiations, and that it hopes for early progress following the presentation of its comprehensive draft treaty in July. The problem of an organic connection of the various implementation phases within "one single comprehensive agreement" has now been overcome, he said. But two key problems remain unresolved from the West's point of view: The coordination of the divergent figures that have been tabled, and agreement on associated measures that are to ensure adequate control of the planned troop reductions.

On the basis of its own records, NATO proceeds from the assumption that the East at present has approximately 150,000 soldiers more in central Europe than the West. This is contested by the Warsaw Pact delegates, whose official documents show an approximate parity of troop strengths. For years, the West has urged a clarification of these discrepancies, and regards this a key topic of the Vienna talks.

LABOR PARTY MANEUVERINGS ON CRUISE ISSUE

PM270835 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 22 Sep 82 p 9

[Unnamed "own correspondent" report: "Labor Party Formulates Standpoint"]

[Text] The Hague -- The Netherlands Labor Party [PvdA], will not cooperate in "any form of active preparation for the deployment of new nuclear arms, that is to say, in any material measures of an administrative or technical nature in preparation for deployment." PvdA parliamentary group leader Den Uyl made this announcement Tuesday [21 September] in connection with what had been published about his talks Monday with government formation negotiations leader Van Kemenade. Den Uyl was referring to reports in yesterday's VOLKSKRANT, among others.

At present, the PvdA parliamentary group leadership's views on preparations for the possible deployment of new nuclear missiles in the Netherlands are becoming cleared. Monday, Den Uyl had allowed these to remain vague, and this led to some unrest within his parliamentary group. However, it became clear yesterday that the PvdA also differentiates between active and passive preparations for deployment, although no exact demarcation line can be drawn between these two preparatory phases.

However, it is clear that the party leadership does not take the view that measures which can be reversed at a given moment in time can be seen as passive preparations. On the contrary, the PvdA takes the view that "reversible" measures could also have a political effect, because they could create the impression that they have been preceded by a decision in favor of deployment. You don't start laying concrete foundations if you are not planning to deploy a cruise missile, although you later use the bunker for growing mushrooms, is the argument in a nutshell.

The same is true of "material measures of an administrative nature." Changes in siting plans designed to make the future deployment of cruise missiles possible are also unacceptable to the PvdA. However, the PvdA considers it both acceptable and desirable that the Netherlands remain involved in the NATO procedures right up to the time of a decision of the new European medium-range nuclear arms. On this point, the PvdA parliamentary group seems reasonably optimistic. It points to the fact that the U.S.-Russian negotiations in Geneva finally began 2 years later than planned and that the moment of deployment could therefore be as far off as the end of 1986.

In the subtle maneuverings around active and passive preparations, which have a lot to do with the present cabinet formation negotiations, the PvdA would probably like to make it clear that what is most important is the best possible Netherlands contribution to a security policy wit the major objective of reducing nuclear arms levels. For this, a "clear No" from the PvdA to the deployment of 48 cruise missiles would not be out of place, although many observers in The Hague are saying that the PvdA will have to make do with a "No in effect."

HESSE FDP CHAIRMAN DEMANDS NEW ELECTIONS

LD262100 Hamburg DPA in German 1839 GMT 26 Sep 82

[Text] Frankfurt, 26 Sep (DPA) -- The FDP regional chairman, Ekkehard Gries, has called for fresh elections in Hesse. All parties, apart from the Greens, were the losers in this election: "The land has been left ungovernable," Gries said in an initial statement this evening on Hesse television. The FDP did not succeed in its presentation of the liberal party after the break-up of the social-liberal coalition in Bonn in the way that was necessary. Perhaps too much had also been expected of the party. Asked whether he would resign from his office as regional chairman, he said the FDP will decide that at a meeting on Monday.

CDU'S GEISSLER COMMENTS ON HESSE ELECTIONS

[Text] Bonn 26 Sep (DPA) -- The reasons for the surprising result in the Hesse diet election were described by CDU General Secretary Heiner Geissler as being the "state of suspense" in Bonn and the disagreements within the FDP regarding the formation of a coalition with the CDU/CSU. Geissler, the first prominent union politician in Bonn to comment to journalists this evening at the CDU party headquarters, said that the "confusion" within the FDP most certainly contributed to its downfall in Hesse.

Geissler stated that the future Bonn coalition partner had not presented a very "splendid picture" during the past few days. The CDU politician added, however, that he would have wished that the uncertainties surrounding the CSU sister party had not occurred either. Geissler was apparently alluding to the CSU's initial demand for immediate, fresh elections in the Bundestag.

Despite the Hesse election result, the CDU, according to Geissler, is sticking to its course in Bonn: A constructive vote of no confidence on Friday in the Bundestag with the election of Helmut Kohl as new federal chancellor, the presentation of a policy to revive the economy and fresh elections on 6 March. Geissler called for work to proceed on a solid and united front beginning Monday so that this concept can be implemented regardless of the Hesse election. This is necessary in the interests of the Federal Republic.

HESSE CDU CHAIRMAN CALLS FOR FRESH ELECTIONS

[Text] Frankfurt, 26 Sep (DPA) -- The Hesse CDU's top candidate, Alfred Dregger, has demanded fresh elections for Hesse. The U on politician who expects cooperation between the SPD and the Greens, announced today in Wiesbaden, 1 hour after the polling stations closed, that he will resign his post as chairman of the Union in Hesse. Tomorrow, Monday, Dregger will inform the party bodies that in the future he will concentrate on his tasks in Bonn.

Dregger congratulated the Hesse prime minister, Holger Boerner (SPD), on his "party political success." But for Hesse, the election result is a "medium-sized disaster." In Dregger's view, shortly before the diet elections in Hesse, the situation for the CDU worsened dramatically. "It was not in Hesse that things changed, but in Bonn," Dregger said.

With reference to his resignation from the post of land chairman, which he has held since 1967, Dregger said that the party now needs a fresh perspective. He had done his duty in Hesse. "This result is a defeat for the Hesse CDU, for the CDU as a whole, and for me personally." Dregger will not run as a candidate in the election for the head of government in the new Hesse land diet.

Strauss on CDU/CSU Alliance

LD262002 Hamburg DPA in German 1916 GMT 26 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn, 26 Sep (DPA) -- After the Hesse election result, there again must be very careful consideration of fresh elections at the earliest date, CSU Chairman Franz Josef Strauss said in a ZDF television interview. But he intends to "exclude nothing and be very careful," although there also has to be an examination of whether the strategy based on a lasting alliance between the CDU/CSU and the FDP is the only possibility. Now, one first has to see how the FDP reacts. "I was never an opponent, but I am very rational and skeptical toward such an alliance," said Strauss, and added: "I consider myself to be a liberal." At any rate, nothing has changed as regards the CSU's confidence in Helmut Kohl and his chancellor candidature.

SCHMIDT REAFFIRMS CALL FOR NEW ELECTIONS

[Text] Bonn 26 Sep (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and the SPD leadership have reaffirmed their demand for immediate, new elections to the Bundestag in consequence of the Hesse election results. According to government spokesman Klaus Boelling, Schmidt stated that the Hesse election result shows that his assessment that the democratic and moral justification for a switch is lacking was correct. This judgement was confirmed, in Schmidt's view, by the Hesse electorate's votes. The election outcome shows, the chancellor said, according to Boelling, that there should be "fresh elections at all events and no further manipulations."

Deputy SPD Chairman Johannes Rau told journalists in Bonn that the Hesse election result confirms that social-liberal policy is not at an end, but can continue. "We now want fresh elections. We are sticking to this." The SPD continues to strive for elections to be held in November if possible, or at the latest, in December.

GENSCHER, KOHL, BRANDT DEBATE HESSE RESULT

[Text] Bonn, 26 Sep (DPA) -- FDP Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher still wants to continue coalition talks with the Union on Monday in Bonn despite his party's defeat in Hesse. Speaking in a Bonn television discussion between the party chairmen, Genscher said this evening that the Hesse election result had changed nothing regarding the reasons which led to the end of the SPD/FDP coalition in Bonn. The social-liberal coalition was no longer able to solve the outstanding problems. That is why a new government is necessary to solve the problems.

Genscher conceded that the Free Democrats' defeat in Hesse could not be glossed over. Nevertheless, he regards the FDP's decision to seek a government with the CDU in Wiesbaden as being the right one, and there is nothing he will change in this respect. The picture of disunity presented by the FDP during the past few days could not have been one to attract voters. Recent developments in Bonn had certainly also influenced the election result. Apparently it is not possible to make clear the real reasons for the breakup of the SPD/FDP coalition in Bonn, which lay with practical issues.

Like Genscher, CDU Chairman Helmut Kohl also opposed immediate fresh elections to the Bundestag despite the election outcome in Hesse. Kohl, who spoke of a kind of state of emergency in the country, stressed that what is important now is not tactical party attitudes, but doing what is necessary from the point of view of state policy. The Union and the FDP now had to make clear whether they would take on the concrete responsibility of seeing that things take a turn for the better in the Federal Republic.

On the other hand, SPD Chairman Willy Brandt strongly reaffirmed the demand for fresh elections as proposed by the federal chancellor as the cleanest solution." He recalled that CSU Chairman Franz Josef Strauss also prefers fresh elections. Brandt stressed that the Hesse election result shows that the FDP has no mandate for its action in Bonn.

Asked whether the Hesse election result would have any effect on the planned no confidence vote to elect a new chancellor on Friday, Kohl stated that the election result would naturally have to be analyzed by the Union and the FDP and be taken into consideration. This would be discussed in the party bodies. Genscher pointed out that regardless of the Hesse election, the FDP National Executive's and parliamentary group's decision on a coalition with the Union has been scheduled for next Tuesday.

A sharp exchange of words between Kohl and Brandt occurred when the SPD chairman noted that the Hesse election result showed that there exists at present a majority to the left of the Union but not to the right of the SPD. Kohl then accused Brandt of planning to join up with the Greens. This would turn the axis of the Federal Republic "to the left" and would lead to a different policy which would not be that of social market economy and security in the Western alliance. Brandt strongly rejected this accusation, pointing out that the German Social Democrats know which alliance the Federal Republic is in and must remain.

HESSE SPD LEADER SAYS 'NO' TO TALKS WITH GREENS

[Text] Frankfurt, 26 Sep (DPA) -- The election result emerging in Hesse has been described by Prime Minister Holger Boerner (SPD) as a "clear response to the FDP's disloyalty in Bonn." Speaking on Hesse television and radio, Boerner said this evening that as far as he is concerned, Hans-Dietrich Genscher is the loser in the Hesse election. The Hesse prime minister expressed satisfaction that his party had managed in Hesse, within just a few weeks, to disprove the election predictions, which gave only 31 percent of the votes to the SPD.

Asked whether he would seek talks with the Greens, Boerner stated that the answer remained "a clear no." The Greens are not coalition partners for the SPD in Hesse. "No one can blackmail me," Boerner said. He will remain in office until the new land diet is constituted on 1 December, and must then resign with his government. "Hamburg circumstances" are not provided for under the Hesse constitution. The first thing he intends doing is to introduce a budget for 1983. (?This is something all parties of the diet are called upon to do.)

Boerner gave no sign of "malicious pleasure" at the poor results of his former coalition partners, the FDP. The switch to CDU has not succeeded but "failed."

LEFTWING FDP MEMBERS CRITICIZE GENSCHER

LD251702 Hamburg DPA in German 1605 GMT 25 Sep 82

[Excerpts] Norderstedt, 25 Sep (DPA) -- A congress of leftwing FDP members in Nordestedt. near Hamburg, has called for the immediate resignation of FDP Federal Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher, and for a new party leadership. After more than 7 hours of discussion on the consequences of the break-up of the social-liberal coalition in Bonn, the 700 or so congress participants approved a resolution on Saturday in which Genscher is accused of seriously damaging democracy through extremely undemocratic behavior and putting the FDP in a difficult and dangerous (?position).

The congress called on FDP Bundestag deputies not to take part in the constructive vote of no confidence against Federal Chancellor Schmidt on 1 October and not to create faits-accomplis before the special FDP congress on 16 October.

A further strategy recommended by the congress is that the leftwing liberals should join forces. "The struggle for a liberal majority is not yet lost," the resolution states. The "disappointed and embittered FDP members" were called upon "not to leave the party, especially at this time, and abandon it to its gravediggers."

Further Opposition to Genscher

LD250856 Hamburg DPA in German 0002 GMT 25 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Norderstedt, 25 Sep (DPA) -- Berlin FDP Executive member William Borm has accused party Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher of causing a crisis of confidence in the FDP by his breaking up of the social-liberal coalition in Bonn. At the congress of leftwing liberals in Norderstedt near Hamburg on Saturday, he called upon Genscher to resign, suggesting that he should take the consequences of this "historic guilt." At the same time, he called upon all leftwing liberals who "no longer feel at home in this FDP" to stay in the party, and said it is now time to coordinate and organize the liberal opposition within the FDP.

Genscher on FDP Future

[Text] Bonn, 25 Sep (DPA) -- According to FDP leader Hans-Dietrich Genscher, there will be "no increase in the tax and contributions burden" as a result of the balancing of the 1983 budget sought by the CDU/CSU and FDP. In an interview on Saarland radio, Genscher said on Saturday that there will probably be shifts from direct to indirect taxation. This, however, is socially and economically desirable.

Asked about the discussion in the FDP about possible exclusions from the party, the chairman said that he is no devotee of proceedings to expel people. He does, however, expect those who believe that they cannot follow the party's line, to take the consequences for themselves. Nobody should succumb to the temptation of using the party as a sounding-board for a policy which the majority of the party does not want.

In answer to the question as to whether the result of the Hesse land diet elections on Sunday, in contrast to his previous assurances, will have an influence on the course of the Bonn coalition talks after all, Genscher replied that there will of course be no direct influence. However, he does think that the voters in Hesse will be aware that they can also improve the position of the Free Democrats in Bonn by their votes.

EXPORT BAN LIFTED ON FRIGATES TO ARGENTINA

PLO'S AL-IFRANJI ADDRESSES DEMONSTRATION

LD251454 Hamburg DPA in German 1337 GMT 25 Sep 82

[Excerpt] Bonn, 25 Sep (DPA) -- At a demonstration in the center of Bonn on Saturday, Palestinians once again blamed the United States and Israel for the massacre in west Beirut. About 5,000 demonstrators cheered PLO representative 'Abdallah al-Ifranji when he linked Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin and Defense MinisterAri'el Sharon with the Nazis, and announced even more determined resistance by the PLO. The war against Lebanon and the PLO, which according to Al-Ifranji caused more than 30,000 deaths, would not have been possible for Israel without U.S. support, the PLO representative stressed. He also bitterly reproached the Arab states: "They abandoned us again."

BOMBS EXPLODE AT IRANIAN, JORDANIAN AIRLINES

NC270813 Paris AFP in English 0800 GMT 27 Sep 82

[Text] Frankfurt, Sept. 27 (AFP) -- One person was killed and a second injured during the night when three bombs exploded near the Frankfurt central railway station, causing extensive damage, the police announced today.

Police said two of the bombs were probably destined for the Iranian airline company, Iranair. One of them exploded at the company's offices and the other outside the adjacent West German Touropa travel bureau.

A third bomb exploded three hours later outside the Jordanian airline, Jordan air.

Police said the blasts appeared to be linked to the second anniversary of the outbreak of the Iran-Iraq war which broke out on Sept. 26, 1980.

LE MONDE: ARMY WORRIED BY THREATENED CUTS

PM241305 Paris LE MONDE in French 22 Sep 82 pp 1, 8

[Jacques Isnard article: "The Plan for a 'New Armed Forces' Worries Many Officers"]

[Text] While the three army corps which form the French battle corps have been carrying out a series of important maneuvers on open ground (terrain libre] since the beginning of this week, Premier Pierre Mauroy announced in Paris Monday, 20 September, that studies were being carried out to define "a new model for the armed forces" in the framework of the 1984-1988 defense plan which is due to be submitted to parliament next year.

In his speech to the Higher National Defense Studies Institute [IHEDN], the premier explained that the plan to restructure the armed forces will have effects on their manpower levels, the proportion of officers to conscripts and on the organization of national service, which could become a differentiated servce whose length would be variable.

That speech by Mr Mauroy will probably give substance to rumors in French units which were already reporting the government's intention to decree a considerable reduction in the number of soldiers, and which are causing, mainly in the army, a widespread feeling of anxiety aggravated by the prospect of budgetary austerity, which will not spare the Defense Ministry in 1983.

It is a sign of the times that general officers are rereading, pen in hand, what people called the Bloch-Laine report; in other words, the lengthy document written at Mr Francois Mitterrand's request by a commission chaired by the former inspector general of finances to draw up "the account of the situation" in France at the date of its submission in December 1981. At the same time, other general or senior officers are carefully organizing the visit which the head of state plans to pay to the army at Canjuers Camp (VAR) 15 October. That is a visit during which the general staff seems to be planning to show the man who, according to the constitution, is armed forces chief, that defense requirements are not as reported by the commission.

Why this stir in the army? Why this commotion, which is perceptible even in the regimental corps, as if people feared some fatal plan for a new radical reorganization following the one which the army suffered -- with bad grace even then -- between 1975 and 1980 under the iron rod of Gen Jean Lagarde, its former chief of staff, who was soon called to other duties?

It is an army which is worried, gloomy and anxious to know "how it is going to be treated," to cite a senior officer who has just become a regimental commander. This is what any outside observer who is fairly lucid can now see, and financial considerations alone -- in other words, the austerity which the 1983 draft budget promises the armed forces -- do not explain that state of mind. Indeed, the anxiety is created by other rumors and other intentions attributed to the government which stem from a statement by Defense Minister Charles Hernu which passed unnoticed the first time but has since been repeated, to the effect that if it was one day necessary to make choices imposed by circumstances, it was preferable to have fewer, better armed and better equipped men in uniform.

Savings

Moreover, it is a widespread attitude today, in foreign countries, too, to reduce the number of men in the armed forces when the budget remains the same in order to make up for the effects of inflation on the cost of equipment and to be able to buy increasingly expensive weapons. In France, since the end of World War II, the armed forces have frequently found it psychologically difficult to accept those "disengagements" of staff, as they were called, following the Indochinese and Algerian conflicts. Such operations have left scars on the memories of many officers who are still active, and young officers have often been led to fear a return to that eventuality.

At first sight, the premier's remarks to the IHEDN will increase that anxiety, conferring on it an almost official and in any case, legitimate justification. Since Mr Mauroy himself admits that he is planning "a new model for the armed forces," it naturally follows that that "updating" will change the number of men serving and, at the same time, the proportion of career soldiers to conscripts. There can henceforth be no doubt about government intentions.

Thus, the savings the French Army is being asked to make next year do not rule out a major reduction in staffing levels or even a reduction in all kinds of bonuses from all sources granted to certain categories of career officers. It is here, in particular, that the Bloch-Laine report comes in -- a report whose drafting was principally assisted by Gen Georges Buis and Col Jean Paucot, two former army officers close to Mr Hernu who apparently had a decisive influence.

What does that report say on defense among other things? Aside from the usual compliments about the sound nature and devotion of the French Armed Forces, there is a clear statement of the need for a "real will to innovate," which depends on the adoption of "permanent incentives to leave," without which, "staffing costs will increase without the quality of the staff being improved." The report is even more explicit: "It is impossible to ignore the fact that everybody's share comes out of the same envelope. That is what dictates 'difficult choices.' Budgets are hostile to multiplication by large numbers and," the report's authors explain, "the conscript force comprises large numbers."

Today, in view of what is already known about the defense budget, which stays at the same level in 1983, a rereading of the Bloch-Laine report becomes more interesting. The prospect of those famous "difficult choices" -- invoked before the report and by the report itself but rarely carried out by previous governments -- is giving rise to rumor in the military setup of a reduction in manpower which could affect 30,000 to 40,000 officers' and conscripts' posts.

Upside Down

And if the army is at present the most unsettled of the three forces, it is because it is also the one that has elicited from the budget committee, apart from praise for its capacity to adopt to change, severe criticism of its present organization and functioning. Indeed, one reads as follows in connection with its 15 divisions -- 8 armored, 7 infantry --: "Many of those responsible for their possible future deployment believe that the newly created divisions are, on account of their structure, difficult to command." The report contains no equivalent assessment of the navy or the air force.

To scale down the army so drastically -- if the scale of the plan really is as rumored in the units -- would in fact be tantamount to having to conceive "a different army" from the one that exists in 1982. This comment came from a general officer in charge of an operational command, who observed, moreover, that the drafting of a contingent as young as 18, together with a major depletion of career cadres, would turn the army completely upside down.

But where the rub really comes is undoubtedly in the general staffs, which will have to examine and to prepare on the spot what will seem like a "contraction" of the major part of France's military strength, though, on the other hand, they are instructed not to make any modifications at all to the organization of the rapid assistance forces, otherwise known as the foreign intervention forces, which on the contrary will be strengthened and made even more versatile, since this is the government's wish as recently expressed by Mr Hernu.

Risks

For there is a choice: Either the army launches into making new savings on what is usually called its general costs, its infrastructure or training costs; and there will come a time when those savings, rapidly becoming impossible to contain, will be in danger of undermining the property -- schools and camps or garrisons -- necessary for trainings its units, or the general staff, under pressure of circumstances, will decide to cut into essential areas and the battle corps on both sides of the Rhine or the infrantry divisions in France -- aside perhaps from the Alpine Division, which has preserved its good image in the eyes of the authorities -- will here and there run the risk of having to lose some units or so-called organic elements of army corps, which will be dissolved, reshaped and even regrouped to save money.

Undermining, in one way or another, the present organization of the battle corps -- in other words, the two army corps in the FRG and in the east [presumably of France] and a third, smaller and more hybrid which, from its garrisons in central France, can come to their aid or act autonomously -- also means accepting the political and military risk of reducing the government's freedom of action.

Those so-called "test" forces, which are united under one operational command in time of crisis or conflict, need to be sufficiently big to maintain their full strength. They have the job of gauging a foreign aggression and brandishing the threat of their tactical nuclear weapons to warn the enemy that the use of strategic weapons would be inevitable if he persisted. Reducing their size below the necessary threshold therefore means lowering that guard and running the risk of not being taken seriously enough.

Hence, it is easy to understand the importance which the army attaches to the president's visit to Canjuers next month. That visit will give it the opportunity to show that the parachute forces are not a panecea and that the armored and mechanized units, the artillery and helicopter fighter squardrons -- which are certainly less rustic and more expensive -- have their place in a coherent military network which it would be a mistake to change before the commune elections, since local representatives are so acutely sensitive to those problems of the redeployment or dissoluton of garrisons.

CHEYSSON FOREIGN AFFAIRS COMMISSION ADDRESS

AB241325 Paris Diplomatic Information Service in French 1020 GMT 24 Sep 82

[Text] The Foreign Affairs Commission of the National Assembly met on 23 September under the chairmanship of its chairman, Maurice Faure, in order to hear External Affairs Minister Claude Cheysson.

In his preliminary statement, the minister recalled the situation in Poland, the economic dispute between Europe and the United States and especially, the events in the Middle East and Lebanon.

Claude Cheysson remarked that the development of the situation in Poland was in conformity with the fears expressed, adding that no improvement was in sight as far as the political atmosphere was concerned and that the people's courage and calm determination were being confirmed.

Talking about the economic difficulties with the United States, Mr Cheysson specified that despite the will of the Washington government, the steel agreement concluded with the United States in the name of the EEC by its commission has yet to be accepted by the U.S. enterprises.

He stressed the totally unacceptable -- and according to some firms discriminatory -- character of the sanctions applied by the United States against the European enterprises supplying materials to be used in the construction of the Siberian gas pipeline.

Mr Cheysson affirmed that since the U.S. Government itself seems to be embarrassed by a situation that is so contrary to the principle of national sovereignty and the rules of market economy, the Europeans have no concessions to make to help free their partner from the impasse it personally created.

Concerning the situation in the Middle East, the minister recalled that the Iranian offensive of last July had been blocked by Iraq. After talking about the threats of a new offensive, he insisted on the resolution which -- thanks to the firmness and ability of the king of Morocco -- the Fes summit adopted to mark the solidarity of all the Arab countries against external aggression.

The minister then related the history of the events that have been taking place in Lebanon since 6 June. After the entry of the Israeli army, which had been condemned by France, the first priority had been to obtain help for the victims. This was why France submitted to the Security Council Resolution 512, which was adopted.

The president of the republic's declaration of 24 June and the immediate submission of another draft resolution by France were aimed at ensuring that Beirut was not crushed and that Lebanese authority was reestablished with the support of an international force. According to the minister, the U.S. veto of the French draft resolution caused a loss of 3 months.

Mr Cheysson also recalled how — thanks to the perseverance and ability of the American negotiator Mr Habib, to whom he paid tribute -- a multinational force had been set up making it possible to avoid the crushing of Beirut by guaranteeing the evacuation of the Palestinian forces. He observed, however, that the mission of this force was confined to the protection of the evacuation of the Palestinian fighters in an atmosphere of security and dignity. Its mandate could have been extended only at the request of the Lebanese authorities with the agreement of the Americans and the Italians. None of these conditions had been fulfilled, he said.

The minister pointed out that the day after Bashir al-Jumayyil's assassination, he went to Beirut to demonstrate France's solidarity with Lebanon. When the Israeli forces entered west Beirut, France published an official declaration condemning this act, which violated the arrangements of the Habib plan and resulted in leaving the civilian population without protection while the guarantees given in compensation for the evacuation of the armed forces were compromised.

Immediately after the announcement of the massacres, France entered into consultation with its partners. It proposed and ensured the adoption by the Security Council of a resolution calling for the strengthening of the UN observer team as well as the dispatch of a multinational force.

In view of the delays which negotiations with Israel would have entailed, it was decided that a tripartite force to be supplied by the United States, France and Italy should be set up in conformity with the simultaneous declarations of the French and U.S. presidents. The establishment of this force implied Israel's withdrawal from Beirut and its suburbs.

At the same time, Mr Cheysson stressed that Lebanon has elected a new president under very remarkable conditions and in a spirit of national unity which we greatly appreciate. On the future after the restoration of security in Beirut, the minister observed that the departure of all foreign armed forces from Lebanon is a priority objective, as the Security Council has demanded, and in line with the recommendation of the Fes summit, which envisaged a commitment on the withdrawal of Syrian troops after negotiations with the Lebanese Government.

This situation, Mr Cheysson insisted, must be placed back in a general framework -- one of a common political process confirming the rights of all states, including Israel, to security as well as the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people. In this regard, the minister stated the opinion that the declarations of Fes and the Reagan plan both constitute political openings which must be welcomed even though there were shortcomings in both: The failure to mention the PLO's right to self-determination in the Reagan plan, and the nonmention of the principle of mutual recognition in the Fes declaration. These problems account for the interest, the minister remarked, in the French-Egyptian plan, which occupies a middle position and which the Europeans once again on 20 September accepted as a suitable basis for a future settlement. After observing that after recent events the chances for a settlement do not exist as long as the situation in Lebanon remains unchanged and as long as the foreign forces are not withdrawn, Mr Cheysson stressed that the clearness and firmness of France's position gives it a remarkable and unique authority in the Arab world.

Replying to questions, the minister first touched on the Beirut incidents and the need for an inquiry demanded by several members of the commission, remarking that since crimes were committed, this inquiry was necessary and that it was good for Israel to suggest it. He recalled that the premier, Pierre Mauroy, has accordingly congratulated the steps taken by President Navon and expressed the hope that the new Lebanese president would follow in his footsteps.

While waiting for this inquiry, Mr Cheysson declared that it is not good for a member of government to assess blame or to enunciate suspicions. Until now, all that it was possible to say in Washington, Paris and elsewhere was that the Israeli Armed Forces entered west Beirut in violation of existing agreements and that Israel's responsibility was involved in the events that followed. At this stage, the minister would not say more.

Responding to questions on the multinational forces, Mr Cheysson explained that the 1,000-member French contingent would in the future be under national command. He confirmed that the duration of the mandate must be agreed upon by the three, in consultation with the Lebanese Government, and that the mission of the contingent, which will not be a substitute for the Lebanese Armed Forces, would be to help Lebanese Government forces. In this regard, touching on the experience of the international forces in Lebanon, Mr Cheysson explained that these forces were estabished under ambiguous conditions.

Replying to questions concerning the PLO and the evolution of the protagonists, Mr Cheysson reaffirmed with respect to the PLO that France favored strengthening the political dimension in return for the disarmament of their armed forces. He noted that after a period of embarrassment, the Arab countries had a sudden beginning of unity in Fes, and that Egypt, which was happy to associate itself with France in the elaboration of a draft resolution, had begun to move closer to the rest of the Arab world. He explained that taken in a larger political context, King Hussein's declaration demonstrated that there was no contradiction between the Reagan plan and the creation of a Palestinian state. After expressing his views on the extent of President Reagan's shock at the recent events, the minister said concerning Israel, that although one should not make any judgement, it is striking to note the multiple signs of the vitality of democracy there. He stressed that the Soviet Union, which strongly supported Syria with its authority, did not play an active role.

France, the minister concluded, remains in contact with all parties and with all means. Mr Cheysson noted that if Mr 'Arafat came to Paris, he would be received as the other members of the PLO Executive Committee had been. The president would receive Mr 'Arafat when he felt the moment was right. Finally, after once again stressing the remarkable and unique nature of the election of Amin al-Jumayyil, the minister asserted that France cannot have any other attitude toward Lebanon but total support for its unity.

CHEYSSON URGES ISRAELI PULLOUT FROM BEIRUT

[Unattributed report: "Cheysson: Israeli Forces Must Withdraw From Beirut"]

[Text] Speaking to jouranlists as he left the cabinet meeting, External Relations Minister Claude Cheysson said that the deployment of the multinational force in Lebanon "requires the immediate withdrawal of Israeli forces from west Beirut and, moreover, that they be pulled back to the airport."

"I feel," the external relations minister added, "that talks with Israel on that subject have almost been completed."

For his part, Defense Minister Charles Hernu rejected accusations that the first intermediary force in Beirut was withdrawn prematurely. "France accomplished its mission," he said. "It had a mandate and a geographical zone and the first contingent had an intermediary mission. We were the first to arrive and the last to leave." "Contrary to reports I have heard in some quarters," he remarked, "Nobody asked us to stay."

FINAL TROOP CONTINGENT WILL ARRIVE 27 SEP

LD261644 Paris Domestic Service in French 1600 GMT 26 Sep 82

[Summary] The final contingent of French troops making up the multinational buffer force in Beirut is due to arrive tomorrow night. The men are sailing aboard the aircraft carrier Foch and will bring the French strength in Beirut up to 1,070 men. Today, 35 French soldiers carried out their first mission, that of clearing mines around the entrances to the Shatila Palestinian camp, an essential task in helping searchers still looking for bodies in the camp.

CHEYSSON DEPARTS FOR UN GENERAL ASSEMBLY SESSION

[Text] Paris, Sep 26 (AFP) -- French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson left here today for New York, where he will attend the forthcoming United Nations General Assembly session.

Upon arrival today, Mr Cheysson is to hold a dinner meeting with U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz. He will also meet during his stay in New York with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrey Gromyko and other diplomatic chiefs.

French Premier Pierre Mauroy will also travel to New York to address the General Assembly for France when it convenes on September 28.

SWAPO LEADER ARRIVES FOR TALKS ON NAMIBIA

NC242220 Paris AFP in English 1637 GMT 24 Sep 82

[Text] Paris, Sept. 24 (AFP) -- Sam Nujoma, leader of the South-West Africa People's Organisation (SWAPO), arrived here today from Luanda for talks with government officials on the deadlock in international negotiations on Namibian independence.

Mr. Nujoma had a meeting here with Foreign Ministry official Francois Scheer, and was later to hold talks with representatives of the French Socialist Party, including National Secretary Jacques Huntzinger.

Mr. Nujoma said before he left Angola that the aim of his trip was to inform European opinion that there has been no progress in talks to bring about implementation of the United Nations settlement for South Africa-ruled Namibia because of "manoeuvres" by Pretoria, which, he said, enjoyed the active support of President Ronald Reagan's government.

Mr. Nujoma will spend two days here before visiting Belgium and possibly other European countries including West Germany.

In July, Mr Nujoma had talks here with French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson.

MOROCCAN MINISTER 'SATISFIED' WITH TRADE TALKS

PM230937 Casablanca LE MATIN in French 18 Sep 82 pp 1, 3

[Excerpt] At the end of a day of talks with several French ministers, Moroccan Commerce, Industry and Tourism Minister Azzeddine Guessous said he was "satisfied" with the results of those meetings.

A draft agreement on cooperation in tourism was signed Thursday evening at the offices of the secretary of state for leisure -- an agreement which gives new guidelines for French-Moroccan action in that sphere.

The talks with Foreign Trade Minister Michel Jobert and the research and industry minister's principal private secretary were devoted mainly to studying means of reducing Morocco's foreign trade deficit with France.

That deficit accounts for half the Moroccan trade deficit with the European Ten.

To reduce that deficit, which has been increased by Morocco's development effort and hence, imports of job-creating goods and wealth, Mr Guessous obtained an assurance that the French Government would encourage the purchase of Moroccan phosphates by the big chemical groups recently brought under its control by nationalizations.

"We think there is room for the sale of more phosphates on the French market...which is one of the best in the world," Mr Guessous said.

Among the other traditional export sectors, one of the problems raised was that of textiles in face of the protectionist measures taken in that sphere by France and more generally by the EEC.

COLOMBO'S UN, CANADA SCHEDULE OUTLINED

AU270846 Rome ANSA in English 0808 GMT 27 Sep 82

[Excerpt] (ANSA) Rome, September 27 -- Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo, like other protagonists of the international scene, starts an intense round of consultations and appointments in New York today as diplomatic and political leaders converge on the United Nations headquarters for the world body's annual General Assembly.

At the end of the week, Colombo will be moving on to Montreal [as received] where, on October 2 and 3, there is an informal meeting of the sixteen NATO foreign ministers. Colombo is due back in Rome on October 4 after an absence of nine days.

In New York, his talking partners will include American Secretary of State George Shultz and Soviet diplomatic chief Andrey Gromyko, and probably other foreign ministers too. Another probable date on his schedule is a five-sided session of Italy, Britain, West Germany, France and the United States to debate the crisis in Euro-American relations deriving from European participation in the Soviet Euro-Siberian gasline.

JOHN PAUL RENEWS OFFER TO GO TO LEBANON

NC242304 Paris AFP in English 2259 GMT 24 Sep 82

[Text] Vatican City, Sept. 24 (AFP) -- Pope John Paul II told Maximos V. Hakim, Lebanese patriarch of the Greek and Oriental Orthodox Church, today that he would travel to Lebanon "if it were really useful toward peace efforts."

The patriarch said after the talks that the pontiff had told him that such a trip "would have to be organized with the relevant authorities." Maximos also said he thanked the pope for his statements favoring Lebanese and Palestinian rights.

John Paul, he added, "renewed his love for Lebanon and his wish to continue all possible efforts toward returning to peace...in that little country that he is fond of." The pontiff said last summer that he was prepared to go to Lebanon.

COLOMBO BRIEFS CABINET ON BEIRUT TROOP DISPATCH

AU241548 Rome ANSA in English 1544 GMT 24 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 24 -- Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo briefed the Rome cabinet here today on the dispatch of a new contingent of Italian troops to Beirut, confirming that a liaison committee of the Lebanese authorities and the three nations which have sent peace-keeping troops is already operative.

According to Colombo, the force of Italian, French and American troops has the mandate of ensuring "adequate assistance" for the Lebanese Government and armed forces in the Beirut area. This forms part of the effort to restore their sovereignty and authority in the capital so as to "guarantee the security of the civilians in line with the aims of the United Nations", he added.

He also noted that, while Italy stands by its "firm" judgement on Israeli responsibility in the Beirut massacres, it is deeply concerned about the manifestations of anti-Semitism that have appeared recently.

ITALIAN AVIATION WORKERS BEGIN BOYCOTTING ISRAEL

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 24 -- Italian air transport workers today started a series of boycott actions against flights into and out of Israel to protest against the massacre of the Palestinians in Beirut. Pilots, flight assistants, and flight technicians are refusing to fly to Tel Aviv with planes of the Alitalia national airline all today. Other actions are planned till October 1.

LEADING JEWISH AUTHOR LABELS BEGIN 'FASCIST'

AU241613 Rome ANSA in English 1503 GMT 24 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 24 -- One of Italy's leading authors and intellectuals of Jewish origin today called on the Tel Aviv government to resign in an interview with the Rome daily, LA REPUBBLICA.

Author Primo Levi, who survived the Nazi death camps and is one of those few Italian writers with an international following, said in reply to a precise question, that he was fully prepared to describe Israeli Premier Menahem Begin as a "fascist". "For (Defense Minister Ari'el) Sharon, I don't know because I don't know his story", Levi asserted. "But for Begin fascist is a definition I accepted, and I think Begin would accept it too". "He was a pupil of Jabotinski who was the right wing of Zionism, declared himself to be fascist and was one of the people who was a talking partner for Benito Mussolini".

According to Levi, Begin stays in power "thanks primarily to the votes of the young people and the recent immigrants, in other words, not the refugees from Eastern Europe, but rather those Jewish who come from the Middle Eastern countries or who were born in Israel". "These are all people with strong animosity towards the neighboring states".

But Levi also said he does not believe in the "olive branch" held out by Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasir 'Arafat. Commenting on the warm reception he was given in Rome last week, Levi said, "I saw, and my reaction was one of diffidence and even irritation".

Chief Rabbi Defends Begin

AU241955 Rome ANSA in English 1937 GMT 24 Sep 82

[Text] (ANSA) Rome, September 24 -- "I deny that (Israeli Premier Menahem) Begin is responsible for what happened at Sabra and Shatila", Rome chief Rabbi Elio Toaff said in an interview with the Italian weekly "PANORAMA".

Asked about Israel's responsibility for the massacres, Toaff said "the camps had been opened to rout the Fedayeen. It was difficult to imagine what would happen, it was beyond any imagination that the Lebanese would skin their brothers".

The chief rabbi said the massacre was a repugnant act, "something nefarious which makes consciences rebel, even if the dead were enemies".

"Certainly Begin has committed errors", Toaff continued. "He should not have pushed as far as Beirut. He should have sat down to the negotiating table". But, according to the rabbi, these errors have been exploited by "the Arab oil producing nations and the Soviet Union to unleash an all-out anti-Israeli campaign of world proportions".

"PANORAMA" also carried another interview with an Italian Jew who voiced a much more critical attitude to Israel. David Meghnagi, promoter of a demonstration against Begin in Rome, said that the time has come to call Palestinians "our future brothers, all of whose rights must be recognized to repair the wrongs".

Meghnagi went on to say that "one of our duties is to have the Israeli left meet with the Palestinans, and begin to build a bridge". The Lebanese war marked "the blackest point of Israeli's history" he stressed, adding that the Beirut massacres have triggered a rebirth in Europe, "even in Italy", of anti-Semitic attitudes.

In other developments, the joint Jewish-Christian Friendship Association sent messages to newly-elected Lebanese President Amin al-Jumayyil and Israeli President Yitzhaq Navon urging that "those directly and indirectly responsible for the massacres be arrested and tried, to whatever confession [as received] they belong".

DC, PSI MINISTERS CLASH OVER ANTICRISIS MEASURES

PM240837 Rome LA REPUBBLICA in Italian 21 Sep 82 p 31

[Guiseppe Turani report]

[Excerpts] Cernobbio, 20 Sep -- It is frequently said, and has almost become a commonplace, that the path which Italian economy and society must take in the coming years is very narrow, tortuous, and fraught with possible paralyzing difficulties. Is it possible to see how narrow that path is and what obstacles there are between us and our future?

About 100 businessmen, trade unionists, politicians and academics attended a 3-day meeting in the Villa d'Este organized by the Studio Armbrosetti to try to answer those questions. As is customary in such meetings, there was no vote on a final document and everybody was free to reach their own conclusions. However, a great many things were clarified.

Treasury Minister Andreatta, a great expert on such questions and forecasts, stood up and immediately the already rather narrow path shrank considerably. His argument has the implacable logic of some theorems and yet it needs to be reported in some detail:

1 -- Behind those forecasts of a 1.5 percent growth there is a public deficit of around 85 trillion for 1983, Andreatta said. But we cannot afford such a deficit. It must be reduced by at least 20 trillion, bringing it down to around 65 trillion. What cuts can be made? The usual ones: pensions, health care, education. Public service charges will then have to be increased by 30 percent and even 80 percent, accordingly.

-- But if we make those cuts, Andreatta continued, and we cannot avoid doing so if we want to avert bankruptcy, the economy will be depressed and it won't be possible to attain even that modest 1.5 percent economic growth. We will probably settle at around zero growth, more or less.

At that point our path was narrowed to a knife-edge. Andreatta, backed by Goria, his party's economic policy chief, launched an idea aimed first at making the path disappear and then suddently expanding it, almost to the width a highway. Is it worthwhile, Andreatta and Goria ask, to put up with all those sacrifices, cuts, and increased public service charges to achieve zero growth and 14 to 15 percent inflation? No. The sacrifices are too great and the result too small.

So, it is better to see what happens if the sacrifices are increased: In other words, if we move toward a marked reduction in our living standards. How? Andreatta was very clear: Let us forget, he said, all previous discussions. Prime Minister Spadolini had planned to bring inflation below the 13 percent ceiling in 1983. Hence, we maintain that income can only increase by 13 percent in nominal terms or even by a few percent less. That will produce great hope and launch us strongly on the trajectory leading out of inflation.

In the short term, we will see wages increase less than prices, suffer a drop in living standards and the economy may have less than zero growth, in other words it may suffer recession. But after that, all the conditions for a strong, healthy and sound development will be recreated. The Andreatta theorem is essentially as follows: We are swallowing a bitter pill, but in small doses and hence are never either completely cured or really sick. Let's increase the dose and we will be cured. Moreover, that is what is being done in various degrees in all countries. We will not be the first in the world to accept a partial drop in our living standards. We could even be the last.

But it was on this specific point that Socialist [Budget] Minister Gianni de Michelis launched his offensive. The world, he said, is experiencing a very serious crisis; there are no more recipes or theories; and the things that Andreatta has just proposed are unviable because we could never achieve consensus. Therefore, we must stop thinking about combating inflation with an economic policy. We must make an effort at realism. We take the following two things for granted:

1 -- We will emerge from inflation very slowly.

2 -- The market economy, allowed to evolve freely, has brought us to the brink of international collapse.

From these points one deduces the following:

1 -- We must cease to be obsessed with inflation (which will be with us for many years in any case and begin to direct our minds and action toward development, even at the cost of a slightly higher level of price increases.

2 -- We envisage -- because it cannot be otherwise -- more direct state intervention in economic affairs. Above all, we must accustom ourselves to the idea of a state that works on the structures, that is, occupies itself with the major industrial sectors and directs their activities; in short, a state that has rather less to do with discount rates and works specifically with regard to enterprises so as to impart a new thrust to their future, in agreement with the trade unions.

PSI DEPUTY SECRETARY MAKES OVERTURES TO PCI

PM241027 Rome LA REPUBBLICA in Italian 18 Sep 82 p 7

[F.C. report]

[Text] Florence, 17 Sep -- [DC Secretary] De Mita's "Fluctuating" line "is prompting a resumption of the debate on the left of the alternative, which remains the PSI's prospect." This is the essence of the speech that PSI Deputy Secretary Claudio Martelli delivered in Florence yesterday evening during celebrations of the PSI's 90th anniversary.

Martelli argued that the DC secretary proposes on the one hand a government understanding with the PSI, while on the other demonstrates his wish to "bypass the alternation stage," that is, the advent of a Socialist to the Chigi Palace [prime minister's office], which, Martelli explained, "we consider necessary."

Furthermore, Craxi's deputy continued, De Mita has given a new boost to the strategy of bipolarism, which means that "the PCI, because of insufficient numerical strength, would remain in opposition while the DC would continue to govern.

"The DC secretary's unconfessed aim," Martelli added, "is to maintain an understanding with the PCI, relegated to the opposition, with the sole aim of bypassing Socialist alternation in the leadership of the government." But by trying to play the two major leftwing parties off against each other, "De Mita risks playing the sorcerer's apprentice and accelerating the advent of the alternative to the DC."

Following the signs of a thaw issued by [Socialist Finance Minister] Formica at the L'UNITA Festival in Tirrenia, Martelli's speech confirms the Socialists are now trying to resume the dialogue with the Communists. Indeed, the PSI leader gave a detailed list of the points of convergence between the parties. In foreign policy he cited the "very close, if not identical, stances" on Poland, El Salvador, the Middle East and the Falklands, though adding that a certain "distance" remains with regard to Euromissiles and security policy. Martelli also mentioned "convergences" in the field of economic, social and fiscal policy and on "the question of crime," that is, the struggle against the mafia, camorra and 'ndragheta [criminal organization], which requires a "regeneration of the state."

Where unshakable cultural and political disagreement does exist, however, is on so-called "peacetime Leninism" -- the term used by Martelli to indicate the overlapping of party and state bodies, a temptation which, in his opinion, still thrives within PCI ranks.

At the end of his speech Martelli returned to the subject of the alternative, which, in his opinion, cannot be communist-dominated, but must also be based on the contribution of secular forces of the left and center-left. Because "we do not accept the logic of bipolarism, we do not want to choose between subjection to the DC and subjection to the PCI, "he explained.

However, Martielli drew no conclusions in his speech, which he presented as reflections on the post-government crisis phase. But he did conclude with an appeal to the PCI not to ignore the Socialists' new willingness to conduct a dialogue among the leftwing forces. He did so with a hint of skepticism: "We will hear something new from [PCI Secretary General] Berlinguer Sunday. Though Berlinguer is one of those people who are always awaited but who never arrive."

The Socialists' celebrations in Florence will be closed tomorrow by Bettino Craxi.

TEJERO WON'T BE ALLOWED TO RUN IN ELECTION

LD242342 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1800 GMT 24 Sep 82

[Excerpts] Lt Col Tejero Molina will not be allowed to run in the general election. This has just been announced by government spokesman Ignacio Aguirre, the secretary of state for information. Ignacio Aguirre told us that the minister of the interior consulted the Provincial Electoral Committee on the possibility of Lieutenant Colonel Tejero standing in the elections and whether his candidacy was proper. According to the electoral committee, he is not qualified as a candidate.

CONSERVATIVE COALITION TO HOLD FOR ELECTIONS

PA232305 Madrid EFE in Spanish 0946 GMT 22 Sep 82

[By Gloria Valenzuela]

[Text] Madrid, 22 Sep (EFE) -- The conservative coalition of the Popular Alliance, AP, and the Popular Democratic Party, PDP, will hold together for the Spanish legislative elections on 28 October, in spite of the serious problems that arose when certain PDP candidates were sidelined.

PDP leader Oscar Alzaga's final decision concerning the withdrawal of his candidacy for Madrid is still pending. Alzaga himself said that, in any case, his party will remain in the coalition with Manuel Fraga's AP.

"We will all campaign for the coalition," Alzaga said last night. Nevertheless, he said he would not announce his decision concerning the withdrawal of his candidacy until today. Alzaga, who appears in the sixth place of the AP-PDP slate for Madrid, threatened to withdraw when slates presented by other provinces failed to include several outstanding men from his party. One of the principal founders of the coalition, former Minister Jose Manuel Otero Novas, is among these.

The PDP is comprised of the most conservative Christian Democrats of Union of the Democratic Center, UCD, who recently abandoned that government party to join AP.

The "crisis of the slates" moved the other PDP candidates to consider withdrawing their candidacies. This did not materialize following many intense meetings between leaders from both parties.

In spite of the crisis, AP leader Fraga found time yesterday to start his campaign in Madrid with a visit to three marketplaces. He was met with the phrase, "the early bird catches the worm," in reference both to the hour of his visit, 0630, and his headstart over other competitors in this kind of activity.

Meanwhile, the UCD Executive Committee will meet today to add the last details to its election program, which will be presented next Monday. According to the latest reports, the program will especially stress "specific solutions to specific problems" and will avoid general definitions of societal models.

The meeting may also analyze the repercussions of the breakdown of the UCD's pact with Antonio Garrigues Walker's Liberal Democratic Party. According to statements by the government party's liberal sector, "this has had a negative effect on plans for reorganizing the centrist sector."

The other centrist force that will participate in the elections is the Democratic and Social Center of former President Adolfo Suarez. This party is hastily preparing its program, too. Its founding commission will meet today to decide on the definite date of its constituent congress, which will take place late this month.

Popular Alliance Program

PM270735 Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 19 Sep 82 p 18

[Text] The completion of Spain's integration into the Atlantic alliance is the prime objective of the Popular Alliance's electoral program with regard to foreign policy, within which context the recovery of Spanish sovereignty over Gibraltar is regarded as an ongoing issue. Fraga's party's foreign policy will defend as a priority the lofty aims of national defense, and its domestic policy will tackle, by means of legislative and government measures, the strengthening of public order and public safety.

The introduction to the Popular Alliance program on foreign policy contains a reappraisal of the role of training diplomats, which will be subject to a single foreign policy, ruling out sudden changes related to variable factors of national or party policy. With this in mind the Popular Alliance proposes to strengthen the Foreign Ministry and its links with the premiership, the General Staff, the deputy premiership for the economy and other bodies.

The prime objective of full integration into NATO is laid down from the viewpoint that the global nature of international conflicts makes any kind of isolation or false neutralism illusory, consistent with Spain's not being anyone's satellite and with the expectation of recovering Gibraltar. The Popular Alliance program states that this recovery has been impossible in an isolated Spain or through bilateral negotiations.

Other fundamental Popular Alliance foreign policy lines are the acceptance of Spain's integration into the Common Market; Spanish cooperation with Latin America -- in line with the principles of noninterference and interdependence, consistent with the condemnation of totalitarian regimes of whatever kind -- and the Arab world; and more active integration into a democratic West. "The State of Israel," the document adds, "is an unavoidable fact."

The Popular Alliance believes that national defense requires the greatest efforts to perpetuate the nation's existence and identity. From this stance, it highlights the importance of military defense for achieving an optimum level of national security, whose lofty aims will be taken into account in foreign policy, too. The defense of the peninsula and the surrounding sea is linked with and strengthened by the Canary Islands-Gibraltar-Balearic Islands axis.

Among national defense objectives, the Popular Alliance includes "the cultivation of the permanent national values and vitures vested in the military"; the modernization of the armed forces; the development of Spain's own maximum deterrent force; a guarantee of the fulfillment of the armed forces' constitutional duties; and the armed forces' internal autonomy.

One of the specific measures included in the program is a law of military organization to prevent the present indefinition and confusion of duties and responsibilities; the encouragement of exports of weapons and equipment; the reduction of the draft to 12 months and an increase in the voluntary enlistment; the progressive incorporation of women into the armed forces; a military training law and a civil service law; and a series of pay and social benefits.

Public order and security are regarded as important objectives in the Popular Alliance program but are not defined in detail. Short-term measures envisaged include the technical improvement and specialization of the security forces; territorial redistribution; the reinforcement of the intelligence effort; political solutions; antiterrorist action; the heightening of the security forces' morale; and the achievement of a climate of cooperation among the population.

Apart from this, the Popular Alliance considers fundamental "for the attainment of minimum guarantees of social prosperity" a struggle against drug abuse and juvenile delinquency.

PSOE, PAD LEADERS COMMENT ON NATO MEMBERSHIP

PM270733 Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 18 Sep 82 p 11

[Bonifacio de la Cuadra report]

[Excerpt] Madrid -- The secretaries general of the Spanish Socialist Workers Party [PSOE] -- Felipe Gonzalez -- and the Democratic Action Party (PAD) -- Francisco Fernandez Ordonez -- yesterday presented publicly the agreement negotiated over the last few weeks between the two parties for the sake of the "majority for change," the Socialist leader emphasizing the positive political assessment made 16 September by his party's Federal Committee. Felipe Gonzalez denied that the pact with PAD will create an inclination toward social democracy, and asserted that, on the contrary, it would broaden the left's social base.

The general level of convergence between the two leaders included agreement on the absence of a priority for joining NATO, Fernandez Ordonez adding: Nor is there a priority "for leaving."

Felipe Gonzalez asserted that Spain's joining the Atlantic alliance is not a priority, even for those in favor. "For Spain, being in NATO is not essential," he said. Fernandez Ordonez stated that he agreed with the PSOE secretary general's words, but added: "Joining NATO was not an absolute priority at the time, nor is there an absolute priority for leaving afterward."

A foreign journalist asked whether Spain's military "disintegration" with respect to NATO would not irritate the military, to which Felipe Gonzalez replied, "nothing will disintegrate, because nothing is integrated." In addition, he recalled that, when joining was proposed, it was argued that Spain's option of remaining in or leaving NATO and the degree of membership would always be preserved. Summing up, Felipe Gonzalez asserted: "I do not believe that any trauma will occur; if some people are annoyed, that is another matter. Moreover, the allies have not helped to resolve Spain's outstanding international problems," clearly referring to Gibraltar.

HUFVUDSTADSBLADET OUTLINES 1983 DEFENSE BUDGET

PM241335 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 18 Sep 82 p 12

[Unattributed report: "Defense: Better Conditions for Conscripts"]

[Text] In the 1983 budget, the defense forces have been allocated 1,081 million markkaa for new acquisitions and the renewal of equipment. The sum is 249 million markkaa or almost 30 percent higher than in this year's budget. In total, next year's defense budget amounts to 4.2 billion markkaa, 17 percent more than in this year's budget.

The draft budget includes funds to improve the conscripts' economic position and their conditions of service and training, the army's equipment will be improved and its personnel resources expanded. The number of reservists drafted next year will be increased by around 1,500.

Next year around 37,000 men will enter service to complete their draft. This is around 1,000 fewer than this year. Attempts are also being made to allow volunteers to complete their national service in areas where unemployment is especially great.

Some 967 million markkaa for basic equipment and new acquisitions will go to pay for orders already approved. Changes in agreed index-linking arrangements and in rates of exchange play a part here.

Some 64 million markkaa have been proposed to cover new orders. Among the new purchasing programs proposed by the government are new low-level radar surveillance units for the air force, the renewal of the field artillery's outdated equipment, continued replacement of outdated vehicles and of the air combat forces' special equipment.

It is proposed that funds to cover the use and maintenance of equipment be increased from 550 to 663 million markkaa. This drastic increase is due to higher costs and the fact that materiel acquired during the budget year will be taken into service.

A total of 241 million markkaa has been proposed for expenditures on emergency and contingency stores. The cost of liquid fuel and lubricants, totaling 230 million markkaa, will be covered by the sum raised for emergency stores of oil products.

The Finnish UN force, which is taking part in the international work to safeguard peace, is also responsible for a number of bills. Next year's budget proposal contains a reserve of almost 3 million markkaa for this force. This money will be used for the force's equipment and training, wages for military observers, fees for pan-Nordic UN courses and other expenditures on maintenance, relief and administration in Finland.

Next year's budget proposal also includes funds for the employment of 650 people handicapped in physical, mental, social or other ways in permanent positions within the defense forces.

Compensation for the accident at the Lapua ammunition factory in 1976 totalling 390,000 markkaa is proposed in next year's budget.

FRICTION REPORTED IN SKDL OVER MOSCOW VISIT

[Text] Helsinki, Sep [no date given] -- A visit by a Finnish parliamentary delegation to the Soviet Union has led to serious friction between the Finnish Communists and leftwing Socialists, who are the Communists' closest allies. The Socialists are accusing the Communists of discrimination in contacts with Moscow.

Since the war, Finland's Communists and lefwing Socialists have cooperated within the framework of the Finnish People's Democratic League [SKDL]. The Communists -- despite the fact that they have their own party, the SKP -- have allowed themselves to be represented in the Eduskunta [parliament] and in local government by the SKDL.

The present SKDL Eduskunta group comprises 4 leftwing Socialists and 31 Communists. The SKDL chairman is Education Minister Kalevi Kivisto, who is not a Communist. The SKP has always had more or less close contacts with the Soviet Union, while the SKDL has never succeeded in establishing firm contacts with Moscow. This is chiefly due to the fact that the Soviet Communists want to favor the SKP, but it is also said to be because Moscow viewed the SKDL's former chairman, Ele Alenius, with the deepest suspicion.

Thus, contacts to the East have always been a constant source of problems for the Socialists in the SKDL. For this reason, the Socialists were extremely happy when SKDL Eduskunta group leader Viekko Saarto was able to announce after a visit to the Soviet Union this summer that a delegation from the Eduskunta group was invited to visit Moscow. The Socialists were counting on the inclusion of a representative of their own in this delegation.

But this was not to be. As soon as the news of the invitation became known in Helsinki, an announcement from Moscow came that the invitation only covered Communist Eduskunta members. Saarto "had misunderstood" the invitation. The SKP Politburo selected those who would take part, and just over a week ago the trip took place.

This has given rise to sharp criticism from the Socialists and from the SKDL leadership. The Socialists take the view that the SKP should have dug its heels in and also nominated a noncommunist Eduskunta member to take part in the delegation -- or should have refrained from sending a delegation at all.

According to Kivisto, the whole affair is a question of principle. He has said that the SKDL Socialists "have been ruled offside in a most unique fashion on a central foreign policy question."

CREDIT QUOTAS TO INCREASE IN SOVIET TRADE

LD241730 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1300 GMT 24 Sep 82

[Text] The credit quotas used in the trade between Finland and the Soviet Union are to be increased from R150 million to R300 million, or to FM1.8 billion. The increase in the credit limit was agreed upon in Helsinki today at the talks seeking to balance trade between the two countries. More detailed talks on trade between Finland and the Soviet Union next year will start in one month's time.

The governor of the Bank of Finland, Ahti Karjalainen, thinks that the reduction in trade next year may be very slight.

[Begin Karjalainen recording] There is no question of a catastrophe here. In the end, it is a question of exports which may have to be reduced next year somewhat from this year's level, but in any case the reduction will be under 10 percent. It is still too early to say how big it will be, as the talks on next year's trade are only just beginning. [end recording]

According to Karjalainen, the possible reductions in trade will not apply to the metal and shipbuilding industries.

[Begin Karjalainen recording] The metal and shipbuilding industries are by nature such that agreements in them are on a long-term basis; they have been concluded and it is of course difficult or impossible to alter them. In other words, this means that all other exports belong to the group where reductions have to be made, if they become necessary.

I think that it is the striving of our authorities to treat as equally as possible the different industries which may have to face reductions. But I want to emphasize that it is still quite premature to say more about it as in the course of the autumn, when the talks continue, all kinds of things may happen, hopefully also something positive so that it would not be necessary to implement any reductions in exports. This is also within the limits of the possibilities. [end recording]

At present, the trade with the Soviet Union has a surplus of FM 5 billion for Finland.

GENERAL KANNINEN CONCLUDES VISIT TO USSR

LD251940 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1600 GMT 25 Sep 82

[Text] The official visit of Lt Gen Ermij Kanninen, chief of the general staff, to the Soviet Union concluded today. The visit was hosted by Marshal N.V. Ogarkov, chief of the General Staff of the USSR Armed Forces. During the visit, Soviet Defense Minister Marshal Dmitriy Ustinov received Lieutenant General Kanninen. Kanninen and his entourage acquainted themselves with the training centre of the cosmonauts in the area of Moscow and visited the Odessa Military District in the Crimea.

USSR PROPOSES JOINT PIPELINE PROJECT WITH OSLO

NC241858 Paris AFP in English 1854 GMT 24 Sep 82

[Text] Oslo, Sep 24 (AFP) -- The Soviet Union has proposed a joint project with Norway to build a pipeline to carry natural gas from the Arctic Ocean's Barents Sea to Europe, several Norwegian newspapers reported today.

They quoted informed sources as saying that the suggestion had come unofficially from the "highest level" in Moscow through the permanent Soviet trade commission here. A Norwegian Government spokesman would only say that there had been no official contact on the matter.

Gas from the Barents Sea can be channeled more easily towards Europe via Sweden or Norway than through the Soviet Union itself. The pipeline could feasibly be linked with the existing Norwegian pipeline from the North Sea.

Observers here noted that Norway is in competition with several European countries to sell equipment and technology to Moscow for the forthcoming Soviet oil prospecting campaign in the Barents Sea. They did not exclude the possibility that Moscow would propose granting Oslo such contracts in exchange for its agreement on the joint pipeline project.

STORTING PANEL CHAIRMAN ON TIES WITH EEC STATES

PM241355 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 21 Sep 82 p 4

[Excerpt] "We must join the European political system. There is broad agreement on this objective in the Storting Foreign Affairs Committee. As far as political cooperation is concerned, our greatest problem is how we as a NATO member, but not an EEC member, can look after our interests in Europe's security and foreign policy. It is a weakness for Norway not to be able to take part in the EEC's work for a joint security and foreign policy," Storting Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Kare Kristiansen (Christian People's Party) said.

In an interview with the HOYRE PRESSEBYRA Kristiansen pointed out that the situation for Norway today is completely different from that of 10 years ago.

"The situation is completely different, not least because our oil has altered the economic situation. For this reason the economic advantages of entering the EEC are not so attractive as they were 10 years ago," he said.

"In addition, the trade agreement we have negotiated with the EEC is satisfactory," Kristiansen said, and had the following to say about the arguments about the EEC's supranational effect, used by those opposed to Norwegian EEC membership in the referendum 10 years ago: "The supranational aspect of the EEC is considerably weaker. No one speaks now of eternal membership."

Guttorm Hansen (Labor Party) said that both sides in the EEC referendum can now see that the EEC did not develop into what we thought it would become. He pointed out that its most interesting aspect today is foreign policy cooperation. "Many people find the idea of an approach to this work appealing. But I believe that this is something determined by the changes in the political situation. In the running Norwegian debate on foreign policy, I have often said that Norway must move as close to the European political system as possible. I believe there is broad political agreement on this," Hansen said.

SWEDEN

CAUTION COUNSELED ON PALME CALL FOR COOPERATION

PM241415 Stockholm DAGENS NYHETER in Swedish 21 Sep 82 p 2

[Olof Kleberg editorial: "Interpreting an Outstretched Hand"]

[Text] Two parties which believe in growth and which each put their hopes in their own well-tried recipe for continued use in the eighties won the election. The government parties, which struck a note of economic restraint without a rosy future, suffered heavy losses.

Workers' funds and the cutbacks policy created major antagonisms in the election campaign. Nevertheless, the Social Democrats still spoke of broad cooperation. On election night the victorious Olof Palme expressed his desire to reach "broad solutions" and not to "go to town on the nonsocialists." In other words: not confrontation, but an understanding.

It is true that more cooperation is needed in politics. In fact, this is absolutely essential if Sweden is ever to drag itself up out of the mud.

But an understanding presupposes that there is something on which to cooperate, as all three nonsocialist parties pointed out on election night. What is needed is a common vision, an insight that it is possible to achieve a great deal which will be of benefit to the country without abandoning long-term goals.

"It is possible to simultaneously tackle common objectives and still retain a clear view of differences," as Per Albin Hansson [Social Democratic prewar leader] put it in his famous "turning point" speech in 1935. He added something of importance: "Whether this happens under the leadership of a Social Democratic government is not for me an important question."

However, we must unfortunately note that this has become an important question for the Social Democrats under Olof Palme. 'Yes' to cooperation from a position of strength, but never in opposition -- this has been the maxim since 1976.

Even if the three-party government led to the creation of bloc politics in Sweden, the Social Democrats were energetic in their work to cement it. The only exceptions to the rule were the toleration of the Liberal Party minority government and the agreement on tax reform -- important exceptions -- nevertheless, the Social Democrats' main thrust was to oppose unpopular decisions in the hope of winning over popular opinion.

It is easy to understand why the nonsocialist opposition is dubious about the signals of cooperation. And the Left Party-Communist is of course, totally opposed to them -- any cooperation to the right would naturally make the Social Democrats even less dependent on the support of the Communists.

The Moderate Coalition Party has always been particularly skeptical of agreements with the Social Democrats. The political middle line which the party has never wanted to disturb and has refused to overstep is to be found immediately to the right of the Social Democrats. And the center parties, which have not enjoyed bloc politics, do not dare take the risk of further adventures after the tax reform and the election defeat.

The situation is especially difficult for the Liberal Party; after 6 years in government with compromises and practical concessions, the party's adherence to principle and ideology has worn thin. This is a serious problem for an ideological party without strong interest groups behind it. This is why it is really necessary, as Ola Ullsten has already declared, that the party pursue more of its own policies.

Even though spontaneous acceptance of the invitation to cooperate cannot be expected -- the party leaders are not so easily led as bank director Hans Cavalli-Bjorkman, who happily swallowed Olof Palme's hook on Monday's Radio Eko program -- it should not be buried in silence.

The Social Democratic leadership will also need to cooperate with the center parties to be able to resist all the party activists demanding "expansionist" policies and workers' funds. The party leadership wants to hurry ahead slowly and can hardly be willing to accept an increase in the budget deficit.

The party also has another reason. The economy is bound to be such a problem that meeting the voters in the 1985 election will not be pleasant; it is in this light that Tage Erlander's [former Social Democrat prime minister] sudden interest in a government of national unity is to be understood. Together the parties would be able to take the necessary tough measures.

Up to now, the Social Democrats' interest in broad solutions has been mostly tactical. There is no reason for the center parties to abandon their line of spending cuts merely to bring about a form of cooperation. Here it will have to be the Social Democrats who reassess after a period in power.

An outstretched hand must not be ignored. But it must be looked at closely. Before it meets with handshakes from other parties, it must be made clear that the intended cooperation will cover radical measures to turn the tide of developments in Sweden.

Cooperation like that is needed, no matter who is in government at the time.

AFTENPOSTEN ON PALME TAKEOVER AS PREMIER

PM241001 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 21 Sep 82 p 2

[Editorial: "The 'Conciliatory' Palme"]

[Text] Sweden's future prime minister, Olof Palme, has never been a good loser, and since the defeat he suffered 6 years ago -- when the Social Democrats were forced to hand over government power to the nonsocialists -- his involvement in Swedish politics has been characterized by an extraordinary sourness.

At the time of the government changeover in 1976, he made no attempt to conceal the fact that he wished the nonsocialist parties "in hell," to put it bluntly, after which he obviously determined to give priority to his international work at many levels, although not in the Nordic Council. This organization had become too small and insignificant for the former prime minister. As opposition leader on the domestic front, he flared up from time to time with his well-known attacks on Bohman [former moderate coalition party leader] and Falldin -- and scored many cheap points with his verbal skills. But he always left political observers with the open question of the Social Democrats' own alternatives and their political viability.

Much helped by the international economic crisis and the particular political situation created by the present split among the nonsocialists in Sweden, Palme will now be moving into the prime minister's offices in Stockholm -- as head of a Social Democratic minority government with 166 of the Riksdag's 349 seats behind him. With the support of the Communists' 20 representatives, which gives a Socialist majority of 186 seats against the nonsocialists' 163 seats, the new government can look forward to a quiet life, and it is up to the prime minister whether he actually will -- as he hinted in the election campaign -- force through workers' fund Socialism with the votes of the Socialist bloc.

However, in the euphoria of victory, it appeared that Palme had suddenly become more conciliatory toward both Swedish industry and the nonsocialist parties, and when it had become absolutely clear that he would again become Sweden's prime minister, he nevertheless expressed the hope that there might now be an end to the politics of confrontation. But this is something which only Palme himself can decide. There can be no doubt that if legislation for collective workers' funds is brought before the Riksdag, it will meet with opposition from a united nonsocialist front.

When in the near future Olof Palme takes over as head of government, he will be given the opportunity to demonstrate whether Sweden's fundamental economic problems can be solved using a socialist model. During the election campaign he has strewn promises around, which -- if they are to be kept -- will necessarily lead to a heavily expansive policy and massive tax increases. At a time when improving competitiveness is an obvious urgent task, Palme's recipe will help worsen the economic crisis rather than bring it closer to a solution. He could therefore be forced to change course fairly soon.

For Palme's -- and Sweden's -- sake, we must simply hope that the nonsocialist parties do not behave like bad losers, as Palme himself did in opposition.

THATCHER WANTS TO MAINTAIN HONG KONG STABILITY

LD241332 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1225 GMT 24 Sep 82

[Text] The future status of Hong Kong as a British colony has been thrown into uncertainty following Mrs Thatcher's talks with Chinese leaders.

At a press conference in Beijing today, she stuck relentlessly to a communique issued jointly by her and Chinese leader Mr Deng Xiaoping which tried to reassure Hong Kong about its future stability and prosperity.

She refused to discuss the sovereignty of the colony after the lease on the greater part of it runs out in 15 years, which is bound to raise doubts among Hong Kong's investors.

The principal aim of Mrs Thatcher's talks in China have been to avoid a Falklands-style confrontation over the future of Hong Kong.

Mrs Thatcher insisted that for the moment Britain stuck by the treaties which China has refused to recognise giving the UK control of most of the colony until 1997, and Hong Kong Island itself forever.

But she added that this remained the case only "until we agree to something else."

Her tactics in keeping quiet over today's meeting will have done little to build up confidence in Hong Kong, and the exchange when it opens on Monday, the day after Mrs Thatcher arrives there.

The statement agreed by the prime minister and Mr Deng read: "Today the leaders of both countries held far-reaching talks in a friendly atmosphere on the future of Hong Kong. Both leaders made clearly their respective positions on this subject.

"They agreed to enter into talks through diplomatic channels with the common aim of maintaining the stability and prosperity of Hong Kong."

Despite questions at the press conference, Mrs Thatcher refused to elaborate further.

China appears to be determined to regain sovereignty over Hong Kong while allowing the capitalist system to thrive in the colony, through which China gets 40 percent of its foreign exchange earnings.

It appears that the best the people of Hong Kong can now hope for is that while the sovereignty of the territory is regained by China, British administration will continue in some form.

Mrs Thatcher refused to accept that her lack of response to questions would do nothing to boost confidence in the colony. She said: "The people of Hong Kong are very realistic. I think they will look at the agreed statement, at every word of it, and note that the common aim is to maintain stability and prosperity. They will also note that Chairman Deng agreed to that statement."

UK COULD BECOME INDIA'S CHIEF ARMS SUPPLIER

[Balram Tandon New Delhi dispatch]

[Text] New Delhi [no date as received] -- Mr Nott, Britain's defence secretary, flew to Bangalore from New Delhi yesterday after discussions about a "very substantial" Indian military shopping list.

Only two items have been identified: Harrier fighter-bombers and Sea King helicopters. But guns, tanks, missiles, and electronic systems could be involved. British and Indian sources acknowledge that the defense equipment deals explored during Mr Nott's discussions were substantial in range and number of items.

Neither side had been willing during the week since Mr Nott arrived in India to disclose details. But the Indian press yesterday indicated that the purchases could make Britain India's most important supplier for the army, navy, and air force. Britain, one of the major equipment suppliers, was recently nudged from its traditional position by the Soviet Union.

Discussions apparently touched on joint research and development of electronic systems. Indian defense experts have stressed that India must acquire anti-missile systems such as Sea Wolf, and the anti-aircraft Rapier.

British officials confirmed that India had some options on Sea Harriers. Eight have already been bought. British sources also confirmed that the Indian Government was going through the three phases envisaged in the agreement in the Jaguar fighter-bomber.

The original agreement, signed in 1978, provided for the purchase of 45 Jaguars; assembly from kits of another 45, and manufacture of 31 more, with some components made in India. The agreement gives India the option to manufacture up to 30 Jaguars.

SPOKESMAN ON FRG FRIGATES TO ARGENTINA

LD242214 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2126 GMT 24 Sep 82

[Text] West Germany decided today to go ahead with the delivery of four frigates to Argentina, despite objections by the British Government. The Bonn government gave permission for Hamburg shipbuilders Blohm and Voss to deliver the ships, powered by British-built Rolls-Royce turbines, at intervals of six months beginning in 1984.

A Foreign Office spokesman said tonight that Britain had not officially been told that West Germany had lifted its arms embargo on Argentina, imposed at the time of the Falklands conflict. A West German Government spokesman said the embargo was lifted after EEC ministerial talks earlier this week.

The Foreign Office spokesman said: "We knew it had been discussed at the meeting. We would prefer, of course, for the embargo to remain, but these are not European Community agreements and it is for each government to decide its own policy. Our concern is to minimize the risk that Argentina will acquire military supplies which will increase the threat to the Falklands, particularly as the Argentines have still not yet acknowledged that hostilities are at an end."

The West German shipbuilding firm said four Rolls-Royce turbines built in Coventry were delivered before the embargo came into force. Four more were expected within the next few weeks, said a spokesman. They were released by the British Government on the understanding that the West German embargo on the delivery of the frigates remained in force.

Miss Jo Richardson, a member of Labour's National Executive, called on Rolls-Royce workers at Coventry to lodge an official protest about the engines going to Argentina.

GOVERNMENT DENIES TURKISH TANKS AROUND NICOSIA

NC261850 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 26 Sep 82

[Text] An official statement has described as absolutely unfounded the contents of today's report in an Athens newspaper under the title "Tanks Have Surrounded Nicosia." According to the newspaper report, a great number of Turkish tanks have advanced east and north of Nicosia together with a large number of infantry units which have been placed on alert.

SPOKESMAN ON REPORTS OF ANTI-ARMENIAN PLAN

[Text] The government spokesman was asked to state whether it is true that the government has information that the Turks have prepared a plan to strike at Armenian targets in Cyprus and that this question occupied the Council of Ministers yesterday and the day before. The spokesman said:

"The government cannot disclose its information or contacts. In any case, it considers the question very serious and it continues to be vigilant. It is not true that this question occupied the Council of Ministers yesterday and the day before."

EDEK CALLS FOR UNITY UNDER NATIONAL FRONT

NC251754 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1630 GMT 25 Sep 82

[Text] In a resolution on political developments, the Political Bureau of the socialist EDEK party, mentions, among other things, that the conditions of occupation dictate that all the people should rally under a front for national salvation and alignment with Greece, which is the only hope for the salvation of Cypriot Hellenism.

It also says that this nationally necessary front is being undermined by conditions of polarization and national division and that the people's reconciliation is an obvious national necessity.

The EDEK Political Bureau resolution adds that if the country is to emerge from the current impasse, it is essential that the forces of the front for change be promoted to the proscenium of authority and all those who believe in the repositioning of the Cyprus issue and its fundamental internationalization be called upon to join this front.

GREECE REPORTEDLY UNDECIDED ON CYPRUS CONFERENCE

NC260738 Nicosia TA NEA in Greek 26 Sep 82 p 10

[Text] The Greek Government has not adopted a stand in connection with Democratic Rally Chairman Glavkos Kliridhis' suggestion to hold a conference on the Cyprus problem in Athens under the chairmanship of Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou.

This has been stated by a well-informed Athens source, commenting on various reports that were carried by the Cypriot press (not by TA NEA) regarding the Greek Government's stand.

TERRITORIAL DEMANDS 'RULE OUT PROGRESS' IN TALKS

[Text] The discussion of the territorial aspect of the Cyprus problem, which is expected to begin when the inter-Cypriot talks resume on 2 November, presents very serious problems that rule out progress. According to authoritative reports from diplomatic circles, the Turkish side has already put forward a demand that, following the submission of concrete Turkish proposals on the territorial aspect, it is now the turn of the Greek-Cypriot side to make the next step in this question and submit fresh proposals.

However, according to appraisals by diplomatic circles it is absolutely impossible for the Cyprus Government to proceed with such a step, because of the forthcoming presidential elections and because any fresh concession in the territorial aspect would arm its political rivals.

The situation being created is so serious that it will occupy UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar during his separate consultations with President Kiprianou and Turkish Cypriot leader Denktas in New York in October. The reports say that postponing the discussion on the territorial aspect should not be ruled out -- in which case the two interlocutors will deal with questions from the executive and legislative authorities that have not yet been completely covered.

In the meantime, UN authorities have prepared a voluminous document to assist in the discussion of the territorial aspect. The document is based on the two sides' positions and has 17 maps. These maps reflect the social-economic complications resulting from the geographical separation, as well as the security criteria cited by the Turkish Cypriots.

According to the same reports, the question of Famagusta will be discussed within the more general framework of the territorial aspect, despite the efforts which have been exerted to step up discussion on this question.

DENKTAS INTERVIEWED ON INTERCOMMUNAL TALKS

[Text] Lefkosa [Nicosia] [Special] -- Head of state Rauf Denktas has stated that following the latest incidents in Lebanon, no solution can be drafted by the Security Council, even if it has the world's support. Denktas said: "Formulas unacceptable to the Turkish Cypriots cannot be implemented. The Greek Cypriot side will continue to blunder so long as it forgets that it must come to terms with the Turkish Cypriots."

The TFSC president, who was interviewed by a HALKIN SESI correspondent, was asked: "The Greek Cypriot press had published various comments on the adjournment for 40 days of the intercommunal talks. What necessitated this long holiday?" Denktas replied: "The true reason for the holiday is connected with the visit which both sides, as well as Mr Gobbi, are to make to New York. The second reason is that Greek Cypriot negotiator Mavrommatis will be busy in Europe during the month of October. The Greek Cypriot side has requested the adjournment, and we have had to accept it."

Question: "The Greek Cypriot press reports that after the holiday we shall submit suggestions regarding our participation in the administration and demand certain rights, including the right of veto, as with the 1960 Constitution. Are these reports correct?" Denktas responded: "The Greek Cypriots have the outlines of all our demands. When the time comes, the details, too, will be discussed. It is very natural that we should ask for guarantees much more effective and much stronger than those stipulated by the 1960 Constitution.

We will search for guaranttes which cannot be ridiculed and thrown into the dustbin like the right to veto. This is natural. If the past is not to be repeated, measures that counter such a situation will have to be taken. This is unavoidable."

Question: Kliridhis defends the view that the Cyprus issue cannot be resolved through the intercommunal talks. He suggests that all Greek Cypriot political parties get together with Prime Minister Papandreou and adopt new decisions. It was thought that Kliridhis had a more positive attitude.

Answer: Kliridhis is wiser and has greater maneuverability than Kiprianou. One can talk to him. But in fundamental decisions concerning the usurpation of the rights of the Turkish Cypriots, the denial of the partnership and keeping the door open to Enosis, for the time being creating a second Hellenic republic in the Mediterranean, Kliridhis is no different from the other Greek Cypriot leader. One depends on AKEL and the Soviet Union, while the other leans on the United States and Europe. But both aim at establishing their domination over Cyprus through all kinds of Byzantine intrigues. Indirectly, the meeting in Greece suggested by Kliridhis emphasizes the fact that those who tread the same path cherish identical goals.

Question: Kliridhis proposed that recourse be made to the Security Council for the attainment of a universally supported settlement to be imposed on Turkey. What is your opinion?

Answer: That is rather an illusion. Decisions taken at meetings where the Turkish Cypriots have no say and the accumulation of decisions which are based on the lie of the "Cyprus Government" [being the only legitimate government] do not carry enough weight to influence either Turkey or us. Those who think it is an art to procure such decisions by resorting to Byzantine intrigues are the ones who prepared and implemented the Akritas Plan aimed at exterminating the Turkish Cypriot community. They are now trying to enlist the world's support in their desire to complete the massacre of the Turkish Cypriots. I do not believe that the world will allow itself to be tricked after the disgraceful events in Lebanon. Such a thing cannot happen. Formulas unacceptable to the Turkish Cypriots cannot be implemented. So long as the Greek Cypriot side forgets that it must come to terms with the Turkish Cypriots, it will continue to blunder.

Question: Another proposal by Kliridhis refers to Article 37 of the UN standing regulations, under which parties concerned can present suggestions on disputed points. What is your comment?

Answer: The formulas which the Turkish Cypriot side does not accept cannot be forcibly implemented; such decisions cannot even be made. We oppose this method. Such a thing is not possible. The United Nations is not an organization that would dictate formulas to us on vital matters concerning our existence in Cyprus. As one of the two sovereign people on the island, the right to comment on matters concerning us belongs to our people. We have no authority to turn over this right to the Security Council.

Question: What will you do if you are confronted with such proposals?

Answer: No such proposals will be made to us in New York. A mutual evaluation will be made, which is natural.

DENKTAS: GREEK CYPRIOT PRESS DISTORTS INCIDENT

TA241418 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in English to Cyprus 1115 GMT 24 Sep 82

[Text] President Denktas has declared that distortion of facts relating to the recent incident, which resulted in the death of a Greek Cypriot national guardsman, would be harmful. He was speaking to reporters after receiving the UN secretary general's special representative in Cyprus, Mr Gobbi, this morning.

The president invited Mr Gobbi to his office to draw Mr Gobbi's attention to imaginery reports in the Greek Cypriot press exploiting the incident. President Denktas said that he had told Mr Gobbi that the publication of such fantastic reports must be stopped. Mr Denktas said that such lies and exaggerations did not give the Greek Cypriots the chance to see and learn the facts. On the contrary, he said, they created anti-Turkish feelings among the Greek Cypriots.

Recalling that the Greek Cypriot national guardsman himself had caused the tragic incident by his provocative behavior, the president said that those who distorted the facts in order to spread anti-Turkish feelings would be responsible for the consequences. He said that members of the Turkish Cypriot security forces were stationed along the contact line, and allegations that Turkish soldiers were deployed along this line were ugly lies aimed at creating indignation within the Greek Cypriot community. The preservation of peace on the borders, he said, was the duty of both sides, and in order to preserve it, it was necessary to respect the rules.

ELECTION OF CYPRUS TO UN OFFICE CRITICIZED

TA241302 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in English to Cyprus 1115 GMT 24 Sep 82

[Text] President Denktas has said that the election of Cyprus to one of the vice-presidencies of the United Nations General Assembly was a new and deplorable sign of how much the United Nations is being misled with regard to the Cyprus problem.

The president said that it was a fact known for years that the person who appeared to represent Cyprus at the United Nations was only representing the Greek Cypriot side and not all of Cyprus. This representative, he added, had no power to speak on behalf of the Turkish Cypriots. President Denktas said the election was a new prize awarded to the Greek Cypriot aggressors on the island and as long as the Greek Cypriots received such rewards the road leading to reconciliation would get narrower.

President Denktas has also said that the recognition of the Greek Cypriot administration by the world as the legitimate Government of Cyprus was an obstruction to the settlement of the Cyprus problem through reconciliation.

The president was replying to questions by reporters on the appointment of new ministers to the Greek Cypriot administration. He said that these appointments were not valid, because they were not made under the 1960 Constitution. Therefore, in the south, there was no longer any constitution on which the so-called government could rely. In the south, there was only a Greek Cypriot administration. Mr Denktas said that the Greek Cypriot administration, with no power to speak for all of Cyprus, was committing a fraud by presenting itself as the legitimate Government of Cyprus and it was unfortunate for the world to accept this body as the Government of Cyprus. This, he concluded, prevented the settlement of the Cyprus problem through reconciliation.

COMMERCE MINISTER TO BULGARIA -- Commerce Minister Andreou today left for Bulgaria at the invitation of his Bulgarian counterpart, Mr Khristov, to visit the Plovdiv International Technical Fair. During his visit, Mr Andreou will discuss ways of developing Cypriot-Bulgarian trade relations. As was established during President Kiprianou's visit to Bulgaria, there are many possibilities for expanding economic relations between the two countries, particularly in commerce, industrial cooperation, agriculture and transport. KHARALAMBOPOULOS DEPARTS FOR NEW YORK 26 SEP

NC261248 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1230 GMT 26 Sep 82

[Text] Foreign Minister Ioannis Kharalambopoulos departed for New York at noon today at the head of the Greek delegation to the UN fall session of the General Assembly. The foreign minister will address the plenary session of the General Assembly, presenting Greek positions on international issues. He will give an official dinner in honor of UN in honor of UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar to which prime ministers and foreign ministers of various countries have been invited. He will also meet the U.S. Secretary of State Shultz.

On 2 October Kharalambopoulos will proceed to Ottawa, Canada, to attend the NATO foreign ministers conference. There he will also meet Turkish Foreign Minister Turkmen, with which he will examine the framework of Greek-Turkish talks which will probably follow.

PAPANDREOU TO MEET WITH KIPRIANOU, KLIRIDHIS

NC241844 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1800 GMT 24 Sep 82

[Text] On 8 October Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou will meet with Cypriot President Spiros Kiprianou who will make a stopover in Athens on his return from New York. The Cypriot president will brief the prime minister on his contacts at the United Nations.

Earlier, on 4 October, Prime Minister Papandreou will receive the leader of the Democratic Rally party of Cyprus, Glavkos Kliridhis, at the latter's request.

'MORATORIUM' NOT AFFECTED BY CYPRUS INCIDENT

NC241522 Athens ATHENS NEWS in English 24 Sep 82 p 4

[Text] Greece's demarche to Turkey over Tuesday's incident in Cyprus in which a Cypriot national guardsman was killed by shots fired by a Turkish sentry, cannot affect the moratorium existing between the two countries as this concerns Greek Turkish relations and not the Cyprus issue.

This was stated in Athens yesterday after the government spokesman had said that the Greek demarches to both Britain and Turkey were made by Greece as a guarantor power for Cyprus to those two countries, also guarantors for the island. The spokesman also said that the authorities were now awaiting the report on the incident by U.N. special envoy to Cyprus Hugo Gobbi.

Press reports said meanwhile that the Cypriot national guardsman was killed by a Turkish Cypriot and not a Turkish soldier.

PAPER CLAIMS NICOSIA SURROUNDED BY TURKISH TANKS

NC261712 Athens KIRIAKATIKI ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 26 Sep 82 p 1

[Dispatch from Nicosia by an unnamed correspondent under the banner headline: "Tanks Have Surrounded Nicosia -- Turkish Alert-Greek Concern"]

[Text] Nicosia, 26 Sep -- A great number of Turkish tanks have advanced east and north of Nicosia together with a large number of infantry units which have been placed on alert. This has heightened the severe concern that the Turks are preparing something at the expense of the Republic of Cyprus.

The Cypriot Government has taken all the necessary special measures. It has briefed the United Nations and units of the peace-keeping force have been mobilized. UN representatives and diplomats are also making efforts to lessen the tension.

There is the strong impression that the Turks are attempting to create an incident in order to justify a new attack.

It Was a Trap

It is characteristic that Cypriot Defense Minister Veniamin stated in an interview that the national guardsman who was shot dead by the Turks a few days ago was trapped. His body was found five meters behind his guard post and not in the neutral zone as announced by the Turks. This is pure murder, he said, and responsibility for it rests with the occupation troops.

Foreign Minister Rolandhis is due to leave for New York on Tuesday for a series of meetings with foreign ministers whom he will inform about the new situation on the island.

He will also meet with the foreign ministers of the Soviet Union and the United States, Gromyko and Shultz, and will confer with his Greek counterpart, Kharalambopoulos, before the latter meets Turkish Foreign Minister Turkmen.

1983 Is Critical

The UN special envoy in Cyprus, Gobbi, has stated that 1983 will be a critical year for the Cyprus issue. "Both sides," he added, "consider that we must make a breakthrough in the impasse next year, because otherwise the talks will be viewed with skepticism. It will then be very difficult to achieve any progress in the future."

In an interview with the Nicosia newspaper I SIMERINI, Gobbi stated that some solution must be reached in 1983.

Kharalambopoulos and Turkmen

"The framework of the Greek-Turkish talks which may possibly follow" will be examined in Ottawa by Foreign Minister Kharalambopoulos and his Turkish counterpart, Turkmen, on 2 October. It is recalled that Kharalambopoulos, who leaves Athens today, will meet with U.S. Secretary of State Shultz in New York next Friday.

I AVYI: LESSONS FROM 'TURKISH PROVOCATIONS'

NC231600 Athens I AVYI in Greek 23 Sep 82 p 5

[From the I AVYI column]

[Text] The murder in Nicosia of Greek National Guardsman Khristakis Yeoryios by the Turkish occupation troops is not a simple incident, regardless of how grave it may be. All indications are that it concerns a calculated act aimed at aggravating the situation in Cyprus at a time when the Cyprus problem increasingly involves the international community in a serious way.

The basic goal of Turkish policy and of its Turkish Cypriot organs is to "prove" that there is no basis for the coexistence of the two communities within the framework of a unitary state and that substantive partition is the only "realistic" solution. Within the framework of this goal the murder of the Cypriot national guardsman increases the atmosphere of tension, especially on the eve of the meeting -- in Ottawa, Canada on 2 October -- between Greece's Foreign Minister Kharalambopoulos and Turkey's Foreign Minister Turkmen.

The first government reaction to this new Turkish provocation -- strong protests to the United Nations, the British and Turkish Governments -- is both positive and necessary.

However, there still exists the problem of charting a steadfast strategy in agreement with the Cypriot Government which will foresee and deal with all eventualities.

We stress this because, precisely at a time when a new insidious Turkish activity is being manifested with still unknown ramifications and implications (there are fears of a "command act" by the Turkish troops in free Cyprus with the alleged Armenian headquarters as a pretext;), the joint Athens-Nicosia line, about which so much has been written and said, seems to be undergoing a terrible ordeal. A characteristic indication of this disappointing and dangerous situation is the postponement of the recourse to the UN General Assembly, despite the official explanations that accompanied it.

We do not wish to appear as instigators or prophets of doom, but it would be a deadly mistake not to take as a warning the Turkish provocation in Nicosia the day before yesterday. Let us not hide. The luxury of petty party scheming revolving around the presidential elections in Cyprus, calculations which directly divide patriotic forces and have already adversely affected the direction that had been originally agreed upon between Papandreou and Kiprianou, is literally impermissible. The only tangible result of this situation is the emboldening of Cyprus conquerors, as shown by the recent Turkish stance, with the provocation the day before yesterday as the culmination.

Time for Tougher Stance

[From the "Laconic" column]

[Text] The murder -- in cold blood -- of a Greek Cypriot national guardsman by Turkish soldiers on Nicosia's dividing line and the provocative violations of the Cypriot capital's air space by Turkish planes demonstrate that the Attila spirit hangs over the island. Ankara's intentions remain unchanged despite its hypocritical readiness to agree on opposition to provocations.

Therefore, let the government sweep aside rhetoric about a "moratorium" and the cultivation of an artificial atmosphere of conciliation with Turkey and let it follow a more determined and strict policy. After all, it was Papandreou who before the elections claimed that the Turks know only one language: the language of strength and determination. He used to warn that Ankara interprets conciliation as weakness and that it is emboldened by the exhibition of moderation. However, as prime minister, strangely, he follows a policy that is excessively tolerant and moderate. Is it not time he remembered his election promises and become at least as interested in the Cyprus problem as he is in the Palestinian problem?

KKE-INTERIOR ON LOCAL ELECTION SLATE WITH PASOK

NC241644 Athens I AVYI in Greek 24 Sep 82 pp 1, 8

[Text] The march toward true self-government will not be easy. On the contrary, it will be a painful political struggle which, however, will win -- during the course of its progress -- all of the popular and democratic forces.

This was stressed at a press conference yesterday by T. Benas, member of the KKE-Interior Executive Bureau; P. Gazngas, deputy mayor [of Athens] and member of the party's Central Committee; and P. Papayiannis, candidate mayor of Kholargos.

At the same time, the battle is mounting for the municipal elections which -- as the speakers have said -- "could constitute a milestone in the development and prospects of the institution of self-government."

The three party spokesmen outlined the positions of the KKE-Interior on self-government and stressed that the victory of the joint KKE-Interior-PASOK election slates would mark not only new possibilities "for the members of the community to struggle for human existance in their towns," but also for a more general intervention by the people in the country's political, economic and social problems.

Referring more specifically to the political rallying together of the resistance Communists and the Socialists, T. Benas said that there could ot be "full identity" [as published] which, besides, would be unrealistic. Benas added: "However, there is a common or parallel course, a common or parallel basis or view about the affairs of local self-government. In this spirit, you have proceeded toward joint slates with other political and social forces, mainly with PASOK."

At yesterday's press conference, the KKE-Interior also released to journalists the proposals it had submitted to the government concerning the role of the mass media (during the pre-election period as well as after the municipal elections). According to the assessment of the KKE-Interior, these proposals can contribute positively toward substantively and pluralistically confronting the major objectives of self-government, for the present and the future of the change.

EVREN STATEMENT ON RETURN FROM YUGOSLAVIA

TA231535 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1400 GMT 23 Sep 82

[Statement by Head of State Gen Kenan Evren at the VIP Lounge at Esenboga Airport upon his arrival from Yugoslavia on 23 Sep -- recorded]

[Text] One of the benefits of this visit was the opportunity I had to meet with Mr Stambolic and the equivalent of our prime minister. During these talks, we found the opportunity to review developments in the world and especially in our region. We discovered during these talks that we have parallel views regarding world events. We have complete unity of views regarding various issues and similar views regarding other issues.

The recent incidents in Beirut have deeply grieved both Turkey and Yugoslavia. Of course, it is impossible to approve of such a thing. I expressed our views on the issue in a statement I made aboard the plane on my way to Yugoslavia. I was glad to note, while in Yugoslavia, that we share the same view.

We share the same views regarding the immediate conclusion of the Iran-Iraq war. We are taking steps to end this war both within the framework of the Islamic Conference and on our own. We hope that this war, which has been going on for over 2 years, will end as soon as possible.

During these talks we reviewed our bilateral relations, dwelling especially on the following issues: We agree that our economic relations and contacts are insufficient. In 1982, especially, our trade relations decreased. Both Yugoslavia and Turkey are sorry to see this decrease. We have come to the conclusion that this is caused by the fact that we are not well acquainted with each other and cannot determine what to import and export. Therefore, we have agreed that government officials and businessmen should exchange visits and determine what can be done in this regard. Both countries have the capacity and capability to increase these relations to a much higher level. The work necessary to accomplish this will be carried out.

Meanwhile, we were happy to observe that Turks living in Yugoslavia have all the rights granted citizens in all other republics. They have all the rights. They can teach in their own language in their schools. They can preserve their own culture. We wish that this lifestyle were granted to ethnic Turks living in other countries.

We also had some problems in the field of overland transportation. We have agreed that the transportation ministers of our two countries will meet in order to eliminate the bottlenecks in our overland transportation. I hope that in the near future this issue will be solved. The recent limitation of the TIR [International Highway Transportation] trucks to 10,000 annually created some bottlenecks. Various meetings will be held to increase this number. Actually, a modus vivendi has been achieved. The transit of the trucks accumulating at the border has been secured, but this is a temporary measure. Work will continue to increase this number.

The two countries have a large tourism capacity. We have decided to increase cooperation on this issue as well. Our cultural relations are good. We have also reached an agreement to further develop these ties. I had the opportunity to visit the secondary school in Monastir attended by Ataturk. This was a great pleasure for me. They, the Republic of Macedonia, in an act of appreciation, transformed this building into a museum last year, the year of Ataturk's 100th birthday.

In a section of the building, reserved as the Ataturk Corner, his bust is displayed, alone with pictures depicting his life. I would like to call on my citizens now. They have no pictures taken while Ataturk was in secondary school there. If there are any photographs taken during that period which we could send Macedonia, we would be very glad. There are no pictures of Ataturk taken during his school period. There are only photographs of him after he became an officer. We were extremely gratified to see that the whole building has been transformed into a museum.

Yugoslavia has always been opposed to terrorism. It is always ready to cooperate with us on this issue. We have no problems in this field because they also have suffered from acts of terror. Some of their diplomats have been attacked. They stated their readiness to cooperate with us in the struggle against terror.

Mr Stambolic has gladly accepted my invitation, saying that he will return my visit at the first opportunity. To summarize, our visit was very positive. As you know, we pursue a policy of maintaining good relations with our neighbors and with all world countries. Yugoslavia's policy is based on the principle of noninterference in the domestic affairs of other countries. Thus there is an easy understanding between us. I hope that relations between our two countries will be further developed in the coming years.

TURKMEN HOLDS NEWS CONFERENCE ON FOREIGN ISSUES

TA241533 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1510 GMT 24 Sep 82

[Text] Ankara, 24 Sep (AA) — Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen said his scheduled early October talk with Greek Foreign Minister Ioannis Kharalambopoulos was intended to dwell on the procedure and framework for resumption of the dialogue between the two countries.

At a press conference Friday, before leaving for the UN General Assembly in New York, to be followed by the Montreal session of the NATO Council of Ministers where his meeting with his Greek counterpart is to take place, Turkmen said he expected the Palestinian question and Lebanon to be a major topic on the UN General Assembly agenda.

Refugees in Greece

Asked about reports tht Greece had issued permanent residence permits to Turkish fugitives from justice, Turkmen said as far as he knew these persons were classified as political refugees and lived at the (Lavrion) refugee camp.

Israel

Turkmen confirmed Arab and other Islamic governments wanted Turkey to sever relations with Israel completely; but added, "Everybody formulates its own policy."

Terrorism

The foreign minister pointed out international terrorism was not named as such on the agenda of the UN General Assembly because some states identified national liberation movements with terrorism, but the various manifestations of terrorism would be discussed under the title of assaults against diplomats.

The question of terrorism was also being taken up at the Council of Europe, Turkmen added, and what really mattered was to develop interstate cooperation for an effective campaign against terrorism.

The Greek Cypriot administration had informed the UN secretary general they would not allow terrorism in their zone, Turkmen said. He added the Turkish Government had taken the initiative to warn it would be a mistake to allow Armenian terrorist groups to settle in southern Cyprus as reported.

Turkmen said he also expected to meet separately with U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz while in New York and Montreal.

On the complaint lodged by five European governments against Turkey to the European Human Rights Commission, Turkmen said the relevant documents were being examined by Turkish authorities at the (?moment). With regard to relations with the European Community, Turkman said these relations had fallen short of Turkey's expectations. (?He confirmed) Minister of State Sermet Refik Pasin was conferring with EEC officials in Brussels at the moment.

Turkey's ties with the Council of Europe Parliamentary Assembly were "suspended". Turkmen also confirmed Turkey [words indistinct] with it at the moment. Hence there could be no question of a delegation coming to Turkey from the Assembly in connection with the draft constitution. Anyone was free, Turkmen added, however, to observe the referendum to be held November 7 on the draft constitution.

Noting Turkey was a member of the Islamic Peace Committee on the Iran-Iraq war, Turkmen said committee chairman President Sekou Toure of Guinea and Secretary General of the Islamic Conference Habib Chatti were currently in contact with both governments and would inform committee members when necessary.

Statement on West Beirut

TA241513 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1400 GMT 24 Sep 82

[Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen's statement on Lebanon massacres; 24 Sep -- recorded]

[Text] Turkey has felt great indignation and horror in the face of the cruel killing of hundreds of innocent persons in attacks against the Palestinian refugee camps in Lebanon. These terrible incidents occurred in west Beirut, occupied by Israel in contradiction to its undertakings. Consequently, Israel cannot escape the moral responsibility for these incidents.

Lebanon's peace and security must be ensured without violating its independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity. Turkey believes that, as a first step, an international force must be formed in a bid to evacuate west Beirut immediately and ensure the security of the population. We expect the UN Security Council to take speedy and effective measures to this end. As a regional country, Turkey is following with great concern the recent incidents, which constitute a grave threat to peace, stability and security in the Middle East.

FOREIGN MINISTER DEPARTS FOR NEW YORK 25 SEP

TA251715 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 25 Sep 82

[Text] Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen left for New York today to attend the UN General Assembly meetings. Turkmen will address the UN General Assembly on 1 October and explain Turkey's views on various international issues.

It was reported that the UN General Assembly will dwell particularly on the Middle East problem and the recent developments in Lebanon. After the UN General Assembly meetings, Turkmen will attend the NATO foreign ministers meeting to be held in Montreal [as received] on 2 and 3 October. The foreign minister, who will hold certain bilateral contacts during these meetings, will also hold a meeting with the Greek foreign minister in Montreal. This meeting between Turkmen and his Greek counterpart aims to revive the dialogue between the two countries.

FINANCE MINISTER EXPLAINS 1983 DRAFT BUDGET

TA251139 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 25 Sep 82

[Text] The 1983 fiscal budget bill has been submitted to the Consultative Assembly chairmanship. The budget was fixed at 2,600,000,000,000 lira. The civil servant salary coefficient was determined as 34 in the budget. The heating aid was raised to 5,000 lira.

Finance Minister Adnan Basar Kafaoglu held a news conference in Ankara to give information on the 1983 fiscal budget bill. After assessing the foreign and domestic economic atmosphere in which the budget bill was prepared, Kafaoglu outlined the results of the implementation of the 1982 fiscal budget. He noted that it has become evident that the targets set for a 4.4 percent growth in the gross national product, a 25 percent annual inflation rate and a $6 billion export figure during 1982 within the framework of the stability measures being implemented will, to a great extent, be achieved. He then detailed the 1983 fiscal draft budget. A growth rate of 4.8 percent in the gross national product is foreseen for the coming year. A growth rate of 5.5 percent in the industrial field, 3.4 percent in the agricultural field and 4.9 percent in the field of services is expected. This growth will be secured by keeping the rate of inflation around 25 percent.

It is estimated that exports, which have doubled in the past 2 years, will reach $7.1 billion -- given an increase of 16.8 percent -- in 1983. The 1983 fiscal budget and program aim at continuing the struggle against inflation, securing a continuity in our export increases and solving the problem of unemployment, which has gained more importance in recent years due to the developments in our economy.

Kafaoglu said that of the 2,600,000,000,000 lira allocated to expenditures in general in the 1983 fiscal draft budget, 554,900,000,000 lira is allocated to investments. Noting that 1,980,000,000,000 lira will be secured from taxes, Kafaoglu added that domestic loans of 150,000,000,000 lira are forseen for 1983.

Kafaoglu said that a wage increase not below the 20 percent inflation rate aimed at during the coming year will be granted and that the civil servant salary coefficient has been increased to 34, in line with this policy. He added that the coefficient in fringe benefits has been determined as 9 and that the heating aid has been increased from 3,500 lira to 5,000. Noting that a 5 percent reduction in taxes will be secured in line with the amendments in the income tax and financial balance tax laws, Kafaoglu said that there will be a net increase of some 20 percent in the salaries of public service personnel. He added that the necessary arrangements will be made to achieve a similar increase in retirement salaries. According to information given by Kafaoglu, there will be a net increase of 20 percent in travel expenses, child allowances and family aids.

In concluding his news conference, Kafaoglu said: The financial policies to be pursued during 1983 aim at securing stability and eliminating the obstacles to development. The year 1984 will be the first of the fifth 5-year plan. This period of new planning will bring new possibilities and conditions to our economy. It is important that a healthy infrastructure and an economic atmosphere be achieved in 1983. Given the world economic conditions and those in our country, we should attach special importance to economizing in using our public resources and to increasing public savings.

DAILY REPORTS ON ASALA ACTIVITY IN CYPRUS

NC270748 Istanbul BULVAR in Turkish 22 Sep 82 pp 1, 9

[Savas Ay report from Nicosia]

[Text] The identity of the rich Armenians who extend financial aid to the Armenian terrorist nests in the Greek Cypriot sector of Cyprus has been established.

It is now known that, acting in collusion with some Marxist Greek Cypriot youths, Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia [ASALA] militants receive extensive financial assistance from big shop-owners like Tilbiyan, Dedeyan and Bohcalyan.

Security officers have said that, in addition to these Armenians, the terrorists have also been extorting money from rich Greek Cypriots.

Meanwhile, it has been learned that arguments have been taking place between the ASALA terrorists and aged Armenians living in the Greek Cypriot sector of the island. The elderly Armenians say to the terrorists: "Are you going to leave us between two fires? The Greek Cypriots, as a matter of fact, treat us like second class citizens. They want to use you against the Turkish Cypriots. Aren't you aware of this?"

On the other hand, it is reported that Viken Sharkutyan, the Armenian terrorist who is known to have taken part in various bomb-throwing incidents against the Turkish Consulate-General in Los Angeles, has been chosen to lead the militants of ASALA in the Greek Cypriot sector. Sources close to the security forces say the Sharkutyan, who fled to France where the authorities refused to return him to the United States and who subsequently left France for Lebanon, arrived in the Greek Cypriot sector of Cyprus and is preparing new acts of militancy.

STATE MINISTER CONFERS WITH EEC OFFICIALS

[Text] Minister of State Servet Refik Pasin concluded his contacts with EEC officials in Brussels and left for Luxembourg today.

During Pasin's talks with EEC officials in Brussels, an agreement in principle was reached to release another $38 million of the $80-million special cooperation aid to Turkey. The aid will be used to finance various energy projects in Turkey. It was reported that the remaining part of the special cooperation aid by the EEC will be released in November.

Pasin, who left for Luxembourg today, will hold talks with European investment bank officials.

Comments on Relations

TA251716 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 25 Sep 82

[Text] Minister of State Servet Refik Pasin has said that preparations are continuing for Turkey's full membership in the EEC and that important work is being conducted in this matter.

Pasin, who held talks with EEC Commission and European investment bank officials in Brussels and Luxembourg, made a statement to Turkish journalists in Brussels. In his statement, Pasin said that agreement was reached during the talks to train experts by the private and public sectors and organize courses and seminars in order to develop relations between Turkey and the EEC. He added that bilateral talks will continue in a bid to increase the relations between Turkey and the Community.

Responding to a question on the export of textile products, Pasin noted that the talks between Turkish ready-to-wear manufacturers and the EEC Commission must be concluded in order to reach a general agreement on this subject.

VOTCP RAPS PROVISIONAL ARTICLES OF CONSTITUTION

TA211334 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 21 Sep 82

[Station commentary]

[Text] Dear Listeners, the first round of debates on the 200 articles of the junta constitution, which is an indication of the [word indistinct] pressure and tyranny and which announces the black face of the forthcoming so-called civilian administration, has been concluded. Meanwhile, the dispute over government positions was continued. This dispute has been temporarily settled with the contribution of various advisers. In this manner, the provincional articles of the constitution were adopted by the Consultative Assembly within half-a-day. The essence of these articles is that the junta will constitutionally preside over the people for another 7 years. With these provisional articles, Evren will become the president and the other four tryants will become presidential council members.

The junta generals are so frightened of the future that they included among the provisional articles one that stipulates that they will not have to account for their deeds. Taking precautions against the possibility of an amendment to the constitution, they added a provision which renders any amendments impossible.

According to first reactions in the press, these provisional articles have convinced almost everyone that the system put forward by the junta is not a democracy. The truth is now apparent. However, one should call attention to the following points: The junta's constitution of oppression stipulates an antidemocratic system. Furthermore, the junta has announced that it will remain in power for another 7 years. It is now clear that the statements made in the past to the effect that there will be a return to democracy and that the power will be transferred [to a civilian administration] were aimed at deceiving the people. Those whc from the very first day, said that the junta would not leave of its own free will proved to be right. However, what we fail to understand is that the press is still referring to a 7-year interim period. This expression of "interim period" conceals the antidemocratic essence of the junta constitution. It is quite unbelievable that the regime of those who say that they will continue to remain in power is referred to as an interim period.

This constitution, together with its permanent and provisional articles, can only be rejected by the will of the people, and it can be amended by the people's power. The provisional articles do not introduce an interim period, but rather a period of darkness. The permission to conceal the truth should not be granted.

COURT REJECTS RELEASE PLEA BY ALPASLAN TURKES

TA241629 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1545 GMT 24 Sep 82

[Text] Ankara, 24 Sep (AA) -- A martial law court in Ankara rejected the plea for release of Alpaslan Turkes, leader of the now-suspended National Movement Party.

The military court postponed the hearing of Turkes and his friends until 5 October.

FIFTEEN LEFTIST MILITANTS CAPTURED IN ANKARA

TA251554 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1530 GMT 25 Sep 82

[Text] Ankara, 25 Sep (AA) -- Fifteen militants of an illegal leftist organization named "Turkey's People's Liberation Army-the Path of Turkey's Revolution" were caught in Ankara for trying to re-establish their organization crushed following the Sep 12, 1980 military takeover, officials announced Saturday. Following a series of police raids, the 15 were caught with incriminating evidence. According to the statement, they are being charged with armed robberies in Ankara and killing one during one of the robberies while trying to topple the present regime to establish a Marxist-Leninist one.

FINLAND'S SORSA HOLDS PRESS CONFERENCE, DEPARTS

[Special DIE PRESSE report by "SMO"]

[Summary] Vienna -- "Although Finland and Austria pursue a slightly different policy of neutrality owing to historical and geopolitical conditions, their joint membership in the group of European neutrals necessitates a regular exchange of opinions." This was stated by Finnish Prime Minister Kalevi Sorsa at a press conference in Vienna on Thursday, which marked the end of his 3-day official visit. At this press conference, Sorsa expressly stressed the important task of the neutrals for Europe, which is divided into two blocs, as well as for the international community as a whole.

Sorsa's talks with Chancellor Kreisky, in addition to questions related to the policy of neutrality, dealt with the situation in the Middle East, the Polish crisis and bilateral relations. "Regarding the situation in Poland, Sorsa stressed the Finnish position that the Polish people must solve their problems themselves, but he added, under the present conditions he failed to see any realistic alternative to General Jaruzelski's martial law regime."

As far as the Middle East is concerned, Sorsa said, Finland is following the decisions of the United Nations, which would also apply in the event of sanctions against Israel. "As a neutral country whose security is primarily founded on the functioning of international guarantees, he said, Finland -- like Austria -- is interested in enhancing the prestige of the United Nations as well as in the continuation of the CSCE process, which originated in Helsinki."

Regarding the envisaged intensification of economic cooperation between Finland and Austria, Sorsa promised to take up Kreisky's proposals for cooperation in third markets with the Finnish agencies concerned.

PAPER DUBIOUS ABOUT VAN AGT CABINET'S PROSPECTS

[Editorial: "Demolition"]

[Text] A very small cabinet seems to be able to open its mouth very wide as it leaves office. A short-term interim cabinet, whose participating parties are not much admired by the voters and which is only a caretaker, produces a budget full of crass, indeed extreme, political choices. The departing medical man, specialized above all in ancient therapies, calls ceremoniously for a much larger blood-letting after his previous blood-lettings have failed.

This would provide a great deal of hilarious material if there was a real hope of a new government team with a fresh and more sophisticated approach. The Christian Democratic Appeal [CDA] and Democrats '66 [D'66] mini-cabinet has drawn up a series of plans which -- as is clear from the comments from the parliamentary parties -- chiefly satisfy the People's Party for Freedom and Democracy. Here we see the rise of the contours of a government accord, while government formation negotiations leader Van Kemenade is now forced to begin with an undeniably narrow framework for an alternative policy which will almost certainly be rejected by the CDA.

The D'66 has lent itself to this political game by Van Agt in the slaughterhouse of Van der Stee [finance minister]. Even the six remaining D'66 seats now seem to exist thanks to the ignorance of the electorate. Seldom has a party allowed itself to be enticed so far from its base by its leading minister.

Even the CDA parliamentary group is grumbling over the lack of social conscience in these proposals and the total absence of a policy to combat unemployment. In the next rounds of the government formation negotiations, this political group will have major opportunities to force corrections for the better on its actual political leader, Van Agt. There is a great chance that this will largely take place behind the scenes and that it could possibly be replaced by a renewed lecture from Lubbers [CDA parliamentary group leader] on the complicated concept of "true courage."

"It lies beyond the power of the government to awaken a sense of responsibility and a feeling of solidarity," was a phrase the outgoing cabinet included in the queen's speech (which was amazingly vague alongside the very outspoken budget). But it is within the power of the government to demolish the instruments and arrangemnts which give practical form to responsibility and solidarity or to renew them while preserving their real function.

Three cabinets led by Van Agt were primarily characterized by attempts at demolition and an inability to produce any renewal. The fourth Van Agt cabinet -- albeit unofficially -- is in the making. The scenario was given away on this year's drizzly budget day.

KOHL: NO CONFIDENCE VOTE TO BE INTRODUCED

[Excerpts] Bonn, 28 Sep (DPA) -- After 5 1/2 hours of talks, the CDU/CSU and the FDP agreed on a joint program of action Monday night. CDU Chairman Helmut Kohl told journalists that particulars will be discussed on Tuesday. He did not go into detail. He only said that a series of joint papers have been agreed on. With reference to the financial situation, savings were planned which would be distributed fairly among all groups of the population.

Kohl again stressed that in accordance with agreements with the CDU/CSU and FDP, a motion will be introduced today, Tuesday, for the vote of no cofidence for the election of the new federal chancellor on Friday in the Bundestag.

Genscher, FDP Favor Kohl

LD271656 Hamburg DPA in German 1603 GMT 27 Sep 82

[Text] Bonn, 27 Sep (DPA) -- Even after its decisive defeat in the Hesse elections with a vote of 3.1 percent, the FDP intends to stick to the timetable for a government change in Bonn as agreed upon with the union parties [CDU/CSU]. Party leader Hans-Dietrich Genscher said on Monday after a 7-hour meeting of the FDP Presidium that his party continues to work toward electing CDU Chairman Helmut Kohl on Friday as the new head of government by means of a constructive vote of no confidence against Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt (SPD).

Genscher stressed that the tasks which the FDP has to face in Bonn have not changed with the decision of the voters in Hesse on Sunday. It is necessary to adopt a federal budget with the required measures for stimulating savings and investments and then face the electors on 6 March next year for new elections to the Bundestag.

Answering a question as to whether in the vote next Friday there will be enough FDP voters for it to succeed, Genscher said that there will be a mock vote in the meeting of the [FDP] -- Bundestag group on Tuesday. "Then we will know how many deputies of the FDP Bundestag group will give their vote to Dr Kohl in the election for chancellor." Kohl will have to decide, taking this mock vote into consideration, whether he wants to stand. "We will encourage him."

In answer to the question as to whether there will be a majority in the vote of no confidence, Genscher answered: "That is what I am assuming." Asked whether he will link his political fate with the vote of no confidence, the FDP chairman said: "I link my political fate with the well-being of the party."
